C.I.O. OPENS DRIVE FOR RIGHT TO WORK

S.W.O.C. Meets To Plan Wage Policy For New Contracts

By HOWARD J. MCCARTNEY

PITTSBURGH—With the primary purpose of drafting a wage policy for new contracts in the steel industry, delegates representing 1,000 new lodges will convene here Dec. 14 for a three-day session—the first international convention of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

A broad program looking toward more satisfactory housing for the nation's workers and stimulation of business—given particular significance at this time because of the business recession—will also occupy a prominent place in the program.

Much attention will also be given a comprehensive campaign to strengthen labor's hand, and policies to guide the new steel lodges throughout the year will also be drafted.

John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, to which the S.W.O.C. belongs, has agreed to address the convention.

It is indicated at national headquarters of the S.W.O.C. that between 700 and 1,000 delegates will attend.

Among the delegates will be representatives of lodges participating in the strike against Tom Girdler's anti-union Republic Steel Corp. Lodges at mills of Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. and Bethlehem Steel Corp., in addition to Republic Steel—those affected by last summer's strike against "Little Steel"—will also be represented.

Strike Still On

Despite propaganda to the contrary, approximately 15,000 steel workers are still waging an heroic battle at Republic Steel plants in Canton, Massillon, Cleveland, Youngstown, Warren and Niles, O., Buffalo, N. Y., and South Chicago, Ill.

Typical of the strike status in these steel centers is that of Massillon and Warren, O., where 6,500 men, through various activities to bolster strike funds, are digging in for a fight to the finish. Dances, parties and minstrel shows have been staged by these lodges to raise funds.

Meanwhile, in Cleveland, Msgr. Joseph F. Smith and Cong. Martin L. Sweeney, conducting hearings looking toward relief for strikers, have learned that Republic Steel is using the "blacklist" against strikers who have attempted to obtain jobs in other industries.

Union Mills Profit

Amazing tactics of other anti-union steel companies to thwart bona fide organization of the workers are now being unfolded before the National Labor Relations Board, which is probing the methods of Bethlehem Steel and Weirton Steel. The board is expected to hand down a decision in the Republic Steel case in the near future.

In contrast to this picture of turmoil in the open shop companies is the entirely different picture to be found in union mills. Harmonious labor relations have resulted in greater profits for these companies than their anti-union competitors, Daily Metal Trades, business publication, reports. Studying profits on each ton of finished product, the magazine declares "the comparison gives the edge to the unionized producers."

Union Hits Move To Rush Marine Bill

NEW YORK—The Natl. Maritime Union moved quickly this week to eliminate clauses of the Merchant Marine bills, now pending before Congress, which leaders of the union described as the "most bare-faced raid in the history of American ship subsidizing."

A provision which would force compulsory arbitration on the marine unions was hit by the N. M. U. as a direct blow at itself and other progressive unions.

Hearings on the bills were suddenly called for December 8, which the N.M.U. denounced as a move to railroad the measures through the committee without a sufficient amount of time for opposition groups to marshal witnesses and facts.

Threat Seen To Labor

Under provisions of the bills, union heads declared, American shipowners would find it possible to build their ships in foreign yards, and to man them with crews of foreigners, and still receive subsidies from the government.

The bills, according to a statement of the New York Maritime Council, constitute "triple threat legislation directed at the marine unions, the American labor movement and the safety-at-sea provisions designed to protect the traveling public."

Elected

Pres. Michael Quill of the Transport Workers Union, C.I.O., who was elected to the New York City Council from the Bronx. Quill ran on the ticket of the American Labor Party, which emerged from the November elections as a powerful force in Gotham city government, with six council nominees elected.

Glass Drive Opens

CINCINNATI—With a goal of complete organization of the glass industry's 126,000 workers, the Glass Workers Organizing Committee, C.I.O., opened a nationwide campaign December 4.

The drive, which has headquarters in Cincinnati, has appointed regional directors in St. Louis, Columbus, Ohio, Charleston, W. Va., and Pittsburgh. A fifth director will be located either in Philadelphia or New York City. The campaign is being headed by Paul Fuller, chairman of the G.W.O.C.

Lewis Maps Two-Way Program To Aid Jobless

WASHINGTON—Taking up the challenge of increasing unemployment, the Committee for Industrial Organization is clenching both fists for a fight to win for American workers the right to work.

"The C.I.O., as the main body of American labor, accepts the duty of representing its people who are out of work," says Chairman John L. Lewis. "It takes the responsibility of presenting their case to the nation."

A two-way program is announced this week by the C.I.O. leader for dealing with unemployment. C.I.O. unions are urged to establish unemployment committees and to take a series of definite steps to protect their jobless members; while at the same time Congress is called upon to adopt legislation to cope with the problem as a whole.

The drive thus launched by the C.I.O. is unique in American labor history. In previous periods of depression, some individual unions have taken steps to serve unemployed members, while others have allowed them to drop out and have accepted responsibility for representing only those who remained on the job.

But no comprehensive program for combining trade union and political action in the interest of all unemployed has previously been adopted by the labor movement as a whole.

"One of the great principles for which labor in America stands is the right of every man and woman to have a job, to earn their living, if they are willing to work," says Lewis, in a message to all national and international unions of the C.I.O., to industrial union councils, to local industrial unions and to the C.I.O. field staff.

"Upon this principle, it becomes the duty of American labor to face with courage and realism the fact that America is threatened today with unemployment more bitter than ever before in our history.

"If Industry Fails to Provide Work"—

"A citizen of the United States has a right to live. He has a right to work. If the corporations which control American industry in their management of industry's affairs fail to provide that work, then there must be some power somewhere in this land of ours, that will go over and above and beyond those corporations and their inadequate policies, and provide a job and insure the workers the right to live."

Some methods whereby union unemployment committees can function are described in a letter addressed by Director John Brophy of the C.I.O. to local industrial unions. They include:

(1) Registration of every worker laid off through curtailments of production.

(2) Keeping an accurate list of layoffs and reporting to C.I.O. national headquarters on the extent of local unemployment.

(3) Presenting demands through the union that when re-hiring is done, laid-off workers be re-hired before new employes are put on.

(4) Representing unemployed members before public agencies in an attempt to get proper unemployment compensation, adequate public relief, or WPA employment.

(5) Advice and assistance to jobless members on obtaining benefits under the unemployment compensation laws which become effective on Jan. 1, 1938 in 22 states.

(6) Making a study of the relief situation in the local community, to see that adequate relief is provided and that those who should have help get it when they need it.

The first victory for the C.I.O. legislative program for unemployment relief was won last week when the necessary 218 signatures were secured to force the Black-Connery wages-and-hours bill out of the House rules committee.

Lewis and Green Confer, Will Report to Committees Dec. 21

WASHINGTON—John L. Lewis and William Green met face to face last week, discussed for two days the possibility of uniting the C.I.O. and the A. F. of L., and then decided to report back to their respective committees Dec. 21.

"General discussion, no conclusions, no recommendations"—that was the report given to the press on the meetings between the two sub-committees.

Philip Murray, chairman of the C.I.O. committee of 10, accompanied Lewis at the conferences, while George M. Harrison, chairman of the A. F. of L. negotiating committee, was with Green.

Lewis explained the parliamentary situation as follows:

"The A. F. of L. convention and the C.I.O. conference at Atlantic City designated committees to meet and negotiate. The two committees created sub-committees which Mr. Green and I head. We will now report back to the larger committees."

He declared that "the sub-committees can report no conclusions and there are no recommendations."

Lewis and Green were drawn into the discussions between the C.I.O. and A. F. of L. committees, which had been under way since Oct. 25, at a point in the negotiations when five points had been designated as the main issues on which a tentative agreement would first have to be reached. These points were:

1. Naming of industries adapted to the industrial form of organization.
2. The status of the C.I.O. in a re-united labor movement.
3. Joint recommendation to a special convention on powers of the A. F. of L. executive council and other constitutional amendments.
4. Creation of machinery to make an agreement effective.
5. Calling of a special convention and basis of representation.

The peace conferences were initiated by the C.I.O. at its Atlantic City meeting in October for the purpose of bringing about a unified labor movement.

League Pushes Labor Bills

Enough Congressmen's signatures were obtained despite the action of Pres. Wm. Green of the American Federation of Labor in withdrawing support from the bill.

Unions all over the country, both in the C.I.O. and the A. F. of L., are throwing their weight behind Labor's Non-Partisan League in its campaign to secure Congressional recognition of "the principle of federal prohibition of starvation wages and oppressive hours of work."

Passage of such legislation, despite the inadequacies of the particular bill under consideration, will have a definite effect, it is felt, in taking up some of the slack of unemployment through shorter working hours.

Other measures which the C.I.O. is preparing to push as part of its campaign to cope with unemployment, include a large-scale housing program; more federal funds for WPA and PWA so that every worker may be assured of a job if he needs one; and amendment of federal social security legislation, so that benefits may be liberalized and extended to cover many groups of workers at present left out in the cold.

One of the first labor bodies to act on the C.I.O. recommendations for coping with unemployment is the Steel City Industrial Union Council at Pittsburgh.

At a meeting attended by representatives of more than 200 C.I.O. locals, the Council set up a "committee for adequate public relief" and called upon all locals to establish unemployment committees of their own.

These committees will aid the jobless in dealing with the relief authorities, will engage in campaigns for more adequate relief, and will fight for increased appropriations for the care of the unemployed at the next session of the legislature.

Introducing The C.I.O. News

To give accurate news about the great national movement of four million men and women which the Committee for Industrial Organization represents; to state clearly the policies of this movement, and to present its demands with emphasis—these are the aims of the little paper whose first issue is herewith presented.

Heretofore, the Union News Service clipsheet has been the only national organ of the C.I.O. This clipsheet, designed primarily to supply news about the C.I.O. to labor editors, had soon to take on an additional function. Officers, organizers and active members of the C.I.O., as well as sympathizers from among the general public, began asking to receive it, as the only medium whereby they could get regular reports on what the C.I.O. was doing and aiming to do.

In the past two years, the circulation of the Union News Service has grown tremendously and it has become increasingly obvious that its dual function handicapped it in serving both editors and the general reader.

THE C.I.O. NEWS has therefore been started to take over the function of a paper for the general reader, while the Union News Service will be continued as a clipsheet for editors only, including advance releases, for their convenience, on some of the more important statements that will appear in THE C.I.O. NEWS.

So small a paper for so large a movement!—that may be the reaction of some who see this first issue.

But it may be remembered that the C.I.O. itself began but two years ago as something small—a cloud on the horizon no bigger than a man's hand.

A four-room office housed the C.I.O. when it began. An idea can be housed in less space than that. But when its time has come, no office walls can confine it. The C.I.O. is now a movement that has spread into the furthest recesses of American life.

THE C.I.O. NEWS is modest in size but not in its aims. It aims to be of service to the biggest and most significant movement in America today. And in proportion as it serves this purpose, it will grow.

The C.I.O. NEWS is offered to any and all who wish to subscribe at a rate of $1 a year. Unions or other organizations which desire to subscribe for their entire membership may do so at special rates. Reduced rates are also offered for quantity bundle orders.

Diamonds and Relief

A recent news item from New York discloses that Manhattan millionaires, in their search for security, are converting cash into diamonds. Diamond sales in October, the jewelers' association finds, have risen some 23 per cent over last year, and the demand for the precious pieces of stone continues unabated.

Both millionaires and diamonds, however, are relatively scarce.

For the overwhelming majority of the American people other and more practicable methods of providing security must be found, if the working people of this country are to be spared a repetition of the tragic events of 1929 onwards.

Adoption of the wages-and-hours bill would alleviate effects of the depression for millions of people, and prevent the economic system from again deteriorating to the point where the sweatshop employer is king.

A housing program, ably planned and quickly administered, would serve the double purpose of rescuing a sick industry and of substituting homes for hovels for thousands of American families.

A relief program geared to meet sky-rocketing unemployment must be prepared immediately.

A long range program, intelligent and fearless, aimed at providing working America with a real meaning for the slogan, "the right to work," must be prepared and adopted.

All these projects will meet with hostility from the folks whose newly bought diamonds rest solidly in their bank vaults. But the diamond owners can take care of themselves; for the rest of the population, the administration and Congress, pressed on by the demands of organized labor, must act—and act quickly.

Why C.I.O. Demands Right to Work

SOUTH BEND, Ind.—Just how serious is the depression in a typical midwestern industrial city?

Here is what an independent survey found in South Bend:

Two thousand laid off at the Bendix plant, with majority of the remaining force on a 32½-hour work week.

One thousand laid off at Studebaker two months ago, with the present force working 12 to 18 hours a week.

One hundred jobless at Singer Sewing Machine, with the rest on a four-day week.

Six hundred fired at Ball Band, with a four-day work week now in force; factory was closed last two weeks of November.

Sixty per cent of the workers at the South Bend Toy Works off the payroll, with the seasonal shutdown much earlier than usual.

In addition, about 600 workers in various crafts throughout the city now unemployed.

Look for the Label, James!

NEW YORK—J. S. Inskip, Inc., official agents for Rolls-Royce in the United States, have signed an agreement with the United Automobile Workers of America. The pact, covering all shop employes, runs for six months and provides for wage increases and time and a half pay for overtime work.

SANTA BARBARA, Calif.—Local workers used a variation of the strip tease act made famous by countless burlesque queens to aid laundry workers striking to lift wages which had been as low as $8 a week.

The butcher, the baker and the candlestick maker, together with beauticians, retail clerks, cooks and barbers, pulled off their aprons and smocks, refusing to wear garments laundered by strikebreakers.

"They Laughed When We" . . .

CLEVELAND—"As an A. F. of L. affiliate we were being laughed out of existence. Now we are going places," said Chas. Sherritt, agent of the C.I.O. Optical Workers Union, announcing concessions won by the union from the two largest optical concerns in the world.

The United Optical Workers Local Industrial Union 351 of the C.I.O. has won from the Cleveland branch of the American Optical Co., in an oral agreement, a 40-hour week, time and a half for overtime, paid vacations and holidays, and wage increases for the union shop help.

The White-Haines Optical Co., a Bausch & Lomb jobber in Cleveland has agreed to a 40-hour week and time and a half for overtime. Both firms are classed as the leaders in the whole optical industry.

The optical workers federal unions of the A. F. of L. some months ago voted to come over to the C.I.O. in a body, and an Optical Workers Organizing Committee has been set up to push an organizing drive throughout the industry.

Dictatorship Proclaimed In Jersey City

Politically the United States is classed as a democracy. Jersey City, N. J., is part of the United States—geographically speaking. Mayor Frank Hague of that city claims to be a Democrat.

Yet Mayor Hague has banned democracy in Jersey City. He has violated the principles for which his Democratic party is supposed to stand. He has established an oligarchy of anti-union employers.

The constitution of the United States provides for freedom of speech and assemblage. But Mayor Hague has set aside the constitution with all the arrogance of a Fascist dictator. He has denied to the working people of Jersey City the right to meet and speak their minds on union organization.

The laws of the United States declare that workers have the right to organize into unions of their choice, without interference. Mayor Hague has trampled upon these laws in Jersey City. He has arrested or driven out of town C.I.O. union organizers. He has prohibited peaceful picketing.

In the rest of the United States, employers as well as workers, the rich as well as the poor, are supposed to be equally subject to the law. But employers who prefer to be a law unto themselves have been invited to come to Jersey City by Mayor Hague, with the promise that he will protect them from union organization.

Dictator Hague has separated Jersey City from the United States democracy. He has proclaimed a tyrannical form of government—the rule of the few over the many, of the employers over the workers, of the rich over the poor. This rule he enforces with all the power of his police, through illegal arrests, prohibition of meetings and violence against union men.

A dictatorship cannot survive within any true democracy. Either the will of the people asserts itself and the dictator is squelched, or the dictatorship spreads and democracy is at an end.

The American people are not yet ready to give up their democracy at the behest of the petty dictator of Jersey City. The workers of Jersey City are also citizens of the United States, with a knowledge of their legal rights. The C.I.O. will throw the full weight of the nation's labor movement behind these workers in the fight to win back their democratic rights.

Mayor Hague has declared war on American democracy. But it is our guess that in this war democracy is going to win, and Jersey City will eventually be brought back under the American form of government.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

Labor Tired Of Being Kidded

AMERICANS like to kid and be kidded, it is said. But there are limits.

When millions were driven to hunger and despair by the crisis that shook the country after 1929, those who assumed to do the nation's thinking refused to face realities. They tried to kid the country back to prosperity.

Crisis was too hard a word, it was only a "depression," we were told. Prosperity was just around the corner. All we needed was confidence. Henry Ford even told us that we were really enjoying prosperity, only we didn't know it.

Today, once more, factories are being closed down on every side. Hundreds of thousands of Americans are being turned out into the streets. Hundreds of thousands more find their incomes cut in half, or worse, through lay-offs and short time.

This time, depression is too harsh a word. Now we are told it is only a "business recession." All that is needed is to restore confidence in business, according to those who would do our thinking for us.

A Demand For Thought and Action

It is in this setting that John L. Lewis, C.I.O. leader, delivered his recent speech before the furniture workers' conference in Washington.

"The time has come in this country for the workers to do some thinking," he said, "because whoever has been doing the thinking in this country has not done enough of it.

"It is time to organize when the country is going through another economic tailspin which has been perfectly obvious for months. It is time to organize when the government of the United States suddenly comes to have a passion for economy and restricts and limits the amount of aid and relief and help that will be given Americans when the employers turn them into the streets.

"Labor in this country is not satisfied with these continuing peaks and valleys of prosperity. Labor in America believes that an American citizen of adult age, able and willing to work has a right to a job, and he is not asking for charity—he has a right to a job.

"There is something that this Congress can do. It can cease milling around and do some thinking about how Americans are going to be protected in their right to work."

Labor Thinks For Itself

Varying political interpretations have been given to this speech of the C.I.O. leader. Yet its meaning should be plain and simple enough to anyone who can read and think for himself.

It shows that with the organization of millions of previously unorganized workers, through the C.I.O., a new and independent force has entered American political life. The words of Lewis have power and significance in proportion as they reflect the thoughts and wishes of these millions.

The speech shows further that American labor, once organized, will not be content to let others, no matter how well-meaning, do its thinking for it. It will be driven by the very misery which it suffers from recurring depressions to demand real and far-reaching remedies.

Silver-tongued demagogues and peddlers of every kind of half-baked panacea found a wide following in the last period of hard times, because labor was not sufficiently organized to have a decisive and independent voice of its own.

Now the Fascist dangers that lurk behind demagogic appeals to the discontented and unorganized, are lessened by the fact that a democratic leadership emerges from labor's ranks strong and aggressive enough to express the discontent of the many and to demand constructive remedies.

The C.I.O. has proved that organization on the economic field can raise the wages and living standards of millions. Now that mass unemployment threatens, union organization becomes doubly essential — not only to hold the gains already made, but also to provide a solid backing for the political demands which labor must advance in its own and the country's interests.

Furniture Workers To Form C.I.O. International

Insurance Workers Seek C.I.O. Contract With John Hancock

WASHINGTON—A petition for a collective bargaining agency poll among the 15,000 employes of the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co. was filed with the Natl. Labor Relations Board last week by the United Office & Professional Workers of America, C.I.O.

The petition asks for union bargaining rights on behalf of employes of the company's 300 agency offices throughout the country, stating that approximately 9,000 of these employes, with the exception of managers, assistant managers and others who have the right to hire and fire, want the C.I.O. union to represent them.

Revealing that union officials have already held conferences with Hancock executives, Pres. Lewis Merrill of the U.O.P.W.A. declared in New York that none of the company officials questioned "our right to represent their employes."

Metropolitan Is Next

Company officials broke off the confab with a statement that they would hold further negotiations with the union only when it had been certified by the N.L.R.B. as collective bargaining agent for the company's workers.

Union leaders have announced that the organization is "preparing to move against" the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., which employs about 2,200 agents in greater New York alone.

The U.O.P.W.A. general executive board, together with leaders of 43 insurance agents locals, met in New York Dec. 5-6 to map out further details of the campaign.

Ohio Valley C.I.O. in Regional Conference

CINCINNATI — Representatives of 130 local unions affiliated with the Committee for Industrial Organization met in Cincinnati December 4-5 for the first Ohio Valley C.I.O. regional conference.

The conference was called to analyze union gains in the area and to map future plans. One hundred and thirty locals, with a membership of 85,000 and 72 contracts covering close to 50,000 workers, sent delegates to the meeting. Of the contracts signed in the region, 22 provide for the closed shop, and 44 give C.I.O. unions sole collective bargaining rights.

SAN FRANCISCO—One of the largest grocery chains on the west coast, Safeway Stores, Inc., has signed a contract with the United Office and Professional Workers, Local 34 in San Francisco.

What Unity Means In Furniture Industry

The recent conference in Washington, attended by delegates representing most of the unions in the furniture industry, whether C.I.O., A. F. of L. or independent, proves two things beyond a doubt:

1. That the rank and file of American labor are ready and eager for labor unity and welcome the practical proposals of the C.I.O. to achieve it.

2. That industrial organization is the first step to unity in the furniture as well as all other mass-production and basic industries.

The resolution unanimously adopted by the more than 100 delegates present, including Pres. Sal B. Hoffman and other international representatives of the A. F. of L. Upholsterers' Union, recites the deplorable division which has resulted from A. F. of L. craft policies in this industry.

In deciding to form one furniture workers industrial union affiliated with the C.I.O., the resolution also explains why industrial unity is impossible in the A. F. of L. as at present constituted.

The C.I.O. has agreed to grant the Upholsterers' International Union the complete industrial jurisdiction which the A. F. of L. has repeatedly refused to sanction.

Instead of permitting the furniture workers to have the unity they desire and urgently need for the organization of their largely sweated industry, the A. F. of L. has encouraged the division of the workers into a number of craft unions, including the Carpenters and Painters, and has created federal unions as well.

In deciding to affiliate with the C.I.O. in a united union, and to launch at once an aggressive organizing campaign along industrial lines, the furniture workers have taken a real step in the direction of effective labor unity.

By bringing about unity and organization in their industry, they will greatly strengthen the hand of the C.I.O. in its fight for industrial organization as the only possible base on which a unified labor movement, inclusive of all American workers, can be built.

Postal Telegraph Signs 10 Pacts With C.I.O. Union

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Contracts with the Postal Telegraph Company in 10 cities have been signed by the American Radio Telegraphists Association within two weeks, it was announced at union headquarters. Agreements were reached in seven cities after stoppages, "slow-downs" or "stand-up" strikes on the job, in some cases lasting only a few hours.

The last three agreements negotiated—in Cleveland, Ohio, South Bend, Ind., and Washington, D. C.—were reached without any strike action being necessary. Union officials said that the company had learned from its recent experience in the seven other cities, that A.R.T.A. meant what it said when it demanded union recognition and contracts.

Agreements following strikes on the job were reached in St. Louis, Detroit, Minneapolis, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Buffalo and Milwaukee. In some cities the stoppage took the form of a "meeting" called by the blowing of a whistle, at which signal all operations were stopped.

The contracts won recognition of the union as the sole bargaining agency in all cases, and straightened out many local grievances.

Delegates Vote Unity, Plan Big Campaign

WASHINGTON—A single international industrial union in the furniture and allied trades, to be affiliated with the Committee for Industrial Organization, won unanimous approval from more than 100 delegates representing well over 50,000 workers, at the Furniture Workers Unity Conference in Washington, November 27-29.

Under the unity program adopted, local industrial unions of the C.I.O., independent unions, and the Upholsterers' Furniture, Carpet, Linoleum and Awning Workers International Union of the A. F. of L., will merge to provide furniture workers with one industrial union for the first time in the history of the industry.

Demands Action

"An American citizen of adult age, able and willing to work, has a right to a job," said John L. Lewis, C.I.O. chairman, at the furniture workers conference. "It is time to organize when the country is going through another economic tailspin." Lewis called on Congress to "cease milling around and do some thinking about protecting the right to work."

An aggressive campaign to organize 200,000 non-union workers, at present badly exploited, will be inaugurated as soon as the details of the unity move have been completed.

Leaders of the Upholsterers' Union, as well as other delegates at the conference, denounced the craft policies of the A. F. of L. which have resulted in raids on their union and have prevented the Upholsterers from gaining recognition of an industrial union jurisdiction in the federation.

Referendum to Be Held

The Unity Conference resolution declared that the Upholsterers International Union "shall retain its autonomy and shall be recognized as the international union having jurisdiction over the furniture and bedding industry."

Pres. Sal B. Hoffman of the international and the general executive board members present went on record as strongly in favor of the C.I.O. affiliation move, and it is expected the membership will ratify their action in a referendum soon to be held.

The C.I.O. international will start to function in 45 days for those groups which have voted to affiliate with it by that time. Delegates predicted that all organized furniture and allied workers will be in the C.I.O. union. The conference set up a committee of seven—three from the C.I.O., three from the Upholsterers and one from the independent group—whose duties will be "the canvassing of the three groups involved in order to bring them all into the organization under the C.I.O. banner."

Lewis Given Ovation

C.I.O. Chairman John L. Lewis was greeted with a tumultuous ovation when he addressed the convention at its final session. Lewis complimented the conference for "undertaking to do something for yourselves" in what he described as a "great exploited industry."

John Brophy, director of the C.I.O. and chairman of the unity conference, traced the history of the A. F. of L. in the furniture industry, and pointed out that only through an industrial union and an aggressive organizing campaign planned with the C.I.O. could sweatshop conditions, long hours and low pay be eliminated.

President Hoffman of the Upholsterers described the chaotic union conditions and the exploitation of workers resulting from the prevention of industrial unionism by the A. F. of L. craft unions. One delegate from Grand Rapids told of pay checks of $6.20 for 39 hours work, and and of $6.95 for 44 hours work.

Union's Jurisdiction

The resolution passed by the conference noted the opposition which industrial unionism in furniture had met under the A. F. of L., and called upon all the delegates to "form one furniture workers industrial union affiliated with the C.I.O." The organization is to begin functioning officially within "45 days after adjournment of this conference."

Jurisdiction of the union will cover all branches of the furniture and upholstery industry, including mattress and bedding plants and firms manufacturing or assembling metal coil springs used by the various branches of the industry.

The seven-man committee set up to bring the various groups into the new union, consists of President Hoffman, Morris Muster and Max Perlow of the Upholsterers; Emil Costello, Joseph Persily and George Bucher, representing C.I.O. locals; and Joseph Proudman of Jamestown, N. Y., representing the independent unions.

Resolution Adopted By Furniture Unity Conference

WASHINGTON — The reasons for establishment of a single furniture workers industrial union affiliated with the C.I.O. and the steps which are to be taken to this end, are set forth in a policy resolution unanimously adopted by the more than 100 delegates from C.I.O., A. F. of L. and independent furniture unions who attended the unity conference in Washington, November 27-29.

The resolution points out that only about 60,000 out of a quarter of a million furniture workers are organized and declares that this is due to lack of unity among the various unions in the industry.

It notes that the A. F. of L. has refused to grant the Upholsterers', Furniture, Carpet, Linoleum & Awning Workers International Union "the complete industrial jurisdiction which this union has sought, but instead has permitted the workers to be divided into federal and state chartered locals, and a number of craft unions, including the Carpenters and Painters."

Crafts Not Applicable

"The creation of federal unions by the A. F. of L. is a tacit admission that craft unionism is not applicable in organizing furniture workers," the resolution states, "and this is further shown by the fact that since the Upholsterers International started organizing on an industrial basis it has increased its membership ten times."

Calling attention to the demand for unity among organized furniture workers and the success of the C.I.O., which show that "its policies are correct and are necessary for the furniture industry," the conference resolved:

"That all delegates representing the Upholsterers' Union, C.I.O. local unions, independent and Federal local unions decide at this conference to form one furniture workers industrial union affiliated with the C.I.O.

"That the official functioning of this international union should go into effect 45 days after adjournment of this conference.

"That the Upholstery International Union shall retain its autonomy and shall be recognized as the international union having jurisdiction over the furniture and bedding industry.

The jurisdiction is then listed in detail. Provision was also made for a membership referendum.

Committee Set Up

The conference further resolved "that after the referendum is completed, all local unions already organized outside of the Upholsterers' International Union shall transfer their membership by paying their dues for the current month after the 45 days and shall not be charged any initiation fees.

"That a committee representing the three groups, Upholsters' International, C.I.O. and Independents, whose number shall be decided by the conference, shall be set up, and whose duties shall be the canvassing of the three groups involved in order to bring them all into the organization under the C.I.O. banner.

"That after the 45 days the functioning of the C.I.O. International Union shall be an accomplished fact with those of the groups who have voted to affiliate with the C.I.O.

"That the International Industrial Union established at this conference call upon the Committee for Industrial Organization to aid it in immediately launching an aggressive organizing campaign throughout the furniture industry."

Insurance Men Seek 'Insurance'

"We sell security—we want security," chanted hundreds of members of the Industrial Insurance Agents Union, C.I.O., in a recent New York demonstration. The organization is affiliated with the United Office & Professional Workers.

Retail Employes, Woodworkers Plan New Drives

New C.I.O. Union To Organize Wholesale, Department Stores

PITTSBURGH—Plans to organize several million wholesale and retail employes were approved by 250 young and militant delegates to the first national convention of the C.I.O. United Retail Employes, sessions of which came to a close December 2.

With union membership of 40,000 increasing at a rate of 10,000 a month, delegates from 200 locals in 38 states told a story of hundreds of closed shop contracts since the group left the American Federation of Labor to form a C.I.O. industrial union.

The present membership, Pres. Samuel Wolchok told the meeting, is far greater than any ever claimed by the old racket-ridden Retail Clerks Protective Union. Negotiations are being carried on, he said, with some of the largest department and chain store operators in the country.

Delegates Optimistic

Indicative of the optimism which pervaded the convention gathering were the change of the organization's name to the United Retail and Wholesale Employes of America, and the establishment of a special committee to study the entire department and chain store problem.

The committee will cooperate with the recently-created Department Store Organizing Committee, headed by Pres. Sidney Hillman of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America and Pres. Wolchok.

New Jurisdiction

The decision to organize the wholesale field will greatly broaden the scope of the union's work, it was pointed out, and will make thousands more workers eligible for union membership.

Pres. Wolchok and Sec.-Treas. John Cooney were re-elected and 17 vice-presidents were chosen. Resolutions passed by the delegates made special note of the assistance given the union by the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Chairman John L. Lewis of the C.I.O. wired the convention that the "future that stretches before you carries the promise of your becoming one of the most significant organizations in the American labor movement."

N. M. U. Seamen Win 11 out of 13 Board Elections

NEW YORK — Unlicensed seamen on the New York & Puerto Rico Line kept in step with the breakaway from the A. F. of L.'s International Seamen's Union by voting 494 to 9 for the National Maritime Union.

This election, together with a poll of seamen employed on the boats of the Cities Service Oil Co., brought the N. M. U.'s string of victories up to 11, out of 13 polls conducted by the National Labor Relations Board. The Cities Service balloting found 234 seamen casting their votes for the N. M. U., with only 78 for the I. S. U.

Previously the N. M. U. had been victorious in elections held by the crews of the Black Diamond, Luckenbach, International Mercantile Marine, Great Lakes Transit Co., Clyde-Mallory, Baltimore Mail, Newtex, Morgan, and New York and Cuba Mail Steamship Co.

The N. M. U. has received well over 6,000 votes in the 13 elections, compared to little more than 1,000 given the I. S. U.

Priest Lauds C.I.O. For Union Drive In Packing Houses

CHICAGO—"Every good Christian should join the union," Father John Hayes of Quigley Seminary told 1,000 packing-house workers at a mass meeting held under the auspices of the Packing House Workers Organizing Committee, affiliated with the Committee for Industrial Organization.

In addition, Father Hayes declared, "every Catholic must join, under Catholic doctrine. For if a worker stays out of the union he is weakening the constructive work his fellowmen are trying to do."

"Thank God," the priest continued, "the C.I.O. is including all races and all peoples in its ranks. The C.I.O., I am convinced, far from being a racketeering organization, is a strong, militant union working for the best good of the working man."

Father Hayes told the mass meeting that many other Catholic clergymen in the Chicago district are supporting the packing-house drive, which has already signed up thousands of workers in the Big Four of the industry — Cudahy, Wilson, Swift and Armour—as well as in smaller plants.

At the Swift plant in Chicago, a company-sponsored "Security League" was shaken by the election of C.I.O. members to many key positions. Large numbers of votes were voided, it is known, because workers had merely written "C.I.O." across the face of the ballots.

Brophy Lauds I.W.A. Growth Since Break With A.F. of L.

PORTLAND, Ore.—More than 500 delegates, representing over 100,000 members of the Intl. Woodworkers of America, C.I.O., heard Pres. Harold Pritchett report remarkable gains in new locals established and contracts won in the brief life of the new international.

The convention, which was held Dec. 3-5, received greetings from John Brophy, director of the C.I.O., who praised the union for its attainments and warned the delegates that they are now "battling for an effective form of organization, not only against unfriendly industrialists but against short-sighted and reactionary leadership in the American Federation of Labor.

"We realize that the I. W. A. was established in order to preserve the unity of the sawmill and timber workers, to lay the basis for nation-wide organization work, and to build a powerful movement devoted to the interests of its members," he said.

Pres. Pritchett, calling attention to the fact that only five months have passed since the I. W. A. cut away from the craft rule of William Hutcheson's Intl. Brotherhood of Carpenters and became a C.I.O. industrial union, pointed out that 200 charters have already been granted.

The union, he stated, has nine district councils throughout the country, with locals set up in such widely separated points as Arkansas, New York City, Texas, Wyoming and Alabama.

C.I.O. COUNCIL FOR NEW YORK

NEW YORK—Plans for the formation of a city Industrial Union Council composed of representatives of a half million members of unions affiliated with the Committee for Industrial Organization are moving towards completion here.

Allen Haywood, C.I.O. regional director, revealed to a mass meeting of insurance unionists that the council will be formed in the next week or two.

Workers in the garment, clothing, transportation, electrical, machine, maritime and utility industries—all members of C.I.O. unions—will provide most of the council members.

Minnesota Unions Hold C.I.O. State Convention

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn.—C.I.O. unions in Minnesota will hold their first state convention December 10-12 at the Dyckman Hotel in Minneapolis, for the purpose of setting up a C.I.O. State Industrial Union Council.

In line with the resolution passed at the C.I.O. Atlantic City conference, calling attention to the identity of interests between farmers and industrial workers, both farm and labor leaders have been invited to address the convention.

Wyoming C.I.O. Unions Plan Industrial Council For State

CHEYENNE, Wyo.—Representatives of close to 10,000 organized workers in Wyoming will meet here Dec. 15 to form a Wyoming State Industrial Council of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Delegates representing the United Mine Workers, the Intl. Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, and oil, utility, highway and dairy workers will be present at the sessions, which are to be held in the Mine Workers Building in Cheyenne.

"It has become increasingly evident that a state organization of the C.I.O. is necessary in Wyoming," declares James Morgan, C.I.O. regional director, in the call for the meeting, "to bring into closer affiliation the unions affiliated with and in sympathy with the C.I.O. and its policy of industrial organization."

Alabama, Too

BIRMINGHAM, ALA. — Ninety thousand members of C.I.O. unions in the state of Alabama were represented here at the first constitutional convention of the state's C.I.O. council last Sunday.

Plot to Kill Bridges Charged in Affidavit

SEATTLE, Wash.—Details of an alleged plot to assassinate Harry Bridges, west coast C.I.O. leader, were revealed in an affidavit made by Robert John Bell of Minneapolis, who maintains he was mysteriously hired to do the job.

Bridges has asked federal authorities to launch an immediate investigation of the alleged plot.

Sent without instructions from the Twin Cities to Seattle, Bell alleges, he was directed to offices of two leading northwest officials of the Teamsters Union of the A. F. of L. In Minneapolis, the affidavit says, Bell was paid a lump sum of $1,000, and on the west coast he received $10 a day.

Shown Revolver

Bell charges that one of the west coast officials showed him a .38 calibre special revolver, "with which he said Bridges was to be killed."

Refusing to take the job, Bell told the story to S. J. Brozovich of the C.I.O. office in this city.

The Teamsters' Union leaders, Bell declared, desired Bridges' removal because of his opposition to the policies of the Teamsters' Union officials, who have recently sought to break the strength of the powerful maritime unions along the west coast, and to halt the C.I.O. drive there.

2,500 Join C.I.O.; Leave Ryan Union

NEW YORK—The waning power of Pres. Joseph Ryan of the Intl. Longshoreman's Association, A. F. of L., over New York maritime workers, was dealt a severe blow when 2,500 harbor workers voted to change the affiliation of their union, the Associated Marine Workers, from the I. L. A. to the Committee for Industrial Organization.

The break was formally announced by Capt. William Maher, secretary-treasurer of the union, at a conference with Mervyn Rathborne of the C.I.O. Maritime Committee and Thomas Ray, secretary of the New York Maritime Council. The action followed a vote by the members of the union.

In the C.I.O., the union's charter makes the organization an affiliate of the Inland Boatman's Union of the Atlantic and the Gulf, which is growing rapidly in important maritime cities.

Farm Groups O.K. Wage-Hour Bill

WASHINGTON—Representatives of nine farm organizations have gone on record in favor of the wages-and-hours bill.

In a statement endorsing the stand of the Farmers Natl. Committee, the nine leaders point out that "actual farmers know that the income of labor determines labor's purchasing power, and they also know that the purchasing power of labor determines the market for farm produce."

Signers of the statement included John Bosch, president of the Farm Holiday Assn., George Nelson, chairman of the board of directors of the Farmers Union, and Charles Egley, manager of the Farmers Union Live Stock House.

Campaign Under Way To Unionize Ford

Workers at the huge River Rouge plant of the Ford Motor Co. are shown receiving copies of the United Automobile Worker, as the C.I.O. union's campaign to organize the only sizeable open shop in what was once an open-shop industry, gains momentum.

Union Meetings For Ford Workers To Be Held Over Radio

DETROIT, Mich. — Meetings of members of the United Automobile Workers employed in Ford plants will be conducted over the radio, Zygmund Dobrynzki, Detroit organizational director, announces.

Threats and unfair pressure by the Ford Motor Company have made it necessary to discontinue the regular local meetings and resort to the radio, he said. Ford spies "spotted" the workers at the meetings, he charged, and brought about their dismissal. Also pressure was brought through controlled political sources to prevent the union from getting facilities for the meetings.

Ford workers will be given information over station WJBX as to how, where and when they can join the U.A.W. without fear of retaliation by the company, and will be instructed how to conduct themselves in the Ford plants to escape penalties inflicted by Ford agents against union members.

C.I.O. UNIONS AID JOBLESS

Farm and Labor Groups In Pledge Of Mutual Support

WASHINGTON—Organized farmers and organized labor are joining hands in a far-reaching program of active cooperation, particularly on the political field, following a compact signed in St. Paul, Minn., by responsible representatives of both groups.

The agreement recognizes that "labor and farmers have a definite community of interest" and that both can establish their "rightful position in society" only by unity of action.

"We are seeking the same social and economic objectives and we are committed to the same methods of achieving our common aims," the agreement states. It calls for mutual support of the legislative programs sponsored by each.

Conferences Planned

A conference is to be called between committees designated by organized labor and organized agriculture on or about January 15, 1938, for the purpose of drawing up a joint legislative program. Both state and national conferences will be held for joint action in support of such a legislative program during 1938 elections.

The terms of the agreement were made public by E. L. Oliver, executive vice president of Labor's Non-Partisan League, upon his return from the two-day conference in St. Paul.

Pres. John Vesecky and eight other high officials of the Farmers Educational and Cooperative Union of America signed the agreement on behalf of organized farmers throughout the country.

The United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing & Allied Workers of America, C.I.O. union with 100,000 members, joined in the agreement through Pres. Donald Henderson. Oliver signed for Labor's Non-Partisan League.

The Farmers' Union is the third largest farm organization in the United States.

Recommendations

The program for united action recommends:

"1. That organized farmers promote a better understanding of the position, efforts and objectives of organized labor through the medium of their various educational and publicity facilities.

"2. That organized labor use every available means of promoting among its membership a similar understanding of the position, efforts and objectives of organized agriculture.

"3. That in order to prevent any further antagonism which might tend to nullify our express desire to work in harmony, we mutually agree to confer together before taking action which might affect either or both groups.

"4. That periodic conferences be held to analyze clearly the fields of contemplated joint action.

"5. That we mutually agree to promote the legislative programs sponsored and approved by each.

"6. That investigations be conducted for the purpose of discovering the extent of the spread between prices received by the farmer for his products and the price paid by the consumer for the same."

The possibilities of developing consumer cooperatives in rural and urban areas are to be explored.

'Middletown' Signs Pact With C.I.O.

WASHINGTON—Muncie, Ind.—the "Middletown of America," where social scientists recently found little union activity—is blossoming out as a real union town.

Muncie's city employes have won a written agreement with the municipal government providing for union recognition, grievance machinery, the 40-hour week and other features, according to Abram Flaxer, executive vice president of the State, County and Municipal Workers, C.I.O.

Jeannette, Pa., located in the heart of Pennsylvania's unionized industrial belt, has also signed with the union, Flaxer said.

HIT WOODRUM BILL

WASHINGTON — Labor's Non-Partisan League and the Committee for Industrial Organization are mobilizing labor forces throughout the country to demand repeal of the Woodrum amendment restricting relief expenditures.

This will be one of the first steps in a general campaign to cope with unemployment through legislative action, as well as through the activity of union unemployment committees.

Repeal of this amendment to "soak the unemployed" will permit of greater expenditure of WPA funds to meet the present emergency.

All labor people will be asked to write their Congressmen urging repeal of the Woodrum amendment, and union and unemployed meetings will be held throughout the country to protest the failure of Congress to provide adequate relief.

Labor Board Orders Paper Rehire Strikers

WASHINGTON—Twenty striking members of the American Newspaper Guild were this week ordered reinstated to their jobs on the Seattle Star by the National Labor Relations Board.

The N.L.R.B. declared that their discharge had been an "unfair labor act," and demanded that back pay be paid the 20 men.

Locals, Councils Push Fight For Relief and Jobs

WASHINGTON—Organized labor, as represented by the Committee for Industrial Organization, is moving quickly to win governmental protection and relief for the hundreds of thousands of workers made idle in recent months.

In hearty and immediate response to the call sent out by Chairman John L. Lewis of the C.I.O., urging speedy action on the unemployment problem, affiliated international unions, state and city councils and local unions launched programs of activity.

The United Rubber Workers, one of the first groups to act, has developed a four-point program including organized efforts to secure adequate relief funds from state legislatures; expansion of Federal relief and WPA programs; support of a large-scale Federal housing project, and the setting up of local committees to act directly in behalf of the unemployed.

Steel Committees Active

From its Pittsburgh headquarters, the Steel Workers Organizing Committee has sent instructions to all organizers and union lodges to set up committees for the handling of relief needs.

Local relief committees have been asked to register each man laid off, to determine the needs of the family of each jobless worker, and attempt to provide him either with a WPA job or adequate relief.

In Detroit the United Automobile Workers sent word to all locals to join the campaign for the unemployed. A system of local and community unemployment committees is being established to fight for relief.

Lists of those workers laid off are being kept in order to provide the union with an accurate census of its unemployment and to insure use of seniority rights when workers are rehired.

"Sharing the Misery"

Work-sharing, the U.A.W. statement declared, should not be allowed to reach beyond the 24-hour week, "as further division is merely further sharing of misery."

Fifteen local committees have been set up by the Aluminum Workers of America, C.I.O.

Declaring that "continued layoffs of technical employes is assuming alarming proportions," the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists & Technicians, C.I.O., has asked local officials to seek payment of two or four weeks' wages to all employes laid off.

Use of company profit figures will be made by F.A.E.C.T. locals in meetings with employers who announce wholesale dismissals and complete explanation of dismissal reasons will be demanded.

(Reports on C.I.O. union activities for the jobless in a number of cities will be found on page 4.)

PITTSBURGH STORE SIGNS

PITTSBURGH—The United Retail & Wholesale Employes of America, C.I.O., has signed a contract with Rosenbaum's, Inc., one of Pittsburgh's largest department stores, providing for increased wages and better work conditions.

S.W.O.C. In First Convention

PITTSBURGH—From every section of the nation, 1,000 delegates this week poured into Pittsburgh for the first national convention of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

Less than 18 months after the S.W.O.C. drive started to enroll the men of steel into the ranks of the Committee for Industrial Organization, the delegates were able to look back at a record of accomplishments which includes 445 contracts covering approximately 550,000 workers.

The contracts have all been signed since March 2 of this year, when the S.W.O.C. reached its history-making agreement with the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corp., subsidiary of U. S. Steel. There are now more than a thousand steel union lodges.

Far-Reaching Significance

"The significance of this convention cannot be overstated," declared Philip Murray, S.W.O.C. chairman.

"Whatever program comes out of the convention, both dealing with a wage policy and the adoption of rules for the government of lodges, will have a far-reaching effect on the future of unionism in the steel industry, and, in a general way, upon the whole labor movement."

Indicative of the lively interest in the meeting among workers in the steel industry were the 1,700 resolutions filed at S.W.O.C. headquarters here in advance of the three-day meeting.

Production Down to 28 percent

Measures for dealing with unemployment occupied much of the convention's time, because of the sharp decline in steel production to 28 percent of capacity.

Half of the delegates, it is estimated, served as employe representatives when the open shop was king of the nation's No. 1 basic industry. Thirteen delegates represented California steel workers, 20 came from the South and five from Canada.

"We appreciate that all industry will be watching our convention, particularly in light of the present serious business depression," Murray declared.

"Our whole program is based on peaceful relations with the industry; that is, the working together of management and men for the common good."

Murray's Report

PITTSBURGH—A five-point program for the half million workers unionized by the Steel Workers Organizing Committee was outlined at the opening of the first S. W. O. C. convention by Philip Murray, chairman.

In a report which traced the C.I.O. steel drive from its start in the summer of 1936, Murray stressed the following problems which must be faced by the steel union:

1. Technological unemployment—a demand that Congress make a detailed survey of diminishing work opportunities in specific industries, and that the S. W. O. C.

New York Unions Hit Picketing Ban

NEW YORK—Any attempt to limit the right to picket in New York City will meet with concerted resistance from unions affiliated with the C.I.O., representatives of 25 affiliated unions announced here last week.

The resolution was adopted at a meeting laying plans for the formation of a New York City Industrial Council of the C.I.O., whose estimated membership will run to half a million.

A committee headed by Allen Haywood, C.I.O. director for the city, will consider the proposal for the city industrial council, and will report back to the group shortly after the first of the year.

The group pledged "legal, moral and financial" aid to any labor organization which finds itself the "object of attack in this anti-picketing campaign."

Self-Determination

A lot of wars could be prevented, if the people were allowed to have their say. And the same goes for labor wars.

But in Oregon thousands have been kept out of work for months because a little group of craft union officials have tried to impose on lumber workers a type of organization and an affiliation against which they have voted by overwhelming majorities.

The west coast lumber workers, by a democratic referendum, voted to establish an industrial union of their own, the International Woodworkers of America, and to affiliate with the Committee for Industrial Organization.

The craft officials replied in effect: "We don't care what you want or vote for. You have to remain voteless subjects of an A. F. of L. craft union, or our organizations will boycott you out of work."

No referendum was taken in the craft unions to determine if their members wished to throw themselves out of work in a vain effort to impose on the woodworkers a type of organization which the latter had voted to reject. They were just ordered from above to impose a boycott.

The National Labor Relations Board was called in. It certified the obvious fact that the lumber mill workers wanted the C.I.O. industrial union for which they had voted. But the craft officials thumbed their noses at the federal authorities, and the boycott continued.

Now Governor Martin has stepped in and ordered elections. The first of these has been won by the C.I.O. by a more than two-to-one majority. There is no longer even a shadow of doubt as to what the Portland mill workers want. But still the craft officials attempt to impose their unwanted rule on the workers.

A similar attempt was made by Teamsters' union officials to impose on San Francisco warehousemen an organization to which they were almost 100 per cent opposed. The teamsters were actually ordered to strike against the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union of the C.I.O., because the warehousemen preferred to belong to it.

The San Francisco boycott-strike failed miserably to overcome the democratic will of the workers, and so will the Portland boycott. But why cannot such internecine warfare, with all the suffering it brings to the workers and the community, be stopped before it starts, by the democratic expedient of allowing to the workers themselves the right of self-determination—as is indeed required by the law?

It was the denial of this right of self-determination that caused the breach between C.I.O. and A. F. of L. in the first place. The workers in the mass-production industries, whether organized in federal or craft unions or unorganized, desired industrial union charters. They demanded them by every democratic means at their disposal, but the A. F. of L. executives insisted on imposing craft forms which the workers rejected.

The C.I.O. was formed to win the right of self-determination for the workers. It has never sought to impose industrial unionism where craft unions are preferred, but merely to clear the way for industrial organization where the workers desire it. Four million have clearly demonstrated that they want the industrial form by joining C.I.O. unions in the past two years.

The breach in the ranks of labor could be healed tomorrow if the A. F. of L. leadership would agree to accord the right of self-determination to American workers.

Advertising Against Labor

One of the favorite ways in which big business throws its weight about when fighting labor organizations, is by purchasing full-page advertisements in scores, if not hundreds of daily papers.

A wealthy corporation can afford to spend hundreds of thousands of dollars to present its anti-labor case this way; and it is assured its misrepresentations cannot be answered by the unions in similar fashion, since they can't compete in such huge expenditures.

This one-sided weapon of the wealthy was used to full advantage during the steel strike, and was in large part responsible for the mobilization of most of the press in a campaign of propaganda against the C.I.O. which left labor gasping with indignation but impotent to reply in kind.

Now, however, labor is finding an unexpected defender against such high-priced distortions. Advertising men who are concerned about the effectiveness of the service they sell are becoming worried lest many readers distrust all advertising on account of the anti-labor propaganda which so often fills the advertising columns.

"Advertising is in bad enough odor already with the vast public of plain people without getting a reputation as a scab and a strikebreaker," says an industrial advertising manager writing in the trade magazine, Advertising and Selling.

Advertising, he continues, "cannot afford the stigma of being 'Unfair to Organized Labor.' To send it off today on the boss's errands, thus incurring the indelible ill-will and mistrust of millions . . . and then tomorrow to send it forth again to meet and sell with shining face and persuasive voice these same millions . . . is morally deplorable, of course, but it is just plain bad business, as well."

The writer points out that "all of some 200 advertisements featured in recent labor trouble were 100 per cent antagonistic to the worker. . . . All were designed to break a strike, justify a lockout or a violent breaking of picket lines."

He maintains that "the advertisements were directly unstrategic if nothing worse, that they delayed the final settlement, left many unhealed wounds, and that indirectly they did an untold harm to advertising as a business tool."

Against business misuse of the press for anti-union purposes, organized labor has this much protection at least—that too much misrepresentation has its penalties, even from a business standpoint.

Honesty, in editorial as well as advertising columns, is sometimes a good policy—at any rate, from the point of view of circulation and public confidence.

Immediate Relief!

Is Our Face Red? No, It Isn't

The Committee for Industrial Organization and the millions of plain, hard-working, freedom-loving American citizens who make up its membership, have been called every name in the vocabulary of abuse.

We expected this. For every forward-looking social movement since time began has met with such abuse from the stand-patters. When Moses led the children of Israel out of Egypt, he and they were called alien agitators, Communists, baby-eaters and everything else that the people who wanted to keep them in slavery could think of.

We even take such abuse as a merited tribute to the fact that the C.I.O. is really going places and doing things. For inaction is always respectable.

And if anyone thinks that the opponents of the C.I.O. have a vivid imagination and a lively vocabulary, they should just look up some ancient papers and see the names that were given to the people who fought for and won American independence—not to mention the imaginative abuse heaped on the heads of the "subversive elements" who first got the idea of organizing labor unions.

But there are limits. After yawning our way through a red-baiting leaflet describing the C.I.O. as the "Communist International Organization," hailing from Russia, "organizing to fight the Boy Scouts," and plotting "bloodshed and slaughter and the tearing down of churches," offering "high wages as a bait," the while it plans to "take women from their homes and children from their parents," we came across this one:

"Forcing young men into the army and navy, and no baseball or football games allowed. That is what you can look forward to, if you vote the C.I.O. or farm-labor ticket. A nice program for Dictator Lewis!"

We beg to differ. We don't think it's a bit nice. On the contrary, we take our stand unequivocally for baseball and football, and more of it! In fact, we know of some perfectly good teams that are called "Reds" even more than we are, not to mention a well-known college team, otherwise un-Bolshevized, that flaunts a crimson banner.

As to the army and navy, we thought that Army had just sunk Navy 6 to 0, and that was that! The C.I.O. solemnly swears that it used no force in the matter either. The young men supplied all the force themselves, and if you don't believe it, ask Navy!

Scanning the News

The magazine Business Week predicts that returns on the unemployment census, on which estimates run as high as 10,000,000, will have a lot to do with what Congress does with the wage-hour bill.

Labor, however, doesn't have to wait for the census returns to know that unemployment is bad enough to demand quick action.

* * *

It's open season for anti-labor mayors, and two at least have made themselves into the "shining marks" which seem to have such an attraction for political death.

Mayor "I-Am-the-Law" Hague of Jersey City got himself a nice two-column picture in the New York Times, with the caption, "I decide, I do, me, right here," says Hague. He thinks he has labor "under control" since he drove out C.I.O. organizers. But Jersey City workers say he has another guess coming.

Mayor Dore of Seattle, who with his labor boss, "Boycott" Beck, has given a new meaning to "Beck-Dore politics," recently suggested that C.I.O. pickets would find themselves in "the jail, hospital or morgue."

But now the front door of the political morgue is gaping for Dore himself, as A. F. of L. locals join with those of the C.I.O. and all progressive citizens' groups to prevent his reelection.

B. C. Forbes, writing in the N. Y. American, foresees a renewal of the U. S. Steel-C.I.O. contract and notes its high degree of success.

S.W.O.C. delegates meeting in Pittsburgh also note the success of collective bargaining and don't intend to give it up.

* * *

It has been said that when Moses came down from Mt. Sinai he carried with him the jurisdiction of Big Bill Hutcheson's United Carpenters & Joiners. At any rate it seems to include everything within the range of vision of a Carpenters' organizer; and the A. F. of L. executives look at Hutch's 3,000 votes and never say him nay.

But until we saw it with our own eyes on a union circular, we didn't know that the Carpenters were now claiming jurisdiction over "duck and rubber workers." Anybody wanna buy a duck?

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

Conspiracy Against The Seamen

SEAMEN have traditionally been treated with the type of consideration that was shown to slaves by the slave-owning class.

That is to say, so long as they "keep their place" by making no effective protest against miserable living quarters, long hours and a discipline that borders on servitude, they will be treated with a certain sentimental paternalism.

Old ladies will collect cast-off books for them, institutes will be created with a tinge of "charity" and more than a suspicion of anti-unionism. Songs will be written about them, and the "romance of the sea" will be expected to compensate them for loss of freedom and the lowest of living standards.

But let the seamen once stand up for their rights, let them once organize and make their demand effective for better conditions and a status of equality with other free American citizens, and every hand is suddenly turned against them with an amazing ferocity.

When the Rich Get Scared

Frantic cries are raised against the seamen who show signs of union independence, cries ranging all the way from "impudence" and "insubordination" to "mutiny," "conspiracy," and "Communism."

"Throw 'em in irons!" is the demand of the comfortable sentimentalists who ordinarily believe in being "kind to sailors." And a regular lynch spirit is whipped up by press, radio and all the other means usually employed to make the rich believe their privileges are threatened by a revolt of the poor.

Meanwhile, in the ensuing confusion, the hard-faced men who make hard cash by exploiting the seamen, push forward their schemes for breaking the seamen's unions—or rendering them powerless through hampering legislation—and for getting away with more of the loot.

N.M.U. Success Brings Counter-Attack

In mobilizing their forces behind the seamen's opposition to restrictive legislation now pending in Congress, the Committee for Industrial Organization and Labor's Non-Partisan League are aiding in uncovering a far-reaching conspiracy against maritime labor.

The immediate cause of the conspiracy against the seamen is the success of the National Maritime Union and associated unions of the C.I.O. in improving wages and working conditions through strike action; and in building effective labor organization in place of the bureaucratic company unionism existing under A. F. of L. auspices.

The Case of The Algic

The case of the S.S. Algic served as a pretext to bring the campaign against the seamen into the open. Acres of editorials and ridiculous red-baiting articles suddenly covered the press of the country; radio commentators made lying propaganda against marine labor an almost nightly program; and "mutiny" stories were dug up from fiction and ancient history to frighten the public.

The purpose of all this hullabaloo, of course, was not just to victimize the Algic's crew — men whose only crime has been to show some union independence against "bucko" officers, and to refuse, while in safe harbor, to work with incompetent scabs who would have endangered their lives.

The purpose, as is now becoming obvious, was to prepare the ground for anti-labor legislation.

The First Step In a General Drive

This legislation, the N.M.U. declares, is inspired by shipowners who are using it to stall off pending negotiations with the union, and who hope through it to limit the seamen's right to strike.

The proposed amendments also have other features obnoxious to labor, destroying present mediation machinery; and authorizing shipbuilding with government money in foreign yards while hundreds of thousands of American steel and shipyard workers are unemployed.

If the shipowners and their allies are successful in restricting the seamen's right to strike, the next step will assuredly be to attempt to extend restrictive legislation to cover all unions.

Low Job Standards Show Wage-Hour Bill Need

Federal Regulation Would Benefit All, Says League

WASHINGTON—Burning arguments for fair labor standards in industry are buttressed by many startling facts and figures in an outline prepared by the research department of Labor's Non-Partisan League, in connection with its campaign for passage of the Black-Connery wage-hour bill.

"Industry has proved that it will not or cannot on a voluntary basis maintain conditions that would protect the right to work for millions of American workers," the League's pamphlet states.

It points to economic conditions "which are driving this country into another depression." Sweatshop conditions of low wages, long working hours and child labor are threatening American standards, it says.

Wages of $5 and $2 a Week

Government reports are quoted to show that over 43 percent of the women in Florida factories were getting less than 20 cents an hour in the spring of 1937, while about half of the men earned less than $11.30 a week.

In 26 West Virginia cities wages of less than $5 a week were being paid to about six percent of the women in manufacturing industries in the fall of 1936.

In Texas at the same time, wages of $2 a week and less than 14 cents an hour were reported.

In the North Too

Such low wages are not confined to the South, for reports from Connecticut, Delaware and the District of Columbia show wages of less than $5 a week in many cases, while wages of less than $10 a week are widely prevalent.

The government surveys also show that most of the low-wage establishments have been maintaining an extremely long work-week, which in many cases ranges about 44, 48, 52, and in some above 54 hours a week.

Child Labor Increasing

Contrary to the general impression that child labor is on the way out, the league survey shows that "employment of children at low wages and long hours increased sharply in the recent two and one-half years of recovery."

A recent government survey, covering 2,000 employed children under 18 in Alabama, Georgia, Indiana, Missouri, New Hampshire and Massachusetts in 1936, shows that a work-week of 60 and 50 hours and wages of less than $4 a week were common for employed children.

Hoover Inaction

The league cites the disastrous results of the legislative inaction of the Hoover administration after the 1929 crash.

"Month after month," it says, "the Hoover administration kept issuing solemn requests to industrial and business leaders to maintain employment and not to cut wages in order to keep up purchasing power. Business responded with official promises.

"But month after month wages continued to drop, unemployment increased, purchasing power decreased, demands for goods dropped and a creeping economic paralysis set in, reaching its climax in the closing of all the banking houses in the country.

"All appeals to voluntary effort proved disastrously ineffective."

Farmers Affected

The league declares that the welfare of every economic group in the nation depends upon the improvement of wage and hour standards.

Noteworthy are the examples showing how the welfare of the farm population is tied in with fair labor standards, because "the purchasing capacity of the industrial workers determines to a large degree the extent of the farm producer's market and the income of the farm population."

Professionals Too

Professional groups are particularly dependent upon adequate wage incomes for industrial workers, the league notes, "corporation lawyers being practically the only exception to this rule."

The league notes that "when a worker's wages are low or cut, the first item of expenditure which is reduced or eliminated is that which goes for professional service."

Merchants and salesmen also suffer today because "a large potential army of purchasers, running into millions, are not buying now because their wages are too low."

As to employers, the league points out that "at present the inefficient sweatshop employers are taking business away from the fair, efficient establishments."

Voluntary Efforts Fail

As to the failure of voluntary efforts by business to correct conditions, the league cites many facts to show that "the greatest indictment against those advocating that correction of employment standards be left to voluntary efforts of industry is recorded in the wage and working week reports of industry itself, after the NRA was outlawed."

The work-week was lengthened excessively while 10,000,000 unemployed were looking for jobs; and wages were slashed, in a period when profits and prices were rising.

Arguments for Unionism

Besides the wealth of facts and arguments for adoption of the wage-hour bill, the league pamphlet includes much information on what labor unions have done to raise the American standard of living and improve business through increased purchasing power.

The pamphlet is a useful manual on the need for union organization. It can be obtained by writing to Labor's Non-Partisan League, Willard Hotel, Washington, D. C.

The American System?

Child labor has recently been on the increase, with many youngsters forced to work a 60-hour week for as little as $4, according to a recent survey by the research department of Labor's Non-Partisan League. Shown above is an 11-year-old girl employed in a Texas shrimp heading yard. She is undersized from the strain of her tedious job.

devise a program of action to meet this problem.

2. Unemployment—a recommendation that the S. W. O. C. provide protection for jobless members, and establish an unemployment committee in each lodge for handling of this problem.

3. Legislative and political action—a recommendation that the S. W. O. C. cooperate with Labor's Non-Partisan League and that S. W. O. C. groups push the legislative program adopted at the Atlantic City convention of the C.I.O.

4. A housing program—publicly financed to the amount of five billion dollars, with the S. W. O. C. forming councils in every city to spur action on the program by legislative authorities.

5. Contracts—a recommendation that the national office of the S. W. O. C. be empowered to establish new geographical divisions for the organization, and that the negotiating of new contracts for the industry be left in the hands of the executive officers and the scale committee.

Jobs Growing Fewer

Murray quoted figures to show the drastic inroads of technological unemployment in the steel industry as the result of the introduction of an increasing number of hot strip mills. Describing the new type of process as a revolutionary technical advance, Murray pointed out that only 126 men will be needed to turn out 2,500 tons of steel in 24 hours, compared to 4,512 men in the old type mills.

"Within the next three years," he predicted, "there is every reason to believe that only 20 per cent, or 25,000 of the 125,000 steel workers normally employed on the sheet bar, heavy plate, sheet and black plate mills will still have jobs."

An additional problem, Murray stated, was the increased production of steel made possible by the increasing number of new strip mills. To meet this condition, and also to provide American workers with adequate homes, a federal housing program designed to produce 1,000,000 new low cost homes must be adopted in the very near future.

Murray's recommendation called for utilization of social security tax funds for investment in the housing program. Private industry, he declared, would never be able to do the housing job needed.

Other reports were read by David McDonald, S. W. O. C. secretary-treasurer; Clinton Golden, northeast regional director; Van A. Bittner, midwest director; William A. Mitch, southern director; Vin Sweeney, publicity director; and Lee Pressman, counsel for the S. W. O. C.

A Charter in "C" Major

WASHINGTON (UNS) — A C.I.O. local industrial charter has been issued to the Coos and Curry County Culinary Workers of Coquille (Oregon).

The Higher Education

Cornell - -

ELKLAND, Pa. — Seventy-two Cornell students marched down the main street of this town last week, bringing gifts of coal, food and clothing and promises of continued support to striking members of the National Leather Workers Assn., C.I.O.

Many of the students carried placards with the message: "Workers, we are with you!"

The marchers, many of them members of the American Students Union, brought 11 tons of coal and promised to ship in 13 more tons before the end of this week.

The Elkland leathers workers have been on strike since last summer to end near-feudal conditions in the factories of the company-dominated town.

Yale - -

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — The Committee for Industrial Organization is preparing to tackle Eli Yale.

A drive to organize all employes of the university, starting with dining hall workers and janitors, will be started almost immediately, William Garret, C.I.O. subregional director for Connecticut, announced last week.

Some workers at Yale are already organized into C.I.O. unions, Garret declared, and a number of the faculty are members of the American Federation of Teachers.

A large group of Yale students, who are sympathetic to the C.I.O. and who have been assisting its local union organizers, will aid in unionizing the university, Garret said.

And Harvard!

NEW YORK—Scarcely a hotbed of progressivism, the Harvard Club of New York is nevertheless realizing that it pays to deal with organized labor.

The management of the club, which a few months ago removed a picture of Harvard-alumnus Franklin Roosevelt from a prominent position in the lobby to a less visible spot upstairs, is preparing to negotiate with the Hotel, Restaurant & Cafeteria Employes Organizing Committee.

The committee won a state labor relations board poll by a 69-21 margin.

At the University Club, the union needed no election. The management conceded that a majority of the employes were union members.

"School Days"–C.I.O. Model

The United Federal Workers, C.I.O., believe that education and organization go hand in hand. The union's school in Washington, D. C., has proved a popular feature with government workers in the nation's capital. Here's Vice Pres. Goldschmidt of the U. F. W. assuming the role of teacher at one of the classes.

New Yorkers Prefer C.I.O., Votes Show

NEW YORK—A survey of Labor Board elections in New York for the seven months, from May to December 1937, shows an overwhelming preference on the part of workers for the C.I.O. as collective bargaining agency.

During this period, the C.I.O. won 148 of 172 contests in which it entered, receiving 86 percent of the votes cast. In the same period the A. F. of L. won 28 percent of 139 elections in which it participated.

In elections in which the C.I.O. and the A. F. of L. were opposed, the C.I.O. won 93 percent, rolling up 81 percent of the votes cast. The A. F. of L. was even unable to make a good showing against company unions, winning only 45 percent of the vote in ballots of this type. The C.I.O., on the contrary, won 9 of 12 elections against company unions.

Throughout the period, 207 elections were held, with 59,416 valid ballots cast.

Marine Legislation Called "Threat To Labor"

Curran Declares Bills Inspired by Shipowners

WASHINGTON—The maritime unions, with the full backing of the C.I.O. and Labor's Non-Partisan League, are strenuously resisting passage of strike-restricting amendments to the Maritime Act, which they see as "the first step in a general drive for coercive legislation against labor in this country."

Chairman J. W. Madden of the Natl. Labor Relations Board has also appeared before a Senate committee to oppose the amendments, which he says would cause "confusion, uncertainty and unnecessary duplication of administrative and judicial effort."

Joseph Curran, Natl. Maritime Union leader, told House and Senate committees that the amendments are "coercive in nature" and "inspired by ship-owners who desire to avoid dealing with legitimate unions."

He charged that "a system of virtual compulsory arbitration of labor disputes" which would destroy "present satisfactory mediation machinery," would be instituted if the amendments were passed.

Would Impose Hardship

Other points brought out by Curran were:

"That the training ship proposals disregard the offers of cooperation by maritime unions and would instead substitute military supervision by men unversed in the merchant marine.

"That the amendments run counter to American tradition and would impose a severe hardship on both labor and capital by authorizing substantial building in foreign shipyards.

"That it is inexcusable to lift the $25,000 a year limitation on shipping officials' salaries in this 'sick industry' supported by government subsidies."

The New York Maritime Council, an organization composed of eight maritime unions in the New York area affiliated with the C.I.O., stated that its prediction that the introduction at this session of Congress of the merchant marine legislation would be used by the shipowners as an excuse for delaying or breaking off contract negotiations had been borne out.

The American Radio Telegraphists Association, one of the Maritime Council unions, announced that a letter had been received from the Moore & McCormack Steamship Co. on the day the hearings on one of the bills started, delaying negotiations on the excuse of the pending legislation.

The N. M. U. also announced that negotiations with several steamship companies for agreements based on a standard contract already signed with 11 lines, had been delayed.

Testifies

Proposed amendments to the federal maritime laws seriously threaten all American labor, Joseph Curran, of the Natl. Maritime Union, C.I.O., told a Congressional committee. Strike-restricting clauses are aimed at crippling the maritime unions, he warned.

S. W. O. C. Winner In 48 Elections, Records Reveal

PITTSBURGH—The Steel Workers Organizing Committee has participated in 66 National Labor Relations Board elections—and won 48 of them, Philip Murray, S.W.O.C. chairman, disclosed here.

"These elections emphasize that in our campaign we have employed the natural and legal means of determining the collective bargaining agency that the workers desire," Murray pointed out.

In the 18 elections lost by the S.W.O.C., close to 50 percent of the workers voted in its favor.

In most cases, Murray said, "the elections were held by mutual consent; that is, management agreed to bargain and sign a contract with us if we won. It is unfortunate that some of the so-called 'little steel' companies have not yet come to accept the law of the land, but persist in an antiquated and irresponsible policy which makes for strife."

C.I.O. Furniture Workers Launch Organizing Drive

WASHINGTON—An organizing drive has been begun by the United Furniture Workers of America, new C.I.O. international union, to bring all the workers in the industry into a single industrial union.

The campaign was begun immediately following the issuance of a C.I.O. charter of affiliation Dec. 9. A. F. of L., C.I.O. and independent unions are merging in the new organization, whose formation was decided upon at the National Unity Conference held at the end of November.

The committee set up by this conference met in Washington Dec. 8-9 to launch the union. Morris Muster of New York, vice president of the Upholsterers' International Union of the A. F. of L., was named by C.I.O. Chairman John L. Lewis as provisional president of the United Furniture Workers; and Emil Costello, C.I.O. furniture workers' representative from Kenosha, Wis., secretary-treasurer.

A provisional executive board was set up, including the two officers and Max Perlow, New York Upholsterers; George Bucher, Philadelphia, and Joseph D. Persily, Indianapolis, representing C.I.O. local industrial unions; and Joseph Proudman, representing an independent union in Jamestown, N. Y.

Headquarters in New York

These officers will serve provisionally, pending the calling of a constitutional convention, at which the membership will elect permanent officers and draft a constitution for the international. Temporary headquarters are at 1180 Broadway, New York City.

The new C.I.O. international starts with a membership of 35,000 representing the great majority of organized furniture workers and including C.I.O. local industrial unions, independent unions and those locals of the Upholsterers' International Union, A. F. of L., which have already voted to affiliate.

At their meeting in Washington, December 8-9, the committee elected by the National Unity Conference took note of the actions of Pres. Sal B. Hoffman of the Upholsterers' International in opposing the decisions of the conference, although he had spoken and voted for them, and removed him from membership on the committee.

Declared 'Open War'

The committee charges that Hoffman "has proceeded to declare open war on all bodies of the Upholsterers' International which are in favor of C.I.O. affiliation. He has suspended the advisory board and secretary of the North Atlantic states council, in order to eliminate pro-C.I.O. forces from the International, and has begun to suspend pro-C.I.O. locals—starting with Local 45-B, which he has suspended on the pretext of nonpayment of dues."

In view of such actions to deprive pro-C.I.O. locals of a vote, the committee decided that "a referendum in the Upholsterers' International under Hoffman's direction would not meet the purposes of the resolution adopted by the conference, nor would it represent the sentiment of the membership of the International, which we are convinced is overwhelmingly for C.I.O. affiliation."

C.I.O. Asks for Poll At Armour Plant

CHICAGO — In a move to "crack" the packing house industry, the Packing House Workers Organizing Committee has asked the National Labor Relations Board for a poll of the workers at the Chicago plant of Armour & Co.

Local 370 of the United Packinghouse Workers has already been certified by the N.L.R.B. as collective bargaining agent for Armour employes in the Milwaukee plant.

C.I.O. Groups Lead Drive To Win Relief For Idle

In scores of cities throughout the nation, C.I.O. unions are pushing a nation-wide campaign to balance the human budget by obtaining adequate relief for thousands of men and women recently thrown out of work. See page 1 for news of what C.I.O. internationals are doing for the jobless. Here are reports from key cities:

DETROIT

The C.I.O. and the United Automobile Workers are sponsoring a joint protest meeting this week aimed at "taking effective action against big business interests which are seeking to curtail relief expenditures" while plants are closed.

AKRON

The United Rubber Workers of America, C.I.O., will cooperate with other organized groups to win larger relief appropriations from the state legislature, and will establish local relief committees. A mass meeting was held at the Akron Armory Sunday night, with representatives from many unions present.

ST. LOUIS

The St. Louis Joint Board of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, C.I.O., moved to coordinate relief activity for its locals' members, a majority of whom are estimated to be without work. A delegation of 30 demanded of state officials that relief sums be increased.

NEW KENSINGTON, PA.

A mass meeting devoted to problems of caring for jobless will be held here December 27, with Congressman Robert Allen and others scheduled to speak.

PHILADELPHIA

A mass demonstration against unemployment and layoffs is being planned by the U.E.R.&M.W. District Councils and other C.I.O. unions in the city.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.

Though layoffs at the General Electric Co. plant here have been less numerous than in many other industrial plants throughout the country, the Schenectady C.I.O. Council and Local 301 of the U.E.R.&M.W. are making preparations for future emergencies.

SEATTLE

Seattle unionists won a major victory when city officials granted unions the right to certify jobless members for immediate work relief. Delays of two and three days will be avoided through application of the new system.

BRIDGEPORT, CONN.

Expressing fear that 20,000 local workers will be unemployed by the first of the year, representatives of C.I.O. unions appeared before the city council and demanded adoption of a four-point program aimed at guaranteeing the "right to work" and providing immediate attention to the wants of the needy.

C.I.O. Sweeps Ohio Valley

CINCINNATI—The bringing of unionism to the Ohio Valley by the C.I.O. was celebrated at a regional conference attended by 220 delegates representing 150,000 workers organized in C.I.O. unions. The conference heard reports of amazing progress in the past six months, showing the sweep of union organization through this once open-shop valley.

One hundred and thirty-two local C.I.O. unions were chartered in this period, according to Paul W. Fuller, regional director, of which 79 received Local Industrial Union charters directly from the C.I.O., 29 were set up as locals of C.I.O. national and international unions, and 24 as lodges of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

Close to 85,000 workers previously unorganized are enrolled in the 79 Local Industrial Union groups, the remainder being divided among the internationals and the S. W. O. C.

Many Gains Through Contracts

In the same period 73 contracts have been signed in the region, covering close to 50,000 workers. These contracts include provisions for union recognition, seniority, improved working conditions, and vacations with pay—a provision almost unknown in union contracts before the advent of the C.I.O.

Wage increases of approximately $3,000,000 per annum have been won for the organized workers in the area, with an unestimated additional increase accruing to other workers through the indirect pressure of the C. I. O.

Few Strikes

The contracts were won and other gains secured in most instances without the necessity of strikes. At the present time, the C.I.O. throughout the region is consolidating its gains by setting up Industrial Union Councils in the towns and cities in the area. The Council in Greater Cincinnati already includes 65 unions, with a membership of 34,000.

Wedding Bells

NEW YORK — Pres. Michael Quill of the Transport Workers Union, C.I.O., is one "outside agitator" who's going back where he came from. But he'll return soon.

Quill sailed on the S. S. Washington this week for his native Ireland, where on Dec. 26 he will marry Miss Mollie O'Neill, an American citizen temporarily residing in County Kerry.

Seamen Vote C.I.O.

American seamen, shown above being paid off at the end of a trip, have "paid off" the A. F. of L. for its years of misrule in the maritime industry. A referendum conducted by the National Maritime Union showed overwhelming ratification of the union's C.I.O. affiliation move.

Alabama C.I.O. Council Hits Low Southern Wage Levels

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—Five hundred delegates from scores of local C.I.O. unions throughout Alabama last week set up machinery for a state C.I.O. council, hailed the federal wage-hour bill as a death sentence on the "southern differential" and moved towards giving Alabama unionists a more active voice in politics.

Impetus to the demand for quick action on the wage-hour legislation was given by a speech from Robert Moore, head of the state labor department, who pointed out the widening gap between wages and living costs. In Birmingham, he said, the cost of living has increased 18.4 percent since 1933, while wages have risen only from 10 to 15 percent.

The constitution established by the convention called for continuous efforts to bring about higher wages, shorter hours and better working conditions in industry.

Atty. John Brown of Kentucky, counsel for District 30 of the United Mine Workers and a guest speaker at the meeting, told the delegates "there is no reason why the man who digs a lump of coal in Alabama should receive less for his toil than the man who digs coal in Pennsylvania."

William Mitch, district president of the U.M.W., was unanimously elected president of the state council, and Yelverton Cowherd, C.I.O. regional director, was named secretary-treasurer.

A. F. of L. REJECTS UNITY

SWOC Asks Aid for Idle, Pushes Political Activity

PITTSBURGH—Meeting in their first convention since the steel industry was organized by the C.I.O., a thousand delegates of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee representing half a million workers in every steel center of the United States and Canada, adopted plans for consolidating their giant union, for negotiating new wage agreements and for coping with unemployment.

Philip Murray, chairman of the S.W.O.C., told of the remarkable accomplishments of the S.W.O.C. in the 18 months since it was formed.

Union Brings Many Gains

"We now have almost one-half million members in this organization," he said; "We have 1,080 lodges created, and have negotiated 445 collective bargaining agreements. Our efforts have resulted, during this 18-month period, in the bringing of annual wage increases to the employes amounting to two hundred million dollars; the work-week has been shortened from 48 hours to 40 hours. Seniority rights have been recognized; and grievance machinery has been provided for the protection of the members."

Power to negotiate new contracts was vested in the executive officers of the S.W.O.C., and a legislative program was adopted calling for a five billion dollar public housing program, to be financed from social security payroll taxes; a one billion dollar WPA and PWA appropriation; and 6-hour day and 30-hour week legislation.

Hundreds of Thousands Laid Off

The appalling extent of unemployment in the steel industry was revealed by Murray in his opening speech. He disclosed that 224,000 steel and metal fabricating workers or 28 per cent of the 800,000 workers coming under the S.W.O.C. jurisdiction, have been laid off from regular employment since the current slump in business began.

Besides steps to strengthen their union and win new wage agreements, the delegates took a strong stand for labor political action, which they declared, "must be a natural by-product of economic freedom obtained through the right to organize and through collective bargaining."

All lodges of the S.W.O.C. were urged to affiliate with the local and state organizations of Labor's Non-Partisan League.

The convention pointed with pride to the S.W.O.C.'s record of faithful adherence to its hundreds of collective bargaining agreements. It adopted a resolution assuring employers who enter into such agreements "that they will receive the complete cooperation and support of the S.W.O.C. in carrying through the full administration of such collective bargaining and wage agreements."

Union Group Urges Boycott of Jap Toys

DETROIT.—A strong plea for support of the anti-Japanese boycott was made by Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers and chairman of the C.I.O. Toy and Novelty Workers Organizing Committee, in urging American parents to refuse to buy Japanese toys during the holiday season.

"Every article marked 'Made in Japan' is dark with the spilled blood of the innocent Chinese people," Chairman Martin said. "A Japanese-made toy for an American child is a bomb for a Chinese child."

Philanthropic Group Bargains With C.I.O.

NEW YORK—After six months of pressure, the Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies of New York City has granted recognition and collective bargaining rights to the Social Service Employees Union. The union is affiliated with the United Office & Professional Workers, C.I.O.

Jacob Fischer, president of the union, pointed out that the Federation's decision will set a precedent for the 91 charitable organizations affiliated with it.

10,000 Quit A.F. of L., Join New C.I.O. Union

NEW YORK—Twelve former locals of the Upholsterers' Union, A. F. of L., with a membership of close to 10,000, have already swung over to the recently-created United Furniture Workers of America, C.I.O., Morris Muster, president of the organization, announced here.

A large number of C.I.O. industrial union locals are about to come into the new international, Muster said, and independent unions, located principally in Jamestown, N. Y., will probably join before long.

With only two dissenting votes from some 1,600 members, Local 76 of the Upholsterers in New York City swung over to the C.I.O. At the same time the members voted to disregard the suspension of Morris Pizer, head of the local, by Sal Hoffmann, Upholsterers' president.

Hoffmann had promised to aid in building the new C.I.O. union when he spoke at the Furniture Workers Unity Conference in Washington last month. On his return to this city, however, he launched an anti-C.I.O. campaign.

Spurns C.I.O. Offer To Bring Unions Under One Roof

WASHINGTON—Refusal of the American Federation of Labor representatives to agree to proposals of the Committee for Industrial Organization for bringing the 4,000,000 C.I.O. members into the Federation, led to collapse of the negotiations between the two organizations December 21.

"We have offered the A. F. of L. our entire membership," said Philip Murray, chairman of the C.I.O. negotiating committee. "They have refused our offer. The onus for the deadlock must be placed on the representatives of the A. F. of L.

"When they can make an offer to protect the interests of labor and to promote genuine labor unity, we will be pleased to sit down with them again and go into the matter.

"In the meanwhile the conferences are adjourned sine die."

Murray declared that the C.I.O. will now concentrate on consolidating the strength of its unions and will consider calling a national convention, as authorized at its Atlantic City conference.

"We will also promote the establishment of Industrial Union Councils in cities and states throughout the nation," he said.

C.I.O. Leaders Meet

Presidents of all the national and international unions of the C.I.O. met in Washington on the day the conferences collapsed. They discussed in detail the negotiations which had been under way for two months and agreed unanimously that there would be no desertion of any of the C.I.O. unions, but that all must be taken into the A. F. of L. together if real unity was to be achieved.

The peace conferences were initiated by the C.I.O. at its Atlantic City meeting. They reached a deadlock early in December, when the A. F. of L. executive council was meeting in Washington and when Pres. Wm. Green told a subcommittee consisting of John L. Lewis and Murray that the A. F. of L. would not agree to take in all of the C.I.O. unions together until all differences between the various unions has been ironed out.

Charters For All

The C.I.O. proposal was that the A. F. of L. should take in all the 33 C.I.O. unions and issue charters to each of them; that it should issue industrial charters to a list agreed upon with the C.I.O.; and that after entry into the A. F. of L., joint committees should be appointed to settle remaining conflicts between unions.

"The A. F. of L. refused to accept the 4,000,000 C.I.O. members on these conditions," said Murray. "Their position means continued strife between the two bodies of organized labor, since under it no general agreement could be completed until agreements were effected between all unions.

"The A. F. of L. committee have shown their inability to cope with the split in the ranks of labor. Their inability to accept the C.I.O. offer to bring 4,000,000 members in the A. F. of L. shows further the weakness of their position."

A.L.P. GROWING FAST

NEW YORK — The American Labor Party, which polled a vote of close to half a million in New York's recent city election, has an enrollment of 205,338, the Board of Elections has revealed.

Wage-Hour Bill Defeat—A Warning Signal

Sweatshop employers, reactionary politicians of both parties and their new-found allies from among the leadership of the American Federation of Labor, have succeeded in defeating legislation directed against starvation wages, child labor and oppressive hours of work.

Denunciation of those who have thus ganged up against the poor and exploited, is not enough. The situation is one whose importance transcends even the immediate issue. It throws a flood of light on a new alignment of the forces of reaction. It reveals some of the weaknesses in the progressive camp. It is a situation that calls for sober analysis—and action!

With unemployment sweeping the country and the shadow of depression looming over every American home, the time has come for labor to demand an accounting. Are its proclaimed friends living up to their promises? Are its declared spokesmen speaking its mind? Who are in the camp of its enemies?

* * *

In 1936 the President was re-elected and the Democratic party was given an overwhelming mandate to put into effect policies which would raise the living standards of the great masses of the American people—the millions who are under-paid, under-nourished, ill-clothed and ill-housed.

Social legislation was called for, to soften the blows of depression and, if possible, to prevent its recurrence.

But the end of 1937 finds millions added to the ranks of the jobless, another depression upon us, and still no legislation upon the books to prevent wages from sinking to the level of the last depression.

At a time when more government spending is urgently needed for relief of the unemployed and to give purchasing power to those who need it most and can do most good with it, the cry is raised to relieve the rich of taxation, to curtail spending and to balance the budget!

* * * *

Even such a meager measure of relief for underprivileged millions as the Black-Connery wage-hour bill, has been defeated.

Who killed this bill?

Chiseling sweatshop employers, who could be expected of course to put up a fight for their right to chisel and exploit.

Tory industrialists, who are short-sighted enough to defend the sweatshoppers and to prefer immediate profiteering to measures designed to increase purchasing power and improve business generally.

Republican Congressmen, who seek to make party politics out of their country's misfortune by opposing all progressive legislation that bears the administration label.

Alleged Democrats, who voted against their own party and repudiated its pledges, in order to keep many of their constituents in poverty.

And—strange bedfellow of sweatshop employers and tory politicians—the leadership of the A. F. of L.

* * * *

The Black-Connery bill as it passed the Senate had the approval of Pres. William Green of the A. F. of L. In fact, it was amended in a number of respects to suit him. John P. Frey and some of the building trades officials did not like it, but the majority of the A. F. of L. membership wanted some protection from the sweatshop.

But since then, the whip has been cracked over Green and he has jumped to the orders of the little clique of a half-dozen officials who dominate the Federation's executive council.

So in the special session we have seen Green wiring to every member of Congress demanding that they kill the very bill he once supported; while Frey and his cronies lobbied side by side with sweatshop employers and tory industrialists to prevent the raising of wages and the shortening of hours through federal regulation.

Progressive legislators were little affected by such maneuvers, preferring to respond to the wishes of the rank and file of the A. F. of L., rather than to those of such faithless officials. But timorous reactionaries were furnished with sufficient "labor" excuses to affect the narrow margin for defeat of the wage-hour bill.

* * * *

Those who defeated wage-hour legislation cannot escape blame by pleading that the bill was inadequate. At a time when depression has set in, it was urgently important that at least the principle of federal regulation and some minimum protection against sweatshop standards should be enacted. Once this was done, amendments could be made later to improve inadequate legislation.

For those Congressmen who proved faithless to the trust which was placed in them, there will be an accounting at the next elections. The list of those who voted against wage-hour legislation will be frequently referred to in 1938.

The A. F. of L. officials who maneuvered to kill this legislation must answer to their own membership.

But for the labor and progressive forces generally, the defeat of the wage-hour bill will serve as a warning signal.

Hereafter labor will trust less in political promises and party pledges, and more in the organization of its own independent voting power through Labor's Non-Partisan League—to see that such promises are kept, to check on those who break them, and to put forward its own constructive program to cope with unemployment and depression.

Reaction has put one over, by rallying to its support many who should be in the camp of progress. But there is at least this consolation, that American working people have had a chance to see clearly the forces lined up against them, and to distinguish between true and false friends.

SWEET AS SUGAR!

NEW YORK—Thirteen hundred employes of the Natl. Sugar Refinery Co. have won 5c-an-hour wage increases, the 40-hour week, and vacation with pay, thanks to the United Sugar Refinery Workers Local Industrial Union 580, C.I.O. The company has just signed a contract with the union.

VOL. I WASHINGTON, D. C., DECEMBER 22, 1937 No. 3

Why A. F. of L. Leaders Block Unity

The obstinacy of the refusal of A. F. of L. leaders to permit formation of a unified labor movement, is a matter that calls for explanation.

The C.I.O. has consistently stood for labor unity—not only in a formal sense, but also in the wider sense of bringing hitherto unorganized and divided workers into the labor movement.

The A. F. of L. executives rudely rejected all efforts to preserve a united Federation, when they drove the C.I.O. unions out of it more than a year ago.

Since then the C.I.O. has made repeated efforts to restore the unity thus shattered, but has met with nothing but rebuffs.

The most recent peace moves of the C.I.O. have failed, because the craft executives refuse to permit the entry into the A. F. of L. of 4,000,000 workers organized by the C.I.O.

* * *

Instead of accepting an offer that would more than double the strength of their Federation, the A. F. of L. leaders wanted to take in only a million or so and leave the rest out in the cold for later consideration.

In this proposal of theirs are revealed two of the reasons for their strange stand.

It indicates, first, that they are more concerned with dividing the C.I.O. than with uniting all of labor; and secondly, that they fear more than they desire the influx of millions of new members into the Federation.

Fear of too many new members entering the A. F. of L., and upsetting the present leadership and its policies, was an important factor in the resistance of the Federation executives to the industrial organization program of the C.I.O.

Now that millions of previously unorganized have been organized by the C.I.O., the same fear still persists. That is why the little clique of craft leaders which controls the A. F. of L. would rather continue disunity, with 4,000,000 union workers outside the Federation, than admit all together. They would like to try to assimilate them little by little.

Nearly all the maneuvers of the A. F. of L. leaders in the peace conferences have been devoted, not to restoring unity, but to trying to preserve their stranglehold over the Federation while at the same time weakening and dividing the C.I.O.

* * *

As to the alternative proposal of the A. F. of L. executives that all differences should first be settled between all C.I.O. and A. F. of L. unions, before any admission of C.I.O. unions—that is merely a cynical rejection of unity.

For they know how long it would take a craft leader like Hutcheson to agree to grant industrial rights to the Woodworkers, if he ever did so voluntarily—and one such craftist could veto unity indefinitely.

But the A. F. of L. leaders will have to explain their rejection of unity as best they can to their own rank and file.

For the C.I.O. the way is clear ahead. It will now concentrate on consolidating its position and pushing forward to organize new millions, confident that in this way it can best serve the cause of effective labor unity, to which the A. F. of L. executives will eventually have to agree—or take the consequences from their own membership.

Repeal The Woodrum Amendment!

Millions have been added to the ranks of the jobless in recent months. Hunger and misery knock at the doors of millions of homes. More relief is urgently needed, more money for WPA and public works.

Yet WPA has had to cut hundreds of thousands off its job rolls and cannot now add to them as much as it should. It has been prevented from increasing expenditures to meet the present emergency by what is known as the Woodrum amendment.

This amendment was tacked onto the relief appropriation bill at the last session of Congress, to check the expenditure of relief funds.

It provides that the funds then appropriated must "be so apportioned and distributed over the 12 months of the fiscal year . . . as to constitute the total amount that will be furnished during such fiscal year for relief purposes."

The effect of this amendment is to prevent the WPA from spending funds now on hand because it cannot receive any more in this fiscal year.

Repeal of this vicious amendment to "soak the unemployed" would permit the WPA to spend more of its present funds at once for the greatly increased relief needs, and to call on Congress for more, when more is needed.

Labor's Non-Partisan League has launched a nationwide drive for repeal of the Woodrum amendment, and all labor and progressive forces are joining in the demand.

Relief of human misery and prevention of starvation in our rich country should be the first task to which Congress addresses itself. The Woodrum amendment stands in the way of such relief. It must be repealed!

Meanest Trick of the Year

—Jerry Doyle in the Philadelphia Record

How Long Will It Last?

NEW YORK—How temporary is the present "temporary recession"?

Between three months and eight months, at least, according to a confidential survey for business men distributed by a Wall Street organization which has just conducted an "off the record" poll of its affiliated economic advisors.

The organization itself declares its own estimate "less optimistic than that expressed by the majority of our councillors.

"Perhaps it would be more accurate to say that we are not quite as sure as the majority appear to be, that this is a temporary recession.

"While we are inclined to agree with two or three of our councillors who believe that the down trend already has gone too far to be called a 'mere recession,' we are not willing to forecast that the decline will get out of hand."

A majority of the advisors echoed big-business demands that the government return to pre-New Deal practices, removing a major portion of the regulation on business enacted in recent years, and cutting industry's tax bill.

One councillor, however, pointed out that such a step would be "deflationary," predicting that if government spending efforts to fight the business decline are undertaken, "we shall probably see mild recovery early next year."

Buffalo C.I.O. Gives Aid In Struggle Against Tories

BUFFALO, N. Y.—The C.I.O. in Buffalo, under the leadership of Regional Director Hugh Thompson, is taking a major part in fighting reaction throughout this city.

When the Joint Charities organization sought to curb the liberal activities of the city's Y.W.C.A. Industrial Department, C.I.O. unions gave funds which easily filled the department's budget. As a result, classes for girl factory workers will be continued by the Y.W.C.A.

In addition, the C.I.O. has been actively cooperating in the establishment of a local branch of the Religion and Labor Foundation, which seeks to spread understanding of the aims of the labor movement to the general public.

Aid State Bodies

Other activities of the city's C.I.O. unions include full cooperation with state committees studying conditions of Negro workers in the city and the discrimination in employment against older men and women by office and factory managements. The C.I.O. is also furnishing speakers for educational meetings throughout the city which are being held under the auspices of the Buffalo Forum.

A giant mass meeting of consumers against the high cost of living is receiving active cooperation from the C.I.O. The meeting is being sponsored by the Buffalo Consumers Club, whose aim is to break up the power of the city's milk trust and to force reductions in the prices of commodities.

"Our activities in these lines," Thompson points out, "have helped to create a maximum amount of respect for the C.I.O. in Buffalo, which only recently had a reputation as an open-shop city."

Merry Christmas Note

The Pittsburgh office of the Railway Audit & Inspection Co. has been forced to reduce its personnel and floor space because of a depression forced by the investigations of the LaFollette committee and the growth and acceptance of unionism in hundreds of factories and mills.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

What Girdler Might Have Seen

"TOM GIRDLER should look in on this convention and see what we have here," said Chairman Philip Murray at the first convention of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee in Pittsburgh.

If Girdler had looked in, he would have seen a thousand serious-minded, self-assured and purposeful delegates, representing hundreds of thousands of steel workers from every center of the industry in the United States and Canada.

He would have found these delegates vigorous in debate, but orderly and already accustomed to the democratic self-discipline of union organization.

Girdler might have blanched at the storm of indignation which stirred these steel workers when they spoke of the Memorial Day massacre outside the South Chicago plant of the Republic Steel Corporation.

A United Convention

If Girdler had looked in on this first convention of the S.W.O.C., he could not have failed to be impressed with the unity of purpose of these hundreds upon hundreds of representatives of the nation's steel workers.

These men had built up a union of half a million in a year and a half. They had organized 1,080 lodges and won contracts with 445 companies. Many of them had been through the fire of a long and bitter strike. Through unity they had won wage increases, improved working conditions and a new sense of independence.

They knew that unity and solidarity were necessary to maintain these gains and to push forward to unionization of the whole industry.

No Faint Hearts Here

If Girdler ever believed the lies of his press agents about John L. Lewis and the C.I.O., he might have been surprised at the demonstration which occurred when the C.I.O. leader appeared on the platform.

For nearly half an hour the delegates stood cheering and applauding with infectious enthusiasm, or snake-danced through the aisles with banners of welcome and shouts of union solidarity.

The delegates had heard Murray relate the shocking figures of unemployment in the steel industry—28 per cent of the workers laid off completely, 57 per cent working from one to three days a week, and only 15 per cent working full-time.

They knew from their own experience just what these figures meant. But they also knew that in the present depression they were this much ahead of the last depression, that now they had a union to fight for them, to protect the standards of those still employed and to demand adequate relief for the jobless.

Political Action

If Girdler had looked in on the S.W.O.C. convention, he might not have liked the program of political action adopted. He might have seen in its demand for more democracy a threat to the unfettered rule of economic royalists like himself, and to their right to run the country into a depression whenever they choose.

He might have been uneasy about the independence with which the organized steel workers advanced a program of their own for public housing, relief appropriations and other social legislation, instead of supinely accepting whatever their bosses thought best for them, as in the old days.

On the Run—Forward

Girdler might not have liked all he saw, if he had looked in on the steel workers' convention. But at least, after seeing all the evidence of union strength, enthusiasm and determination, he could never again have kidded himself that he had the C.I.O. "on the run."

Girdler and his kind have helped to get the union steel workers into motion, it is true. But the movement is all in the other direction from what he intended. If the S.W.O.C. convention is any indication of what is in store, the Girdlers will soon have to get in line with the forward movement for industrial democracy—or else get out of its way.

Lewis Warns Steel Union of Fascist Danger

Gotham Unions Back 'Women's Charter'

Manifesto Demands Equality in Civic, Legal Rights for Women

NEW YORK—A drive for the "Women's Charter," calling for full political and economic rights for women, was launched by more than 60 delegates from C.I.O. unions, including the Textile Workers Organizing Committee, Transport Workers Union, Ladies Garment Workers and the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and other organizations, at a recent conference here.

The Charter, which was published first in December 1936, is in the form of a manifesto demanding an end to all discriminations against women, urging protective industrial legislation, safeguards against economic exploitation, security for motherhood, and equality in all civic and legal matters.

Many Endorsements

The Charter has received the endorsement of many national women's organizations, as well as trade unions, including the National Council of Catholic Women, the National Women's Trade Union League, and the Conference of Women's Auxiliaries of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers.

The International Labor Office at its last Geneva conference also approved the Charter, more than 60 representatives from as many nations voting for the resolution, which stated in part: "The International Labor Office believes them (the principles of the Charter) to be of the greatest importance to workers in general and especially to women workers; and therefore requests the governing body to draw them to the attention of all governments, with a view to their establishment in law and in custom by legislative and administrative action."

Other Conferences

Conferences similar to the one in New York will be held in Chicago, Baltimore and other important centers, according to plans of the organization now pushing the Charter in New York.

Miss Mary Van Kleeck, Director of Industrial Studies at the Russell Sage Foundation in New York, called for action leading up to an eventual national conference of all organizations interested in securing better working and living conditions for women.

Miss Van Kleeck Urges Program of Activities Pointing to National Meet

"Women workers in industry, in offices, in the professions and in other vocations in the United States are rallying in rapidly increasing numbers around the Women's Charter as a statement of their united purpose," Miss Van Kleeck said. Miss Van Kleeck also pointed out that conditions in New York state made the adoption of Charter principles imperative for women workers in that territory.

Figures from the Women's Bureau of the U. S. Department of Labor were cited to show that over 6,000 women workers regularly and fully employed in New York state are paid so little that their wages have to be supplemented by relief, in order that they might not starve to death.

WASHINGTON — The Natl. Labor Relations Board has certified the United Packing House Workers, Local 32, C.I.O., as sole collective bargaining agency at the John Morrell's Ottumwa, Ia., plant.

Insurance Agents Union Wins Support as Hancock Poll Nears

PHILADELPHIA—Nearly 1,000 security-seeking industrial insurance salesmen jammed the ballroom of the Hotel Majestic last week to attend a mass meeting called by Insurance Guild, Local 22, of the United Office & Professional Workers, C.I.O.

The union will soon participate in a nationwide labor board poll of the 15,000 employes of the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co., which leaders of the U.O.P.W.A. predict will show an overwhelming victory for the organization.

The mass meeting here followed a parade of 200 automobiles. Leaders of the union, together with local C.I.O. officials, addressed the audience.

Bewildered Bosses Blame Unions—Germer

DETROIT—"The only time employers and their hirelings believe in the right to work is when they can use one group of workers against another to break strikes," Adolph Germer, regional director of the C.I.O. in this city told representatives of affiliated locals.

Predicts Dictatorship May Follow New Crash

PITTSBURGH—The threat of Fascism—the outright dictatorship of big business—faces America if this country allows itself to be involved in another serious economic and financial crash, Chairman John L. Lewis of the Committee for Industrial Organization warned delegates to the first convention of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee here last week.

Many financial and industrial leaders, he said, "secretly hope for Fascism, being conscious of their own weakness in leadership.

"After five years of experimentation of this and that method and project in America the people elected a new administration in 1932," Lewis said. "Labor had to face this ghastly spectre of unemployment, and today as we are assembled here mills and plants throughout the nation are closing down and turning men out. No one can see how long or how severe it will be. There are no adequate arrangements made for relief and no prospects of other employment for these people.

"Something must be done in this country to take care of this situation. No suggestion has been put forward except from the house of labor, and those suggestions made by labor so far have not been heeded or recognized or adopted."

Lewis called attention to the housing program suggested by Chairman Philip Murray of the S.W.O.C. which he said "would take the materials of almost every industry and put Americans to work."

"But Congress mills around," he said, "and engages in its petty political bickerings and ignores the problems that America is menaced with now to a greater degree than ever before by the inroad of this new economic depression making Americans by the millions idle."

Menace of Fascism

Lewis declared that "if labor is content to let things drift we will drift to a crash—to an economic and financial crash that will involve the political government of America and bring to America a destruction of that form of government which you and I know and revere, and bring to America the same sort of Fascist control that you look about you and see flourishing in the world today—a government to suppress liberty and trample on the rights of minorities."

"They think that a change would be the answer to the rising power of labor; that it would be the answer to the unemployment question," Lewis said. "They would even be willing to sacrifice some of the profits from their industries to bring this change about. It is public knowledge that in some countries in the world American financial interests are giving support and assistance to the Fascist form of government."

Negotiations With A. F. of L.

In regard to negotiations with the A. F. of L., Lewis stated that "the C.I.O. has offered the A. F. of L., if it will agree to the organizing in the basic industries, to merge into the A. F. of L. on a given day and date with its entire four million members.

"The A. F. of L. has refused that offer and says it does not want four million new members. It would like to have about a million new members to see how they could digest them first and think about the other three million. We said before and say again that they will digest all of us or none."

New Liberal Group Seeks Protection of Democracy

WASHINGTON — Formation of the American Association for Economic Freedom, designed to "cooperate with farm, labor and all other public groups" to preserve political democracy and provide economic democracy for the American people, was announced here this week.

The Association has a sponsor list of several hundred liberals from churches, colleges tnd the general public. Its temporary chairman is William Allen White, publisher of the Emporia, Kans., Gazette, and W. Jett Lauck, research economist, is vice chairman.

Labor Under Attack

In listing its principles and objectives, the association points out that the middle classes — farmers, merchants, professional people and public officials—must soon realize that American labor's efforts to gain its legal rights are "meeting a concerted and ruthless attack which threatens not only the rights of workers but even more the liberties of everv American citizen irrespective of his immediate concern in labor controversies."

The dangers that confront democracy in this country are not of foreign origin, the statement continues.

"The real dangers are those which come from our failure to adjust our traditional democratic principles to changing economic conditions."

12,000 AT MOONEY MEETING

NEW YORK—Twelve thousand people attending a Madison Square Garden mass meeting last week demanded freedom for Tom Mooney. Speakers included Mayor LaGuardia, Joseph Curran of the Natl. Maritime Union, C.I.O., and John Finerty, counsel for Mooney.

Steel Delegates Chat With Lewis

John L. Lewis is shown above being greeted by leaders of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee. The C.I.O. leader received an ovation lasting nearly half an hour when he appeared on the platform at the S.W.O.C. convention in Pittsburgh last week. A.R.T.A. Wins Nationwide Pact From Postal

Enroll for Insurance Benefits, Brophy Urges

WASHINGTON—Instructions on compliance with state unemployment insurance legislation have been sent to unemployment committees of C.I.O. unions throughout the nation by John Brophy, director of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Listing 22 states in which benefits will be paid, the directions urged that members eligible for compensation take the following two steps:

1. Register immediately for employment at the public employment office.

2. Register their claims for unemployment benefits on January 3.

The following 22 states start to pay unemployment insurance benefits in January: Alabama, Arizona, California, Connecticut, District of Columbia, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Minnesota, New Hampshire, New York, North Carolina, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Vermont, Virginia and West Virginia.

Unions Active

Scores of local union employment committees have been established throughout the country, reports at C.I.O. headquarters indicate.

In Pennsylvania, jobless longshoremen affiliated with the C.I.O. Maritime Committee, together with representatives of other C.I.O. unions, are applying pressure at the state capitol in Harrisburg, as well as in local areas, for more adequate relief. In Pittsburgh, the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, after listening to a report by Philip Murray, its chairman, on the unemployment crisis facing the steel workers of the nation, moved to press for adequate relief and for the initiation of a giant housing program.

Other international unions affiliated with the C.I.O. are pushing local programs in order that unemployed members may be spared needless suffering during the winter months.

Garment Local Spends $10,000 for Jobless

NEW YORK—Local 22 of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, C.I.O., has appropriated $10,000 of its funds for the purpose of aiding jobless union members.

Payments to members will start Monday, December 27, Charles S. Zimmerman, manager of the local, declared. He said that the appropriation was made in order to render assistance until the state unemployment insurance fund starts to operate in January.

BUFFALO

BUFFALO—The Erie County Industrial Union Council has set up a committee to coordinate the work of the unemployment committees of the various affiliated locals. The committee, according to Hugh L. Thompson, regional director for the C.I.O. has been "securing cooperation through the mayor's office in providing prompt and adequate relief for our unemployed people."

ERIE, PA.

ERIE, Pa.—Erie locals affiliated with the C.I.O. are moving to protect their unemployed members.

Local 61 of the United Rubber Workers is asking relief for some 200 members who have been laid off. About 700 members of four locals affiliated with the U.R.W. and the Steel Workers Organizing Committee are jobless at the present time, according to C.I.O. Regional Director Ralph Tillotson.

C.I.O. News to Publish Glass Workers Edition

THE C.I.O. NEWS announces publication early in January of a special edition for the Glass Workers Organizing Committee of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

The new edition will contain special news of interest to all glass workers. The Glass Workers Organizing Committee has only recently commenced a campaign to unionize some 100,000 unorganized workers throughout the nation. The Federation of Flat Glass Workers, C.I.O., already has a membership of close to 20,000.

The glass workers' edition of THE C.I.O. NEWS will be sent each week to all members in good standing of the Federation of Flat Glass Workers, as well as to new union members to be organized by the G.W.O.C.

The Glass Workers Organizing Committee has placed regional directors in five key cities throughout the country. The drive is being headed by Paul Fuller, with headquarters in Cincinnati. Headquarters of the Federation of Flat Glass Workers will remain in Columbus, Ohio.

Telegraph Company Lifts Pay $600,000 After 14 Stoppages

NEW YORK.—A Christmas present of close to $600,000 in increased annual wages was won for Postal Telegraph workers by the American Radio Telegraphists Assn., C.I.O. affiliate, after a series of short stoppages in 14 of the company's key offices. The increases apply to all employes earning less than $160 per month.

The agreement, reached with the trustees of the company in a meeting presided over by Federal Judge Coxe, also provides for the preferential shop and recognition of the A.R.T.A.

Frank B. Powers, head of the A. F. of L. Commercial Telegraphists Union, made an unsuccessful attempt to prevent the Postal workers from securing the raise, alleging that A. F. of L. "contracts" would be endangered.

Membership 12,000

The A.R.T.A. has a membership in Postal of close to 12,000, with its greatest strength in New York, Philadelphia, Washington, Pittsburgh, Albany, Buffalo, Detroit and St. Louis.

Conditions in Postal Telegraph were long notoriously the worst in the industry. Many workers received wages below a decent subsistence level, often touching $13 for a week's work. Messengers received less than that amount, and in addition were forced to pay "uniform rent," a polite term for kick-back.

The agreement provides that the company may not lay off any union members while non-union people are still employed in the shop. This fact, together with a provision that hiring and firing must be on a seniority basis, will give A.R.T.A. 100 per cent membership of Postal's employes, Mervyn Rathborne, union president, predicted.

Decent Wages Essential

Lee Pressman, C.I.O. general counsel, represented the union at the hearing. Pointing out that Postal wages have been the lowest in the industry, Pressman maintained that a company unable to pay decent wages should not be permitted to continue functioning.

Postal Telegraph has been involved in financial reorganization proceedings for some time.

Next goal of the union, Rathborne said, will be Western Union.

Lawyers' Guild Drafts Model Laws

WASHINGTON — The Byrnes act, aimed at banning interstate shipments of strikebreakers, is so full of loopholes as to be practically worthless, Brien McMahon, federal assistant attorney-general, told a conference of the National Lawyers Guild here this week.

The conference was called to discuss the drafting of model legislation in behalf of labor in the various states.

Model State Law

The model state labor relations act brought to the attention of the lawyers specified as unfair labor practices many points not listed in the federal law. It held blacklisting and closing down of factories to avoid bargaining with labor among these unfair acts and would bar company unions from getting a place on a labor board election ballot.

Minnesota C. I. O. Council Asks State Probe Rackets

MINNEAPOLIS—An extensive program of C.I.O. activities throughout this Farmer-Labor state was mapped out at the convention here of the Minnesota Industrial Union Council.

Governor Elmer Benson, Farmer-Laborite, who spoke at a mass meeting following the regular sessions, was later asked to investigate racketeering in Minnesota unions.

Delegates were present from C.I.O. unions in the steel, packinghouse, electrical, automobile, garment, communications, lumber and other industries. The Newspaper Guild, the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists & Technicians, and the State, County & Municipal Workers unions of the C.I.O. were also represented, as well as farmers' organizations.

Speakers included George Nelson, of the Farmers' Union; Eli Oliver, of Labor's Non-Partisan League; Gunnar Mickelson, C.I.O. regional director in Wisconsin; R. J. Thomas, a vice president of the United Automobile Workers; Chester Watson, of the Workers Alliance, and other leaders in farm and labor organizations. President David Dubinsky, of the Intl. Ladies' Garment Workers, sent a telegram of greeting to the convention.

"Our movement to organize the millions of unorganized workers in America under the banner of the C.I.O. and to bring to them the blessings of a humane standard of life and labor," he said, "has been a phenomenal success."

Joseph Van Nordstrand, of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, was elected president of the Minnesota Council, and Otto C. Rick, of the United Automobile Workers, secretary-treasurer. Fifteen vice presidents were also chosen.

Resolutions Adopted

In addition to the adoption of a constitution, more than 60 resolutions were passed by the delegates, including one that asked Governor Benson to appoint a committee to investigate racketeering and gangsterism such as led to the recent murder of Patrick Corcoran, teamsters' union official.

Other resolutions adopted called for a wide-spread federal housing program; cooperation with farm organizations; the setting up of unemployment committees in the various affiliated unions, and the passage of national and state legislation beneficial to labor.

C.I.O. Unions Organize In Mountain States

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah—In the wide open spaces of Wyoming and Utah—as in crowded city industrial areas—the C.I.O. is successfully carrying out its organizing campaign.

Covering lots of mileage, James Morgan, Salt Lake City regional director, and his staff, are building unions in a number of widely-separated locations.

At Provo and Salt Lake, Utah, local industrial unions have been formed for the ice and refrigerator workers. A local of dairy workers has been established in Rock Springs, Wyo., while lumberworkers at DuNoir have applied for a charter from the Intl. Woodworkers, C.I.O.

Brick and tile workers at Murray, Utah, will soon have their own union, according to Morgan, and the oil workers are organizing in a number of towns throughout the area.

PHOENIX, Ariz. — Concluding their first convention here, delegates to the Tri-State Industrial Union Council, C.I.O., charted plans for an organizing campaign throughout Arizona, New Mexico and Nevada.

The 27 delegates, representing oil, agricultural and office workers, as well as metal miners and other groups, named Earling A. Kope of the agricultural union as council president. They received fraternal greetings from D. D. Allen of the Farmers Union, who voiced his organization's sympathy with the C.I.O. aims.

Opening speaker at the meeting was Brig.-Gen. Pelham D. Glassford, chairman of the Arizona Labor's Non-Partisan League, who was chief of police in the District of Columbia until ex-Pres. Hoover overruled his peaceful methods of handling the bonus march in 1932.

For Silicosis Prevention

This mask doesn't improve the girl's looks, but it would protect her from silicosis if she worked in the mines. C.I.O. miners have been demanding more adequate protection from the deathly lung disease.

Counsel for Algic Crew Will Appeal Convictions

BALTIMORE—Counsel for 14 members of the S. S. Algic announced immediate appeal would be taken on the verdict of guilty handed out by a Baltimore jury.

The men were tried on mutiny and conspiracy charges following refusal to endanger their lives by working with scab stevedores at Montevideo, Uruguay.

The judge, in sentencing nine of the defendants to 60 days and decreeing that five pay $50 fines, noted that the "implications" of the strike, rather than the act itself, were of serious concern.

This statement bears out charges made by Ralph Emerson, Washington representative of the Natl. Maritime Union, C.I.O., that the Algic case was forced by shipowners who desire means of attacking the union in the future.

DETROIT—A mass meeting of members of the West Side local of the United Automobile Workers of America demanded that Gov. Murphy of Michigan issue a moratorium order suspending payments on installment purchases. The moratorium would apply to those laid off or working less than three days a week.

Frankensteen Named To State Relief Post

DETROIT—Recognition of the important role of the C.I.O. in aiding jobless workers was seen here in the appointment of Richard T. Frankensteen, vice president of the United Automobile Workers, to the Michigan Emergency Relief Commission.

Frankensteen's appointment, recently announced by Governor Murphy, drew the following comment from Homer Martin, president of the international union: "The union is gratified to see this recognition of the increasing power of the labor movement in the state of Michigan."

Several Thousand Leave Ryan Union for C.I.O.

NEW YORK — The gangster-supported machine of Pres. Joseph Ryan of the Intl. Longshoremen's Assn., A. F. of L., is crumbling under the longshoremen's organizing drive of the C.I.O. Maritime Committee.

Several thousand longshoremen along the East and Gulf Coasts have already signed C.I.O. pledge cards, the committee reveals, and rank-and-file longshoremen are creating more opposition to Ryan's policies and methods than at any time in the past.

Progressive forces in the I.L.A. are demanding trade union democracy, regular meetings, and elimination of terrorism and racketeering by I.L.A. officials. Another point in the program calls for elimination of the "shape-up," through which Ryan underlings have been able to get jobs for their favorites.

Progressive members seek the establishment of union hiring halls, such as are now in use on the West Coast.

MASSACHUSETTS C.I.O. WARNS CONGRESSMEN

BOSTON—Labor will "demand a reckoning from those who continue to sabotage" the wage and hour bill, the Massachusetts Industrial Union Council of the C.I.O. warned in a letter to all Bay State representatives and senators. The letter called for enactment of the bill as the first action of the regular Congressional session which starts in January.

Quarry Workers Union To Affiliate With C.I.O.

WASHINGTON—The Quarry Workers International Union of North America, A. F. of L. affiliate with some 8,000 members, has voted by an overwhelming majority to affiliate with the Committee for Industrial Organization.

John C. Lawson, international secretary-treasurer, has announced that the referendum which the Quarry Workers have been conducting for several weeks, shows a big landslide in favor of joining the C.I.O.

The first two branches to complete their balloting sent in only one dissenting vote out of a total membership of 800, he declared.

The International has functioned on an industrial basis since its formation in 1903, when it claimed it was given jurisdiction by the A. F. of L. over all men working in and about any industry where material was quarried.

At the 1937 A. F. of L. convention, however, a decision of the Executive Council accepted by the convention denied that the jurisdiction of the Q.W.I.U. included workers in sand, gravel, slag and crushed rock pits or distribution yards.

A.F.L. Sanctioned Raids

The Q.W.I.U. claimed that acceptance of this decision would have taken away practically 50 per cent of its membership enrolled in some 15 branches of the union.

It charged further that the A. F. of L. had authorized its organizers to raid locals already organized by the Quarry Workers International, and for which it had secured agreements.

Results of the referendum for 28 branches showed only 51 votes against affiliation. Returns from a few branches are not yet complete, but the locals which have already voted indicate that the referendum has gone strongly for the C.I.O.

Angered by Raids

Angered by the action taken by the A. F. of L. and by the repeated raids on its membership, the union passed a resolution authorizing officials to contact the C.I.O. and discuss the question of affiliation.

The resolution declared that "no assistance and no protection for our Union can be obtained or hoped for from the American Federation of Labor" and stated that the Q.W.I.U. was formed as an industrial organization because this was the only type of union that could "furnish adequate protection" for quarry workers.

Affiliation with the C.I.O. was advocated on the ground that it had been "formed for the protection of just such industrial organizations."

The Q.W.I.U. has contracts in the New England area with the majority of the monumental and

Surprises Galore In History Books, Witness Discovers

CINCINNATI — Labor board hearings on the dismissal of Mike Misheff, head of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee lodge at the Cincinnati Milling Machine Co. proved a trying ordeal for company witnesses attempting to show that his firing had not been caused by his union activity.

When Albert Snyder, a company witness, hinted that some of Misheff's statements sounded like those in a local Communist publication, he was given a bit of grilling on history.

"Red" Like Landon

Snyder was asked if Misheff had ever said anything like: "The capitalist who employs labor knows that ultimately the success of his enterprise depends on more widely distributed purchasing power." The witness was shocked to hear that the sentence was an excerpt from a speech made by Alf Landon during the 1936 presidential campaign.

Snyder then opined that a second statement read to him sounded "revolutionary." The statement was taken from a speech made by Abraham Lincoln in 1861, the S.W.O.C. attorney pointed out.

Quarry Workers Sue For Unpaid Wages

BANGOR, Pa.—Local 264 of the Quarry Workers, newest C.I.O. union, has launched a legal fight to win $4,000 in unpaid wages from the bankrupt Bangor-Fidelity Quarry Co.

Considerable importance is attached to the case through a discovery by the local's attorney that workers with unpaid wages have the right to sue stockholders of a bankrupt concern for their money, under an old Pennsylvania law.

NLRB Flays Ford Policies; Demands Company Respect Auto Union's Legal Rights

WASHINGTON—A struggle between the power of the United States Government and the billion-dollar forces of the Ford Motor Co. has loomed up as a result of the sizzling National Labor Relations Board decision upholding charges made by the United Automobile Workers, C.I.O., that the "Flivver King" has illegally resisted unionism of his 80,000 Highland Park and Dearborn, Mich., employes.

The N.L.R.B. report is a bulky 46-page document which contains thousands of words of damaging evidence against the Ford company's anti-union tactics.

It orders the auto manufacturer to cease and desist from discouraging membership in the U.A.W. among its employes, from sponsoring company unions or vigilante groups, from beating or threatening union organizers or from restraining in any way the rights of Ford employes to organize.

Twenty-nine men fired for union activity were ordered immediately rehired with back pay.

Martin's Statement

From president Homer Martin of the U.A.W. came a statement that, "Ford must learn that in matters affecting the welfare of hundreds of thousands of people his personal opinion cannot be accepted blindly and unquestionedly.

"The sooner Ford accepts the inevitable and commences negotiations with the United Automobile Workers of America, the better for him."

Richard T. Frankensteen, director of the union's Ford campaign, declared: "Never before has a manufacturer been so severely castigated for sheer brutality and wilful disregard for law so deservedly as the Ford Motor Co. in the decision of the N.L.R.B. It affirms in sweeping language the charges of the U.A.W. that the Ford Motor Co. was using illegal and brutal methods to deny men their right to join a union.

"The public will now realize how completely the Ford Motor Co. has suppressed the truth of its sinister workings. Every lover of democracy in the United States will welcome this decision."

Board's Findings

The Labor Board's findings were based on testimony offered at a public hearing in Detroit last July. The board declared that no employe in any way connected with Ford can fail to be aware of the company's antagonism to labor unions.

The decision states that the company impressed its feelings on employes through "constant hostility of foremen and supervisory officials, through the systematic discharge of union advocates, through the employment by the respondent of hired thugs to terrorize and beat union members and sympathizers."

All these things, it continued, "lead inescapably to the conclusion that the assaults upon union men and women that occurred on May 26 were part of a carefully designed plan on the part of the respondent to prevent the distribution of union literature by the U.A.W. in the vicinity of the River Rouge plant."

The Ford Brotherhood, the board declared, is obviously a company union.

'Cease and Desist'

Wholesale arrests, beatings, threats, intimidation—these have been the custom in Dearborn, Mich., as the giant Ford Motor Co. sought to halt union organization. But scenes like this one of a union organizer being arrested for passing out papers will be a thing of the past as the government moves to force Ford to observe the Wagner Act.

Anti-NRA Lawyer Hired by Ford

DETROIT — Frederick Wood, New York attorney who helped kill the NRA through his participation in the famous Schechter case, has been retained by Henry Ford for his fight with the United States government.

A Ford spokesman said Wood would handle the company's case when the Natl. Labor Relations Board goes before the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals to get an order sustaining its recent order that Ford "cease and desist" from a number of anti-union practices.

ASK BOMBING INQUIRIES

DETROIT — The Civil Rights Federation of Michigan, representing a half million people in farm, church, fraternal and professional organizations, has asked the Wayne County prosecutor to investigate a recent wave of bombings in United Auto Workers' local offices. The Federation declared the acts of violence are a "resumption of Black Legion activities."

Transport Workers, Guild Win Major New York Strikes

T.W.U. Lands Contract, Gains Closed Shop at Sunshine; Big Four Also Sign

NEW YORK—More than 2,400 drivers of the Sunshine-Radio Transportation System won the closed shop, a week's vacation with pay and guaranteed minimum wages when the company capitulated to demands of the Transport Workers Union, C.I.O., and brought to an end a two-week strike.

The Sunshine pact came shortly after the city's four other major cab systems—Parmelee, Terminal, Bell and Atlas-Liberty—signed new contracts with the union.

City Strike Loomed

A city-wide walkout of the taxi drivers had loomed as a result of the refusal of the four companies to adjust conditions. A strike vote had been taken when the taxi operators threatened to abrogate previous contracts with the union.

All the agreements, which cover more than 12,000 workers, provide for the closed shop and union hiring halls, thereby giving the T.W.U. an opportunity to check upon all contract violations.

Brooklyn Eagle Signs Up; Grants Important Demands of News Guild

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—The four-month strike of employes of the Brooklyn Daily Eagle came to a close last week as the management ended three years of stalling by signing a contract with the New York Newspaper Guild, C.I.O.

The pact brought job security and a virtual closed shop for Eagle employes, with future openings to be filled from a union preferential hiring list.

Guild's Biggest Strike

The strike was the largest in Guild history, and its first open struggle with a major New York newspaper publisher.

The five-day, 40-hour week for editorial and commercial employes —previously branded as "impossible" by the publisher—were included in the contract. Dismissal pay, ranging up to 15½ weeks' wages at 10 years, and time off for overtime work are provided in the agreement.

Forty strikers who are to be laid off will receive 20 weeks' severance pay and will have first claim to job openings on the paper.

Blow to A.N.P.A.

The agreement, guild leaders pointed out, marked a severe blow to efforts of the American Newspaper Publishers Assn. to drive a wedge between office and editorial workers, and to smash the union.

The A.N.P.A. attack has been particularly strong since the St. Louis convention of the guild last summer when it voted affiliation to the C.I.O.

FORD AIDS WAR

WASHINGTON — The Ford Motor Co. of Japan, completely controlled by Henry Ford and his family, have bought Japanese war bonds worth $290,000, according to dispatches from the Orient.

The bonds were floated by the Japanese government to raise money for the imperialist attack on the Chinese people.

C. I. O. Wins Recognition For 2,000 at R. H. Macy's

NEW YORK—R. H. Macy's—one of the world's largest department stores—switched from its long-held open shop principles last week when it signed a contract with the Department Stores Organizing Committee of the C.I.O.

Two thousand employes of the delivery, warehouse and manufacturing departments were affected by the contract, which provides for wage increases and fewer working hours.

The agreement was signed by Delos Walker, executive vice president of the company; Samuel Wolchok, head of the United Retail & Wholesale Employes, and of the D.S.O.C.: Allan Haywood, New York regional C.I.O. director, and leaders of the local at Macy's.

Time and a third for overtime and seven holidays with pay are also provided for in the contract.

Union leaders declared the agreement is of great significance, for other department store executives watch Macy policies with considerable interest. Only a short time ago, it is pointed out, union activity in the store was carried on in secret fashion to avoid detection by the store's elaborate spy system.

Mine Workers Move Into New Building

WASHINGTON—Offices of the United Mine Workers of America, C.I.O., have been moved to the United Mine Workers Building, 15th and I Streets, Northwest, Washington, D. C. There will be no change in the union's telephone number.

Former headquarters of the U. M. W. A. were located in the Tower Building, 14th and K Streets, N. W., Washington.

Jobless Increase 570,000 in Month

WASHINGTON — Five hundred and seventy thousand people joined the army of the jobless between October 15 and November 15, according to figures released by the U.S. Dept. of Labor.

The jump in unemployment in one month sets a new record, with the exception of 1920, the department declares.

VOL. I WASHINGTON, D. C., DECEMBER 29, 1937 No. 4

The C.I.O. Goes Forward

What about 1938?

Deepening depression—or progress towards a more abundant life?

Hunger and want for millions of Americans and their families, or real steps towards security and economic freedom?

These are no new questions confronting the American people. Year after year they have been in the minds of the nation's workers and middle classes. But now, as eventful 1937 draws to its close, they have even greater significance.

The past year has been an eventful one for American workers. In factories employing thousands, and in shops employing only handfuls, the Committee for Industrial Organization has brought forth 20th century employer-employe relationships, where before there had been only slavery and fear and intimidation.

In the political field labor marched irrespressibly forward to a place in the sun. In the crowded wards of New York City and in isolated company towns, organized workers cast aside the political laissez-faire of other years and through Labor's Non-Partisan League moved quickly towards asserting themselves in local, state and national government.

A year ago, timid skeptics cried, "It can't be done."

They reckoned without the growing force of the Committee for Industrial Organization, which, by cutting the Gordian knot of the A. F. of L. executive council's do-nothingism, brought forth a program immediately appealing to millions of industrial and white collar workers.

In 1937 millions of insecure Americans found a measure of security only through the nation-wide activities of the C.I.O.

In 1938 the C.I.O. has no intention of resting on its oars.

Rather, it looks forward to 12 months busily occupied with continuing its organization campaigns to reach new millions of unprotected workers. It intends to consolidate gains already made. It intends to protect the unemployed from the pauperization programs of budget-balancing, relief-cutting Tories. It will war relentlessly on those who hope to use the current business decline to undermine the gains made by America's progressive forces in the last year.

It will hit—and hit hard—during the 1938 elections those representatives of the people who have openly fought labor and those who have betrayed the promises once made to labor voters.

It will press for constructive legislation, both state and federal, to keep children out of factories, to bar the sweatshop from industry, to provide decent housing for the people, to make these United States a better place in which to live.

In 1938, the Committee for Industrial Organization will continue to be the great champion of those Americans who desire peace, true democracy, economic and political freedom.

Who Rules America?

Are the lives of some 80,000 workers and their families to be governed by the laws of the United States of America, or by the edicts of the Grand Duchy of Henry Ford?

That, fundamentally, is the question which the government's law enforcing bodies find on their doorstep as a result of the splendid, factual ruling of the National Labor Relations Board in the Ford case.

The N.L.R.B. report describes the peaceful efforts of the United Automobile Workers of America to organize Ford workers under rights provided by the Wagner Act and upheld by the Supreme Court of the United States.

The union's activities, it shows, were met with illegal anti-unionism, from the farcical "Fordism" propaganda notices enclosed in pay envelopes, to physical attacks on union organizers by the choice collection of thugs, ex-convicts, prizefighters, thieves and criminals which Harry Bennett's "service" department has collected to "protect the freedom of Ford employes."

Almost before the story of the board's decision, which ordered abandonment of the company's illegal activities, was off the wires, Ford attorneys had announced the company's refusal to comply with the order.

The American people have had enough of economic royalists declaring a law unto themselves.

In the interests of democratic government, it behooves the administration to enforce the laws of the land in Dearborn, Mich.—to prove that under them Ford workers may enjoy their natural rights and that Henry Ford, as any other citizen, must be held responsible when he breaks the law.

Coal and Cosmetics— Both Products of U.M.W.A.

NEW YORK—Believe it or not, you can give the girl friend perfume, rouge, nail polish or face powder all made by members of the United Mine Workers of America!

If the boss gives you a headache, you may get relief by taking aspirin a la U.M.W.A.

For members of the U.M.W.A., District 50, make all these things and more.

It isn't as long a jump as you might expect from the coal mines to the cosmetic sweatshops where girls work for $8 to $14 a week.

After bituminous coal is heated to obtain coke, great quantities of coal tar are formed. From this come literally thousands of by-products—materials to build roads and creosote lumber, food flavorings, thousands of medicinal ingredients, perfumes, baking powder, dyes, phonograph records, plastics, moth balls, fountain pens, smelling salts, artificial rubber, soda water and germicides.

5,000 Brands

If that list is too long, just simplify it all by remembering that coal tar yields five crudes, benzene, toluene, antracene, phenol and naptholene, which in turn yield 300 intermediates, which then yield 1,000 dyestuffs which finally yield 5,000 brands of dye.

That's convincing evidence that coal is the grand-daddy of the chemical industry.

District 50, formerly the Gas, By-Product, Coke & Chemical Workers, joined the U.M.W.A. in August 1936. Headed by James Nelson, it already has 110 locals in over 20 states, established among the workers of such industrial giants as duPont, Union Carbide & Carbon, Allied Chemical & Dye, Corn Products Refining Co., Intl. Match Corp., and Koopers Co.

Case Against Coty

At the present time the district has a labor board case pending against Coty, Inc., famed both for its expensive feminine luxuries and its anti-labor policies, one of which bars conversation among the hard-driven, underpaid girls in the packing department.

Wage increases of $300,000 have been won in drug and chemical plants alone in the last year, union leaders estimate, and the union is now campaigning to improve conditions in paint and varnish factories where pay is low, lead poisoning rampant and hazardous fires and explosions a common occurrence.

Scanning the News

That $225,000 appropriation for Christmas traveling expenses—practically the only positive action taken by the Congressional special session—will not be considered a total loss if any considerable number of the members utilized the holiday interim to discover the mounting resentment against the legislators' do-nothing policies.

A Harvard professor tells the American Political Science Association that reactionary Supreme Court justices are mere human beings.

A good many of us had begun to believe their heads were made of stone.

Liberals throughout the country need have little fear that the Republican party will get the jump on them, it becomes obvious as one studies the roster of names on the party's new policy committee. As Gen. Hugh Johnson has pointed out, the G.O.P. elephant apparently forgot that Glenn Frank, the committee chairman, is remembered throughout the midwest for his bitter fight with the progressive Wisconsin state administration; that scarcely sells him to prairie state liberals. Significant, too, was the fact that only two labor representatives—both from the A. F. of L.—could be enticed to take "policy committee" positions.

"Fordism"

From a description of the attack on Richard Frankensteen by Ford thugs last March, as quoted in the National Labor Relations Board order: "An individual grabbed him by each foot and each hand and his legs were spread apart and his body was twisted over toward the east, over to my left, and then another man proceeded to kick him in the crotch and groin, and left kidney and around the head and also to gore him with their heels in the abdomen, or the general range of his solar plexus."

And still Henry Ford says it's the union that's irresponsible!

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

The Nightshirt Menace

THE nightshirt is an ancient and rather drafty institution. It covers a man's nakedness, and that is about all that can be said for it. It is neither decorative nor dignified. Those who wear it prefer not to be seen in it. The pajama-clad pass it in scorn.

But still the nightshirt persists. It conceals knock-knees and bandy-legs. It is kind to shrunken shanks and poorly placed protrusions. After all, a man is entitled to keep to himself the mysteries of his own anatomy.

It is only when the nightshirt enters the stage of public exhibitionism that the world has a right to protest.

Similarly, the nightshirt may have been good enough for your father and your grandfather before him; but it is something less than good enough when you go around terrifying the neighbors in it, and insisting that they conform to your grandfather's ideas.

Frey's Choice

Mr. John P. Frey is reliably reported to be one of those who prefer the old-fashioned nightshirt to the modern pajama. Well, that is his privilege, and every liberty-loving American will defend to the death his right to enjoy it.

Mr. Frey is also said to prefer old-fashioned craft unionism to modern industrial unionism. That too is his privilege and his right.

Federal regulation of sweatshop wages and excessive working hours is another modern fandangle that seems not to have met with Mr. Frey's approval.

All of which is fine and dandy, so long as Mr. Frey keeps his nightshirt on, doesn't go around frightening the neighbors, and doesn't try to force his nightshirt ideas on millions of Americans who happen to have other ideas.

But these millions are going to protest vigorously when Mr. Frey, or anybody else, opposes wage-and-hour legislation in the name of American labor; and when he and other craft officials say the workers in modern industries must have craft unions or none at all.

The Red Bogey

Part of the nightshirt technique for scaring the neighbors and making them stick to grandpa's ideas—or go further back to those of the cavemen—is to raise bloodcurdling yells about "Communism.""

"Just as certain nations, uttering the excuse that they are stamping out communism, commit crimes at which savages would blush, so in our own land those who would undermine our democratic institutions do it under the same hollow pretense," said Ickes in his speech about "nations in nightshirts."

"Every candidate for office in America who lacks a real issue proceeds to shout 'communism.'

What To Do When Slipping

There was the Tammany candidate for mayor of New York in the last election, for example. He found himself slipping so badly, with not an issue in sight, that he resorted to crying "communism" against the successful ticket, which was supported by nearly all the labor unions as well as by many business interests, including that previously unsuspected Bolshevik, Mr. John D. Rockefeller!

Then there was a meeting in Washington not so long ago, at which A. F. of L. organizers were given a pep talk and told to "go out and fight the C.I.O."

One of the organizers, searching around for an issue, called out from the back of the room, "With what?" And John P. Frey, it is related, held up a sheaf of "red network" papers and said, "Here's your answer!"

* * *

The nightshirters of today who menace our liberties are not only the Ku Kluxers and Black Legionnaires. Fully as menacing to the national welfare are the reactionaries of the labor, industrial and political world who clothe their mental nakedness in nightshirt ideas—and then cry "communism" against all who disagree.

Spy Outfits Collected $10,000,000 In Five Years

Industry Caused Slump

Reforms Effected by C.I.O. Unions Help Bring Stability to Business

By C. W. Fowler

WASHINGTON—A current hobby in certain political and economic circles is seeking causes and personalities on which to blame the present business depression.

However much they disagree on some theories, all our prophets are sure of one basic cause of our present trouble—the C.I.O. Now the C.I.O. has organized over 3,000,000 previously unorganized workers. It has raised wages for them and for the rest of its membership by more than one billion dollars per year.

These things, the theorizers say, have brought the country close to ruin. They raise costs and they lower sales and, worst of all, they threaten profits, these people charge.

Look at the Record

What is the record on these charges against the C.I.O.? The best answer, perhaps, can be found in the words of economists who do not owe their allegiance to labor, who in fact owe more allegiance to the other side. As far back as July, a writer in the Annalist, weekly designed for the big boys in Wall Street who want their facts without bunk, stated very flatly that costs did not increase in the same proportion as wages are raised. Even as much as a 50 per cent increase in wages, this economist says, would mean an increase of less than 10 per cent in costs—amply compensated by the increased purchasing power of the wage earners whose wages are raised.

J. M. Clark, past President of the American Economics Assn., is of similar opinion, adding higher wages to his formula for "regaining the trend to recovery."

Not Enough Raises

C. F. Hughes, writing in "The Merchant's Point of View" column of the financial section of The New York Times, holds that wage increases have not reached enough of the population, with the words: "Wage increases to organized workers and higher income to argiculturalists left a large segment in trade, clerical and domestic service trailing behind. Unbalance of income was created."

In a letter sent to 100 editors of southern newspapers, a leading spokesman for the cotton garment industry is quoted as saying: "the majority of its members have maintained wage scales in spite of the depression it is experiencing." This is due to the work of the T.W.O.C. in organizing scores of thousands of mill workers in the south, as well as in the northern areas of the industry.

C.I.O. Activities

In steel, the C.I.O. has prevented lay-offs in scores of plants, and has maintained wage scales in others where previously reduced operations spelled only one thing for the workers—slow starvation until business was ready to use their labor again.

Throughout the industrial scene, the C.I.O. is organizing unemployment committees, securing relief for laid-off workers, doing everything that can be done to maintain wages and purchasing power. The depression doesn't belong to the C.I.O.—but as it did something about low wages and long hours, the C.I.O. is doing something about the depression.

La Follette Committee Reveals Wide Use of Undercover Agents

By Henry C. Fleisher

WASHINGTON—America's meanest business—the spy racket—was sponsored to the tune of $9,440,132 by 2,500 American corporations during the years 1933-38, according to a comprehensive report submitted by the Senate Committee on Education and Labor.

"The list of these firms as a whole reads like a bluebook of American industry," the report of Senators LaFollette and Thomas declares.

"The names and distribution of these firms conclusively demonstrate the tenacious hold which the spying habit has on American business. From motion picture producers to steel makers, from hookless fasteners to automobiles, from small units to giant enterprises—scarcely an industry that is not fully represented in the accompanying list of clients of the detective agencies," it continues.

Included among the corporations named were General Motors, Chrysler, Bethlehem Steel, Goodyear Tire, Aluminum Co., Weirton Steel, General Electric, Remington Rand, Bell Telephone, New York Edison and Warner Brothers.

General Motors alone spent close to $1,000,000 of its stockholders' money between January 1934, and July 1936, for espionage, the records show. The company's spy system reached the comic opera stage, however, when Pinkerton men were hired to check up on Corporation Auxiliary spies who had been previously hired and who were suspected of betraying industrial secrets to other companies.

Following disclosure of the committee's report, some of the corporations named in the list declared they had discontinued use of the detective agencies completely, or had employed them merely for property protection purposes.

The Big Five

Pinkerton, largest of the five agencies examined by the committee, has offices in 27 cities and in 1935 enjoyed a gross income of well over $2,000,000. Of this income, "between 40 and 60 percent" was derived from industrial work, the remainder coming from criminal detective service.

Railway Audit & Inspection, the committee revealed, was hired by 165 corporations during 1935, the largest of which were subsidiaries of the U. S. Steel Corp. Corporation Auxiliaries supplied over 600 spies to 499 firms, including the Chrysler Corp., and its 1936 income exceeded half a million dollars.

In the Ohio Valley

The National Corporation Service served over 125 firms in the heavily industrialized Ohio Valley, and carried on a flourishing strikebreaking department. A large portion of the 1935 income of $580,084 reaped by the William J. Burns International Detective Agency came from industrial espionage, the committee said.

Seventy-one firms affiliated with the Natl. Metal Trades Assn. employed the organization's spies in their plants in the 1933-36 period, the committee report showed. On the other hand the Akron, Ohio, Employers Assn. hired the Corporation Auxiliary outfit to work in the plants of its members, which included the city's leading rubber firms.

Not only do the "Pinks" squeeze into unions, but they also manage to obtain offices in the organization, the committee found. Of 305 union members on the Pinkerton list, almost a third "held offices of varying importance." One national vice president was on the Pinkerton payroll, while eight local presidents and 20 local secretaries were working for the gumshoe agency.

"Spies are members of unions in name only," the committee stated. "Their oath to support and uphold the union is meaningless. They reveal union secrets, they steal union records, they aid in blacklisting their own fellows. They incite to untimely strikes, they precipitate violence. Their allegiance is to the detective agencies and their clients, not to the union."

Employ Red-Baiting

Red-baiting and the committing of provocative acts in an attempt to discredit unions in the public view are a favorite device of spies, the committee declares.

"Raising the 'red' scare is a common practice with detective agencies," it says, "not because of any profoundly felt fear of radicalism among employers, but more because the identification of labor with radicalism and sabotage neatly serves their anti-labor policies."

The use of industrial spies strikes deep into the rights of American citizens, the committee charges. "Not only is the worker's freedom of association nullified by the employers' spies, but his freedom of action, of speech and of assembly is completely destroyed. Fear harries his every footstep, caution muffles his words.

"He is in no sense any longer a free American."

Reports

Sen. Robert La Follette, Wisconsin Progressive and a member of the Senate Committee on Labor and Education, which last week revealed that 2,500 corporations have been using industrial spies.

Pennsylvania to Rid State of Spy Systems

HARRISBURG, Pa. — Labor spies and strikebreakers will be a thing of the past in Pennsylvania as the State Bureau of Civil Rights and Public Information pushes forward its program.

Following several months of investigation the bureau has launched its drive to rid the state of industrial espionage agencies, 38 of which have been functioning in Pennsylvania.

The bureau is planning to tighten the laws regulating private detective agencies. Under investigation is the Independent Labor Federation, company union outfit formed at Hershey last summer.

Interest Grows In Consumers' Problems

Increasing prices—and increasing layoffs in industry—have made the nation's consumers more interested than ever in the problem of stretching the weekly food allowance. In Michigan Mrs. Hester Fraser (left) has been appointed by Gov. Murphy to head a new consumers' service division. Lower picture shows Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt discussing consumers' cooperatives with Dr. James Warbasse and E. R. Bowen, officials of the Cooperative League of the U. S. A.

A. F. of L. 'Boycott' of C. I. O. Falters In Northwest

Public Supports C.I.O. After Carpenters' Defeat

PORTLAND, Oreg.—The highly-touted campaign of the International Brotherhood of Carpenters, A. F. of L., to stop the onrush of the C.I.O. International Woodworkers of America in the Pacific northwest is sputtering badly.

The Carpenters, who for years handled non-union lumber without a murmur, are having considerable difficulty now in convincing their members that they should boycott the products of the young woodworkers' international, C.I.O. leaders in this area point out.

The labor history of this section in recent months is little more than a series of defeats for that section of the A. F. of L., which under the leadership of teamster Czar Dave Beck of Seattle, has sought to curb the organizing drive of the C.I.O.

Only a short time ago Beck's machine received a smashing defeat when it attempted to halt the C.I.O.'s drive to organize warehousemen in San Francisco. Sustained picketing and threats of boycott failed, and Beck was forced to beat as graceful a retreat as was possible under the circumstances.

The press, which has given considerable publicity to the A. F. of L. "boycott," has magnified the efforts of the A. F. of L. to the point where they seem far more effective than they actually are, C.I.O. leaders declare.

Vote Raps A. F. of L.

Most serious defeat for the Carpenters group came recently at the Inman-Poulson Mill here, where a poll of the workers showed a majority favoring the C.I.O. union. This came as a surprise not only to the Carpenters' officials—who had always considered the mill an A. F. of L. stronghold—but also to Gov. Martin of Oregon and the mayor of Portland.

The voting had been arranged by the governor, who had been severely criticizing the Natl. Labor Relations Board.

Beaten in the actual poll of the factory workers, the A. F. of L. group then sought to keep the inland river pilots from handling C.I.O. lumber products. The C.I.O., however, pointed out that the governor had agreed to abide by the results of the election, and he was forced to order the pilots, who hold state commissions, to handle C.I.O.-manufactured wood product cargoes or lose their licenses.

At the same time Gov. Martin told the mayor of Portland to see that A. F. of L. pickets were removed from the Inman-Poulson plant.

Boycott Unpopular

Meanwhile an increasing number of Portland carpenters are signing petitions demanding that the A. F. of L. immediately discontinue its efforts to push the so-called boycott. The petition declares:

"We, the undersigned, Carpenters, wish it to be known that we are ready and willing to work at the established scale of wages in the City of Portland, regardless of the origin of the lumber and material, whether C.I.O. or A. F. of L.

"We prefer, at all times, to handle the product of organized labor and believe the current dispute is not one that is subject to settlement by a boycott on the product of organized men, and we hold that all men have a perfect right to select the organization they wish to have represent them."

Governor Asks Violence

Violence is being increasingly used against union men throughout the state, however, following an inflammatory speech by the governor last week. Condemning the Wagner Act, the Natl. Labor Relations Board, and Pres. Roosevelt, he openly advocated the use of vigilantes against workers throughout the state.

"Nevertheless," declared E. B. O'Grady, Oregon C.I.O. regional director, "the growing favorable sentiment for the C.I.O. among the citizens of the state is generally becoming more manifest."

UNION ACCUSES UTILITY

SAN FRANCISCO—The Pacific Gas & Electric Co. was accused last week by the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, C.I.O., of coercing and intimidating its workers in a recent labor board election. The union charges the company union won the poll because of the intimidating policy of the utility outfit.

Insurance Men's Union Asks Policies for Members

NEW YORK—Insurance for insurance collectors!

That demand, formulated by the Industrial Insurance Agents Union, C.I.O., will be pushed in state legislative bodies in order that agents and collectors may be protected against robbery, injury and death at the hands of holdup men, union leaders announced here.

Pointing to the killing of a New York insurance collector at the hands of robbers two weeks ago, Leon Berney, general organizer for the union, stated that "thousands of industrial insurance agents walk the streets daily, each carrying hundreds of dollars in premium collections, subject to attack at any moment from holdup men.

C. I. O. Locals Affiliate With Furniture Union

WASHINGTON—All C.I.O. local industrial unions in the furniture industry have been advised by John Brophy, C.I.O. director, to affiliate immediately with the recently-created United Furniture Workers of America.

With 14,000 members in the C.I.O. industrial union group enrolling in the U.F.W.A., the new union's membership will be close to 30,000 by the first of the year, President Morris Muster estimated.

The young C.I.O. international, which was created shortly after the Furniture Workers Unity Conference met here late in November, already has won some 10,000 members from the A. F. of L. Upholsterers' Union as various locals applied for charters in the C.I.O. organization.

Hoffmann Exposed

Affiliation of some 4,000 members of 12 independent locals in Jamestown, N. Y., is expected very shortly, Muster said. He added that the switch from the A. F. of L. to the C.I.O. is being stimulated by the "exposure of the double-crossing tactics of Sal Hoffmann," Upholsterers' president, who pledged support to the C.I.O. at the Washington conference. Hoffmann later "suspended" locals and officials who favored C.I.O. affiliation.

The international has taken permanent headquarters at 1133 Broadway, New York City.

Michigan C. I. O. Unions Push Relief Program

LANSING, Mich.—Ten international unions of the C.I.O. and many smaller units from all parts of Michigan met here December 19 for a state-wide relief conference.

Adolph Germer, regional C.I.O. director, told the 250 delegates that between 175,000 and 200,000 workers throughout the state are idle at the present time.

Systematic surveys of unemployment in each industrial community will be made by union committees, it was decided, and a state committee of the C.I.O. was formed to coordinate activity. Exact figures on the number affected by the depression will thus be available to union groups, and will aid the work of obtaining adequate state and federal relief expenditures.

Quarry Workers To Join C.I.O.

building granite quarry owners in the territory, with the exception of a few firms employing about 700 workers. In the southern granite belt in Georgia and South Carolina it has organized practically 85 per cent of the industry.

In the Bedford, Ind., limestone belt the union has three branches with a membership of 1,226 out of a total of 3,000 men employed. Eighty per cent of the building limestone in the United States is produced in the Indiana belt.

2,000 in Vermont

In the Vermont marble belt, the international has several locals made up of men employed in the quarries and plants of the Vermont Marble Company, the largest producer of marble in America. During normal times, the company employs about 2,000 workers.

Other marble areas where the union has locals includes Elberton, Ga., where the union recently signed a contract after a three-months' strike; Carthage, Mo., and Knoxville, Tenn. The Carthage marble workers have been on strike since March, 1935.

In the slate industry, the union has a flourishing branch in Bangor, Pa. Organization work has been going on in the Pennsylvania slate belt for only a short time, but is expanding. Around 3,000 workers are employed in the area. There are also slate producing centers in Rome and Granville, N. Y., and in Vermont, which the union expects to organize.

Philadelphia C.I.O. To Fight Lay-Offs

PHILADELPHIA — Protests against the "sit-down" strike of big business were voiced by leaders of progressive trade unions and unemployed organizations at a mass meeting called by the Conference to Fight Layoffs.

David Davis, business agent for Local 155, United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers who was chairman of the meeting, said that the rally would "deal a most effective blow against the attempts of capital to scuttle the progressive legislative program proposed by the President."

Resolutions passed at the meeting demanded an increased WPA program and the calling of a special session of the state legislature to take up unemployment problems.

C.I.O. unions represented included the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, the National Maritime Unions and the Philadelphia industrial union council. The Workers Alliance and progressive A. F. of L. groups also cooperated.

Kentucky Unions to Form State Council

LEXINGTON, Ky. — A convention to set up a state C.I.O. Industrial Union Council in Kentucky will be held in Lexington January 9-10. Delegates from C.I.O. unions with a total membership of 50,000 will attend the meeting.

John Brophy, C.I.O. director, and Walter Smethurst, executive assistant to the C.I.O. chairman, have been invited to speak.

N. M. U. Wins 22nd Poll; Union's Set-Up Altered

NEW YORK—Continuing its string of National Labor Relations Board election victories, the National Maritime Union, C.I.O., rolled up 774 votes out of 816 in a poll of the crews of the Munson Lines.

The new gain brought the union's string of victories to 22 in 27 elections, with nearly 9,000 votes being cast for the growing C.I.O. international.

In line with its establishment as bargaining agent for an overwhelming majority of the seamen on the east and gulf coasts, the union has set up permanent official machinery to conduct its affairs. The move, as ordered in the N.M.U.'s recently adopted constitution, provides for establishment of district jurisdictions.

New Districts Created

The Atlantic district will extend from Portland, Me., to Key West, Fla., and the gulf district from Key West to Baytown, Tex. Seamen in Great Lakes ports, at present being organized under a provisional committee, will form a district for that area after their convention next spring.

Each district will elect three officers—a chairman, secretary and treasurer — who will form the union's national council.

As a result of experience under the autocratic regime of the now defunct Intl. Seamen's Union of the A. F. of L., the constitution provides for democratic control throughout.

Retail Clerks On Picket Line

Five hundred men and women, all members of the United Retail Drug Store Employes Union, C.I.O., walked out on strike in 57 New York Whelan drug stores December 18 when the company refused to sign an agreement with the union. Despite company advertisements in New York papers intended to prejudice the public against the strikers, the union is keeping its ranks firm.

Massachusetts Council Names Legislative Agent

BOSTON—The Massachusetts Industrial Union Council has appointed Daniel J. Boyle of Peabody, head of the C.I.O. National Leather Workers Association, as legislative agent for the Council.

A legislative program has been outlined by the executive board of the Council which includes a request for an appropriation to make a survey of conditions in the shoe industry of New England.

Indianapolis Council To Help Unemployed

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—Plans for setting up unemployment committees to register unemployed union members have been announced by the Indianapolis C.I.O. Industrial Union Council. The committees will contact all public and relief agencies in an attempt to secure adequate relief and employment for jobless unionists.

Walter Truman, president of the Council, in announcing the plans, said that "Indiana has a responsibility to its citizens who had jobs, who were willing and able to work, but who were laid off and are now unemployed for reasons beyond their control."

He urged all local unions to cooperate in insuring the success of the campaign to protect unemployed union members.

TOLEDO

TOLEDO—C.I.O. unions affiliated with the Toledo Industrial Union Council are making every effort to insure proper relief for their unemployed members, Sec. Kenneth Cole announced here. Unemployed who face eviction from their homes have been advised to consult the council or their local union for aid. Over 17,000 workers in the city's auto and glass industries are jobless.

ST. LOUIS

ST. LOUIS — One thousand C.I.O. members, packing Hibernian Hall in this city, demanded that local relief authorities cut through the maze of red tape which has caused delay in relief payments and forced hundreds to stand in line for hours at the relief headquarters. The meeting, held under the auspices of the city's C.I.O. Industrial Union Council, demanded immediate formation of a state board for relief planning, with adequate labor representation.

From 78 to 32,000 in One Year

DETROIT (UNS)—In one year the West Side local of the United Automobile Workers has grown from 78 to 32,000 members speakers pointed out at a mass meeting.

Bank Employes Win Right To Organize

NEW YORK—Bank employes have the right to organize and bargain collectively under the state's "Little Wagner Act," the New York Labor Relations Board declared in a decision overruling the contention of the Bank of Yorktown that the board had no jurisdiction in the banking field.

An election was ordered to be held among the 44 employes of the bank to determine whether or not they wished to be represented by the Financial Employes Organizing Committee of the United Office and Professional Workers, C.I.O. union.

"The bank's repeated declarations at the conferences and at the hearing that its employes do not come within the purview of the act," the decision stated, "is equivalent to the proposition that its employes are not entitled to join with their fellow workers for the purpose of improving their conditions by means of collective bargaining, and that the bank has no obligation with a collective representative."

Bank Challenged Board

The bank's claim that the state board lacked jurisdiction was first made officially on November 26 when it asked for an adjournment of the hearing on the union's petition for certification as sole collective bargaining agency. The application was denied.

Later the bank's attorney resumed the claim in the form of four motions at the close of the union's case, asserting that the State Labor Relations Act is unconstitutional, that the bank is subject only to the regulations of the state superintendent of banks, that bank employes are not laborers within the meaning of the law, and that the bank is an instrumentality of the federal government and therefore not subject to regulation of a state board.

Negotiated In October

The union's negotiations with the Bank of Yorktown began on October 13, 1937, and terminated with a meeting on October 20. Its claim to represent a majority of the employes was denied by the bank.

In view of the fact that "a question of controversy has arisen concerning the representation of the employes of the Bank of Yorktown" the Board ordered an election by secret ballot among all employes, exclusive of officers and supervisory employes.

Marine Firemen's Vote Favors C.I.O.

SAN FRANCISCO—Returns on a referendum conducted by the Marine Firemen, Oilers, Watertenders & Wipers of the Pacific Coast revealed an overwhelming majority of the membership in favor of affiliation with the Committee for Industrial Organization.

The vote, which took nearly three months to complete, was 1,189 to 306.

The membership also voted 1,284 to 197 in favor of sending representatives to the constitutional convention to be held in San Francisco January 17, to set up an national industrial seamen's union.

A check on the list of members disclosed that a great majority of the members of every west coast branch voted in the referendum.

"Mandate to Officials"

A statement issued by the union said: "This C.I.O. vote is an overwhelming mandate by the rank and file to the officials to open up full steam ahead toward a militant progressive unionism under the C.I.O. banner."

More than 800 men attended the meeting at which the report on the balloting was presented. The report was accepted with only two dissenting votes. The delegates also voted to contribute toward the expense of publishing 10,000 copies of a draft of the proposed constitution for the national seamen's union.

A. F. of L. Members Refuse To Aid 'War' on C. I. O.

PORTLAND, Oreg.—More than 1,000 rank-and-file members of the A. F. of L's carpenters' union have signed a petition warning officials of the international that they will not participate in the "boycott" aimed at crippling the Intl. Woodworkers of America, C.I.O.

The boycott move, according to E. B. O'Grady, C.I.O. regional director here, has no support except from a small group in the carpenters' international policy committee. He charged that this group is spreading false information about the boycott.

Collapse of the A. F. of L. officials' war on the I.W.A. was predicted here following the opening of two Portland mills under C.I.O. contracts.

C.I.O. Locals In Utilities To Hold First National Conference This Month

Union Head

Pres. James B. Carey, of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, C.I.O., whose affiliated utility locals will meet in Washington at the end of January.

WASHINGTON—A national conference of representatives of C.I.O. union locals in the utility industry will be held here Saturday and Sunday, January 29-30, by the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of the C.I.O.

The conference, the first of its kind in the industry, will adapt the national structure and policies of the utility locals to meet new developments in the field, according to Albert Stonkus, director of the utility division of the U.E.R.&M.W.

Organization of the power trust has made substantial progress in recent months despite the anti-labor position taken by a large number of the corporations in the field.

The union has signed contracts with six corporations in Indiana, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Wyoming and California. At the present time the union is negotiating an agreement with the Monongahela West Pennsylvania Public Service Co., and a contract is expected shortly.

56 Locals Formed

Labor board hearings have just been concluded in the case of the Duquesne Light Co., and are scheduled to open for the Ohio Power Co. and the Iowa Southern Utilities in the near future.

The U.E.R.&M.W. utilities division has organized a total of 56 locals in 26 companies during the short space of time in which the utility organizing drive has been under way.

Of these 12 are composed of employes of the Consumers Power Co. of the Commonwealth & Southern System. An agreement comes up for renewal on March 1.

Ten locals have been organized on the west coast among workers of the Pacific Gas & Electric Co. A recent labor board poll which favored an "independent" union will probably be held up by the N.L.R.B., union leaders predict, because of evidence that the "independent" is company-dominated.

To have made such gains in this industry, "in a few months of concerted but inadequate effort, where no tradition of unionism existed, where no previous concerted effort has been made, is in our opinion substantial and encouraging progress," Stonkus said.

Akron Unionists Defend 6-Hour Day

AKRON—Any attempt by Akron industries to end the six-hour day will be met with resistance by the C.I.O. Industrial Union Council.

More than 65 delegates voted unanimously for a resolution which pointed out that such a move on the part of business would throw thousands out of work.

The resolution, introduced by N. H. Eagle, a member of the executive board of the United Rubber Workers, warned that lengthening of the work day would lead to "industrial warfare." Nearly 9,000 of Akron's 45,000 rubber workers are now jobless, Eagle's resolution declared, and the reestablishment of the eight-hour day would lead to unemployment for 8,000 more.

Promise to Provide Work Must Be Kept

At its Atlantic City conference, the Committee for Industrial Organization adopted as the basic feature of its legislative program the principle that "every worker has a right to a job and must be guaranteed security of employment."

Since then a nation-wide campaign has been launched by organized labor to win the right to work for a growing army of the unemployed. John L. Lewis and other labor spokesmen have repeatedly insisted that if the corporations fail to provide work, there must be some power that will go beyond them and insure the workers the right to live.

The demands of labor have included increased appropriations for WPA and other public works so that the government may take up the task of providing jobs when private industry fails to do so.

* * *

The justice of labor's demand was recognized by President Roosevelt when he declared in his message to Congress for a policy of "not permitting any needy American who can and is willing to work to starve because the federal government does not provide the work.

"If private cooperative endeavor fails to provide work for willing hands and relief for the unfortunate," the President said, "those suffering hardship from no fault of their own have a right to call upon the government for aid; and a government worthy of its name must make a fitting response."

Now that the census has revealed unemployment ranging up to 11 million, it is urgent that action be taken at once by Congress to make the principle thus expressed effective. It is certainly no time to cut down on relief expenditures, when the need for them is increasing.

Present appropriations for relief and public works are grossly inadequate, and Congress must act to increase such appropriation in this fiscal year if it is not "to let the people down."

* * *

In providing work for the growing number of needy Americans who face starvation, the WPA is badly hampered by the infamous Woodrum amendment. This amendment must be repealed and WPA must be enabled and required to provide work for all who are let out by private industry.

There must be no retreat before the arrogant and shortsighted demands of those who would cut government expenditures at the expense of the unemployed. Public welfare must take precedence over private profits.

Confidence cannot be restored to business by reducing the taxes and expenditures which provide work and spread purchasing power among the millions whom private industry is turning onto the streets to starve. On the contrary, such expenditures must be increased if the genuine confidence that comes with economic security is to permeate the American people.

* * *

One of the first essential steps to permit the government to provide work for the unemployed and to establish confidence where it is needed most, is passage of the Schwellenbach-Allen resolution on WPA employment which is on the Senate calendar.

This resolution now includes a clause for repeal of the Woodrum amendment, so that expenditure of existing WPA funds may be permitted to meet present needs and the way be cleared for additional appropriations.

The Schwellenbach-Allen resolution declares that work opportunities must be provided through the federal Works Progress Administration "for all unemployed workers who cannot find employment in private industry."

It provides that "no WPA worker who cannot find employment in private industry at wages not less than the prevailing rate of wages for work for which he or she is reasonably fitted by training or experience shall be discharged from the WPA rolls, and that any WPA employe securing temporary private employment shall be furloughed during the period of private employment by the WPA and not discharged from the rolls."

Only after Congress has taken such action, and jobs have been provided for all who need them, will it be possible to estimate the amount of increased appropriations needed to continue the policy of providing adequate work relief to all the unemployed.

League Greets Heflin Defeat As Labor Gain

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—Backed by labor and liberal forces throughout the state of Alabama, Rep. Lister Hill, pro-New Deal Democrat who voted for the wage-and-hour bill at the special session of Congress, easily won the Democratic nomination to the Senate position vacated when Sen. Hugo Black was appointed to the U. S. Supreme Court last year.

Campaigning on a "strictly 100 per cent New Deal" platform, Hill gained an easy 2-1 victory from former Sen. Thomas Heflin, bitter-end reactionary. The wage-hour issue figured prominently in the election campaign.

Hill's victory was hailed by Labor's Non-Partisan League, which through E. L. Oliver, its executive vice-president, stated that "the vote in Alabama indicates that the people of the south, no less than those of the north, demand federal protection against oppressive labor standards."

Pointing to a statement made when the wage bill was defeated "that this issue would be fought out in the 1938 Congressional elections," the league stated, "nothing can keep this question out of other campaigns excepting speedy passage of satisfactory legislation."

Southern Churchmen Speak Out For Labor

Their religion means something real and practical in everyday industrial relations, to the ministers from many Southern churches who attended the recent annual meeting of the Fellowship of Southern Churchmen at Nashville, Tenn.

They committed themselves, in the spirit of the gospel, "to work for a society in which opportunities for the abundant life are more justly given to the masses of men." And they adopted a statement which left no doubt as to their stand on collective bargaining and the C.I.O.

"We believe," said these Southern churchmen, "that it is essential to the self-respect of the workers that they have freedom to become part of the organized labor movement.

"We thus seek to encourage workers' affiliation with trade unions and to educate our church constituencies to appreciate and defend the right of all men and women to bargain collectively, free from intimidation and violence, 'legal' or extra-legal."

* * *

The churchmen also showed an intelligent appreciation of the role of the C.I.O. and industrial unionism in bringing the benefits of collective bargaining to large numbers whom the crafts have failed to reach.

"We sympathize with the desire on the part of established craft unions to conserve the values which these unions represent and believe that the C.I.O. is wise in its announced policy of not seeking to destroy arbitrarily and hastily or to alter the structure of unions which are genuinely serving the interests of workers and which represent the choice of the workers," they said.

"However, in standing for the principle of industrial unionism and in giving active support to the great masses of unskilled industrial unions, the C.I.O. unions are rendering a great constructive service to our society."

Through its organizing campaigns in the textile, steel and other great Southern industries, the C.I.O. has brought unionism to the attention of the South in a way that the small and scattered craft unions never succeeded in doing.

It has been greeted with a torrent of abuse and misrepresentation by all the forces of darkness and reaction, just as the pioneers of unionism have always been greeted when they first enter new territory.

There has therefore devolved on the religious and progressive leaders of the South a special duty to hold aloft the light of justice and understanding; and to call attention to the legitimate character and high social aims of unionism.

It is encouraging to see that this duty is being so worthily performed by the churchmen who declared their faith in social justice and labor's rights at this Nashville meeting.

Employer-Imposed Unionism

A dangerous distortion of the whole purpose of labor relations legislation has come to light in Wisconsin.

The purpose of the national labor relations act is to enable workers to be represented in collective bargaining by a union of their own choosing; and to prevent employers from imposing on their employes organizations which the workers do not want.

But a court decision has recently been rendered in Wisconsin which interprets the state labor relations act as declaring in effect that the collective bargaining agency may be a union of the employers own choosing, even if it has no members at all among the employes.

The decision was made by State Circuit Court Judge Alvin C. Reis, in the case of an appeal by the United Shoe Workers of the C.I.O. against a state labor board order upholding a closed shop agreement between the Freeman Shoe Co. of Beloit and the Boot & Shoe Workers Union of the A. F. of L.

Judge Reis held that it made no difference whether the A. F. of L. union had a majority, a minority or no members at all among the Freeman company employes, since under the terms of the act an employer could enter into a closed shop contract with any union it chose, provided that the union was not a company union in the judgment of the state labor board.

Joseph A. Padway, A. F. of L. attorney, who was responsible for inserting the joker into the state act on which Judge Reis based his interpretation, lost no time in applauding the decision, even indicating himself that it enabled employers to choose the union for their employes.

"Unions are like merchandise," said Padway. "You've got to sell them to employers."

That progressive A. F. of L. members do not share Padway's rejoicing over such employer-imposed unionism is shown by an editorial in The Kenosha Labor, official publication of the Kenosha Trades & Labor Council.

"We stand aghast that officers of the State Federation of Labor, and its counsel (who now proposes amending the national act to make it conform with the state act, as interpreted by Judge Reis) can accept this ruling with approval," the paper says.

"We cannot believe that they can be so shortsighted, that for the sake of temporary advantage in an intra-union controversy they would risk the future of the whole trade union movement."

The paper points out that this interpretation "encourages rival union organizers to bid against each other in trying to sell their union to the employer. It flouts the will of the workers themselves. It opens the way to racketeering and corruption.

"Regardless of the will of the workers, an employer may recognize a union they do not want, and require them to pay dues to it if they wish to hold their jobs. He is under no obligation to recognize the union of their choosing, even if they preferred it unanimously."

The C.I.O. union has announced that it will contest the decision through the state's supreme court. It charges that the company's executives, by acts of intimidation, had supported the organization of the A. F. of L. affiliate against the wishes of the employes.

This is an issue on which both A. F. of L. and C.I.O. unions can join, to prevent the insertion of similar jokers in other state laws, and to see that they are not used as an opening wedge for the general imposition of employer-chosen unionism on workers who desire unions of their own choice.

Labor History on Mural

A history of the rise of American labor is being executed by Walter Speck, who has been commissioned to do a series of mural paintings by the big West Side local of the United Automobile Workers of America, C.I.O. When the murals are completed, they will be placed in the local's meeting hall. Scene on the left depicts an attack by Ford service men on union members last spring, while that on the right shows figures of a man and woman, typical of the unionists in the auto industry.

Rapid Growth of C. I. O. and New Labor Movement Treated in Dr. Brooks' Book

"When Labor Organizes" by Robert R. R. Brooks, is one of the latest of an increasing flow of books treating the new labor movement in the United States, as represented by the rapid growth and success of the C.I.O.

"When Labor Organizes" is not a history of the trade union movement, though there is plenty of history in it. It is more of a handbook on labor organization, setting forth what happens when American labor undertakes to organize for better working and living conditions.

In successive chapters Brooks gives a running account of the first steps in organizing in an unorganized community, the methods of approach used by a labor organizer, the amount of employer opposition he has to meet, and some of the tactics that are used by those elements hostile to trade unions.

One of the most useful chapters of the book is devoted to a listing and discussion of the unions in the field, with brief accounts of their development and growth. In the chapter on "The Labor Movement and Political Action" the author concludes that "if the American labor movement turns to independent political action it will be both a consequence and a cause of its rising confidence, discipline and power on the economic front."

"As Steel Goes, So Goes Labor"

NEW YORK—The unionization of the steel industry by the C.I.O. assures the spread of unionism through the country, says J. B. S. Hardman, editor of The Advance, official organ of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, commenting on the recent convention of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

"It used to be a by-word in American political life that as Maine goes, so goes the nation," he says. "Insofar as the labor movement is concerned the formula is—as steel goes, so goes the labor movement. Now, steel is unionized."

As a result of S.W.O.C. success in organizing steel, Hardman says, "the prejudice, the superstition, the slander that American labor will not be organized, has lost ground."

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

The President's Message

ONE of the most interesting aspects of the President's message to Congress was the general press reaction to it.

Reactionary papers which have been carrying on a campaign of relief-for-the-rich-and-to-hell-with-the-rest went through all the verbal motions of sighs of relief and cries of surprise that the message was so "conciliatory."

Actually the message reiterated a number of principles to which the administration has long been committed, for which the electorate has voted, and which have inspired the type of legislation the same reactionary papers have been trying, all too successfully, to buck.

Deflated Bogeys

But the press campaigns against wage-and-hour legislation, against farm and unemployed relief, and against taxation of the rich, have included so many fantastic bogeys created for the occasion that the exposure of their unreality by any serious and authoritative statement was bound to make the propagandists of reaction appear ridiculous.

American businessmen are not such jittery idiots as much of the press has painted them. They are not inclined to continue indefinitely the sabotage of recovery advocated by the private axe-grinders of profiteering reaction.

So much of the editorial expressions above referred to may be classed as a face-saving retreat from some of the more fantastic forms of propaganda, once their unreality has been exposed.

Principle vs. Practice

But there is another possible motive in the momentary change of tactics by the opponents of progressive legislation.

They realize that popular demand is growing for legislation to raise the purchasing power of farmers and workers and to implement administration declarations that the government must provide work for the jobless when private industry fails.

So now they speak softly about the general declarations of such principles, as embodied in the President's message, while they prepare every possible pressure to prevent such principles being put into actual practice.

The Tactic of Lip-Service

The tactic which was most effective in defeating wage-and-hour legislation in the special session was that adopted by the A. F. of L. leaders who paid lip service to the general objective but opposed any specific measure that had a chance of passage.

Relatively few members of Congress will dare to oppose the legislative principles in the President's message. But reaction will now smooth the way for those who would be faithless to their trust, by bidding them pay lip service to the principle but fight like tigers against its concrete application.

At the same time the new tactics permit the selfish interests to sidle up to the administration and purr, as they have done before: "Now we're ready to be nice to you, if you'll be nice to us by not doing what you have promised to do."

Time To Be Vigilant

Now is therefore the time for the labor and progressive forces to be more vigilant than ever, and more insistent on adoption of the constructive legislation which has been so often promised and so often deferred or sabotaged.

The recent special session of Congress, with its callous defeat of wage-and-hour legislation, should shock all progressives into action.

Organized labor and organized farmers should join, in the spirit of the St. Paul agreement, with the middle classes and enlightened business to see that the people's mandate is put into effect by the present Congress.

Fair words and promises are not enough. The time for action has come. And the voters in the next elections are going to judge their representatives by what they actually do at this session to provide work for the jobless and to raise farm and labor purchasing power.

Mine, Mill & Smelter Union Has "Greatest Year" in 1937

Membership Rose to 50,000; Union Plans Drives on 'Big Four'

DENVER—The Intl. Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, C.I.O., raised its membership from 18,000 to 50,000 during 1937 and signed 97 collective bargaining agreements during the "greatest year in its history," leaders of the union revealed last week.

Intensive drives among the workers of Anaconda Copper Mining Co., American Smelting & Refining, Phelps-Dodge, and Kennecott will highlight the organization's campaign in 1938, Pres. Reid Robinson predicted.

Contract in Idaho

A detailed review of the past year's accomplishments shows victories in such widely-separated areas as Perth Amboy, N. J., and Juneau, Alaska. The union signed the first bona-fide contract in the long history of the Coeur D'Alene area in Idaho, and made rapid advances towards complete unionization of employes of Utah's mines, mills, and smelters.

Throughout British Columbia and Ontario, Canada, steady progress is being made in furthering the international's growth, Robinson asserted.

Blue Card Hearing

Meanwhile, at Joplin, Mo., Natl. Labor Relations Board attorneys are learning details of the "Blue Card" company union outfit, which has continued under an A. F. of L. charter to render service to the anti-labor employers of the Eagle-Picher Co. in Missouri's tri-state region.

From Mike Evans, a leader in what has become one of the midwest's most notorious company unions, the N.L.R.B. learned of $17,500 gifts from the president of the company to the so-called labor organization, and of the subsequent signing of a "closed shop contract."

Other activities of the Blue Card group apparently were so hot that its leaders felt the records should be destroyed. Records of the organization were allegedly stolen from the car of one Glenn Hickman, a Blue Card official, but observers at the trial hearings are of the opinion that the material was burned by the officials.

A. F. of L. Observer Present

The A. F. of L., whose charter to the company union group caused a sensation last spring, has an observer at the hearings, and has sought to prove that the Blue Card union was first dissolved and then reorganized under A. F. of L. control.

But Hickman and Evans, together with Joe Nolan—another leader of the Blue Card union—served as delegates to the 1937 convention of the A. F. of L. last autumn, officials of the C.I.O. union point out.

Scanning the News

The New York Herald-Tribune, arch-conservative Republican organ, complains about the unemployment census.

"The worst thing about the figures," it says, "is the time and manner of their publication."

Apparently the G.O.P. people have reached the point where they only want to read ancient history!

* * *

Fascism sprouts in all sorts of odd and often ridiculous forms when it first makes its appearance. Among the many sproutlets which have recently appeared in the United States is a quaint little "Home Industry Guard" formed at Charleston, S. C., "to stamp out and put down C.I.O. as the worst form of Communism."

The sponsor of this outfit calls on all available suckers to pay a dollar down and 25c a month, with higher rates for business houses and a fee of $25 for charters, for the privilege of trying to keep union organization and higher wages out of Charleston.

He is hard put to it, however, to bring home to sceptical Charlestonians the horrors of C.I.O. So he resorts to describing what the National Maritime Union of the C.I.O. is doing there, claiming that it has forced the companies "to furnish the crew with perfumed toilet soap."

Horror No. 2 uncovered by the would-be Fascist Fuehrer of Charleston is that the N.M.U. has forced the shipowners "to furnish the crew with two clean sheets per day, and then the fireman will climb into his bunk with his dirty overalls and shoes on."

Apparently it shocks him that clean sheets should be used for tired workers to sleep between, instead of to conceal night-riding terrorists.

* * *

A. F. of L. rank and filers will be shocked to know to what low esteem the name of the Federation has been brought by leaders who have linked it with every attempt to fight C.I.O. union organization, when they read that this anti-union and quasi-Fascist "Home Guard" includes as part of its platform:

"To advocate and fight for and further the interests of the American Federation of Labor."

* * *

Wonder whether the A. F. of L. leaders who lobbied against the Black-Connery wage-hour bill, and aided in defeating it, took to heart this passage in the President's message:

"Others give 'lip service' to a general objective, but do not like any specific measure that is proposed."

The President asked "whether some of these opponents are not at heart opposed to any program for raising the wages of the underpaid or reducing the hours of the overworked."

New Home of Mine Union

Offices of the United Mine Workers, C.I.O., are now in this building, formerly the University Club, at 15th & I Streets in Washington, D. C.

Policy Holders Aid Insurance Union

NEW YORK — Leading liberals and labor leaders have organized a policy-holders' committee to aid the United Office & Professional Workers, C.I.O., in its campaign to win recognition from major insurance companies.

The committee includes Cong. Henry G. Teigan, of Minnesota; Louis Boudin, prominent New York labor lawyer; George Soule, of the "New Republic" magazine; and leaders of several C.I.O. unions.

The committee has headquarters at 66 Court St., Brooklyn.

C.I.O. Unions Win Places On "Nation" Honor Roll

NEW YORK—For the second year in a row, the Committee for Industrial Organization has been given a major place in the yearly "Honor Roll" of the Nation, liberal weekly magazine. The list was published last week.

Cited for their contributions to American progress during 1937 were the Textile Workers Organizing Committee, headed by Sidney Hillman; the United Automobile Workers of America, and the Transport Workers Unions.

The 1936 list had included the Steel Workers Organizing Committee and the C.I.O. itself.

T.W.O.C. Complimented

The T.W.O.C. was complimented for "the intelligence and courage it has used in its campaign of organization, and especially for showing, for the first time in labor history, that a map of trade unionism does not have to omit the South." The U.A.W. and the T.W.U. were given credit for "winning brilliant labor victories and demonstrating that they are forces to be reckoned with."

The American Labor Party of New York and its officers were included on the list "for their skillful and perspicacious campaign in the New York City elections, which gave labor politics a new dignity and standing."

Praise Senators

Senators LaFollette and Thomas of the Senate Civil Liberties Committee, and their staff, were lauded for "having written a new economic charter for American civil liberties." For fighting to preserve civil liberties in Jersey City, N. J., headquarters of Frank Hague's anti-union dictatorship, Morris L. Ernst and Roger Baldwin, of the American Civil Liberties Union, were given places on the honor roll.

Rep. Norton Pledges Wage Bill Action

WASHINGTON—Congress will once again be asked to consider passage of a wage-and-hour bill, Rep. Mary Norton, chairman of the House Labor Committee, predicted this week as the new session got under way.

"I think I can promise that the bill will be enacted," she continued.

The wage-and-hour proposition leaped to the limelight once more when Pres. Roosevelt, in his speech to the Congress, made pointed mention of the measure.

"Wage-and-hour legislation is a problem which is definitely before this Congress for action," the President stated.

"It is an essential part of economic recovery. It has the support of an overwhelming majority of our people in every walk of life. They have expressed themselves through the ballot box."

Strikes Reached Peak In '37, N.L.R.B. Reveals

WASHINGTON—American labor took part in 4,017 strikes in the first 10 months of 1937, according to a report of the Natl. Labor Relations Board.

The strikes, which affected 1,768,791 workers, almost doubled the number of walkouts in either 1935 or 1936. They exceeded the numbers rolled up in such peak years of labor activity as 1919 or 1920, the figures showed.

Significant in the report was the fact that 56 per cent of the strikes were called to force recognition of the unions' rights to bargain collectively for members.

Teachers Union Warns Of School 'Economie

CHICAGO—The people of America must be on guard lest the current depression be used as an excuse for further trimming of education appropriations, the executive board of the American Federation of Teachers warned at its meeting here.

"The 'average' man and woman in every community must be on guard against those who are seizing on tax difficulties to curtail or wholly suppress public education to ensure a generation poorly equipped to function in a democracy for their common rights," the statement declared.

Will Seek Funds

"There are those in these United States who would cripple our schools for the purpose of producing cheap labor."

The federation will work to secure legislation providing federal aid for states unable to finance their schools adequately and to secure child labor legislation.

STUDENTS BACK UNIONS

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.—Delegates to the third national convention of the American Student Union, held this year at Vassar, voted a resolution urging student cooperation with the labor union movement.

Federal Workers Need Pay Boosts, Baker Says

WASHINGTON—Government employes, as well as industrial workers, are urgently in need of wage and hour legislative protection, Pres. Jacob Baker of the United Federal Workers of America, C.I.O., declared here this week.

"Hours of labor for government employes in many cases are far above the ceiling contemplated by Pres. Roosevelt for private industry; wages in many cases are in the cellar beneath the floor referred to by the President," Baker said.

Pointing out that government workers are not eligible for unemployment insurance, the U.F.W.A. head declared that government employment has dropped by more than 40,000 people in the last four months.

Twenty-five per cent of government workers receive less than $1,300 yearly, Baker said, adding that his figures do not include part-time workers. He declared that in one division, the Veterans Facilities' employes are often forced to work more than 70 hours a week.

C.I.O. Sugar Union Helps Procure Job Stability

BOSTON—Increased security in 1938 for 1,200 employes of sugar refineries in greater Boston is to a large extent due to the activity of the Sugar Refinery Workers Local Industrial Union No. 4, according to Maurice Dineen, C.I.O. field representative.

The union, which together with other C.I.O. locals, has organized about 75% of the industry, raised wages $3,000,000 last year. In addition, its action pushing the sugar bill passed by Congress has contributed greatly to assuring work stabilization, Dineen said.

The United States Sugar Refineries Assn. in Washington has stated that Massachusetts sugar workers need have no fear of losing their jobs during 1938, despite the general business slump.

WASHINGTON—The Cherry Cotton Mills of Florence, Ala., must rehire six workers whom it fired more than a year ago for union activity, the Natl. Labor Relations Board has ordered.

Progress in Steel Told to Garment Local

NEW YORK — Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Worker Organizing Committee, was scheduled this week to open a series of addresses on C.I.O. activities to Local 22 of the Intl. Ladies Garment Workers Union, C.I.O.

The forum series was arranged by the local's educational department and future monthly meetings will bring speeches by Homer Martin, Sidney Hillman, Michael Quill and David Dubinsky, president of the I.L.G.W.U.

Murray, who will be introduced by Charles Zimmerman, manager of the local, will speak on the subject of "Labor in Steel."

Union Activity Speeds Handling of Relief

C.I.O. Aid to Jobless Lightens Relief Problem

WASHINGTON—Efforts of C.I.O. unions in behalf of unemployed workers are bringing about better handling of the relief problem in many cities, according to reports from all sections of the nation.

In St. Louis, C.I.O. delegations called upon the governor of Missouri, the mayor of the city, and heads of relief agencies. As a result, according to Bert Tavender, C.I.O. regional director, jobless members of C.I.O. unions are either receiving relief or being placed on the W.P.A. rolls.

In Waterbury, Conn., Alex Cashin, C.I.O. field representative, reports that "we have been very successful in obtaining relief for our members." In nearby Bridgeport, C.I.O. groups have formed a city-wide committee to handle the relief problem, and have been successful in securing aid for unemployed members.

A feature of the Connecticut C.I.O. relief program has been a series of radio broadcasts describing the unions' activities in behalf of the unemployed.

Alabama Conditions Bad

With 3,000 workers estimated in the jobless ranks on January 1, the Huntsville, Ala., Industrial Union Council reports emergency conditions existing in its area, and has called upon state and federal authorities to meet the situation.

A survey made by a sub-committee of the council found appalling conditions existing among families of the jobless, in most of which no member of the family had worked in periods ranging from two months to five years.

"We found that the homes of a goodly number of these people were mere hovels," the report declared. "The hovels were old dilapidated buildings without sanitary facilities, yet these people were forced to pay, in many instances, one-half of the $12 they were receiving from the Department of Public Welfare or a like amount of their security wages from the W.P.A., each month for the rent of these buildings."

In Indiana, Gov. Townsend, while refusing to call a special session of the legislature to vote more relief funds, asked C.I.O. union leaders to compile unemployment estimates for the state in order that the problem may be better handled by relief officials.

U.A.W. Complains

Richard Leonard, director of welfare for the United Automobile Workers, C.I.O., last week issued a sharp complaint to Detroit relief authorities for their handling of the present situation. Describing conditions at a relief station in one section of Detroit, Leonard charged that applicants have been forced to stand in lines two blocks long.

"More than once," he declared, "men and women have fallen exhausted while standing in line. . . . Women applicants have walked miles, leaving hungry children at home; have waited from early morning until 5 at night to be interviewed, and have then been told to return the next day with more information, rent receipts, etc."

Leonard urged the relief administration to open additional stations, provide better welfare aid for single men and women, and allow district supervisors to discuss grievances with the U.A.W. welfare council each week.

A.C.W.A. Blames A.F.L. For Peace Meeting End

NEW YORK—The responsibility of the A. F. of L. craft leaders for the breakdown of unity negotiations with the C.I.O. is emphasized editorially by The Advance, official organ of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

The A. F. of L. position, it says, "meant that the A. F. of L. was willing to return to the order of things which obtained before the C.I.O. came into being and to go not a step from that old position," the editorial states.

"Stripped of the embellishments calculated for the consumption of the innocents, the A. F. of L. strategy was not to meet halfway the C.I.O. proposals to bring about the unity of all organized labor, but a new mask for the old intention to divide the C.I.O."

Farm Workers In Dire Want, S.F.T.U. Reveals

MEMPHIS, Tenn.—Farm labor is seriously affected by the current slump, a survey of unemployment made by the Southern Tenant Farmers Union, C.I.O., revealed.

"Despite the largest cotton crop in years, there is more starvation in this section of the cotton belt than there has been at any time during the depression," Sec. H. L. Mitchell of the S.F.T.U. declared, following completion of local studies of the situation in Arkansas, Oklahoma, Missouri and Texas.

Hundreds Being Evicted

Reduction of cotton acreage, through application of the farm bill, and the introduction of tractor machinery, will lead to hundreds of thousands of families finding themselves without crops in 1938, Mitchell predicted.

"They will become casual day laborers with nothing to live on during the next three months, and unless the government opens up the relief rolls there will be widespread starvation throughout the Southwest. Hundreds of union members have already been notified to vacate their homes and evictions will begin shortly."

C.I.O. Acts to Aid Cleveland Jobless

CLEVELAND—With thousands of Cleveland's jobless facing want and distress as a result of a breakdown in the city's relief finances, the Cleveland Industrial Union Council of the C.I.O. moved to insure protection for helpless unemployed throughout the city.

A committee to handle the relief problem was established by the council; and plans have been made for a mass meeting in the public hall to discuss future actions.

WASHINGTON—The Natl. Maritime Union, C.I.O., has been certified by the Natl. Labor Relations Board as sole collective bargaining agent for the unlicensed personnel of ships of the Tidewater Association Oil Co. of New York. In a recent poll the N.M.U. won 318 votes, with the Intl. Seamen's Union of the A. F. of L. receiving only five.

NLRB Hits Ford Again; Buffalo Hearing Jan. 11

BUFFALO, N. Y.—The Natl. Labor Relations Board moved for the second time within a fortnight against the Ford Motor Co. when its Buffalo regional director issued a complaint charging the "flivver king" with anti-unionism and espionage.

Copies of the complaint have been served on Edsel Ford and officials in charge of the company's local assembly plant, the labor board announced. Hearings will start January 11.

Charges made by the United Automobile Workers, C.I.O., claim that Ford discharged 16 Buffalo employes for union activity and acted to interfere with the right of the workers to join the union, and that the company had employed spies to report on the union's meetings.

Teachers Ask Unity, Industrial Unionism

CHICAGO — Only a strong, united labor movement can meet the attacks being made both upon the right of Americans to work and to get an education, it was stated in a letter sent to William Green, A. F. of L. president, on behalf of the national executive council of the American Federation of Teachers.

As the only effective method of meeting the onslaught of the united enemies of labor, the council proposed that all members of the C.I.O. and the A. F. of L. be brought into one organization, that democratic structures and practices be preserved, and that the principle of industrial unionism be accepted "as the form of organization of workers demanded by conditions of modern industry."

Ford Lacks Support of Public–Frankensteen

DETROIT—"If Henry Ford thinks the public is going to save him from the verdict that he has been guilty of unfair labor practises, he has overestimated the extent to which his paid publicity agents have deceived the public," Richard Frankensteen, chairman of the United Automobile Workers' Ford Organizing Committee, declared here last week.

"Ford makes a false assumption if he thinks public opinion will approve of law-breaking, even if it does come from a multimillionaire," Frankensteen continued.

Frankensteen's statements came just as Ford's battery of attorneys opened their fight on the Natl. Labor Relations Board, which had ordered the motor manufacturer to cease and desist from using anti-union methods and to rehire 29 men fired for union activity.

Ford Reply to N.L.R.B.

The Ford reply to the 46-page document of the N.L.R.B. contained charges that the Labor Board's facts were "unsubstantiated by evidence and that the decision was unsupported by facts." One reply made by the Ford legal staff concerned the fact that only 29 men out of 80,000 had been fired for union activity, which the company claimed was "eloquent" proof that it does not discriminate against union members.

"Ford has always discharged men for real or suspected labor activity," a statement from the U.A.W.A. declared.

It is "significant and unique that thanks to the enlightened attitude of the American people as reflected in Congress, such medieval arbitrariness can be and is being effectively challenged," the statement continued.

"A most dangerous situation would arise if each person chose for himself which laws to obey and which to disregard. That would be anarchy."

Shipowners Break Law, Marine Unions Warned

WASHINGTON—Vigilance to insure obedience to the section of the marine act which compels subsidized ship operators to make repairs in American ports was urged on maritime unions by the Joint Maritime Legislative Committee of the C.I.O. last week.

The United States Maritime Commission recently warned subsidized operators that it had complaints on hand that "subsidized vessels are being painted, scaled and chipped in foreign ports with foreign labor." The act allows repairs to be made in foreign harbors only in emergencies.

The legislative committee, maintained by C.I.O. maritime unions, urged affiliated organizations to exert all pressure possible to see that companies have "all repair work done in our own shipyards and by domestic maritime labor."

CHICAGO—Payrolls tumbled 7 per cent in Illinois during the month of November, according to the state's labor department, while jobs fell 3.4 per cent during the same period.

Boatmen Ask 54 Polls, Challenge Ryan's Power

NEW YORK—Moving rapidly to break the remaining power of Pres. Joseph Ryan, of the Intl. Longshoreman's Assn., A. F. of L., in New York maritime affairs, the Inland Boatmen's Union, C.I.O., last week filed 54 petitions for Natl. Labor Relations Board elections to determine the collective bargaining agency for more than 5,000 New York workers.

The elections, if ordered, will affect workers on more than 1,000 oil barges, "taxi tankers," and tugboats which ply the waters of New York harbor. Some of the companies involved also maintain oil barge fleets at Hartford, Conn., and Albany and Rochester, N. Y.

Meanwhile growing opposition to Ryan's policies is being found among members of longshoremen's locals in New York, the C.I.O. Longshore Organizing Committee reported.

A group of four rank-and-file leaders, including Bernard Tunney, uncle of the former heavyweight boxing champion, are preparing court action to compel Ryan to furnish the membership of Local No. 791 with a financial statement, and to force the holding of monthly meetings.

Commission Holds Up Ship Elections, Union Complains

NEW YORK—Challenging the right of the Maritime Commission to deprive the union of collective bargaining privileges aboard Commission vessels, the National Maritime Union has asked the National Labor Relations Board to "enforce the law" and proceed with elections among the unlicensed personnel.

The Commission owns some 40 vessels, most of them leased to private operators. Recently agents of the commission stopped elections being prepared by the Labor Board on certain commission-owned ships.

No "Veto" Power

"We are at a loss to understand the reason for this," Joseph Curran, N.M.U. general organizer, wrote to J. Warren Madden, N.L.R.B. chairman. "It is inconceivable that the Labor Relations Act, passed by the United States Congress and signed by the President, should be subject to the veto of any commission, executive or otherwise."

The letter requested that the Board take immediate steps to enforce the law or notify the union of its refusal so that the N.M.U. can "proceed legally to secure its enforcement."

N.M.U. Won 26 Polls

"Low wages and bad conditions are a menace to the industry, no matter whether they are Maritime Commission ships or not," the letter concluded.

Elections had been ordered by the board on some 60 steamship lines, among which were a number owned by the commission. Balloting has already been completed on 31 lines, the union states. More than 9,000 votes were cast for the N.M.U. which won 26 of the elections.

WASHINGTON—The Marine Engineers' Beneficial Assn., C.I.O., has won sole collective bargaining rights for the engineers of the New York and Cuba Mail Steamship Co., the Natl. Labor Relations Board announced last week.

Farmers, Workers Sign Pact

Effects of the agreement for mutual assistance signed by representatives of Labor's Non-Partisan League, the Farmers Union and the Cannery & Agricultural Workers Union, will be far-reaching, political observers believe, with Pres. Roosevelt and Secy. of Agriculture Henry Wallace particularly interested in the move. The pact, which states that farmers and workers have similar interests, calls for joint political action. Shown above are leaders of the Farmers Union placing their names on the agreement.

Montana Council Coordinates Labor and Farm Plans for Mutual Benefit

BUTTE, Mont.—Close relations between the working and farming populations, and plans for an organizing drive to bring unionism into the state's oil, lumber and agricultural industries were developed at the first convention of the Montana Industrial Union Council of the C.I.O.

The call for unity of action on the part of farmers and workers came from State Senator Garrison, an active figure in the Natl. Farmers' Union, which recently signed a cooperation pact with Labor's Non-Partisan League and the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers, C.I.O.

Sen. Garrison traced the development of farmer-labor unity, and urged the exchange of fraternal delegates at all important farm and labor conferences in the state.

Condemn "Boycott"

The convention condemned the attempt of some leaders of the American Federation of Labor to run a "boycott" of lumber produced by the Intl. Woodworkers of America, C.I.O., and to hinder unionization of the lumber and sawmill industries.

Delegates were told by Edward O'Grady, C.I.O. regional director in Portland, Oreg., of the mounting opposition on the part of rank and file A. F. of L. carpenters to the boycott move of their leaders.

S.W.O.C. HOLDS MEETINGS

PITTSBURGH—Groups of steel union lodges affiliated with the Steel Workers Organizing Committee in this area have started a series of mass meetings for discussion of demands to be presented to steel companies when contract renewals come up next month.

Kentucky Group Plans Action for Labor Legislation; 1939 Meet at Harlan

LEXINGTON, Ky.—More than 350 delegates, representing 60,000 C.I.O. members throughout this state, last week formed the Kentucky Industrial Union Council of the C.I.O., worked out a legislative and organizing program, and picked "bloody" Harlan as the site for its next annual convention.

Samuel Caddy of the United Mine Workers was elected first president of the new state group. Seven vice presidents, representing the state's four U.M.W.A. districts, the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and the Distillery Workers Union, were also named by the delegates. J. Grigsby was named secretary-treasurer.

Supporting the move to call the next meeting at Harlan, Pres. William Turnblazer of U.M.W. District 19 declared that such a meeting in the heart of the Harlan coal fields would be an "inspiration to the miners and businessmen" of the area.

Assail Frame-up

The convention petitioned Gov. Chandler for the release of four miners serving life sentences for murder in connection with the "Battle of Evarts" in 1931, during which a miner and two deputy sheriffs were slain.

The delegates were warned of an alleged plot to pack a state committee to probe Harlan county with members friendly to the coal operators. A resolution calling for larger federal appropriations for the LaFollette committee met strong approval from the convention.

UNION BACKS NEW INSURANCE PROBE

NEW YORK — A resolution calling for a New York legislative investigation of the affairs of major life insurance companies has been introduced by State Sen. Elmer F. Quinn.

The resolution, filed shortly after a policy-holders committee of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. had asked for a probe of that corporation, drew praise from Pres. Lewis Merrill of the United Office & Professional Workers, C.I.O. Merrill asserted that the companies are using policy-holders' money for "union-smashing activities in violation of the state and national labor relations acts."

The union has filed charges of unfair labor practices on the part of Metropolitan before the state labor relations board.

Western Union Co. Mulcts Employes, Says C.I.O. Union

WASHINGTON—Illegal collection of more than $500,000 in dues, secured by a species of check-off system imposed on all employes, was charged against the Association of Western Union Employes, a company union, by the American Radio Telegraphists Association, C.I.O., in charges filed this week with the National Labor Relations Board.

The A.R.T.A. in its charge asks for full restitution of the money collected from Western Union workers since the passage of the National Labor Relations Act—which specifically prohibits such actions—dissolution of the company union, and withdrawal of recognition by the Western Union company from the association as "collective bargaining agent."

The case holds considerable interest for labor, Mervyn Rathborne, president of the A.R.T.A., said in commenting on the filing of charges: "All labor is looking to A.R.T.A. in its fight on the Association of Western Union Employes to expose big business in its intention to evade the Wagner Act by side-door methods.

"The Association of Western Union Employes is the oldest and one of the most notorious company unions in the United States. For years it has drained from the workers in Western Union dues for which the workers have received nothing.

"In filing this petition we are demanding the return of $500,000 illegally collected by the Employes' Association since the inception of the Wagner Act. This money should be returned to the workers from whom it was wrung by methods that the government of the United States has branded as illicit."

Bosses Head Association

In addition, the company has discriminated against workers reluctant to join the Association, has made promotions, seniority rights, job tenure, permission to present grievances, and favorable hours schedules dependent on membership and "cooperation" with the company union.

Supervisors and other officials of the company were appointed to positions of leadership in the Association, the A.R.T.A. charges, and democratic control has been completely absent. The charges filed with the Board also pointed out that meetings of the Association have been called irregularly, at long intervals, that no convention has been held, and that no adequate accounting for the funds collected from the workers has been made.

Considerable progress has been made by the A.R.T.A. in organizing Western Union workers. Within the past three months locals have been established in eight leading cities, including New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Washington, D. C., and San Francisco. A petition for a Labor Board election has been filed in the last-named city.

N.M.U. Demands Law For Commission Ships

WASHINGTON—The National Maritime Union, C.I.O., moved this week to secure federal legislation forcing the Maritime Commission to bargain collectively with seamen employed on its ships.

Ralph Emerson, legislative representative for the union, submitted to the Senate Commerce Committee proposed amendments to the Merchant Marine Act of 1936 embodying that principle.

The proposed amendment would place the selection of bargaining agents for maritime employers, "including the Maritime Commission in regard to ships owned by the Commission," in the hands of the National Labor Relations Board.

The Commission owns some 40 vessels competing in ordinary commerce with privately owned ships. After the N.M.U. had won approximately nine of ten labor board elections on 30 steamship lines, the board was ordered not to hold elections on the Commission's vessels.

Five-Point Program

Emerson's proposal was part of a five-point legislative program inaugurated by the union at the beginning of this session of Congress. Other proposals were:

1. Establishment of four sea-

C.I.O. Groups Speed Aid for Unemployed

WASHINGTON—Streamlined relief committees, established by C.I.O. international and local organizations, are speeding handling of the relief situation throughout the country, according to further reports coming into C.I.O. national headquarters here.

With scores of thousands unemployed in the lumber industry, the Intl. Woodworkers of America, C.I.O., have established relief committees in practically every community where the union is functioning, according to Pres. Harold J. Pritchett. The lumber industry is working on a 32 per cent production basis, Pitchett stated, and relief has become a paramount issue for the I.W.A. members.

Union representatives recently participated in an unemployment conference sponsored by 41 organizations throughout the state of Washington, and delegations are communicating with state and local authorities.

In Akron, Ohio, the United Rubber Workers, C.I.O., has taken a leading part in the formation of a committee of representatives of labor, the church, fraternal orders, the editors of two of the city's leading newspapers, industrialists and merchants.

Duluth Run-Around Fails

The committee, according to Pres. Sherman Dalrymple of the U.R.W.A., "is proving very effective in bringing pressure to bear on the state representatives in securing greater consideration for the unemployed."

In Duluth, Minn., city relief officials gave members of the Natl. Maritime Union, C.I.O., "the run-around," until the union threatened to mobilize all its members, together with those of other C.I.O. unions, and the Workers Alliance, for a giant mass meeting. The threat brought speedy action, but a number of the workers have not yet been provided for, according to E. Stand, N.M.U. organizer.

At Beaumont, Tex., some relief authorities have promised that any applicant who carries a letter from a C.I.O. union will be given immediate relief without question.

In Portsmouth, Ohio, reports Harry Doll, C.I.O. sub-regional director, unemployment has increased by 7,750 since Sept. 15.

Swamp Jobless Bureau

Crowds of unemployed lined up at the unemployment registration office in Frankford, Pa., to make application for jobless insurance as benefit laws went into effect early this month. Scenes like this were repeated in hundreds of cities and towns as crowds of unemployed exceeded facilities for handling their cases.

Industry Fails People—Lewis

TUCSON, Ariz.—"Capital and industry have made a pretty poor business showing," Chairman John L. Lewis of the Committee for Industrial Organization declared here.

"It is government money, paid by the taxpayers, that maintains and holds business together today in America and props up its backbone," he said. "What are we going to do about it? Whoever has managed these businesses, managed our government, does not seem to have done too good a job."

VOL. I WASHINGTON, D. C., JANUARY 14, 1938 NO. 6

Who Are Responsible For Disunity?

The contention of the C.I.O. representatives that the A. F. of L. leaders caused the collapse of the recent unity negotiations because their committee was without power to reach a real agreement, and because the executive council persisted in its refusal to admit all the C.I.O. unions together, finds support from within the A. F. of L. itself.

Pres. Daniel J. Tobin of the Teamsters union, a member of the A. F. of L. executive council and assuredly no friend of the C.I.O., in a signed editorial in the January issue of his official magazine, reports as follows:

"No final agreement was reached because of the conflicting opinions of the parties meeting.

"In the first place, the committee representing the American Federation of Labor had no power to make any kind of agreement without reporting back to the executive council.

"The executive council of the A. F. of L. discussed the report of the committee at a conference held in Washington on December 4 and 5, 1937.

"After going into the whole situation, President Green was instructed by the conference to state to the C.I.O. representatives that it was impossible for the council to accept the proposition of the C.I.O., and to present once again the proposition of the executive council as the basis of a settlement."

Tobin then proceeds to describe this proposition of the A. F. of L. council as reinstatement of the suspended C.I.O. unions, with the rest of the C.I.O. unions left outside until their differences with the A. F. of L. internationals in their fields should be adjusted.

This proposition the C.I.O. representatives rejected as meaning not unity of labor but division of the C.I.O. and desertion of most of its member unions.

The craft leaders spurned the all-inclusive unity proposed by the C.I.O. because they feared a democratic disposition of the points of difference which would have endangered their control, had all the C.I.O. unions been admitted together.

They stood pat for disunity and minority rule, rather than to take any chances with a majority vote of all unions represented together in a unified labor movement.

Congratulations to the Glass Workers

The glass workers are to be congratulated on the union progress which has made possible the national wage conference opening in Cincinnati on January 17.

At this conference, for the first time, all the major glass companies will be represented. Their officials will sit down with 45 national wage committeemen from union locals throughout the country, in an effort to work out a single national wage agreement.

Such an agreement can be of the greatest benefit to the industry and all who work in it, by bringing greater stability and uniformity of conditions. It will make possible the elimination of unfair competition and the leveling upward of wages and working conditions to assure all glass workers of a decent living.

The negotiations will be based on a thorough four-month study conducted jointly by union and company representatives, aided by Howard T. Colvin of the U. S. Labor Dept.

Such a constructive approach to improving conditions in the flat glass industry would not be possible without the existence of a strong industrial union, truly representative of all the workers in the industry.

Ninety-five per cent of the workers in the flat glass branch of the industry are organized in the Federation of Flat Glass Workers, and through the Glass Workers Organizing Committee of the C.I.O. a campaign is now under way to bring similar benefits to the 100,000 unorganized in other branches.

In building and maintaining their union, the glass workers have had to face serious internal difficulties which came near destroying their union. But with the aid of the C.I.O. they have overcome these difficulties to the extent that they can now present a solid, united front in these negotiations.

The issues involved and the plans for organizing all other branches of the industry through the Glass Workers Organizing Committee have been thoroughly discussed by the rank and file in their union meetings, and Chairman Paul W. Fuller of the G.W.O.C. has received the almost unanimous support of the membership through action of the local unions.

The G.W.O.C., already reporting new wage agreements where no union existed before, is now in a position to go forward, with the support of a united membership, to bring 100 per cent union organization, and the industrial stability and better conditions that come with it, to all branches of the glass industry.

Unions, Not Movies, For Her!

Marian Hepburn, sister of Katherine, the stage and screen star, is more interested in the C.I.O. than the movies. A student at Bennington College in Vermont, she's acting as a volunteer organizer in the Washington headquarters of the United Federal Workers of America, during the winter months.

Labor Answers Hepburn

Oshawa Voters Sweep Labor Slate Into Office

OSHAWA, Ontario — Remember Oshawa?

Remember the strike conducted by the United Automobile Workers in the General Motors plant here?

Remember the red-baiting statements of Premier Hepburn of Ontario, who insisted that the union was not wanted in town, that the C.I.O. organizers were a bunch of outside agitators who should be deported to the "states," that the U.A.W. was merely a dictatorial group which had seized control of the town's workers despite their desire to be let alone?

The people of Oshawa last week gave the lie to Hepburn's accusations.

Eight Labor Men Win

In municipal elections they named A. S. McLeese, a progressive candidate who is an honorary member of the auto union, as mayor. They elected six labor councilmen —four from the U.A.W.—thereby giving the labor group control of the city's governing body. Still another labor candidate was given a place on the board of education.

"Labor has gained a signal victory," commented C. H. Millard, president of Local 222 of the U.A.W. and one of the victorious councilmen. "The next year will be one of social legislation."

1,500 Garment Workers Cheer C.I.O. Aims, Deeds

NEW YORK—Fifteen hundred dressmakers, members of Local 22 of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union pledged cheering support to the Committee for Industrial Organization and its unionization campaigns following a speech by Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, last week.

The meeting was the first of five forum discussions on the C.I.O. Walls of the meeting place, a large hall in the Hotel Center, carried streamers with such slogans as: "Craft unionism failed, but S.W.O.C.'s industrial unionism organized 500,000 steel workers," and "Forward to labor unity through the C.I.O. program."

After describing the "Herculean task" which confronted the S.W.O.C. when it tackled the steel industry, Murray declared, "There is nothing nor anybody that is going to stop the C.I.O. because it is the kind of organization that the workers want and they are going to have it.

No "Treason" Pact

"No sensible man with any degree of wisdom, much or little, would negotiate a treaty that reflected treason. What the representatives of the A. F. of L. failed to say in their interviews with the press is what counts—what they forget to say is this, that the national unions affiliated with the C.I.O. which believe they should have the industrial form of organization could only receive the kind of industrial organization as circumscribed and bounded by the A. F. of L. as the A. F. of L. believes they ought to get.

"The A. F. of L. committee did not have the power to negotiate an agreement with us," Murray, who was chairman of the C.I.O. unity committee, maintained. "That power lies with the various international presidents who want to sacrifice industrial organization and labor unity to their jurisdictional claims."

Texas Unions Join C.I.O. As Frey Launches 'War'

HOUSTON, Tex.—"In honor of the visits of Mr. John P. Frey and Mr. Frank P. Morrison," in this city late in December, the local A. F. of L. restaurant and bartenders' unions left the federation and applied for C.I.O. affiliation, according to Barney Egan, C.I.O. regional director here.

While Frey was making a speech at the A. F. of L. Labor Temple about the C.I.O. being on the "way out," Egan was receiving the restaurant and bartenders' delegation.

Southern Congressmen Swing to Wage Bill

WASHINGTON—Southern Congressmen who voted against the wage-hour bill at the special session of Congress are in many cases feeling a change of heart, according to gathering evidence here.

The election to the Senate of Rep. Lister Hill, one of the few southerners who stood by the bill in December, has helped to influence a number of his colleagues from the southern states, it is believed. Holiday trips home convinced many of the legislators that the general public in their constituencies looked with considerable disfavor on the knifing of the bill.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

Clubs, Catch-Cries and Back-Stabs

MODERN warfare becomes more and more complicated. Time was when your enemy clubbed you on the head, if you didn't club him first, and that was all there was to it.

But nowadays, while the clubbing is going on, your enemy hires a demagogue to shout distracting nonsense into your face; while alleged friends slip up behind to jab poisoned pens into you—to inoculate you, they claim, against the bogeys created by the demagogue.

That at any rate has been the experience of the C.I.O.

In face of the severest opposition, it has succeeded beyond all expectation in the job to which it set its hand—namely to organize the unorganized into unions.

So the enemies of union organization, finding their bludgeonings of no avail, have brought into play against it every known device of lying demagoguery and propaganda.

Hague Hysterics

Anyone who heard the ravings of Mayor Hague and his associates, as broadcast from their recent anti-C.I.O. meeting, must have been amazed that human intelligence could suffer such assaults.

With fantastic irrelevancy, hot words were bellowed into space about Communism, atheism and a dozen other subjects that had nothing in the world to do with the issue of unionism and labor's rights.

Even had the words been strung together in such a way as to make sense, their meaning would have been the opposite of the truth.

But Hague cared not a jot that nearly every one of his jumbled assertions was demonstrably incorrect. His only concern was to shout certain emotion-creating words like Communism loudly and frequently enough to deafen ears that might otherwise be reached by words of reason and common sense.

Against such blustering balderdash, a logical defense is like arguing with the insane. About the only appropriate comment is that of the outraged reporter who rose and shouted, "Nuts!"

From Crudity To Subtlety

But the Hagues are comparatively simple folk to deal with. The catch-cries about Communism with which they seek to cover their anti-union aims and rotten politics are as transparent as cellophane.

Papers which value their circulation among people who can read and write are laying off the cruder forms of red-scare propaganda since their experience with it in the anti-Roosevelt campaign.

Politicians who find in it their only issue are also going down to defeat with monotonous regularity.

But the tactic of bogey-creating to divert attention from and, if possible, to disrupt union organization, has not been abandoned.

The job has simply been turned over to those subtler folk who can sidle up to labor with a smile of support and a poison-pen stilletto.

A New Age of "Discovery"

Any professing radical or liberal can now find a publisher if he will "discover" other radicals in the C.I.O. and make a menace out of them. Unlike the older, cruder red-scare artists, he will even be encouraged to give some factual camouflage to his distorted emphasis.

This presents a golden opportunity to the radical factionalists who hate opposing factions more than they love the cause they profess to serve.

There have always been radicals of every brand, as well as conservatives of all kinds, in labor unions. There are fully as many of them in A. F. of L. unions as in those of the C.I.O. They are created not by labor but by employers who impose conditions that cause revolt.

To direct constant attention to such minorities, in an effort to emphasize or create disruptive factionalism, is no whit different from the anti-Semitic tactics of a Hitler.

The same tactic of diverting attention from real issues by overemphasizing false ones has been repeatedly used by reaction in creating a mythical "Jewish conspiracy" or "Catholic menace."

As used against labor, its commonest form is fostering racial, national, religious and political animosities among workers when they most need unity and a common concentration on their real enemy.

C.I.O. Charges Hague Beclouds Jersey Issues

Hague's Record Shows Graft and Corruption

By McAlister Coleman

NEWARK, N. J.—Jersey City reaches like a hook towards New York, across the Hudson.

One of the chief industries of this heavily industrialized city has been that of hooking sweat-shops from under the protection of unionism in New York to the more genial atmosphere of Mayor Hague's Open Shop Heaven.

Hague's offensive against the C.I.O. is part of a $25,000 advertising campaign to solicit runaway factories under the slogan, "Jersey City Has Everything for Industry."

In a streamlined pamphlet, Hague tells his prospects that New Jersey has no state income tax, that there is no license or franchise tax on corporations incorporated outside the state, that electric light and power service is moderate in cost, and that there is a plentiful supply of "semi-skilled and unskilled labor" in Jersey City.

What Hague does not tell is that the cost of running this city of 320,000 is $30,000,000 a year, two or three times the tax of other cities the same size, or that the little fellows, the residential consumers, are paying the highest electric light rates in the country to Hague's ally, Thomas N. McCarter, president of the all-powerful Public Service.

Organizers "Roughed Up"

When a C.I.O. organizer comes into Jersey City on his lawful business of organizing sweated workers into unions, he is roughed up by Hague's police, who swarm across the town (there are 10 police to every 1,000 Jersey City citizens); he is served with an injunction issued by one of Hague's pliant vice chancellors, who are appointed by Hague's governors; he is either thrown out of town or into jail.

All this in the sacred name of Hague's "law and order" and on behalf of Hague's clients, Public Service, Colgate-Palmolive Peet Company, Standard Oil, Swift and Company, and a host of small textile, garment and chemical concerns whose workers manufacture necessities for millions of Americans at wages far below decent American standards of living.

Hague tells his henchmen, "I am the law." He does not tell about his real estate transactions in Deal, N. J., where he owns a luxurious summer home—transactions involving $100,000 at a time when he was receiving an official salary of $8,000 a year. When arrested by the investigators for the state legislature for his refusal to answer questions about his personal finances, he sought and obtained absolution from the highest court in Jersey. When the federal government sought to collect $60,000 income tax, he went to Theodore Brandle of the A. F. of L. building trades, whom he now denounces as a "racketeer," to borrow the money.

"Worse Than Germany"

Nor does Hague tell how thousands of Jersey workers come under the constant surveillance of an army of industrial spies so that, as one of them recently quoted by the conservative New York Herald-Tribune, said, "This place is worse than any town in Germany. They're afraid to talk and you can't blame them."

As proof that the workers want the protection of a genuine union, within a week after the forceful ejection of C.I.O. organizers by Hague's police strong-arms, the C.I.O. signed a contract with Jersey City's Standard Cap and Seal Co. This contract raised wages and shortened hours.

Leads Fight

Courtesy of Newark Evening News

William Carney, C.I.O. regional director for New Jersey, who leads the union organization campaign in Jersey City. Hague's speeches fail to disturb Carney's confidence that workers in Jersey City will continue to organize to fight low wages and long hours through the C.I.O.

C.I.O. ASKS INJUNCTION

NEWARK, N. J.—The C.I.O. has applied in federal district court here for an injunction to restrain Mayor Hague and his officials from their violent and lawless interference with the rights of the workers of Jersey City under the constitution of the United States and the Natl. Labor Relations Act.

Refuse Wage Cuts

NEW YORK—A conference of 400 representatives of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, C.I.O., voted opposition to any reduction of wages on the ground that it would "lead to disorganization and chaos."

Mayor Tries To Hide Right To Organize

By Henry C. Fleisher

NEWARK, N. J.—There is only one issue in Jersey City. It is not an issue of Communism or atheism, of "invasion" or terrorism.

The real issue in Jersey City is whether or not workers have the right to organize into unions of their own choosing.

That right to join unions, provided in the Wagner Act and upheld by the U. S. Supreme Court, will be used by the C.I.O. to organize the thousands of workers of Jersey City and to end the exploitation which has always been the keynote of Jersey City industrialism.

Warning that the C.I.O. has just begun to fight, William Carney, C.I.O. regional director for New Jersey, last week charged Mayor Hague's ballyhoo campaign against radicalism and Communism is nothing more than a subterfuge to protect Jersey City's employers from the necessity of paying wages of more than $3 to $5 a week.

"Let Hague and his political henchmen and corporation bosses understand clearly that the C.I.O. is here to do a job on behalf of the exploited workers of the state, and that it will not quit until that job is done," Carney declared last week.

"When Hague and his open shop employers attempt to divert the public's attention from this clear-cut issue by dragging in such matters as Communism, the radicalism of certain individuals, the conservatism of others, they simply show the weakness of their case.

C.I.O. Forges Ahead

"There is, in short, no defense that will hold water with right-minded men and women for the feudal labor conditions in Jersey City."

Already the C.I.O. has made considerable progress towards bringing unionism to Jersey City's industrial workers. Last week, while Hague and Sen. A. Harry Moore, his political puppet, were bragging that the C.I.O. would never come into the Hague bailiwick, C.I.O. leaders and officials of the American Can Co. were meeting in the office of the Natl. Labor Relations Board. Out of that meeting, it is expected, will come a contract covering several thousand Jersey City workers.

To understand the present rumpus being kicked up in Jersey City, as Carney pointed out in a radio speech over WEVD in New York last week, it is necessary to have a complete picture of the political and industrial history of the city and the state.

Hide-out for Corporations

"For years back," Carney declared, "New Jersey has been the traditional hide-out for corporations and industrial plants seeking to evade the laws of the neighboring states. Since the 1890's, when more than 200 holding companies were organized in this state with the benefit of the generous Jersey laws, New Jersey has been known as the 'Mother of Trusts' and has been noted throughout the country for its reactionary labor policies."

Governor Harold Hoffman, Republican, has been linked time and again to the Jersey City Democrat party. Hoffman, it is recalled, blasted away at the C.I.O. and at sitdown strikes during the early part of last year. Nevertheless, the C.I.O. has already organized some 150,000 workers throughout the state.

But there is a great deal more to be done.

In New Jersey factories at the present time, according to Edward J. Flynn, supervisor of the minimum wage division of the labor department, some 292,000 women and children are working for less than $17 a week. In small Jersey towns, 34,000 workers are earning less than $5 each week.

In Jersey City itself, many workers are paid as low as $3 weekly, according to the labor department's report, and the pay of 45,300 ranges between $5 and $7.99 a week.

"The one thing that Hague and the open-shoppers of his town have done for the underlying population is to impose a higher per capita tax for the $30,000,000 a year that it costs to run the city—higher than is paid by any other city of its size in the United States," Carney points out.

Fire-traps, Sweat-shops

"The people of Jersey City are compelled to live in fire-traps, high-rent houses, to work in sweat-shops, and to take sweat-shop wages.

"What does the C.I.O. stand for? What is the C.I.O. attempting to do? The C.I.O. is attempting to raise the wages, shorten the hours, and improve the conditions under which workers labor to increase the standard of living that workers might better provide the necessities of life for themselves and their families, that they may become better American citizens."

Trying to Stop the Flood!

Senate Committee To Study Charges

WASHINGTON—The LaFollette Committee of the U. S. Senate will study 40 affidavits submitted by the C.I.O. which show denial of civil liberties in Jersey City by the Hague administration, Robert Wolforth, the committee's secretary, informed Lee Pressman, C.I.O. general counsel.

The affidavits, submitted by Jersey City workers and C.I.O. organizers, tell of police action to prevent the distribution of union leaflets and bar the C.I.O. from hiring a meeting hall in the city.

Among the exhibits attached to the affidavits is a notice from Mayor Hague's office which is headed "important notice." It requires all veterans to "report at Armory tonight, December 28, at 8 o'clock sharp. This is important. Message from Mayor's office."

S. C. & M. W. PLANS DRIVE

NEW YORK — The State, County & Municipal Employes, C.I.O., plans to organize the 10,000 civil service employes in New York City's recently-created Department of Welfare. Methods of running the campaign were discussed at a meeting here attended by Pres. Abram Flaxer of the S.C.&M.W. and Allen Haywood, C.I.O. regional director.

C.I.O. Groups Ask Murphy For Special Session

Michigan C. I. O. Asks Passage of Relief Laws

LANSING, Mich.—Demands that Gov. Murphy call a special session of the Michigan legislature to cope with this state's knotty relief problem were made by 258 delegates to the C.I.O's state-wide legislative conference here last week.

An adequate relief program, with the burden of cost being shifted from the mass of workers through repeal of the state's sales tax, must be worked out by the legislature, the conference declared.

Other planks in the state program mapped out by the delegates, who came from every C.I.O. union in the state, call for a state wage-and-hour law, a "baby Wagner Act" and legislation designed to protect civil liberties of the people.

Germer Gives Keynote

Such legislation would prohibit local statutes which seek to bar distribution of union literature, provide the use of school and public halls for use by labor organizations, abolish private corporation "armies" and limit the power of the courts to grant injunctions in strikes.

Keynote of the meeting was provided in an opening speech by Adolph Germer, Michigan C.I.O. director.

"I don't care what Mr. Knudsen and Mr. Ford say," Germer declared. "We are engaged in a struggle in America between the haves and the have-nots.

"We are here today to bring the power of the common people to bear upon government to end the power of the reactionaries.

Reactionaries Fight Murphy

"Because Gov. Murphy did not let the streets of Flint run red with auto workers' blood, these same reactionaries are attempting to crucify him. But I have faith enough in the common people to know that they will return a decisive majority for him in the 1938 elections."

men's training schools, to be maintained by the U. S. Government but administered by a board on which the Commission and the union would be equally represented;

2. Denial of operating subsidies to steamship companies which ignore the provisions of the National Labor Relations Act;

3. Defeat of compulsory arbitration legislation for maritime unions;

4. Defeat of legislation allowing subsidized companies to build vessels in foreign shipyards with U. S. taxpayers' money.

Further violations of the Merchant Marine Act of 1936 were disclosed by Mervyn Rathborne, president of the A.R.T.A., in testimony before the Senate Committee. Rathborne called attention to the use by the Radiomarine Corp. of a "continuous discharge" book against radio operators on board ship. This device, similar to the Copeland "fink book" fought by the seamen during the last regular session of Congress, enables the company to employ a blacklist against men whom it finds "guilty" of union activity.

Hospital Workers Join C.I.O. Union

NEW YORK—Affiliation of two formerly A. F. of L. hospital workers' unions with the State, County and Municipal Workers of the C.I.O. was announced this week by President Abram Flaxer.

The two unions are the Association of Hospital and Medical Employes, with a membership of 1,500 nurses, physicians, laboratory and clinical technicians and clerical workers; and the Hospital Employes Union with about 800 members, which was formerly Local 171 of the Building Service Employes International, A. F. of L.

League Attacks Plan To Curb Seamen's Rights

WASHINGTON — Compulsory arbitration for seamen employed on American ships will result in "discord and dissension in the marine industry," E. L. Oliver, executive secretary of Labor's Non-Partisan League, warned here.

Oliver declared that attempts to broaden the Railway Labor Act to include the maritime industry would "sow the seeds of further disputes" rather than provide machinery for adjustment of grievances.

Even in the railway industry, Oliver recalled, it took eight years to make the act workable.

Bored Stiff!

This old gentleman tried hard to keep awake at Senate Unemployment Committee hearings. But statements of big businessmen were too much for him!

Marine Groups Meet To Plan National Unity

SAN FRANCISCO—The drive for a National Maritime Federation will be pushed closer to realization next week when the national unity conference of unlicensed seamen's organizations meets here Monday, January 17.

Seamen from the east, west, Great Lakes and Gulf coasts representing 65,000 union members will attend the conference to lay the ground for the formation of one national industrial union for all unlicensed seamen.

This is a goal which has been dreamed about for years by progressive seamen, say officials of the National Maritime Union, one of the unions active in planning the conference.

Other unions to be represented are the Atlantic coast Inland Boatmen's Union, the Pacific coast I.B.U.; the Marine Cooks & Stewards Union of the Pacific; Marine Firemen, Oilers, Watertenders & Wipers, Pacific coast; and the Federated Fishermen's Council.

NEW YORK — Sentiment throughout the country is more than two-to-one for wage and hour legislation, according to a poll conducted by Dr. George Gallup, director of the American Institute of Public opinion.

Business Men Show Lack Of Ideas on Depression

WASHINGTON—Big Business, usually eloquent in its demands on government, had little more than "faith and confidence" to propose when two of its leaders, Pres. William Knudsen of General Motors and Lammot duPont, took the stand at hearings of the Senate's unemployment committee here.

Knudsen, claiming that his company's raise of prices a few months ago had nothing to do with the recent fall of auto sales, brought out the fact that at the beginning of December the G.M. surplus, consisting of cash and inventory, had risen to $452,547,000—an increase of $54,000,000 over the same time in 1936.

Asked by Sen. Byrnes, (D., S. C.) why the surplus wasn't used to stall off the rainy day period, the half-a-million dollar a year auto executive replied:

"Senator, when you have a payroll of $400,000,000 a year, $50,000,000 is just small change."

Knudsen was asked what he'd suggest the government do.

"I'm not in a position to say," he replied.

Lammot duPont presented an even sorrier spectacle to those who expected constructive advice from the auto, chemical and munitions baron. In a prepared statement duPont criticized such New Deal measures as the capital gains and surplus profits taxes, but under question revealed apparent lack of knowledge about either government or business.

The N.A.M. Knew Nothing!

Questioned about his recent speech to the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers, during which he launched a tirade of abuse against the administration, duPont squirmed.

"I knew more about it than the people I was talking to," he replied.

In sharp contrast with recent automobile company publicity statements, Pres. Homer Martin of the United Auto Workers, C.I.O., pointed out that 100,000 workers are now jobless in that industry. Chrysler, he said, has laid off 65,000 of its 80,000 employes, and Ford has dropped 40,000 of its estimated 90,000 employes in the Detroit area.

Jobless single men are being crowded into flop houses, he declared, and Detroit is confronted with relief allowances of $1.62 a week and breadlines which extend for blocks.

General Motors Paid $8,000,000 To 56 Big Shots

WASHINGTON — Fifty-six executives of the General Motors Corp. received a combined salary of $8,084,264 during 1936!

Highest paid executive in the United States during 1936 was Alfred Sloan, then president of the motor company, figures released by the Ways and Means Committee of the House reveal. He was paid $561,311 in salary and bonus, an average of well over $10,000 each week.

William Knudsen of General Motors was paid $459,878, while seven others from the same corporation were included in the $300,000 a year and over class.

Fifty-six General Motors executives received more than $50,000 a year, and 336 were paid over $15,000 a year.

Thomas J. Watson of Intl. Business Machines received salary checks totaling $342,008.

Walter Chrysler got $200,700, while high ranking names in the steel industry included: Ernest Weir, $143,000 from Weirton and Great Lakes Steel; Tom Girdler, Republic Steel, $174,999; Eugene Grace, Bethlehem Steel, $180,000, and Charles Schwab, Bethlehem Steel, $150,000; Myron Taylor, of U. S. Steel, $166,862.

James H. Rand, Jr., formulator of the Mohawk Valley Plan for streamlined strike breaking, received $118,371.

United Furniture Workers Win Indiana Election

BLOOMINGTON, Ind.—The young United Furniture Workers of America, C.I.O., won another important victory here when employes of the Showers Bros. Furniture Co. voted their preference for the C.I.O. union by a 443-230 margin.

The balloting, conducted by the Natl. Labor Relations Board, was a severe defeat for the Intl. Upholsterers' Union of the A. F. of L. Previously, 50 members of the A. F. of L's Firemen and Oilers Union had swung to the C.I.O. ranks.

One factor which worked against the A. F. of L., according to C.I.O. leaders here, was the federation officials' opposition to the wage and hour bill. Despite efforts of the Illinois State Federation to use a postponement of the election to marshal votes for the Upholsterers, the workers moved steadily towards the C.I.O.

Oil Workers Speed Drive in Texas

PORT ARTHUR, Tex.—The Oil Workers International Union, C.I.O. is making rapid gains in its drive to organize workers in Texas petroleum centers, despite efforts of A. F. of L. leaders and the companies to halt the campaign.

The federation has charted a handful of federal locals, but C.I.O. leaders in this area assert that their unions exist almost entirely on paper.

The Magnolia Oil Co., a subsidiary of Standard Oil of New York, has established a "federated employees association," which it claims is independent. Actually, however, workers point out that it is nothing but a revised edition of the company union, aimed at getting by the provisions of the Wagner Act.

Labor Board hearings will soon be held on C.I.O. charges against the Magnolia concern, the Humboldt Oil Co., and Puroil. Sinclair has already signed a contract, and at the present time one is being negotiated with the Shell Co.

WASHINGTON—The Social Security Board has ready for distribution a motion picture feature showing how unemployment insurance works, and the steps applicants must take to receive their payments.

ON UNFAIR LIST

WASHINGTON—The Oil Workers International Union, C.I.O., has placed the following products on its "We Don't Patronize" list: Puroil gasoline, produced by the Pure Oil Co. and distributed and marketed by the Hickok Oil Co.; Conoco gas and oil, made by the Continental Oil Co.; and Amoco gas and oil produced by the American Oil Co.

CORRECTION

The period in which the C.I.O. won 148 of 172 Labor Board elections in the New York region was erroneously given as seven instead of 26 months, in an item in THE C.I.O. NEWS of Dec. 15, 1937. In the first 19 of these months, however, only nine elections were held.

No Boycott Of C.I.O. Lumber

A SELECTION FROM HUNDREDS OF PHOTOS SHOWING C. I. O. LUMBER BEING WORKED ON ALL PORTLAND JOBS.

DECEMBER—1937

The "boycott" organized by a few leaders of the A. F. of L. is collapsing, even in Portland, Oreg., where the battle between the craft officials and the Intl. Woodworkers of America has been the sharpest. C.I.O. leaders in the northwest charge that a handful of federation leaders have agreed to help lumber mill employers chisel wages in exchange for A. F. of L. control of these workers. Thousands of members of the Carpenters union have signed petitions declaring their willingness to work on C.I.O. as well as A. F. of L. lumber and opposing the boycott as interfering with the right of workers to choose their own union.

Mine Workers Prepare For Greatest Convention

WASHINGTON—From every coal section of the United States and Canada delegates were gathering January 25 in Washington for the biennial convention of the United Mine Workers of America, C.I.O.

Close to 2,000 people, representing the union's half million members, meet at the Rialto Theater here for what will be one of the most important sessions in the U.M.W.A.'s half-century history.

Reports on the union's condition and the progress of the Committee for Industrial Organization, of which it is the largest unit, will be made at the meeting.

"The past two years have been eventful in this country, with the United Mine Workers of America playing a prominent part in labor, economic, political and national affairs," declares the United Mine Workers Journal.

Membership At Peak

"It is gratifying to state that the United Mine Workers of America is in the best condition in its history. There is peace in the entire industry. Wages have been increased and the hours of labor have been reduced.

"Working conditions throughout the industry have been vastly improved. The organization has been extended until it now covers every mining field in the country. Our membership is at its peak. We have contracts in both the bituminous and anthracite branches of the industry that run for more than another year.

"Members of the union enjoy greater freedom and privileges than ever before. There is perfect harmony in our ranks. There is deep respect for and loyalty to the leadership of the union.

"The mission of the union has not yet been fulfilled, but gigantic strides of progress have been made."

Highlights of Year

In the last year the union has renewed its contract with the operators, has pushed its organization into "bloody" Harlan county, Ky., and through District 50 has organized thousands of workers in the gas, coke and coal products industries, so that at the present time members of the U.M.W.A. handle not only the mining of coal but the manufacturing of large numbers of its derivative products.

Only recently the union moved into new Washington headquarters in its own building, formerly the University Club of Washington.

The convention, originally scheduled to be held in Constitution Hall here, was moved to the Rialto Theater, when the Daughters of the American Revolution, owners of the hall, cancelled a previous agreement to rent the building to the U.M.W.A. The D.A.R. refused to alter its decision despite pleas from the Washington Board of Trade, which feared the city might lose the $300,000 to be spent by the delegates if the convention were moved to another city.

District 50 Holds First Convention

WASHINGTON—With a 15-month record of 87 contracts to its credit, District 50 of the United Mine Workers of America will hold its first convention here starting January 24. The three-day session will be separate from the biennial meeting of the U.M.W.A., which is being held in the city at the same time.

Nelson

District 50, composed of gas, by-product coke and chemical workers, has made enormous strides since it launched an intensive organization campaign little more than a year ago, Pres. James Nelson pointed out. About 100 delegates, coming from all parts of the country, will attend the sessions.

The U.M.W. district at present has 109 locals in 21 states, and a membership of more than 15,000.

"The district was first interested only in organizing coal process workers," Nelson said, "but it was discovered that the division between coal tar and non-coal-tar chemical workers was artificial. The same company often manufactured both—in the same plant.

Prominent Speakers

"Accordingly the district decided to follow the corporate structure of the chemical industry itself, and accept all chemical workers into membership."

Pres. John L. Lewis of the U.M.W. and Pres. Nelson of the district will address the convention. On the speakers list are Reps. Maverick and Healey; John Brophy, C.I.O. director; E. L. Oliver of Labor's Non-Partisan League; Edwin S. Smith of the Natl. Labor Relations Board, and several others.

Three More C.I.O. Victories

NEW YORK—The C.I.O. chalked up three more labor board victories in the maritime industry this week.

The Natl. Maritime Union won an election among unlicensed personnel of the American-South African lines, according to a report by Mrs. Elinore Herrick, N.L.R.B. director here.

The tanker barge crews of the Mexican Petroleum Co. named the Inland Boatmen's Union as their sole collective bargaining agent, while licensed officers on 10 tankers operated by the Sinclair Navigation Co. chose the Marine Engineers' Beneficial Assn.

CIO Calls Proposed Changes in Wagner Act Anti-Labor

WASHINGTON — Action by all C.I.O. affiliated unions against the threat of amendment to the National Labor Relations Act was urged in a circular letter sent by Director John Brophy to all national and international presidents, regional directors, local industrial unions and industrial union councils.

The dangers in the proposed amendments to the act were pointed out in the letter, which said they "could easily have the effect of converting the National Labor Relations Board into an instrument for the suppression of the labor movement, making the board a weapon in the hands of the employers instead of labor."

The most serious threat to the act is contained in the Vandenberg bill which calls for sweeping changes in the act that would cripple its administration in the interests of labor, according to the Brophy letter. This bill is now in the Senate Committee on Education and Labor.

City Subway Workers Ask Union Recognition

NEW YORK—If employes of the Independent Subway System, owned by the city of New York, are denied the right of collective bargaining through a union of their own choosing, the Transport Workers, C.I.O. affiliate, will launch a drive for an amendment to the State Labor Relations Act, union officials declared.

The Board of Transportation, in charge of the city's subway system, has refused to deal with the Transport Workers' Union, and maintains that the labor board has no authority to order it to bargain collectively with any union, on the ground that it is operated as a governmental function.

1,500 Lumberjacks Join C.I.O. Union in Alabama

CULLMAN, Ala.—Some 1,500 lumber workers in Alabama have joined the C.I.O. Woodworkers union, in addition to hundreds who have signed up in Mississippi and Georgia, according to B. T. Garner, C.I.O. representative.

He said that there were about 10,000 mills in the South cutting yellow pine or soft wood timber.

Garner was kidnapped along with Yelverton Cowherd, C.I.O. regional director in Alabama, some time ago while they were engaged in organizing work in Laurel, Miss.

TEAMSTERS AGREE

NEW YORK—A. F. of L. Teamsters in New York Local 282 will do nothing to prevent the C.I.O. Lumber Workers Local 105, International Woodworkers Union, from trying to get improved contracts with 70 Brooklyn lumber yards, according to an agreement reached between the two unions.

Seamen's Unity Meeting Calls For National Council

SAN FRANCISCO—Unity of organization among American marine workers moved nearer to realization when 350 delegates, representing 100,000 unlicensed seamen, at the National Maritime Unity Conference called by the C.I.O. urged formation of a national council of seamen's unions.

Greeted with congratulations from John L. Lewis and John Brophy, chairman and director of the C.I.O., the delegates, who had converged on San Francisco from all parts of the nation, described plans for a national council as first step toward eventual unity in a single national industrial union.

Union groups represented at the meeting included the Atlantic, Gulf and Great Lakes divisions of the Natl. Maritime Union, Inland Boatmen's Unions from both the Atlantic and the Pacific, the Marine Cooks and Stewards and the Pacific Coast Marine Firemen, Oilers, Wipers and Watertenders.

Rathborne Asks United Front

Mervyn Rathborne, secretary of the C.I.O.'s Maritime Committee, described the C.I.O.'s aims in the maritime industry in a keynote speech to the delegates. He stressed the fact that the C.I.O. believes there should be no interference in the autonomy or local business affairs of the organizations affiliated with the national federation.

At the same time Rathborne pointed to the need of a united front of all labor in the maritime industry for better conditions, higher wages, shorter hours and protection of union interests.

Joseph Curran, president of the N.M.U., whose membership has grown to nearly 50,000, was elected chairman of the convention. Earl King, now serving a frame-up murder sentence at San Quentin, was named honorary chairman.

Unity Impossible in A. F. of L.

Curran told the delegates that the eyes of the country's labor movement are focussed on the meeting here, and that "as maritime labor goes, so will go every labor union in the nation."

Harry Bridges, west coast C.I.O. director and head of the Intl. Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, declared that maritime labor unity through the A. F. of L. is out of the question.

"That possibility has been explored thoroughly," he said. "We must go ahead through the C.I.O."

Bridges urged the seagoing unions to resist any attempt to saddle the maritime workers with legislation similar to the Railway Labor Act, whose "delays, technicalities and complex machinery" would be used to break union strength.

M.E.B.A. Urges Joint Action

SAN FRANCISCO—The Marine Engineers' Beneficial Assn. opened its 62nd annual convention here this week, its first national meeting since the union, composed of licensed ship officers, joined the C.I.O. several months ago.

Headed by Pres. Samuel Hogan and Sec.-Treas. A. L. Jones, the delegates from the Atlantic, Gulf and Pacific Coasts opened the first convention on the west coast in the organization's history by proposing a united legislative front of all marine unions to prevent dangerous legislation.

They heard Harry Bridges, western C.I.O. chief, warn that the maritime plans being drafted in Washington spelled doom for future economic action on the part of the marine unions.

Favor Political Activity

Bridges ridiculed assertions that labor is "power drunk" in the maritime industry and called for further united political action on the part of labor.

"We are well on our way, in spite of a few troubles, to progress and advancement," Bridges said.

H. P. Melnikow, head of the Pacific Coast Labor Bureau, ridiculed the "mysterious Capt. ——" who last week had charged American seamen with drunkenness, lack of discipline and "Communism."

Other speakers at the convention included Sam Kagel of the Pacific Labor Bureau, an M.E.B.A. member, Pres. James Engstrom of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific and Robert Meers, New Orleans representative of the Natl. Maritime Union.

Resolutions passed by the convention called for defeat of compulsory arbitration legislation for the maritime industry and for labor representation on the federal maritime commission.

Bay State Unionists Push New Legislative Program

BOSTON, Mass.—Three hundred delegates from C.I.O. and A. F. of L. unions, as well as from a number of civic societies, endorsed a state legislative program designed to protect labor and civil rights.

Passage of the child labor amendment, repeal of the Bay State teachers oath bill, passage of the wage-hour and Schwellenbach-Allen relief measures and repeal of the state sales tax were called for by the delegates.

Michael Widman, Jr., C.I.O. regional director, called for strengthening of the Massachusetts Labor's Non-Partisan League.

Frank Reel, representing the secretary-treasurer of the Massachusetts Federation of Labor, appealed for continued united action by federation and C.I.O. unions.

C.I.O. Die Cast Union Gains in New Jersey

NEWARK, N. J.—Union workers at the Grey Casting Company, Newark, N. J., have asked their local officials to negotiate an agreement with the management.

This shop and the Aluminum Corporation in Garwood are the only two plants left with which the local, an affiliate of the C.I.O. National Association of Die Casting Workers, has not won signed contracts during the past three years.

On Guard

A timely and vigorous protest by Chairman John L. Lewis of the C.I.O. against the order removing unemployed from WPA payrolls as soon as they become eligible under the unemployment compensation laws, has been effective in securing postponement of application of this order until benefits actually begin to be paid.

The C.I.O. pointed out that persons thus removed from the relief rolls would undergo severe hardships during the waiting period before unemployment compensation was paid.

It would have meant in many cases, Lewis declared, "that persons who desperately need funds they receive from WPA employment will be without any income at all for a large portion of the three to six weeks of the waiting period for unemployment benefits."

There is still need for continued protest against what Chairman Lewis calls "a further step toward pauperization of our people in this new unemployment crisis," since compensation in the majority of cases will be less than the already inadequate wages the jobless receive from WPA.

But the results already obtained, following the C.I.O. protest, indicate the invaluable service which an alert and modern labor movement like the C.I.O. renders not only to the members of its affiliated unions but to the general interests of all working people.

Unlike the narrower craft movements that have preceded it, the C.I.O. does not consider its obligations at an end when it has served the sectional interests of certain groups of workers still employed and paying dues.

It considers itself equally responsible for the protection of its members when they become unemployed; and in a larger sense, it accepts the responsibility of representing the interests of all working people in the councils of the nation.

A couple of years ago, American labor as a whole had only the services in Washington of a craft-minded set-up quarreling and quibbling over sectional interests, and letting the general interests of labor go by the board.

But today, in the C.I.O. backed by its four million members, American labor has an ever-vigilant guardian of its interests, demanding jobs at adequate wages for all unemployed; pushing constantly for all kinds of remedial legislation; and warning against every stealthy approach to shackle and rob labor, through legislative attacks on the seamen, through proposed amendments of the Labor Relations Act, or in any other way.

Lewis Urges Farm Action

ORGANIZATION WOULD AID ENTIRE NATION

WASHINGTON—Because farmers have been "helpless and defenseless" through lack of organization, they should form one strong national organization to protect their interests and cooperate with organized labor to aid the common people, John L. Lewis, chairman of the C.I.O., declares in an article in the current issue of Country Home, magazine for farmers.

Such a united organization, working together with the C.I.O., would have "enormous influence," the article states. Naturally, he continues, "one of the by-products of such a union of farmers and white collar and industrial labor would be political."

Groups Need Mutual Aid

"Labor wants a strong, unified agriculture, and agriculture, on the basis of labor's clear record as a friend of the farmer, should want and help the creation of a strong, unified labor. If we are strong, we will be the better able to cooperate.

"The white collar groups, taught by distress the dangers of not being organized, are rapidly unionizing. Industry already is strongly organized. It remains only for the farmers to form a solid front and stand shoulder to shoulder with the unions."

Lewis predicted that "the influence of such a union would be tremendous.

Would Bring Great Gains

"Conflicts which have militated against full accomplishment would be eliminated. We have seen national legislation harried and defeated by the confusion and disagreement among various farm groups. A unified system or organization would make all the past achievements of agricultural groups seem small.

"I do not advocate such an organization as a device for getting more money from the Federal Government. That is short-sighted. I think that a farmers' organization similar to the C.I.O. should devote itself to the correction and control of distribution and marketing."

Labor-Baiters Acclaim Stolberg

To the Editor:

In the lobby of the hotel at which the Jersey City Chamber of Commerce was meeting the other night to acclaim Frank Hague, the mayor of that Sweat-Shop Heaven, labor-baiting bosses were quoting with smug satisfaction, the stories about the C.I.O. written by Benjamin Stolberg.

They were using these articles as weapons for the further beating down of the already cruelly low wages of women and children working in Jersey City sweatshops. They were also using Mr. Stolberg's tittle-tattle, picked up at luncheons with his labor friends, to bolster their attacks upon the C.I.O.

I have always been a believer in the right of free speech and I am now in the midst of a struggle to maintain that right in New Jersey. I am not maintaining that Mr. Stolberg should, in any way, be restricted in his freedom of utterance, but I do insist that his present action in giving publicity to the backstairs talk which comes to him without a documentation or any other means of verification is the most insidious attack upon the good and welfare of the rank and file of decent American working men and working women that can well be conceived.

I trust that in the future, laborites everywhere will regard Mr. Stolberg as no better than any other industrial spy.

Frisco Local Raps Anti-C.I.O. Slanders

SAN FRANCISCO—Eight thousand members of Local 1-6 of the Intl. Longshoremen and Warehousemen's Union, C.I.O., protested to the San Francisco News and the Scripps-Howard syndicate against attacks on the C.I.O. by Benjamin Stolberg in a recent series of articles.

The resolution called upon the paper to "immediately desist from these attacks," which it described as slanderous and red-baiting.

The author of the series "appears to have a diseased political mind and would make the C.I.O. a political battlefield to further his pet theories," the local stated.

Why Peace Talks Failed

What C.I.O. and A. F. of L. Proposals Meant

(From statement by Charles P. Howard, president of the Intl. Typographical Union, in the January issue of the "Typographical Journal")

Under the C.I.O. proposal "all organized workers at once would have become affiliated with the A. F. of L. Differences over jurisdiction would have been adjudicated within the organization as they have in the past.

"The principle of industrial organization would have been recognized in industries, which the C.I.O. expressed willingness to enumerate by agreement, where effort to organize under the craft plan had failed and organization has been accomplished under the industrial plan adopted by the C.I.O. . . .

"Harmony and unity would have been re-established and control of the A. F. of L. placed in the hands of the unified membership. Control of the A. F. of L. by a clique of members of the Executive Council, whose desire to continue their control overshadows every other consideration, would have been destroyed.

"The real reason the A. F. of L. rejected peace proposals is that this small clique would have jeopardized its control of the labor movement.

What A. F. of L. Proposed

"Acceptance of the proposal of the A. F. of L. on the other hand," Howard continues, "would have resulted in re-affiliation only of the 10 suspended International Unions under a condition where claims of jurisdiction could be made against these unions for members added to their ranks as a result of the C.I.O. organization campaign.

"The other 22 International Unions would have been torn asunder by attempting to apportion the members to existing unions claiming jurisdiction. Local industrial unions would have been destroyed as a result of claim of jurisdiction.

"Unions which refused to divide their membership in accordance with decisions upon jurisdiction as rendered by the small combination which controls the Executive Council would have become 'independent.' Much of the progress that has been made in organizing unorganized workers would have been destroyed."

Why Unity Hasn't Come Through

(From an editorial in "The Advance," official organ of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America)

The A. F. of L. Committee of Three, appointed by the executive council, said in effect to our (the C.I.O.) delegation:

1. Let the original 10 dissident, C.I.O.-founding unions return to the A. F. of L., with "no questions asked," and on terms in nowise defined; and—

2. As for the 22 other international unions, founded by the C.I.O. since the suspension of the original 10 unions, let them, each one separately, proceed to negotiate terms of affiliation with the A. F. of L. internationals which claim jurisdiction . . . where these C.I.O. unions operate.

In less elaborate English, it all meant that the A. F. of L. was willing to return to the order of things which obtained before the C.I.O. came into being and to go not a step from that old position.

The 10 suspended unions were, like the prodigal sons, to return to "their father's home" and enjoy peace within the gates. The 22 others, representing the majority of the membership of the C.I.O., would, alone and deserted by those who had helped bring them into being, be exposed to the jurisdictional warfare of such experts as are the leaders of the Brotherhood of Carpenters & Joiners, the Intl. Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, the Intl. Assn. of Machinists and the others concerned.

Stripped of the embellishments calculated for the consumption of the innocents, the A. F. of L. strategy was not to meet half-way the C.I.O. proposals to bring about the unity of all organized labor, but a new mask for the old intention to divide the C.I.O. . . .

The C.I.O. could not very well make itself part of a game in which, for one thing, the millions of workers both organized and yet to be organized, stand nothing to gain and all things to lose.

The enormous wave of enthusiasm and confidence aroused by the C.I.O. would have been dissipated and betrayed by the abject surrender implied in the A. F. of L. move-not-an-inch peace position. . . .

There can be little doubt that the die-hard craft unions will be sure to shut their doors in the faces of the new industrial unions, and leave nothing for them to do but to continue their activity outside the A. F. of L. That is what the A. F. of L. proposal implies. . . .

Of course, it is entirely regrettable that the negotiations collapsed. We want unity. But we want unity that will make it possible to continue the mass organization of the American wage earners which was so well begun by the organizing drives under the leadership of the C.I.O. and its affiliated unions.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

Servility on Ebb

AMERICA'S overstuffed shirts, like the princess in the fairy tale, have recently detected a small pea under the stacked feather mattresses on which they lie.

It is a definite decrease in the servility of the working people with whom they come in contact, since the C.I.O. has spread union organization among millions who never knew what union protection meant before.

A union man has to work for a living, but he does not have to cringe before a domineering boss or an arrogant customer lest their passing whim may cost him his job.

Under a union agreement, a grievance committee can take up his case with the employer and determine whether his discharge is justified or not. And if he is fired for union activity, there is recourse under the labor relations act.

Insulting the Sailors

So now the political and intellectual flunkies of the rich are seething with synthetic indignation.

Union seamen are at present the chief target for their insults, because this fits in with the campaign to rush legislation against marine labor through Congress.

Papers and magazines pick up and repeat again and again the drunken ravings (usually disproved later and "corrected" inconspicuously in a later issue) of some spiteful passengers, whose remarks are doctored by shipowners' publicity men to fit some phase of their anti-union propaganda.

Then an alleged and unnamed ship's captain is actually given the protection of a Senate committee to spew forth in secret an unbelievable mess of lying and ridiculous slander against the men who make a living at sea.

Too Bad For 'Toots'

The Copeland committee's unidentified misinformant told horrendous tales about ship's waiters who talked of unionism to passengers, regardless of the effect this might have on the digestions of dyspeptic profiteers—

He told of bon vivants "intimidated" into gulping their cocktails lest they be late for dinner—

He told of crews who wanted ice cream and fresh milk, just like their "betters"; of stewardesses who displayed an actual interest in ship's movies—

And—oh shame!—of a waiter who referred to an overfed dame as "Toots!"

A Barber With His Own Opinions

But seamen are not the only target. Union taxi-drivers, janitors, waiters, store clerks and barbers are among the many groups now under magazine attack for insufficient servility.

One writer waxes furious over a barber, whom he reports speaking to customers against a political candidate favored by his boss. Asked if his employer didn't object, he is said to have replied:

"The boss don't like it. He's for the other candidate. But what can he do about it? Ain't I in the union now?"

Americans Have A Word for It

All of this is sheer bolshevism to the over-willing flunkies of the over-stuffed. But to every-day Americans there is a more old-fashioned word for it—democracy.

Deep down in them somewhere, most Americans have a notion that a boss may buy your labor-power for a wage, but the price does not include your soul, your vote, your thoughts, nor your expressed opinions.

If unionism is making it easier for American workers to act, to speak and to vote like free citizens of a free country, instead of fawning serfs, millions of democratic Americans will cry, "More power to it!"

S.W.O.C. WINS POLL

RICHMOND, Va.—With only two opposing votes, the Steel Workers Organizing Committee won a labor board election at the Richmond (Va.) Structural Steel Co., Inc. Negotiations for a sole bargaining contract are under way.

Congress To Pass Wage-Hour Bill, League Predicts

WASHINGTON — Enactment of the wage-and-hour bill at the present session of Congress "now seems assured," Labor's Non-Partisan League predicted here last week.

"House leaders are now confident that, once the bill is again brought on the floor, there will be sufficient votes to pass it," the League's statement continued.

"Foes of the legislation were able to muster only the slim margin of 18 votes in the special session to send it back to the Labor Committee. That treacherous action can and must be reversed this winter."

Bill in Committee

Pointing out that the bill is now in the House Labor Committee and that it must later pass through the Rules Committee—which last session held it for six months—the League urges labor to be wary of overconfidence.

Supporters of the legislation are asked to communicate with the House Labor Committee and demand quick action on the measure. The committee's members include: Norton, N. J.; Ramspeck, Ga.; Griswold, Ind.; Keller, Ill.; Dunn, Pa.; Wood, Mo.; Randolph, W. Va.; Lesinski, Mich.; Gildea, Pa.; Cureley, N. Y.; Thomas, Tex.; Dixon, Ohio; Fitzgerald, Conn.; Allen, Del.; Schneider, Wis.; Iglesias, Puerto Rico; Welch, Calif.; Hartley, N. J.; Lambertson, Kans.; Smith, Maine; Barden, N. C.; and Barton, N. Y.

Federal Boatmen Seek Wage Lifts

WASHINGTON — Wage raises for 1,800 workers on federal government dredges and lighthouse tenders and on other federal harbor craft, became a possibility following an interview between Commissioner Harold King of the United States Lighthouse Service and a delegation from the Inland Boatmen's Union, C.I.O.

The commissioner admitted harbor workers are underpaid and indicated efforts would be made to secure provisions for increases in the present budget.

'Protect The Wagner Act,' New C.I.O. Pamphlet

WASHINGTON—Protect the Wagner Act, a leaflet just issued by the legal department of the C.I.O., follows up a circular letter addressed to all C.I.O. affiliates calling attention to the dangers in the proposed amendments to the Act now threatening in Congress, and urging methods to halt such attempts to destroy it.

Copies of "Protect the Wagner Act" may be obtained by writing to the national office of the C.I.O., 1106 Connecticut Ave., N. W., Washington, D. C. The leaflet is priced at 5 cents per copy, $10 per thousand.

Pennsylvania F. of L. Refuses to Oust C.I.O.

HARRISBURG, Pa. — William Green's order to expel all C.I.O. unions from the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor was defied in a resolution passed with only a few dissenting votes at a special convention held in Harrisburg.

Declaring that such action "would destroy the effectiveness of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor and divide our forces, which should be united, as they are now," the resolution reaffirmed the decision taken at the last regular convention "which provided for unity and cooperation of all groups within the Federation."

The convention further recommended in the resolution that the president of the State Federation appoint a committee to appear before the A. F. of L. executive council and make the position of the state body clear.

S.W.O.C. LODGES MEET

INDIANA HARBOR, Ind. —Three hundred delegates from lodges of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee in the Chicago area last week heard reports on the S.W.O.C. convention by Van A. Bittner, regional director, and Nicholas Fontecchio, district director.

The delegates passed resolutions affirming their confidence in the C.I.O. and the S.W.O.C., and asked the government to continue its efforts to provide workers with "industrial, economic and social democracy."

Hague in Hot Spot As Union Drive Gains

JERSEY CITY, N. J.—The battle of Jersey City moved into new fields this week as the C.I.O. pushed its campaign to organize thousands of exploited workers and new charges of graft, corruption and vote-stealing centered on the city's self-appointed "savior," Mayor Frank Hague.

Highlights of the week in north Jersey included the following developments:

1. A mass meeting of more than 1,000 C.I.O. members in nearby Newark, who pledged to aid the campaign to end $3 a week wages in Hague's territory.

2. A series of C.I.O. "encircling" meetings in other Hudson County cities, despite Hague efforts to reach out from his Jersey City stronghold to curb union meetings in other parts of the county.

3. A warning to Pres. William Green of the American Federation of Labor by the heads of three A. F. of L. internationals that the Federation stands on dangerous ground in allowing itself to be used as a Hague tool to fight the C.I.O.

Veterans Protest

4. A denial by the New Jersey Veterans of Foreign Wars that members of their organization are participating in Hague's anti-C.I.O. campaign with official backing of the state body.

5. A charge to Hudson County's Republican superintendent of elections that "we do not live in a democracy in Hudson County; we live in an absolute autocracy under an absolute dictator."

Similar statements were made at the Newark C.I.O. meeting by John R. Longo, secretary to the Holy Name Society of Our Lady of Sorrows Church in Jersey City. Longo —who said he was a Democrat, but "not the Fascist type of Mayor Hague"—declared that the Jersey City mayor is making himself "a national menace by separating Jersey City from the rest of the country. His arrogance should result in united action by Democrats and Republicans of Hudson to prevent a Hitler of Hudson."

William Carney, C.I.O. regional director for New Jersey, described Jersey City workers as "prisoners of despair in a supposedly free America" who are "living in abject poverty under a reign of terror that would be hard to parallel even in the industrial jungles of the deep South.

A. F. of L. Heads Warn Green

Objection to A. F. of L. cooperation with Hague to fight the C.I.O. came from Pres. Jerome Davis of the American Federation of Teachers, Pres. Isidore Laderman of the Intl. Ladies Handbag, Pocketbook and Novelty Workers Union and Pres. A. Philip Randolph of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters.

Urging Green to take steps to have Hague's honorary membership in the A. F. of L. revoked, the three A. F. of L. international leaders wrote that "today Mayor Hague pays lip service to the A. F. of L., but whenever it serves his political purposes and the needs of his open-shop backers, he will suppress the A. F. of L. as ruthlessly as he is fighting the C.I.O."

Wisconsin C.I.O. Acts to Protect Labor Statutes

MILWAUKEE—C.I.O. unions in Wisconsin met here this week to mobilize additional strength behind demands for labor and farm legislation, and for protection of progressive laws already on the state's statute books.

While 220 officers and members of legislative committees of 100 local unions were insisting that the Farmer-Labor Progressive Federation allow the affiliation of farm, labor and other groups as organizations, the executive committee of the state's C.I.O. Industrial Union Council lashed out at recent decisions of the state courts which have damaged the state's labor relations law.

Declaring that Judge Reis's decisoin in the Freeman Shoe Co. case distorts the meaning of the state labor relations act to the point where the employer is given the right "to choose what union he will bargain with, even if this is against the wish of the majority of his employes." The committee called for amendments to the act to make it "foolproof against such interpretations."

Speaking to the legislative conference, Gunnar Mickelson, C.I.O. regional director, declared that not only had the labor act been twisted into an instrument to protect company unions, but also the courts had killed the state's "little TVA act."

Arrest of Jap Labor Leaders Brings Protests

WASHINGTON — An American labor campaign of protest against the Japanese government's recent arrest of 372 citizens, including Kanju Kato, labor leader, was started last week in the form of a telegram to Japanese Ambassador Hirosi Saito.

Kato, who headed the Japanese Council of Labor, two years ago toured this country at the invitation of the American Federation of Labor to promote friendship between American and Japanese workers. He was recently elected to the Japanese Diet as a representative of the Proletarian Party from the Tokio district.

The wire to Ambassador Saito was sent by former Rep. Vito Marcantonio of New York, now president of the Intl. Labor Defense, and demanded that Saito convey to his government the protests of American unionists, writers and teachers.

Pennsylvania Recognizes C.I.O. Government Workers

HARRISBURG, Pa.—The Commonwealth of Pennsylvania will deal with grievance committees of the State, County and Municipal Workers, C.I.O., on all matters affecting the thousands of employes in the state's highway department, Governor George Earle announced last week.

Earle's decision was announced at a meeting with S.C. & M.W. representatives. Also attending the meeting were Lieut.-Gov. Thomas Kennedy, who is secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers, and Samuel Marshall, deputy secretary of highways.

Recognizing that the C.I.O. union of government workers is opposed to strikes by its members, Earle declared, "No union organizer or member will be discriminated against under my administration. All state officials and employes will be bound to respect the rights of workers to organize.

"The administration will deal with the organization of employes which has a non-strike clause in its constitution, believing that the public welfare requires that public employes shall not engage in strike activity."

Earle pointed out that the Commonwealth's policy is in line with that adopted by President Roosevelt for the federal government in relations with its employes.

Discussions between the union and state executives will lead to establishment of a grievance complaint system. Earle granted a union request that 35,000 day workers for the highway department be admitted into the state retirement fund, and promised to act on a union complaint that pay checks to highway workers were frequently late in being delivered.

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—Natl. Distillers, manufacturers of Crab Orchard and other brands of liquor, are fair to organized labor, according to United Distillery Workers Local Union 484.

No Work Here!

The depression moved into Montana's metal mines in rapid fashion. This picture, taken recently at Butte, shows 280 miners unsuccessfully seeking jobs at the Leonard Mine just two days before the entire mine closed down, throwing some 850 more men out of work. C.I.O. unions moved quickly to protect their members, however, and a call sent out by the relief committee of Butte Miners Union No. 1, resulted in a statewide unemployment conference recently, reports Denis McCarthy, chairman of the Miners' union press committee.

C.I.O. Checks Dropping of Jobless From WPA

Quick Action Follows Lewis Protest on Relief

WASHINGTON — Deputy WPA Administrator Aubrey Williams, following strong protests from the C.I.O., this week wired modification of his previous order that all WPA workers eligible for unemployment insurance must be dropped from the relief rolls.

His wire, however, still permits state WPA heads to remove from their jobs workers who have actually started to receive unemployment insurance payments, which in most cases are far lower than the WPA wage scale.

The C.I.O. protest against Williams' first decree was signed by Chairman John L. Lewis.

Describing the order "as a further step towards the pauperization of our people in this new unemployment crisis," Lewis charged that the Government, in issuing it, has receded "from the responsibility which the President has said it must assume to provide work for the unemployed, and has receded on what seems to us a completely inadequate excuse."

The C.I.O. chairman pointed out that workers removed from the relief rolls would undergo severe hardships during the waiting period before unemployment compensation became available, and that in the majority of cases the compensation would be less than "the already inadequate wages received from WPA."

In addition, according to the Lewis letter, the order would have required that workers not currently employed on WPA and eligible for unemployment compensation be denied WPA employment as a needed supplement to the meager payments received through compensation.

This section would assume that unemployed workers have sufficient savings to tide them over both a period of waiting and to help them through the time when they have only their compensation for income.

Los Angeles C.I.O. Handles Jobless Cases

LOS ANGELES—The Los Angeles Industrial Union Council of the C.I.O. handled more than 1,000 relief cases in the month ended Jan. 8, according to a report made public by C. H. Jordan, its secretary.

The council's unemployment committee handles the cases of those jobless workers who find difficulty in being placed on WPA or the relief rolls. The United Rubber Workers and the Steel Workers Organizing Committee have also established committees which have handled a large load of the cases.

C.I.O. Council Near In New York City

NEW YORK—Steps will be taken this week towards speedy formation of an Industrial Union Council for the hundreds of C.I.O. local unions throughout New York City, Regional Director Allen Haywood announced here.

Several hundred thousand members of C.I.O. unions in the city will be represented in the new council, which will make it one of the strongest labor bodies in the nation.

C.I.O. unions throughout the city have been protesting to the U. S. Senate Committee on Appropriations against cutting the budget of the Natl. Labor Relations Board, Haywood revealed.

C.I.O. GROWS IN HAWAII

HANAPEPE, Hawaii — With more than 3,000 workers already enrolled in Local 76 of the United Cannerv. Agricultural, Packing & Allied Workers, C.I.O., owners of sugar plantations in this district are finding their company unions falling to pieces. For the first time in Hawaiian history, C.I.O. leaders point out, workers of all races on the island are being united in one organization.

Murray Asks Unions Fight Wage Slashes

By Howard J. McCartney

PITTSBURGH — A concerted campaign is under way to slash wages by some of the nation's leading industrialists, declared Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, speaking at a mass meeting of steel workers in Homestead, Pa.

"There is a determined onslaught being made by many industrialists in the same fashion today as in 1929 to lengthen hours and cut wages," Murray declared.

"I know that this campaign is under way, but I am hopeful that the move can be stopped.

"Were it not for great, powerful labor organizations like the C.I.O. and S.W.O.C., this country would have entered into the same campaign of wage degradation that it did in 1929," he said.

At the same time, a note of optimism for renewal of contracts in the steel industry was sounded by Murray. With negotiations scheduled to begin Feb. 7 there is a growing feeling in the industry that "Big Steel" again will sign a union contract.

There has been no public commitment to that effect, but preliminary conferences have been held between S.W.O.C. representatives and the heads of United States Steel Corp.

Predicts New Contracts

"I am quite sure—and at least I am hopeful—that as a result of the remarkable record of S.W.O.C. made during the last year, we may be able to renew our contracts with the 463 companies now under contract," Murray predicted.

In carrying out the program of the recent S.W.O.C. convention he revealed that an amendment to the Walsh-Healy Act had been drafted and turned over to U. S. Senator Robert Wagner for presentation.

"While the Walsh-Healy Act provides that any corporation bidding for government contracts is ordered to recognize certain prevailing wage and hour standards, we suggest an amendment which provides that any corporation bidding for government business must prove to the satisfaction of the federal government that it has complied with the terms of the Wagner Act," Murray said.

Bethlehem Steel Corp. was specifically cited as an example. "That corporation probably has more government contracts than any other company, but Bethlehem Steel defies the law without any penalty."

"Of course that is not confined to Bethlehem Steel," he said. "It also goes for Tom Girdler (Republic Steel) and E. T. Weir (National Steel)."

Standard Oil Co. Signs N.M.U. Pact

NEW YORK CITY—Some 3,000 unlicensed seamen employed on 72 oil tankers will get an increase in wages, three weeks' annual vacation with pay and other benefits, as the result of a contract entered into between the National Maritime Union and the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey.

The agreement, signed in the company's offices at 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York City, is the first ever signed by the company in which basic working conditions and manning scales are incorporated, the union states.

Wage increases of $5 monthly, with 75 cents an hour for overtime work, were included in th eprovisions of the contract. Hundreds of additional seamen will obtain jobs under the terms of the contract providing for three weeks' annual vacation with pay for men employed continuously for 12 months, officials said.

Negotiations with other tanker companies on the Atlantic Seaboard for a series of agreements covering the entire tanker industry on the east coast are under way, and contracts are expected to be signed shortly, according to the union.

A. F. of L. Lumber Union Backs C.I.O. Peace Plan

SEATTLE, Wash. — The Seattle A. F. of L. Lumber and Sawmill Workers Local 2519, has endorsed the proposals made by the C.I.O. for peace in the labor movement and denounced the craft officials of the A. F. of L. executive council for the failure of the unity negotiations.

The action of Local 2519 was taken in reply to an attack on the C.I.O. by reactionary officials of the convention of the A. F. of L. Puget Sound Council.

Ohio C.I.O. Unions to Hold First State Convention, Feb. 26

COLUMBUS, Ohio—A state convention of all C.I.O. unions in Ohio will be held in Columbus, February 26-27, to set up a State Industrial Union Council, John Owens, regional director, announces.

A thousand delegates are expected to attend, he said, in addition to officers, fraternal representatives of various unions, and visitors.

Among the speakers invited to address the convention will be not only leaders of the national industrial union movement, but also outstanding representatives of government, education and religion, illustrating, Owens said, "how closely the C.I.O. ties into the fabric of life in our state."

Delegates will attend from C.I.O. unions in the coal mining, textile and clothing, shoe, steel, rubber, automobile, electrical, chemical, glass, oil and other mass production industries in the state.

Will Be Main State Body

Also represented will be various organizations of white collar workers including newspaper writers, government employes, insurance agents, communications workers, department store employes and general office workers.

"This convention will establish the Committee for Industrial Organization as the main body of organized labor in Ohio," Owens said.

"It will enable the representatives of the various unions to become better acquainted and enable them better to pool their energies in the common struggle to advance the general welfare for which the C.I.O. stands.

"The struggle to improve the lot of the working man is more than a simple program involving any one factory or shop. Today the far-flung ramifications of our economic order touch the daily life of the worker in many ways and in many places."

State headquarters of the new Industrial Union Council will probably be in Columbus, Owens said. Convention sessions will be at the Neil House there.

A. F. of L. Workers Join C.I.O. Strike in Duluth

DULUTH, Minn.—A. F. of L. carpenters and boilermakers have joined the strike of 65 C.I.O. steel union workers against the Marine Iron and Shipbuilding Company of Duluth, Minn. The strike was called after the company had locked out most of the men in answer to their demands for union recognition.

Members of the National Maritime Union who were hired by the company to take the place of the locked out workers, also went on strike when they found they had been hired to scab.

Help Build Maritime Unity

Rochester C.I.O. To Form Council

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—Members of C.I.O. unions in Rochester, numbering 22,000, will soon establish a city Industrial Union Council.

All C.I.O. locals in the city have been asked to send delegates to a meeting Jan. 31 at which a temporary constitution will be drafted.

The call was issued from the offices of the Textile Workers Organizing Committee here following a meeting of leaders of nine C.I.O. unions in the city.

Tories Might Practice What They Preach

ATLANTA, Ga.—Tory southern Congressmen who favor a southern wage differential should practice what they preach, in the opinion of the district board of the Intl. Ladies Garment Workers Union, C.I.O.

Since many southern representatives feel that labor in the south should receive lower pay than northern workers, the union passed a resolution calling upon southern Congressmen to refund to the Government a portion of their $10,000 annual salary.

Vermont Unions to Ask New Labor Legislation

BENNINGTON, Vt.—The state of Vermont—a lone outpost of Republicanism in the last national election—will see something new in politics this week when leaders of the state's unions meet here to propose state labor legislation.

Large numbers of representatives of both C.I.O. and A. F. of L. locals throughout the Green Mountain state will attend the meeting, which opens Friday, January 21, with addresses by Gov. George Aiken, State Senator Alfred Heininger and Mayor John Gordon of Barre.

Among the objectives of the meeting are the creation of a state labor department, passage of a Vermont "baby Wagner act," legislation regulating the employment of women and children and repeal of the state's anti-sitdown strike statute on the grounds that it may be used to prevent picketing. The conference is expected to ask the legislature to pass adequate jobless relief finance bills.

Allen Raycraft, head of the Vermont Federation of Labor, together with other officials of the federation, central labor bodies and C.I.O. unions will attend the meeting, which will be held in the offices of the Bennington Industrial Union Council of the C.I.O. A. A. Hartwell, New England organizer for Labor's Non-Partisan League, will be one of the speakers.

N.L.R.B. Cites Dairy For Law Violations

LITCHFIELD, Ill.—The Litchfield Creamery Co., with plants here and in Winoa Lake, Ind., has been cited by the Natl. Labor Relations Board for violations of the Wagner Act.

The company is charged with resisting union organization of its employes by the C.I.O. and with discharging two workers for union activity.

The Litchfield Co., together with the affiliated Carolene Products Co., distribute Carolene and Milmut, Sunshine Milk, Sunshine and Red Seal Butter, and Litchfield Ice Cream.

To Use Union Label

NEW YORK—Stanley McIsaacs, borough president of Manhattan, has ordered that all printing jobs in his jurisdiction must carry the union label.

MINERS VOTE SOLIDLY TO BACK C.I.O.; LEWIS OFFERS PEACE TO A.F. OF L.

League Pushes Drive To Unseat Sen. Milton

WASHINGTON—The battle of Jersey City shifted on to Capitol Hill this week as Labor's Non-Partisan League moved to force the unseating of Senator John Milton, newly-appointed Washington ambassador for the Hague machine.

In a petition filed with the Senate, the league charged that corruption and poll frauds are so serious in the Hague Hudson county political domain as to make his appointee unfit to receive Senate membership. Vice-Pres. Garner turned the matter over to the Committee on Privileges and Elections, which will soon hold hearings on the subject.

Milton, named by Hague to fill out the term of A. Harry Moore, who has just assumed governorship of New Jersey, was sworn into office. If the Senate sustains the league's contentions, however, he will be forced out.

May Hear Protests

The move to oust the Senator establishes no new Senate procedure. Joseph Vare, head of the old Republican machine in Pennsylvania, and others throughout the years, have been ousted from the Senate following discovery of graft or corruption in the elections.

Senator George of Georgia, chairman of the elections and privileges committee, announced that he would hear protests from anti-Milton groups and if the committee considers them "substantial," hearings will be held. It is believed that the hearings are almost certain to be scheduled.

The Labor's Non-Partisan League statement, issued by Executive Vice-Pres. E. L. Oliver, called for a "careful and searching" investigation of Milton's background.

Part of Hague Machine

"Milton owes his appointment to Gov. Moore, of New Jersey, who was elected as a candidate of the Hague machine, in an election even now under investigation of the state legislature," the league statement said.

"If the election of Gov. Moore was in any way aided by corrupt practices of the Hague machine, certainly the integrity of the United States Senate should forbid that any man taking part in such practice should be seated in the Senate as an appointee of Gov. Moore."

LEAGUE ASKS PROTESTS

WASHINGTON — Labor's Non-Partisan League this week called for all labor organizations to urge the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections to investigate the seating of John Milton, Hague machine man recently appointed to the Senate.

I.L.G.W. Wins Pay Raise of $700,000

NEW YORK—Wage increases totaling $700,000 yearly go into the pay envelopes of workers in the children's and house dress industry of New York, as the result of a new contract drawn up between Local 91 of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union and the employers association.

A.F.L. Caused Split, Howard Tells Typos

WASHINGTON — The division in the ranks of labor was caused by the "illegal" action of the executive council of the A. F. of L. in suspending 10 C.I.O. unions, Charles P. Howard, president of the Intl. Typographical Union and secretary of the C.I.O., declared here.

Addressing the Virginia-Carolina Typographical Conference, Howard asserted, "If the C.I.O. did nothing more than what it accomplished in connection with the textile workers, its formation will have been justified."

DISCUSS CONTRACT PROPOSALS

DETROIT — Delegates from Chrysler locals of the United Automobile Workers will meet this week to discuss proposals for a new contract with the company, to replace the present one which expires March 31.

District 50 to Push Organizing Campaign

WASHINGTON—The Gas, Coke and Chemical Workers, District 50 of the United Mine Workers of America, moved to extend its organization into hitherto non-union sections of the industry, as some 100 delegates attended the first convention of the district here this week.

Established in September, 1936, District 50 has already organized 15,000 members and won 87 contracts, Pres. James Nelson told the meeting. The convention was held separately from that of the United Mine Workers of America, which was in session at the same time.

Huge Profits In Chemicals

The union must be determined that labor will get a greater share of the chemical industry's earnings, Nelson said, pointing to the 1,200 per cent profits common during the last war.

The chemical industry is well able to afford an increased wage budget, Nelson charged.

"The war-time purchase by the Chemical Foundation for $250,000 of 4,500 German patents from the Alien Property Custodianship has increased in value to a known figure of $2,000,000,000," Nelson continued. "This must represent the greatest historical bargain since the Indians sold Manhattan Island for $24."

Pres. John L. Lewis of the U.M.W. addressed the opening session of the district convention. He praised the district's accomplishments and called upon the union to win for its members the right to work.

John Brophy, director of the C.I.O., described to the delegates the growth of the C.I.O. and urged that they press their campaign.

Delegates Cheer Report on C.I.O.

WASHINGTON—Rising to their feet to a man, 2,000 delegates to the 35th convention of the United Mine Workers unanimously voted to approve all help given to the C.I.O. and to continue the union's "contribution to the cause of industrial organization so that all the workers of America may enjoy the benefits of unionism and collective bargaining."

This action was taken following an enthusiastically-received speech by Pres. John L. Lewis, recounting the strides made by the C.I.O. with the miners' assistance.

The C.I.O. is ready to bring its 4,000,000 members into the A. F. of L., provided that the federation agrees to charter every C.I.O. union and to call a democratic convention to work out further problems, Lewis said.

As an alternative suggestion, Lewis declared that the C.I.O. stands ready to charter all A. F. of L. internationals.

Lewis's speech was made during discussion of the resolution offered by the officers' report committee, which had called for full support of the C.I.O. and its program. The report was passed unanimously.

Outlines Plan

"Peace is desirable. We all want peace with honor," Lewis told the convention.

"If the A. F. of L. wants peace, I will recommend to the 4,000,000 members of the C.I.O. that on the first day of February, 1938, they march into the A. F. of L., horse, foot and dragoon, if the A. F. of L. will issue charters to the C.I.O. units and later call a joint convention to arrange the details," Lewis continued.

"If the A. F. of L. wants peace, let them have peace.

"Let them choose which plan they will take. Let them fish or cut bait."

In Miami the American Federation of Labor's executive council was reported to have refused the Lewis proposal.

Union In Strong Position

Speaking in favor of the report, Vice-Pres. Philip Murray, who headed the C.I.O.'s "peace committee," declared that the conferences with the A. F. of L. group had broken down because the federation had vested no power in its committee.

Representing every section of the coal country in the United States and Canada, the delegates filled to overflowing the spacious Rialto Theater.

From Lewis and Murray and Sec.-Treas. Thomas Kennedy they learned that the union stood in a stronger position than at any time in its history. Stormy applause greeted a statement in Lewis's keynote speech that the miners' union had been accepted as a power in the "highest councils of the nation."

Despite large expenditures in the last 24 months, Lewis said, the union's funds are greater than at the time of the last convention.

Proposals in the officers' 67-page report called for a $5,000,000,000 federal housing program, extension of the government's relief program to care for new millions of unemployed, resistance to Tory demands for amendments for the Wagner Act, prohibition of use of the Natl. Guard for strikebreaking purposes and endorsement of Labor's Non-Partisan League "as the responsible dependable spokesman of American labor in the political field."

Fight Wage Cuts, Lewis Tells U.M.W.

WASHINGTON — American labor must stand firmly opposed to a program of price cutting and resultant wage drops, Pres. John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers told 2,000 delegates to the union's 35th biennial convention here.

Lewis lashed out at "prophets in plush chairs" who suggest that workers who are employed only one or two days a week should be forced to take further wage cuts in the name of bringing back prosperity.

The United Mine Workers, Lewis said, is in the strongest position in its history, and the treasury now shows a greater balance than it did at the time of the 1936 convention. His description of the U.M.W's expenditures to support the C.I.O., to help establish Labor's Non-Partisan League, to purchase a new home and to help reelect Pres. Roosevelt, was greeted with cheering from the 2,000 union members

Learned Under Hoover

American labor learned, to its sorrow, during the Hoover period, that wage cuts don't lead to prosperity, Lewis declared.

"Labor will fight and resist wage reductions to the bitter end," he predicted. "In coal, steel, auto, lumber, glass—labor will oppose that economic policy.

"I hope that those charged with leadership, in the industrial and financial world, and in statecraft, will not follow this will-o'-the-wisp."

35th U.M.W.A. Convention Opens

VOL. I WASHINGTON, D. C., JANUARY 29, 1938 No. 8

Salute to the United Mine Workers

The convention of the United Mine Workers of America, meeting in Washington, brings together 2,000 representatives of the most powerful labor organization in the country.

America's No. 1 labor union has won its proud position, not only because it is the largest in membership but because it has taken the lead in promoting, financing and directing what its officers describe in their report as "the greatest economic and social movement of our generation."

A pioneer industrial union itself, the United Mine Workers of America has not been content with establishing almost 100 per cent union organization in the coal fields. It has also lent its great strength and experience to making the benefits of industrial unionism available to millions of unorganized workers in America's mass-production industries.

Wherever the United Mine Workers have been organized, they have always encouraged and developed union organization among other workers. And now they have extended the principle of lending a helping hand to their unorganized brothers from the mining districts to the whole nation.

Almost every working man and woman in the country who has won better wages and conditions and union protection, in the last couple of years, owes a debt of gratitude to the United Mine Workers and the other great unions associated with it in promoting industrial organization.

The organization of the steel, automobile, rubber and like industries is the direct result of the movement launched by the United Mine Workers and the other well-established unions which joined with it to form the C.I.O.

The wave of organization thus started has spread to countless other industries; and even where their employes are not yet organized, employers have had to make concessions due to the movement started by the U.M.W.A. and its associated unions.

In making this great contribution to the welfare of all American labor and of the whole country, the United Mine Workers have benefited substantially themselves, as reports to the convention indicate. Their union has been bulwarked against the encroachments of anti-unionism in surrounding industries, their own bargaining position has been improved, and they have shared in the improved status of American labor generally.

The United Mine Workers of America also stands out as a leader in the progressive political movement which is winning for labor a voice in the nation's councils such as it never had before.

The United Mine Workers of America is a tower of strength for labor, progress and democracy in these days of change and uncertainty. No body of men have ever better deserved the tribute which all working people and all public-spirited citizens should render them today.

"Everybody's Out Of Step But Me!"

Cupid Active During Strike; Catches Six Who Picketed!

NEW YORK—Dan Cupid ought to get a bonus for doing overtime work while members of the United Office & Professional Workers were striking at the Efficient Letter Co.

Six of those who paced the picket line while the union waged its victorious 11-week strike will march again—this time without placards—when they parade to the altar in the next few months.

Three girls have already started to prepare their trousseaux for weddings in April, when the union will discuss wage increases under the provisions of the closed-shop contract it signed with the company. They will marry three of the men strikers, "whom they really got to know on the picket line."

Before the strike many of the employes were earning as little as $6 a week. But, says Anne Berenholz, "Cupid gains ready entry into a closed shop."

S.W.O.C. Certified In Texas Plant

HOUSTON, Tex.—A new victory in the South was gained by the Steel Workers Organizing Committee this week as the Natl. Labor Relations Board certified the C.I.O. steel union as sole collective bargaining agency for workers in the steel barrel and drum departments at the Petroleum Iron Works Co. in Beaumont.

The decision will enable Lodge 2003 of the Amalgamated Assn. of Iron, Steel & Tin Workers, C.I.O., to open bargaining discussions with the management immediately, Harold Rasmussen, S.W.O.C. sub-regional director, declared.

JOBLESS INCREASE

HARRISBURG, Pa. — Close to 27,000 Pennsylvania workers were thrown out of jobs in the second week of January, according to state relief officials, bringing the total number on direct relief to 664,887.

Aid Insurance Union, C.I.O. Asks

NEW YORK—The aid of all C.I.O. union groups throughout the country has been enlisted in the nation-wide struggle of the United Office and Professional Workers to win the right of collective bargaining for employes of the big insurance companies.

In a letter sent to all regional directors and Industrial Union Councils, John Brophy, C.I.O. director, urged that the facilities of all C.I.O. offices be placed at the disposal of the U.O.P.W. to help the insurance workers enlist the support of millions of policyholders.

"There are 87,000,000 policyholders in the United States, the bulk of whom are wage earners," Brophy wrote. "The union is therefore seeking to win the support of these policyholders, most of whom would favor the rights of the employes to join and bargain collectively through a union of their own choosing."

Elections Asked

The union has petitioned for a national election in the offices of the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co., as well as for New York City elections in the Metropolitan, Prudential, and Colonial companies.

It has also filed charges of unfair labor practices against the Metropolitan, with the New York State Labor Relations Board, and is considering taking similar action against other companies.

In a recent radio speech, Lewis Merrill, U.O.P.W. president, charged that "the people who control the life insurance companies are among those whom President Roosevelt in his recent speech to Congress defined as those who control 'other people's money, other people's labor and other people's lives."

Dangers of Union Incorporation

CONTROL OF UNIONS WOULD PASS INTO HANDS OF STATE

Reactionaries Aim to Kill Union, Lewis Points Out; Bills Aid Their Plans

WASHINGTON — Incorporation of labor unions—pet idea of the nation's most reactionary labor-baiters—is once more being pushed forward on the nation's legislative front.

In half a dozen states, legislatures have listed on their programs consideration of varying types of incorporation bills designed to cut off the vigor and life blood of the labor movement.

In practically every case these bills will receive little consideration. But in every case they represent a danger to American unionism.

Last summer, it is recalled, Chairman John L. Lewis of the C.I.O. was questioned about incorporation of unions.

"If the object is to destroy trade unions, they should be incorporated," Lewis said at that time. The Republican Party and the Baptist Church might just as reasonably be compelled to incorporate as to force unions to do so, he pointed out.

This month, J. B. Moss, writing in the United Rubber Worker, describes how incorporation of unions would work.

"In the first place, a corporation is an organization which has obtained permission (in the form of a charter) from the state to carry on certain activities," Moss wrote. "A corporation cannot exist without the permission of the state. A corporation can only do those things which its charter, granted by the state, allows it to do.

Could Ban Unions

"Thus, if labor unions were required to incorporate, it would mean that every time a group of workers wanted to form a union they would have to apply to the state for a charter. They would have to ask permission to organize! If, as would be likely, the state officials were hostile to unions, or to this particular group, they could refuse to issue a charter.

"Then if those workers went ahead and organized their union, it would be illegal because it was not incorporated. Its officers and members might be subject to criminal prosecution for participating in an illegal organization."

In other words, the right to choose collective bargaining agencies could be lifted from the workers and placed in the hands of anti-labor state officials conceivably under the domination of business men. Incorporation, it can be seen, would distort bona fide labor organizations into state-controlled agencies so dominated as to be little more effective than company unions.

Statutes Might Rob Unions' Right to Strike or Conduct Boycotts

"But that is not all," Moss points out.

"If the anti-labor outfits that want compulsory union incorporation ever got their proposals passed as laws, there would undoubtedly be provisions in those laws which would say what the union corporations could do and what they couldn't do. There would be provisions requiring certain things to be in the corporation's by-laws, requiring them to have a certain set-up of organization, and no other.

A favorite argument of business men is that since businesses incorporate, labor unions should be forced to do so. But incorporation is not compulsory for business men; they may operate either as partnerships, associations, or individuals.

"The purpose of incorporation of business is to limit liability, not establish it," Moss points out. "Incorporation of trade unions seeks to establish liability in such a way as to hold the central organization responsible for irresponsible acts of individuals, such as spies, agents, provocateurs and strikebreakers."

Businesses are established to make money. Unions are non-profit-making organizations. Incorporation was primarily intended as a device to aid profit-makers.

But those who seek union incorporation are not interested in these facts.

Their interest is in tying the hands of the organized workers of America, of cutting off the gains which unions have made in the last few years, and of substituting for a democratic labor movement the government-controlled company unions common to every Fascist land in the world.

ARTISTS GO C.I.O.

NEW YORK—Three unions of artists have affiliated with the United Office & Professional Workers, C.I.O. Chartered as an autonomous local of the U.O.P.W. are the Artists Union, the Commercial Artists and Designers, and the Cartoonists Guild.

C. I. O. Holds Toledo's Biggest Labor Meeting

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

Councils Unite, Where Green Divides

WILLIAM GREEN recently attacked the establishment of a C.I.O. Industrial Union Council in New York City as "a splitting maneuver . . . deepening the cleavage in organized labor."

As one who has split hairs with the best, split unions and even split a whole labor movement, the president of what is left of the A. F. of L. should know something about splitting.

But in this case, as in many others, he has turned the truth upside down, and some questions are in order to get things right side up again. Green may be asked, for instance:

Who wielded the cleaver that created the cleavage in New York labor?

Weren't all the unions united there in a single labor council until you gave the order to throw out of it the C.I.O. unions?

And what did you expect these unions to do after you split the New York labor movement in half?

Should they have continued disunited, each twiddling their thumbs separately, to win your approval?

And by what logic does the uniting of half a million organized workers in a powerful council, to advance the interests of all labor, become an act of splitting?

C.I.O. Always For Unity

The setting up of an Industrial Union Council in New York City brings to some 130 the number of such state and city delegate bodies now chartered by the C.I.O.

Just as the national C.I.O. continued working within the A. F. of L. as long as it was permitted to—until in fact its unions were ousted for their work of industrial organization—so have the C.I.O. unions sought to preserve the unity of state and city labor movements as long as that was possible.

It was not until orders had gone out from the A. F. of L. executive council to split every state and city central body in the country, by driving out the C.I.O. unions, that the C.I.O., in March 1937, authorized the chartering of councils of its own to protect and unite these expelled locals.

Since then C.I.O. councils have been established in city after city. They unite not only the unions which the A. F. of L. leaders chose to expel, but also tens of thousands of newly organized workers in unions which the A. F. of L. never chose to admit in the first place.

Uniting the Old, Bringing in the New

In many states and localities, the C.I.O. council has from the first represented practically the whole labor movement.

In West Virginia, for instance, the State Federation of Labor, with 170,000 affiliated members, held its ranks intact and united when it came over to the C.I.O. as a body and was chartered as the West Virginia State Industrial Union Council.

Francis Dillon, after unsuccessful attempts to split the Automobile Workers and various other labor bodies, is now engaged in a pitiful attempt to split West Virginia labor by breaking away a few crafts from the state's united labor movement.

In some cities the C.I.O. council has started with little more than the locals expelled from the A. F. of L. central body. But so great has been the influx of newly organized workers that these councils, in many instances, have come to represent without question the main body of local labor.

They have pushed organization of the unorganized as the old bodies never did before.

They have undertaken the responsibility of representing and securing relief for the unemployed.

And in general they have raised the banner of the larger, more progressive, more united labor movement which the C.I.O. is surely bringing into being, despite all the splitting tactics of reactionary craft officials who prefer to rule over a small part of labor rather than to risk their control over a united whole.

Buffalo C.I.O. Coordinates Activities

BUFFALO, N. Y. — A C.I.O. Planning Board is the latest innovation in Buffalo's labor movement.

The board, of which C.I.O. Regional Director Hugh Thompson is chairman, will have the job of coordinating the many functions of the C.I.O. in the city.

Designed to strengthen labor representation on boards and commissions whose activities are of direct concern to labor, the planning board is to coordinate various unemployment activities, assist in the promotion of trade union education classes in the unions themselves and in civic groups, and plan the building of a strong county C.I.O. council.

Charles Payne of the S.W.O.C. is vice chairman of the board, and George S. Wilson of the United Automobile Workers will be secretary.

Representatives of seven C.I.O. unions and the Erie County Industrial Union Council comprise the membership of the board.

Rhode Island CIO To Form Council

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—C.I.O. unions in Rhode Island will gather early this spring to form a state Industrial Union Council.

Following a meeting of representatives of the C.I.O.-affiliated organizations in Rhode Island, a call was sent out for the meeting. The date has been tentatively set for April 2, but is subject to change.

The decision to form a state C.I.O. organization was made on January 17, a week following an order by President William Green of the A. F. of L. to expel C.I.O. members from the Rhode Island Federation of Labor. Similar instructions have been sent to city central bodies in "Little Rhodey," but few of these have yet taken action.

The expulsion order was the climax of a long fight for unity in Rhode Island labor ranks. At the Federation's October convention a motion to expel the C.I.O. unions was decisively voted down, despite a letter from Green and a plea from an A. F. of L. organizer to "throw out the C.I.O."

C.I.O. Sugar Beet Workers Demand Contract—Or Else!

DENVER, Colo.—"No contracts—no beets!"

This was the ultimatum delivered to the Natl. Beet Growers Assn. by 75 delegates to the District Three Conference of the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packinghouse and Allied Workers, C.I.O.

The delegates came from the heart of the sugar beet country in Montana, Wyoming, Nebraska and Colorado. They elected a negotiating committee composed of J. Austin Beasley and Paul Arias, District Three president and secretary, and Pres. Donald Henderson of the international union, to handle details of the proposed contract.

The union is asking for control of hiring, substantial pay increases and guarantees of decent housing for the workers during the sugar beet season. The union recently gained 12 cents a ton increases through union activity in the Dept. of Agriculture's wage determination program.

OAKLAND, Calif.—Local 76 of the United Automobile Workers of America has written the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. urging the company to let its employes enjoy their rights under the Wagner Act.

Give Jobs to 216, NLRB Tells Mine

WALLACE, Idaho — The Intl. Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, C.I.O., gained a major victory here when the Natl. Labor Relations Board ordered the Sunshine Mining Co. to bargain collectively with the union and rehire 216 men with back pay from Aug. 2, 1937.

Some of the men will receive over $1,000.

The company was ordered to dissolve the Big Creek Industrial Union, a company outfit, and to stop interfering with the right of workers to join the union of their choice.

Six Thousand Hear Brophy Rap Stolberg

TOLEDO—Six thousand people—the largest crowd in Toledo history to attend a labor gathering—jammed the Civic Auditorium here on January 21 for a mass meeting called by the Committee for Industrial Organization.

The audience—drawn from the city's powerful auto, glass and miscellaneous C.I.O. locals — heard prominent leaders of the C.I.O. warn that organized labor is prepared to defend its jobless from relief cuts favored by big business, and predict that the C.I.O. will increase its political power in the next few years.

John Brophy, director of the C.I.O., took a sharp rap at the Scripps-Howard papers for carrying an "Inside the C.I.O." series by Benjamin Stolberg—whom he called "Stool-berg"

Papers Like Hearst's

Describing as a "renegade radical" the author of the series about the C.I.O.—inaccuracies of which brought a flood of protest in Scripps-Howard papers throughout the country—Brophy said that the "erstwhile liberal newspaper chain" had apparently "accepted the doctrines of Hearst."

Drawing an obvious comparison between Stolberg and Father Coughlin, Brophy declared that men who "talk a great deal about social justice" were to be found no farther away than Royal Oak, Mich. He coupled the name of the "ultra-Marxian" Stolberg with "the exponent of social justice who does nothing in deeds."

"We are now finding out who are our friends," Brophy said.

C.I.O. In Vanguard

Paul Fuller, chairman of the Glass Workers Organizing Committee, explained the "vicious and malicious attacks being made upon us" are due to the fact that the C.I.O. is the "vanguard of a new day in industrial life." Fuller pointed out that the Federation of Flat Glass Workers, of which he is president, had increased in membership to 22,000, a gain of about 7,000 members since last summer.

He predicted that the union "is going to get a contract" from its current national wage conferences with Libbey-Owens-Ford and the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co., to replace pacts signed at the end of a long strike last year.

Martin Spikes Rumors

Pres. Homer Martin of the United Automobile Workers spiked newspaper stories of dissension within the C.I.O.

The U.A.W., Martin said, "intends to remain an integral part of the C.I.O." I's members, he continued, are just "as loyal to the C.I.O. as ever."

M.E.B.A. Turns Down A. F. of L.

SAN FRANCISCO—An attempt by President William Green of the A. F. of L. to woo the Marine Engineers Beneficial Assn. back into the Federation once again has ended in failure.

The M.E.B.A. convention, the first to be held on the west coast, turned down Green's plea and voted unanimously to continue its present affiliation with the Committee for Industrial Organization.

The M.E.B.A., oldest of the marine unions, left the A. F. of L. ranks in 1923 following conflicts with the executive council.

Hearst Signs Pact With Chicago Guild

CHICAGO—An outstanding victory was won by the Chicago Newspaper Guild in its fight against the retrenchment program recently launched by the Hearst management of the Chicago American and Herald-Examiner.

After negotiations lasting all night, contracts and commitments for both papers were signed at dawn, guaranteeing no dismissals "for reason of economy, merger, or department or sub-departmental elimination or discontinuance" for a period of 90 days.

The agreements, which cover employes in both the editorial and commercial departments, further provide that for a period of one year, "no present-employed person in any of the above departments will receive a reduction in his or her present rate of pay."

Guild Wins Again

NEW YORK—The New York Newspaper Guild, C.I.O. affiliate, was certified by the National Labor Relations Board as the sole bargaining agency for commercial department employes of the New York Daily News, including advertising solicitors, in a decision rendered Jan. 19.

C.I.O. Attacks NLRA Change

WASHINGTON—Quick response to the circular letter and telegram sent to C.I.O. affiliates by John Brophy, director of the C.I.O., warning of the dangers in proposed amendments to the National Labor Relations Act, was noted in the number of replies received indicating action taken. Replies from Senators and Congressmen to a letter and to the leaflet, "Protect the Wagner Act," sent to members of both Houses at the same time, were also received.

Pres. David Dubinsky of the International Ladies Garment Workers has instructed Merle Vincent, legislative representative of the union in Washington, to act on behalf of I.L.G.W.U. on matters affecting National Labor Relations Act in accordance with the Brophy message.

Clinton S. Golden, regional director of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, wired that all S.W.O.C. district directors and presidents of lodges had been urged to telegraph a protest against the Allen S. Haywood, C.I.O. regional director in New York, and Paul W. Fuller, head of the Glass Workers Organizing Committee, telegraphed that local industrial unions and industrial councils in their regions had taken similar action on receipt of Brophy's message.

Labor's Non-Partisan League Forms in Michigan

Unions Seek Better Handling of Relief

LANSING, Mich.—Formation of a Michigan branch of Labor's Non-Partisan League is scheduled on Jan. 30, when representatives of labor unions throughout the state meet in session here.

The meeting, called by Vice Pres. E. L. Oliver of the League, is expected to develop a permanent state organization.

"Michigan labor needs effective political organization no less than does labor in other neighboring states," Oliver stated. "The successes which have been won through Labor's Non-Partisan League in Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York and other industrial states make it clear that if the workers of Michigan desire, they can gain greatly increased influence in their local and state governments."

Strong organization in the automobile and parts industries, together with hundreds of C.I.O. and A. F. of L. locals in Michigan's industrial areas will provide a sturdy basis for the league in this state, local labor people point out.

Germer Points to Need

In Detroit Adolph Germer, C.I.O. regional director, declared that the League must be formed immediately since "every reactionary force is mobilized, first to prevent the common people from securing improvements in their living standards, and second, to take from us the gains made during the past few years.

"The situation calls for unity of the common people at the ballot box," Germer said. "Democratic institutions of any country are in danger when malefactors of wealth are permitted to use the power of public office to promote and protect private gain."

Starvation Widespread

The need for more adequate labor organization in the political field was clearly shown at a C.I.O. five-city unemployment conference in southwestern Michigan last week.

Representatives from the cities of Kalamazoo, Battle Creek, Three Rivers, Niles and Marshall — an area partly included in the congressional district of labor-fighting Rep. Clair Hoffman—told stories of widespread near-starvation among thousands of families in the region.

A family of five people receives $5.40 a week for food from the local relief authorities in one locality, while in Calhoun County jobless are being allotted 10 cents a day on which they are supposed to live.

In Niles family heads receive $1.50 a week for living expenses, while other members of the family are given 50 cents each week. In that city local financial interests instituted a propaganda campaign which succeeded in cancelling the construction of a sewage plant which would have provided many jobs.

"Kill Your Cow"

At Marshall a woman who owned a cow was denied relief until she had killed and sold the animal. In still another community the town passed a "one-mill" relief tax, and then to be certain that the tenth-of-a-cent levy would not be too heavy, cut in half property valuations on the assessor's list.

Mayor Reading of Detroit has decided to discontinue the practice of allowing the relief committee to permit unions to make preliminary investigation of the relief needs of their members. While he made known his decision to C.I.O. leaders, a line of applicants three blocks long was standing in the rain under his window. The relief authorities can handle about 400 applications a day, and an estimated 100,000 people throughout the city are in need of jobless aid.

At the end of the year there were 149,000 jobless in Detroit alone, according to reliable estimates, and a total of 254,000 unemployed throughout the state.

Protest Southern Slavery

NEW ORLEANS, La.—The New Orleans Industrial Union Council of the C.I.O. has protested to Mayor Maestri against the police practice of arresting unemployed men and using them as workers on public projects.

You Think You've Got Troubles?

LOS ANGELES—Not only must the C.I.O. in Los Angeles fight "the worst collection of reactionaries in any one American City" declares the Los Angeles Industrial Union Council of the C.I.O., but it is also a "center for the war of Dave Beck against the C.I.O."

In addition the city fosters three anti-labor papers, two of them Hearst-owned and the third the notorious Los Angeles Times. Nevertheless lusty C.I.O. locals are functioning in the city's auto, steel, rubber and other industries.

C.I.O. Steel Workers Strike in Jersey City

JERSEY CITY, N. J.—While Mayor Hague continued to predict that the C.I.O. would never enter Jersey City, 500 members of the Amalgamated Assn. of Iron, Steel & Tin Workers, C.I.O., walked out on strike at the local plant of the Crucible Steel Co.

The walkout was caused by violations by the company of its contract with the union.

Edwin Kaempf, district director for the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee of the C.I.O., said the strike call was 100% effective. He later sent skeleton crews into the plant to maintain essential services.

Furuseth Dies

WASHINGTON—Andrew Furuseth, 83, for 30 years president of the Intl. Seamen's Union, A. F. of L., is dead. His death brought statements of regret from labor leaders here, and the C.I.O. Joint Maritime Legislative Committee hailed his contribution to unionism in the maritime industry.

C.I.O. Unions Certified At 2 Chalmers Plants

WASHINGTON—The C.I.O. emerged victorious in two plants of the Allis-Chalmers Co., winning sole bargaining powers for the workers at the company's Pittsburgh factory and gaining an overwhelming majority in a poll of production workers at West Allis, Wis.

The board certified the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers in Pittsburgh after comparing union records with the company's pay roll books.

At West Allis the United Automobile Workers, Local 248, polled 6,086 votes out of 7,721 cast to win certification from the board for production workers. In small craft elections, the A. F. of L. gained two victories, while an independent draftsmen's organization was victorious in a third one.

C.I.O. Attacks Filibuster On Lynching Bill

WASHINGTON—Strong criticism of the filibuster conducted by reactionary Senators against the Wagner-Van Nuys anti-lynching bill and full support for the measure were expressed in a statement released from the national office of the C.I.O.

The statement sharply attacked the undemocratic tactics of the leaders of the filibuster, pointing out that the C.I.O. had previously endorsed the bill, and that the filibuster only made it apparent that the measure must be passed in spite of reactionary attempts to talk it to death in the Senate.

In making the statement public, the C.I.O. joined with Labor's Non-Partisan League, the National Negro Congress, and scores of labor and liberal organizations in calling for the speedy passage of the measure, which represents a long period of struggle for civil rights for Negro workers.

NLRB Orders Mine Rehire 66 With Pay

EVELETH, Minn.—The Natl. Labor Relations Board wrote a new chapter in the eventful history of the Mesaba Iron Range here when it ordered the Oliver Iron Mining Co. to reinstate 66 blacklisted miners to their former jobs, preserve their seniority rights and pay out $33,000 in back wages.

Even more remarkable, in the opinion of veteran unionists in this spy-infested part of the mining country, was the agreement reached by the labor board and the company, whereby the company will post in prominent positions notices that it will cease interfering with workers rights under the Wagner Act.

The case dates back to 1934, when the Oliver Co. closed two of its mines while the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers were conducting organizing drives. When the mines reopened, practically all of the union members were blacklisted.

ILWU Local Waits For NLRB Report In Portland

PORTLAND, Oreg.—Members of Local 1-28 of the Intl. Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, C.I.O., are keeping up their fight against the Montgomery-Ward Co. while waiting for a labor board decision on the cases of 52 men fired a year ago.

In Washington, the Natl. Labor Relations Board revealed that it is still considering a company appeal from an intermediary report of Dr. Towne Nylander, which was filed last May. The board said action would probably be forthcoming shortly.

Worked 100 Hours Weekly

The case dates from November 1936, when the C.I.O. started to organize the men in the Montgomery-Ward warehouse here, who had been working from 60 to 100 hours weekly at pay rates which ranged from 30 to 42 hours a week.

The company, moving to resist the spread of unionism among its workers, improved conditions and lifted pay. But at the same time it installed a number of Burns spies and bribed a couple of organizers. When negotiations between the union and the company broke down in Dec. 1936, 52 workers were discharged.

Seamen's Council To Meet May 1

SAN FRANCISCO — The Natl. Maritime Unity Conference called by the C.I.O. closed its sessions here with arrangements made for the first meeting of the newly-created United Seamen's Council of North America to meet in this city May 1.

The council was created by the conference as a step towards eventual formation of one national union of all unlicensed seagoing personnel. The conference delegates "deplored" the refusal of the Sailors' Union of the Pacific to be represented at the meeting. All other important unlicensed seamen's unions sent delegates.

Lancaster C.I.O. Council Bucks Attempts to Flout Labor Laws

By Forrest V. Heckman

LANCASTER, Pa.—Harassed by mass layoffs and open flouting of the Labor Relations Act, the Lancaster County Industrial Union Council, chartered less than two months ago by the C.I.O., has revitalized the labor movement and taken the lead in many civic affairs in this traditional stronghold of reaction.

Not least among the Council's accomplishments is its successful effort to unite the forces of organized labor and gain the cooperation of other civic forces in an attempt to institute a housing program for the city of Lancaster.

The C.I.O. group took the initiative when its spokesman, Forrest V. Heckman, chairman of the legislative committee, appeared before City Council in public session to request the setting up of a Housing Authority.

This served to rally the Central Labor Union of the A. F. of L. and the Community Service Assn. to the cause, and resulted in formation of a joint housing committee which has continued effectively to press for action. Arrangements have been made for another public appearance before city council, this time by the joint committee, with every indication that a housing program will be started in the near future.

Unions Cooperate

Locals of the A. F. of L. and C.I.O. are working hand in hand on many other matters as well, notably the formation of a Labor's Non-Partisan League and, in several instances, in presenting a united front against the anti-union policy of employers. Meanwhile, the C.I.O. locals are keeping labor board examiners busy with hearings of violations of the Labor Relations Act, and the council's unemployment committee is kept busy taking care of layoff victims.

The council has also joined forces with the Workers' Alliance in protesting the failure of Governor Earle to include a representative of labor on the recently appointed County Assistance Board, which administers all relief, compensation and pension cases. Demands have been made that the error be rectified; meanwhile, the C.I.O. group has been cooperating with the assistance board, helping it to act efficiently.

Build C.I.O. Council in New York City

Members of a provisional committee draw up plans for New York City's C.I.O. Industrial Union Council, whose membership with total one-half million. Seated, left to right, Charles Zimmerman of Local 22, Intl. Ladies Garment Workers Union; Allen Haywood, C.I.O. regional director; Pres. James Carey of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers. Standing, Irving Potash of the Intl. Fur Workers joint board; Sec.-Treas. Gustave Faber of the Transport Workers of New York City; John Ryan of the New York Newspaper Guild; and Abraham Miller of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers joint board.

MINERS TAKE LEAD FOR JOBLESS RELIEF, MORE AID FOR C.I.O.; DUB GREEN TRAITOR

Lewis Asks WPA Hire 3,000,000

WASHINGTON—Dire suffering awaits large masses of the country's working people unless WPA puts at least 3,000,000 unemployed to work immediately, C.I.O. Chairman John L. Lewis said in a letter sent out to all union groups affiliated to the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Reliable reports from C.I.O. regional directors and industrial union councils in the large cities show that "the unemployment situation is reaching a very serious emergency," he declared.

Recommendations included in the letter were made on the basis of a resolution on unemployment relief passed by the 35th convention of the United Mine Workers in Washington, which called for the repeal of the Woodrum amendment to the 1937 Relief Act and for an immediate appropriation of a billion dollars, with an added appropriation of two billion for the coming fiscal year.

Text of Letter

"Reliable reports from a large number of our regional directors in the large cities, and from industrial union councils, indicate that the unemployment situation is reaching a very serious emergency," Lewis said.

"Chicago reports that 25,000 now need WPA jobs; Detroit needs at least 10,000 jobs immediately; Minneapolis needs 5,000; Milwaukee must have at least 10,000 jobs for C.I.O. members; Buffalo workers are desperate, with 65,000 seeking relief and no available WPA projects. Many other cities and states report similar desperate situations.

"There are no more work relief jobs available. In spite of the President's promise that the government would not permit 'any needy American who can and is willing to work to starve because the federal government does not provide work,' hundreds of thousands of workers today in this country are faced with desperate need and even starvation."

C.I.O. Asks Protests On Hill-Sheppard Bills

WASHINGTON—All unions affiliated with the C.I.O. are urged by John Brophy, director, to telegraph immediate protests against the Hill-Sheppard Bill (H. R. 6704 and S. 25) to their Congressmen and Senators.

The bill, which is expected to come up for a vote in the U. S. Senate and House of Representatives on Monday or Tuesday, Feb. 7 or 8, would, under cover of innocent phrases about industrial mobilization, abolish the right to strike and would imperil the entire freedom of labor unions in event of war.

The bill has been described as an attempt to subject American labor to a fascist regime in wartime.

Telegraphic protests on the measure should also be sent to the House Military Affairs Committee:

C.I.O. Aids Strike In Puerto Rico

WASHINGTON—Protests in behalf of Puerto Rican longshoremen on strike in San Juan were made by the Committee for Industrial Organization in telegrams sent to Secretary Harold L. Ickes of the Interior and Governor Blanton Winship of Puerto Rico.

The Governor had announced publicly that he intended to permit steamship owners to call in strikebreakers to take the jobs of the longshoremen, who have been carrying on a struggle for many weeks to win decent wages and working conditions.

Green to Get Treason Trial

WASHINGTON—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor and a member of the United Mine Workers, C.I.O., was indicted for treason to the union as the U.M.W.'s 35th convention moved into its closing sessions.

By a unanimous, standing vote, the 2,019 delegates adopted the recommendation of the convention's Committee on Appeals and Grievances that Green's trial be handled by the international executive board.

Miners Helped Green

Principal charges leveled against Green were that he had taken a part in suspending his own union from the A. F. of L., and that more recently he had authorized the chartering of a dual union, the Progressive Miners of America, by the Federation.

The report, pointing out that Green had reached his high place in A. F. of L. circles through the power and influence of the mine workers, charged Green with "not mere disloyalty, but an act of treason."

U.M.W. Gives Reply To Leader of A.F.L.

WASHINGTON—A clear-cut program to insure the right to work for American workers and cope with the present problem of unemployment and depression was adopted by the United Mine Workers at its 35th biennial convention this week.

Adoption of a $5,000,000,000 Federal housing program and immediate expansion of WPA activity to care for the jobless were among the demands put forward by the 2,019 delegates.

At the same time the convention enthusiastically approved the U.M.W. contribution to the C.I.O. as a good investment for American labor.

It hailed the achievements of industrial organization and directed its officers to "offer whatever aid may be necessary, financial or otherwise, for the purpose of carrying out and achieving the goal of complete organization of the unorganized."

The 1940 convention will be held at Columbus, Ohio, to celebrate the union's 50th anniversary.

The union's action came as a sharp rebuke to Pres. William Green of the A. F. of L., who in a statement to the federation's executive council at Miami, Fla., had opposed the spending of U.M.W. funds to help create strong industrial unions in areas which had previously been open shop centers.

The resolution took note of the "peerless leadership" given the C.I.O. by John L. Lewis, Philip Murray, Thomas Kennedy and the heads of other affiliated international unions.

The convention authorized the U.M.W. "to continue the activities of the C.I.O. with greater strength and increased activity for the purpose of ultimately achieving a labor movement in this country which shall afford the greatest economic and political strength to the workers."

A. F. of L. Name Deleted

The mine union later deleted mention of the A. F. of L. in its constitution referring to the union's representation at A. F. of L. conventions, and in its place substituted the C.I.O. Similar changes were made in other parts of the constitution where references to the A. F. of L. had appeared.

The action, taken as the convention worked its way through scores of resolutions on a number of subjects, followed previous enthusiastic support of the C.I.O. by the membership, and refusal of the A. F. of L. executive council to consider the latest peace proposal of U.M.W. Pres. John L. Lewis.

Lewis had suggested that the A. F. of L. charter all C.I.O. internationals, to be followed by a democratic convention at which details would be discussed.

The mine union heaped high tribute on the work of Labor's Non-Partisan League in the political field. One resolution, enthusiastically passed, called for the election of Sec.-Treas. Thomas Kennedy as governor of Pennsylvania in the 1938 voting.

Green's Attack On League All Wet, Says Oliver

WASHINGTON—Charging that allegations of fact in the Miami, Fla., blast of William Green against Labor's Non-Partisan League "were almost wholly erroneous," E. L. Oliver, League executive vice president, declared that the organization has been "consistently progressive, consistently pro-labor in its activities."

"The great majority of state chairmen and other state officers of the League are members of A. F. of L. organizations," Oliver said, in reply to Green's charges that the League is a C.I.O. subsidiary.

"The national policy of the League was adopted at a convention in which the great bulk of the delegates were members of A. F. of L. organizations," Oliver said.

"Because the League has been consistent in that policy, it must at times be out of harmony with the varying political expressions of the Federation council. It has never been out of harmony with the political aspirations of the great army of trade unionists, A. F. of L., C.I.O., and railway brotherhoods, who are organized within the League."

C.I.O. Glass Workers Sign National Pact

CINCINNATI, Ohio—Wage agreements covering 20,000 employes, signed recently between the Federation of Flat Glass Workers of America and the major concerns in the industry, are the first national contracts containing the same basic features to be negotiated between the union and all flat glass manufacturers.

Under the new contracts, existing wage rates will be maintained throughout the industry, with upward adjustments in certain classifications. The same basic features, which include a six-hour day, 36-hour week and more effective machinery for adjusting grievances, are provided for in the contracts.

In the case of the independent companies, a preferential union shop is established. The union successfully resisted all efforts to reduce wages "at a time when there is tremendous pressure for wage reductions," according to Paul W. Fuller, president of the Federation.

NLRB Members at Hearing

Members of the Natl. Labor Relations Board—(left to right) Edwin S. Smith, Donald S. Smith and J. Warren Madden—listen intently to demands by Sen. Burke before the Senate Judiciary Sub-Committee that the labor board be investigated. Many labor protests are being made on the grounds that Burke's demands are designed as a flank attack on unions.

C.I.O. Unions Hit Threats to NLRB

WASHINGTON — Letters and telegrams from C.I.O. affiliates and field offices indicating action against the threatened amendments to the Labor Relations Act continue to pour into the Washington office of the C.I.O.

The protests center on the five bills now pending in Congress, which are designed to cripple the work of the Labor Board by amending the Act to provide for compulsory arbitration, abridgement of the right to strike, craft elections in industrially organized plants, and also to cut the appropriation of the Board below its already inadequate figure.

Ralph W. Tillotson, Regional Director, reports that all C.I.O. affiliates in Erie, Pa., and vicinity have wired to their Congressmen and Senators against the proposed changes. The Los Angeles Industrial Union Council has given wide distribution to the pamphlet, "Protect the Wagner Act," which the C.I.O. has prepared and which analyzes the threats to the Act.

The Cincinnati Council has initiated a letter campaign by its locals, in addition to sending a resolution of protest to Congress in the name of 25,000 organized workers. The Seattle Council reports a similar campaign of protests.

AP WORKERS TO VOTE

WASHINGTON—The Natl. Labor Relations Board announced here that it will hold elections in three key offices of the Associated Press to determine if non-mechanical workers desire to be represented by the American Newspaper Guild, C.I.O.

The polls will be held in Washington, Philadelphia and Boston.

What C.I.O. Has Done

(From a Speech by John L. Lewis, Chairman of the C.I.O., at the United Mine Workers Convention)

There are those abroad in the land who continue to say that this controversy in the house of labor is terrible, and they go about wringing their hands and calling upon all and sundry who observe their lamentations to see that it is weakening the labor movement.

Let's see if it is. Who is hurt in this fight? What union is weakened by reason of this division on the question of the right of men and women to organize as they see fit?

Is the United Mine Workers of America any weaker because of this fight? The answer is obvious, that our union in the 48 years of its history was never stronger numerically, financially, or in any other way.

Well, are the steel workers any weaker? I could ask Phil Murray. He knows that. Eighteen months ago there were not any organized steel workers. Now 498 corporations in the steel industry have contracted with the union of which Mr. Murray is chairman, covering 535,000 men. Well, they are not much weaker.

One hundred and forty thousand men and women in the electrical industry who have contracts with General Electric and Westinghouse and various concerns are not any weaker because a year and a half ago their union did not exist, and I think anybody would have a hard time convincing them that they are really weaker.

The 90,000 workers in the city of New York who have organized into the Transport Workers' Union under the C.I.O. and who have obtained contracts with the Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit and Interborough Rapid Transit and all the transport companies of the city of New York are not any weaker, because a year ago there wasn't any such union and no such contracts, and a man in the employ of these companies did not even dare to think of joining a union, because the spies and the undercover men would find it out and weed them out.

There is no union weaker. All of the C.I.O. unions are stronger and gaining in membership every day, notwithstanding the industrial depression which affects our country at this time. Why, even the A. F. of L. is no weaker.

Every time we opened up areas in the steel industry or an area as in Logan County, West Virginia, or in 10,000 larger areas of this country where the C.I.O. has gone in and organized a basic industry, it has made it perfectly safe for the A. F. of L. to come along and gather up the butcher and the baker and the candlestickmakers, with the help of our people.

And so we have held the light for them and kept the wind off them, and as a result they have picked up several hundred thousand new members. And they boast about it—and I suppose they should. But they are not weaker except for those members who might have left some one organization or other of theirs and come over to the C.I.O. But they are not lost, because they are now with us.

The American Federation of Labor does not need to worry about that because they are still good union men and women. All they need to do is to trail along in this country behind the C.I.O. and we will keep the wind off them.

Where is all this damage to the labor movement of this country from this controversy, a controversy that is a meritorious and a virtuous controversy over the question of the right of men to organize?

I merely mention these things so that we can have a true appraisal of the equations which concern this situation and not be carried off our feet by sentimental utterances of men or women or interests who cannot stand the sound of conflict.

It has taken conflict here in America in order to establish the right of the workers to organize. The United Mine Workers never established their organization by sitting down in a chair on their porch on a summer afternoon in the shadows, wringing their hands and saying it could not be done.

They established their union by going out and fighting for the right to establish their union, and that is the way that a modern labor movement is being builded here in America now because, thank God, there are millions of men and women in this country who are willing to fight to preserve their right to organize under that flag of ours.

"Come on, Put a Real Fighter in There"

Boston Paper Bucks Romance --And Loses!

BOSTON—When is the honeymoon over?

It was practically finished for one girl worker on the Boston Herald-Traveler when the management reached her by phone in a New Hampshire vacation spot and urged that she return to the city to participate in a labor board poll.

Members of the Boston Newspaper Guild charge that the newspaper's management "interfered" with the NLRB poll held to determine if employes desired the Guild as their collective bargaining agency.

Results Thrown Out

The Guild's charges were upheld by Prof. Calvert Magruder, vice-dean of Harvard Law School and supervisor of the election. He outlawed results of the poll, citing illegal electioneering on the part of the management.

Magruder's report declared:

"Still another employe, on her honeymoon in New Hampshire, was reached by telephone and urged to come down and vote. The management expressed to her father a willingness to give her equivalent time off and reimburse her for any extra expense."

CINCINNATI—The Greater Cincinnati Industrial Union Council has communicated with Ohio Congressmen demanding the full appropriation demanded by the Natl. Labor Relations Board.

New C.I.O. Pamphlet

WASHINGTON—Publication of a new pamphlet, "The Program of the C.I.O.," in 64 pages puts the major policies and decisions of the C.I.O. adopted at the Atlantic City conference on record for reference and organizational use.

The pamphlet, divided in eleven sections, gives all the resolutions, as well as some of the speeches on the more important questions, together with brief accounts bringing several of the events initiated there down to date.

"The Program of the C.I.O.," 64 pages, price 10c per copy, may be obtained from Publicity Dept., C.I.O., 1106 Connecticut Ave., Washington, D. C.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

On "Unanswered" Attacks

THE question is frequently asked, why does not the C.I.O. reply officially to the many slanderous and lying attacks made upon it in newspapers and magazines?

The answer is that it does reply to these attacks, but in its own way and not in the manner chosen by its enemies.

Since the C.I.O. began bringing collective bargaining, higher wages and union conditions to millions of previously unorganized Americans, it has been subjected to every kind of attempt to lie and slander it out of existence.

The favorite line of such attacks is the "red scare"—the oldest and phoniest device used by reaction against all progressive movements.

The virulence of such slander is in direct proportion to the vitality and effectiveness of the movement against which it is aimed.

The C.I.O. is flattered to have deserved such violent animosity from the enemies of labor.

* * *

The Stolberg series of articles on the C.I.O., which ran recently in Scripps-Howard papers, has been hailed by the Girdlers, the Hagues and other enemies of union labor as in the direct line of succession to all previous red-baiting attacks on the C.I.O.

"We're surprised how right we were," is in effect their reaction, when they find that a formerly liberal chain of papers has taken up their incoherent hue and cry; and that a former radical claims to have "inside" dope on bogey-stories they didn't believe themselves.

There is more rejoicing in the chambers of commerce over one radical turned renegade than over ninety-and-nine Rotarians who need no repentance. And Scripps-Howard papers, once called red themselves when they crusaded for the common people, are now welcomed like a prodigal son in the hotsy-totsiest of circles.

* * *

The articles in question are fully as vulnerable as every previous "red scare" attack. The author was so blinded with factional spite that he stabbed wildly at the back of the movement he professed to love—hoping apparently that with its life blood would also be spilled some of the few blood corpuscles whose particular shade of red aroused his ire.

Every one of the series abounded in glaring inaccuracies. These have been duly pointed out by officials of the unions attacked.

In fact, some of the editors themselves protested against the inaccuracies involving their own localities, and cut out parts of the articles lest their untruths be too obvious to their readers. But the same articles were printed in full in other cities where their lies might not be so easily detected.

In nearly every city where the articles appeared, the C.I.O. central councils have gone on record denouncing their distortions.

* * *

It is not therefore for lack of answers that the C.I.O. does not as a rule choose to engage in prolonged controversy with every petty mud-slinger.

You dignify a lie when you begin to argue with it, and it is often worse than waste of effort to shadow-box with false charges which have no leg to stand on in the first place.

Every publisher who thus attacks labor wishes both to eat his pie and have it. Having done the intended damage and thereby created a disinclination among organized workers to buying his publications, he seeks to escape the inevitable odium by making an appearance of giving both sides.

If prolonged controversy can thus be stirred up, the hostile publisher gets everything he wants. He increases circulation among friends and foes of labor alike. He keeps alive that much longer the false, misleading and dissension-breeding issues he has raised. And he carries on the debate in his own backyard where he can always have the last word.

Accordingly the C.I.O. has not spent much time chasing all the spooks, hobgoblins and pumpkin-heads which its enemies have conjured up to terrify the simple-minded.

It prefers to stick to the real and only issue with which it is concerned, namely the winning of union rights and collective bargaining for millions of Americans who could never enjoy them before. Its record of achievement in this regard is its most effective answer to all its slanderers.

C. I. O. Union Councils Form Nationwide Network

New Bodies Boost Strength of Labor

By C. W. Fowler

WASHINGTON—C.I.O. Industrial Union Councils are playing a leading part in the civic as well as the union affairs of their communities, according to reports coming in from the 139 cities, counties and states where they are established.

In scores of communities they have taken front place in pushing action for the welfare of the workers they represent. Throughout the nation they are promoting progressive legislation, stimulating local and state officials to action for their wage earning constituents, fighting attacks on unions and union members, defending workers' civil rights, pushing adequate relief for unemployed men and women—in general looking out for the workers whose interests they were created to serve.

In many communities, due to the strength of the C.I.O. and to the progressive lines the councils have followed, they have become the main body of organized labor, outranking A. F. of L. central bodies from which they were expelled by order of the Executive Council of the Federation.

The Industrial Council in Toledo, for example, has quickly forged ahead of the A. F. of L. city central body in numbers represented and in its place in community life. The Akron Council, with the United Rubber Workers as a base, has done the same, in spite of continued opposition from craft leaders in the A. F. of L. The San Francisco council speaks for thousands of C.I.O. workers and for liberal elements of the population throughout its entire area. The new New York City council will represent 500,000 workers.

Aid Unemployed

Everywhere the councils have played a leading role in the initiation and carrying through of campaigns for workers unemployed as the result of the present business recession. Vigorous campaigns are carried on to bring speedy relief measures from local authorities. In many places, the council acts as certifying agent for relief clients, issuing certificates of eligibility which are promptly honored by city officials.

Watch Legislation

Industrial union councils have been especially active in watching national legislation and the administration of laws of importance to their members. A campaign of protest against the present inadequate WPA program and against threatened cuts has resulted in a number of concessions from the administration, notably in the announcement of 2,000,000 relief jobs to be provided this month.

The councils, together with other C.I.O. affiliates, successfully protested an order that would have cut unemployment compensation recipients from relief rolls before their benefits came due. At the present time, they are pushing a campaign against proposed amendments to the Labor Relations Act that would destroy the usefulness of the act to workers.

"Need Is Evident"

The C.I.O. undertook to set up the network of Industrial Union Councils after the illegal expulsion of C.I.O. unions ordered by the A. F. of L. Progress has been especially rapid since the Atlantic City conference of the C.I.O., where it was stated:

"The need for more Industrial Union Councils, both state and city, is becoming increasingly evident," said C.I.O. Director Brophy's report at the Atlantic City conference. "The A. F. of L. officials are carrying forward their splitting of the labor movement by driving C.I.O. affiliates out of every state federation and city central body in the country. Wherever this occurs and our unions do not set up a council of their own, they are left without the protection that a strong central labor body can afford.

"It would therefore seem essential," the report continued, "to further the interests of our unions and to advance the C.I.O. cause of organizing the unorganized, that Industrial Union Councils should be set up in cities and states where they do not exist as yet."

Includes Largest Cities

The state of Ohio, with 15, and Pennsylvania, with 14, lead the list at present. Ten are located in Indiana, nine in Washington, and seven each in Illinois and California. Alabama, in the deep south, has eight, mainly centered around the industrial communities in the coal and steel regions.

Among the larger cities with Industrial Union Councils are New York, Philadelphia, Cleveland, St. Louis, San Francisco, Milwaukee, Knoxville, Indianapolis, Duluth and St. Paul. The 11 state councils are organized in Montana, Wisconsin, West Virginia, Massachusetts, Utah, Wyoming, Alabama, Minnesota, Maryland-District of Columbia, southern New Jersey, and Arkansas-Oklahoma, where two states have combined to set up a delegate body.

Plans are at present under way for the establishment of a council in the state of Rhode Island, and are being pushed for similar action in many other communities, so that the 4,000,000 members of the C.I.O. may be assured of the protection and promotion of their needs that a strong chain of delegate bodies can give.

C. I. O. Strikes in Jersey City

Right in Jersey City, where Mayor Frank (I am the law) Hague once declared the C.I.O. would never enter, the Steel Workers Organizing Committee called a strike against the Crucible Steel Co. of America. The walkout was settled in less than a week, with employers and union agreeing to adjust matters in dispute. The S.W.O.C. had charged flagrant violation of contract provisions by the company.

C.I.O. FIRST AGAIN

NEW YORK — New York's first unemployment insurance check went to a member of the C.I.O.

Holder of check No. 1 issued by the state department of unemployment insurance went to James J. Klein, a member of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers of America, C.I.O. Klein will receive $15 a week for the next 15 weeks.

Union Charges RFC Grants to OpenShoppers

WASHINGTON — The Reconstruction Finance Corp., premier lending agency of the New Deal, is allowing its funds to be used to fight collective bargaining, according to charges made by a delegation now in Washington from Local 270 of the Intl. Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, on strike for union recognition by the Metropolitan Water District of Southern California.

The strike received the unanimous support of the United Mine Workers in their recent convention, which went on record sharply criticizing the R.F.C. for its aid to an anti-union agency. A delegation of Congressmen to protest to the R.F.C. has also been arranged.

The union, which called the strike in August of last year, represented 96 per cent of the men at work on the project.

Martin to Speak At I.L.G.W. Meet

NEW YORK—Pres. Homer Martin of the United Automobile Workers, C.I.O., will be the speaker at the second of a series of five meetings arranged by the educational department of Local 22 of the Intl. Ladies Garment Workers.

Martin's address, to be given Feb. 10 at the Hotel Center here, will be on "Labor in Automobiles."

Other lectures in the series will be delivered by Pres. Sidney Hillman of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, Pres. Michael Quill of the Transport Workers Union, and Pres. David Dubinsky of the I.L.G.W.U.

CHARGE BANK BREAKS LAW

NEW YORK—The Modern Industrial Bank of New York was charged this week with unfair labor practices by the Financial Workers Organizing Committee of the United Office and Professional Workers, C.I.O.

C. I. O. Seamen Sail Into New Victories

By Henry C. Fleisher

WASHINGTON—These are new days for the men who go down to the sea in ships.

Just a brief glance at the records of the Natl. Labor Relations Board is sufficient to convince the most skeptical among land lubbers that sailors all along the 1,000-mile Atlantic seacoast that the present generation of seamen has succeeded in building a militant union.

In a series of elections unprecedented in the precedent-breaking history of the Natl. Labor Relations Board the seamen have piled up a string of victories which rivals the accomplishments of any union affiliated with the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Week after week the NLRB has issued press releases indicating the steps by which eastern unlicensed maritime men are establishing the power of their union on practically every major intercoastal steamship line.

So far the board has announced results on 39 separate elections.

The National Maritime Union has gathered 12,073 votes, while its doddering rival, the Intl. Seamen's Union of the American Federation of Labor, has succeeded in harvesting less than 1,500—an average of less than 40 an election.

When one considers that 1,000 of the I.S.U. votes have come from workers on only four lines, it is easy to comprehend why the union seamen scoff at the idea that the A. F. of L. is any longer a vital force on the Atlantic coast. More than 500 of the I.S.U.'s votes came in the election on the Eastern Steamship Lines, whose vessels plow the waters between Boston, New York, Maine and Nova Scotia.

N.M.U. Challenges

That poll, however, has been challenged by the N.M.U., which charges that the company imported scores of "ringers" not eligible for the voting, and that an honest election would have shown still another N.M.U. victory. As it was, the C.I.O. union lost by little more than 100 votes.

Elsewhere the Natl. Maritime Union's victories have been outstanding. On the United Fruit Lines—which maintains a fleet of 32 ships—1,254 votes out of 1,426 were cast for the N.M.U. On one of the small lines — the Sword Steamship Co.—the N.M.U. polled 108 votes, while the I.S.U. was able to muster only two. On the Southgate Nelson Line, the C.I.O. margin of victory was 212 to 4; on the Grace Lines, 765 to 14; on the New York and Cuba Mail, 572 to 20.

Only three elections have been won by the A. F. of L. union.

Speaking before the recent maritime unity conference in San Francisco, Joseph Curran, general organizer of the N.M.U., pointed with pride to the rapid progress of his organization, which in the space of only a few months has enabled it to drag working conditions and pay rates from the mucky harbor bottoms into which they had fallen, and to hoist them to the top of the mast.

Conditions Improved

The contract signed with the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, covering its large fleet of tankers, is an illustration of the manner in which the N.M.U. has raised the seamen's lot to at least a par with that on the West Coast, where honest union organization had gained a foothold following the 1934 maritime strike.

Where east coast wages had dropped to practically nothing under the Intl. Seamen's Union gangster-inspired, company-union methods, the N.M.U. has signed contracts calling for $85 a month for able bodied seamen and firemen. Boatswains get $100 a month and ship carpenters $114. Workers get three weeks' vacation with pay.

In the agreement with the Black Diamond Lines, the union obtained a monthly scale $7.50 higher than that on the west coast, while the Collier agreement sky-rocketed wages by a neat 33 per cent.

N.M.U. Signs Same Pact With Two Tanker Fleets

NEW YORK CITY — Identical agreements signed by the National Maritime Union with the Tidewater Associated Oil Co. of New York, and the Pennsylvania Shipping Co. of Philadelphia, bring to five the list of contracts successfully negotiated with tanker companies in the last two weeks.

The N.M.U. has been bargaining with the tanker industry on the East Coast for several months, and expects soon to have all the remaining companies signed up.

Vanderbilt vs. Copeland

WASHINGTON—Chairman John L. Lewis of the C.I.O. this week made public a letter from Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., noted world traveler, who challenged recent charges that American seamen are unreliable.

Vanderbilt termed the alleged complaints against the sailors as "another bit of anti-American labor propaganda."

Vanderbilt's letter:

My Dear John L. Lewis:

Reading the other day of the Sen. Copeland hearing on the American Merchant Marine, I immediately sent Sen. Bailey of the U. S. Senate's Commerce and Labor Committee in Washington, D. C., the following wire:

> "Should be glad to testify before your committee concerning American Merchant Marine as I have noted it past several years. Crossed several times aboard Leviathan, thrice aboard Manhattan, once each Pres. Coolidge, Lurline and one other Dollar vessel, also several coastwise trips H. F. Alexander, Harvard, Yale. Have had much contact American sailor at sea and have never yet run into any conditions some of those testifying your committee claim occur. Have been up all night during storms and talked civilly with seamen. Have never yet seen an American seaman intoxicated on duty. Yours for fair play.
>
> "CORNELIUS VANDERBILT, JR.
> "Yacht Winchester."

This morning's mail brought the following reply from the distinguished Senator:

> "I have your wire. Upon my motion the Senate Committee on Commerce found that the conduct on the Pres. Hoover was worthy of the best traditions of the sea under such circumstances, and that such delinquencies as were complained of did not affect the crew."

But the impression is out with the public generally that it's unsafe to travel in American bottoms. Another bit of anti-American labor propaganda that is harmful and unfair!

Yours sincerely,

CORNELIUS VANDERBILT, JR.

C.I.O. Committee Formed to Organize Utilities

Seeks to Bring 200,000 Workers Into New Union

WASHINGTON—With the formation of the Utility Workers Organizing Committee, set up at a conference of utility workers held in Washington, the C.I.O. will launch a drive to organize the 200,000 workers in the electric light and power industry, second wealthiest in the country.

The new committee was approved by unanimous vote of the delegates at the conference. It was described as the next step in the direction of an international union for the industry, in an official C.I.O. statement read by Director John Brophy.

Members of the committee were selected for their experience in trade union work and in public relations, as expressed in the C.I.O. statement:

"The utilities are a semi-public institution, and it is essential that organization of this industry be directed by men who are experienced in the fields of labor organization and in public relations. We are therefore placing the responsibility of seeing the utilities workers through in their early efforts in the hands of the following committee, composed of seasoned trade unionists who have proved their competence and responsibility:

"Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee; John Brophy, director of the C.I.O.; James Nelson, president of District 50 of the Mine Workers; Michael Quill, president of the Transport Workers; James B. Carey, president of the Electrical and Radio Workers; and Sherman H. Dalrymple, president of the United Rubber Workers."

Stonkus Is Director

Albert Stonkus, chairman of the Utilities Division of the United Electrical and Radio Workers, was selected director of the committee.

Organization of utility workers was previously under the jurisdiction of the Utilities Division of the U.E.R.M.W., which had established 57 locals in 26 companies of the power trust. These locals will be transferred to the committee, giving it a base of more than 15,000 members to begin with.

Ten companies are under contract, including concerns in Indiana, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, and Michigan. Twelve subsidiaries of the Commonwealth and Southern System, one of the giants of the industry, are organized. Negotiations for contracts are under way with a number of others.

Contracts already secured have brought wage increases to the workers of from 10 to 25 per cent, in addition to seniority rights, time and a half for overtime and double time for holiday work, and an abolition of pay differentials for jobs of similar classifications.

According to Albert Stonkus, the first task of the new committee will be to consolidate locals already set up, to secure renewals of contracts about to expire, and to extend contracts to all companies already organized. New locals will be chartered directly by the committee, to which all important policy decisions of the drive will be referred.

C.I.O. Protests Hit Scripps - Howard

WASHINGTON—From a dozen points in the country came reports last week of C.I.O. bodies assailing the Scripps-Howard newspaper chain and the series of articles by Benjamin Stolberg which it ran for two weeks.

In Cleveland, the C.I.O. Industrial Union Council rapped the Cleveland Press for its "underhanded attack on the C.I.O." Previously the Akron, Ohio, Council had taken similar action.

Quill, Merrill Protest

Retraction of false statements made about the union was demanded by President Lewis Merrill of the United Office & Professional Workers. He threatened legal action. President Michael Quill of the Transport Workers Union, in a letter to the New York World-Telegram, charged the "red scare" was used to undermine the C.I.O. Stolberg is full of "personal hatred for the C.I.O. and its progressive leaders," Quill said.

The American Newspaper Guild, to which Stolberg does not belong, pointed to the fact that statements about Harry Bridges, west coast maritime leader, which appeared in eastern Scripps-Howard papers, were deleted from the stories in the San Francisco News.

Die Casters Get Special Edition of C.I.O. News

WASHINGTON—Publication of a special edition of The C.I.O. News for die casting workers, with the first page devoted to news of their union and industry, has been begun, by arrangement between the National Association of Die Casting Workers and the official C.I.O. publication. The special edition will go monthly to all members of the union.

A special Glass Workers edition is already being printed weekly for the Federation of Flat Glass Workers and the Glass Workers Organizing Committee, and similar facilities are available for other unions and councils desiring a paper of their own which also carries the national C.I.O. news and features.

Pres. Charles P. Howard of the International Typographical Union, secretary of the C.I.O., warned leaders of the A. F. of L. executive council that their usurpations of power may lead to a poll of the I.T.U. membership on leaving the A. F. of L. I.T.U. is refusing to pay the extra 1 cent a member assessment which the council is attempting to levy for its war against the C.I.O.

U. A. W. Leaders Ask F.D.R. For Relief Funds

WASHINGTON—Michigan needs an immediate appropriation of $130,000,000 to avoid "mass starvation and mass misery," leaders of the United Automobile Workers of America told Pres. Roosevelt at the White House this week.

The delegation consisted of Pres. Homer Martin, Vice Pres. Richard Frankensteen, Research Director William Munger and W. Jett Lauck, economist for the United Mine Workers.

Funds for Jobs

They requested a $30,000,000 direct relief grant and $100,000,000 for the Michigan WPA "to provide employment for those whom private industry cannot reemploy for months."

A statement issued by the U.A.W. leaders charged that the national emergency has been "created by the unenlightened attitude and the policies of those in control of our country's financial and industrial system." It asked for "immediate relief by an extension of public spending or 'pump priming' through the PWA, CCC, housing and all possible forms of public works."

C.I.O. Wins Raises For Gotham Clerks

NEW YORK CITY—Wage increases amounting to $200,000 a year and other benefits covering employes in the 44 stores of the Miles Shoe Co., were won in a closed shop contract signed with Locals 287 and 1268, United Retail and Wholesale Employes Union, C.I.O. affiliate.

Other provisions in the agreement reached after several months' negotiations, include paid vacations and legal holidays, and a 48-hour week. The contract was negotiated by Samuel Lowenthal and I. M. Simon, union representatives, and Samuel Null, attorney.

NLRB Pulls Whiskers Off Independent Unions

MILWAUKEE — Nearly all "independent" unions are nothing more than company unions with false whiskers, David Saposs, chief economist for the Natl. Labor Relations Board, declared here.

"Our analysis of independent unions throughout the country shows that virtually all of them are lineal descendants of the former company unions," Saposs asserted.

"They have come into existence under the same conditions as company unions, to fight regular unions and to fight strikes. Our many board hearings, where independent unions were involved, have brought out the fact that they are inspired, or sponsored, by employers as a subtle way to get around the Natl. Labor Relations Act."

C. I. O. Signs Pact With Hearns Stores

NEW YORK—The Department Store Employes Union, Local 1250, gained a major victory this week when Hearn's Department Stores, Inc., signed the first closed shop contract won so far in the department store field. Local 1250 is affiliated with the C.I.O. United Retail and Wholesale Employes.

The contract, which covers 2,000 workers in the Bronx and Manhattan stores of the concern, will run for three years, but provides for annual negotiations on hours, wages and working conditions.

Unions Form Michigan LNPL

LANSING, Mich.—More than 225 delegates, representing 82 local unions throughout Michigan, placed the Labor's Non-Partisan League on a permanent basis at a conference held here Jan. 30.

Pres. Homer Martin of the United Automobile Workers was elected to serve as temporary state chairman of the league until it holds a constitutional convention in June.

Vice Pres. E. L. Oliver of the League presided at the sessions.

Reminding his listeners of the importance of Michigan in the national political picture, Oliver asserted that the state has become a center for Tory attacks on labor. Rep. Hoffman and Sen. Vandenberg were pointed out as the type of public official whom labor must defeat at the polls.

Representatives of both C.I.O. and A. F. of L. unions were present at the meeting.

CHICAGO—Organized labor in the Windy City, faced with an important municipal election in the next few months, has launched the Cook County committee of Labor's Non-Partisan League.

C.I.O. Hits Move To Deport Pritchett

WASHINGTON—Refusal of the State Department to grant an entry visa to Harold J. Pritchett, president of the International Woodworkers of America, C.I.O. affiliate, was scored by John Brophy, C.I.O. director, in a letter sent to all regional directors, local industrial unions and councils, charging that the action was based entirely on "secret evidence."

Pritchett's ousting from the country was postponed until February 28, following protests to Comm. of Immigration Houghteling.

Neither Pritchett nor his attorneys were admitted to the special proceedings, Brophy said. The I.W.A. president, who was born in England, lived in Canada for a number of years prior to coming to the state of Washington.

Nine 'Young' Men Stand By NLRB

WASHINGTON — The National Labor Relations Board won partial protection from Tory attacks this week when the rejuvenated and liberalized U. S. Supreme Court dealt a sharp legal rap on the knuckles of those who seek to hamper board activities with a mass of injunctions.

In a decision read by Justice Brandeis, the nation's highest tribunal held that lower courts may not interfere with the N. L. R. B.'s actions until it has given a final order in a case.

Delegates at C. I. O. Utilities Confab

Formation of a new Utility Workers Organizing Committee of the C.I.O. was announced at meeting of representatives of workers already organized by the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, C.I.O., in the electric power field, at Washington Jan. 29. Shown seated at the table are Albert Stonkus, director of the new committee; Pres. James Carey, Sec. Julius Emspak and Organization Director James Matles of the U.E.R.&M.W.

A Tale of Teeth

—AND HOW THEY ENTERED THE FORD UNION DRIVE

DETROIT—A pair of false teeth were in the spotlight this week in the fight of the United Automobile Workers, C.I.O., against the violent anti-unionism of the Ford Motor Co.

Not only did Ford service men beat up Roy Davis, U.A.W. member aiding the Ford organizing drive, but the Henry Ford Hospital sought to hold his false teeth for security against a hospital bill accumulated while Davis was recuperating from the beating.

The hospital returned the teeth to Davis after holding them a week, as well as a gold watch taken from the union member.

Hospital authorities, after learning from U.A.W. Counsel Larry Davidow that neither the union nor Davis would pay the bill, decided they would bill the city for the money due.

"If the hospital does ask the city to pay the bill, the union will lodge a protest with the city authorities," Davidow warned. "There is no reason why the city should pay the Henry Ford Hospital for treatment of injuries to a man slugged by agents of Ford."

Meanwhile, Davidow, acting in behalf of Davis, filed suit for $100,000 damages against the Ford Co. The suit charged that "thugs and hooligans" in the Ford service department take the law "into their own hands and assault with force and violence persons who have incurred the disfavor of the company."

STEEL PACT RENEWED

C.I.O. Relief Campaign Wins Call For Funds

WASHINGTON—The nationwide campaign of the Committee for Industrial Organization to win adequate protection for the millions of the country's jobless is rapidly bearing results.

While the C.I.O. unemployment relief drive continued to grow in all sections of the nation, Pres. Roosevelt asked Congress for an additional WPA appropriation of $250,000,000. Even with the new funds, WPA expenditures will be a half-billion dollars less than last year.

C.I.O. leaders regarded the decision as a step towards putting the unions' demands into actual practice, but pointed out that the new program would give jobs to only 2,500,000 unemployed workers, leaving still another million to be cared for.

Less than two weeks ago, it is recalled, Chairman John L. Lewis issued a letter in which he pointed out the immediate need for expanding the federal relief program. The convention of the United Mine Workers called for repeal of the Woodrum Amendment, which serves to slow down the rate of relief spending; and for a deficiency appropriation of one billion dollars this year and an added two billion dollars for the next fiscal year.

Detroit Mass Meeting

The greatest show of strength yet mustered by C.I.O. occurred last week in Detroit, where at least 150,000 workers jammed into Cadillac Square for a mass meeting called by the unemployment committee representing the United Automobile Workers, the C.I.O., the Workers Alliance and some A. F. of L. unions.

The crowd adopted resolutions calling for immediate improvement in the handling of relief cases, a moratorium on time payments, a 50 per cent rent reduction and increased finances to handle relief and WPA programs.

President Homer Martin and other leaders of the U.A.W.A. told the mass meeting of their visit to President Roosevelt to ask for an immediate $130,000,000 relief appropriation for the state.

From an Ann Arbor hospital where he was confined, Governor Frank Murphy sent word to the audience that he may soon call a special session of the legislature to deal with the unemployment problem.

"If I had to choose between adequate relief and a deficit I would choose the deficit," Murphy stated.

Jobless Textile Workers Protest To Washington

WASHINGTON—Widespread suffering among textile workers who have been laid off in Mayor Frank ("I am the Law") Hague's New Jersey was protested in Washington by a delegation of workers from closed mills who called upon members of the House of Representatives and the Works Progress Administration to seek relief from present conditions.

In one city, Paterson, the delegation said, more than 7,000 textile workers have been thrown out of jobs as the result of recent shutdowns.

New Jersey representatives were told by the delegation that failure to consider the Wages and Hours Bill had brought severe hardship to their worker constituents, whose patience was wearing thin at the continued delay on legislation vital to the wage earning men and women of the country.

Plans to Merge Telegraph Cos. Rapped by ARTA

NEW YORK—The American Radio Telegraphists Assn., C.I.O., is instituting a nation-wide campaign of protest against the "current attempts of the Western Union and the Postal Telegraph and Cable Cos. to consummate an unsanctioned merger at the expense of the public and the employes in the industry."

Already, the union charges, both companies are involved in a simultaneous program of layoffs, which have slackened the "speed of service."

Tending to Monopoly

In addition it is charged that the retrenchment programs of the two wire companies "show a tendency toward monopoly" in violation of the Federal Communications Act. The union is calling for a congressional committee to investigate the communications industry in order that both the public and the workers in the industry may be protected.

Resolutions being passed by A.R.T.A. locals call upon the government to require Western Union to dissolve its ancient company union system, the Association of Western Union Employes.

Lewis Lauds New Steel Agreement

WASHINGTON—Renewal of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee agreement with the U. S. Steel Corp. was hailed by John L. Lewis, C.I.O. chairman, in the following statement:

"The steel agreement is a triumph for moderation and sound business judgment at this time. It preserves the current wage structure and standards. It maintains the buying power of labor except as curtailed by shrunken work work opportunity. It gives leadership to the confused and bewildered in business because it charts a definite course which all industry will do well to follow.

"Best of all it creates an opportunity for industry and labor to help in the solution of the country's pressing problems rather than to tear at each other's throats.

"Preceding the steel agreement of today between Mr. Fairless and Mr. Murray were a series of conversations between Mr. Myron C. Taylor and myself extending back to early December. Both of us were deeply concerned with the uncertainties of the future as affecting the whole country, as well as the immediate problem in the steel industry.

Tribute To Taylor

"The fact that our minds were able to meet on questions of principle and policy is a tribute to Mr. Taylor not only as a leader of industry but as an American devoted to the furtherance of rational relationships and national stability.

"It is unfortunate that the executives of Little Steel did not follow Mr. Taylor's advice and leadership last year. The clear opportunity was given them. Had they done so, stockholders' money would not have been squandered and workers' lives would not have been destroyed and their families made paupers.

"Conscious of Mr. Taylor's attainments and constructive approach to our current problems, I join with many others in expressing regret at his contemplated retirement."

Wages and Hours Stay Unchanged

WASHINGTON—The U. S. Steel Co. and the C.I.O. this week renewed their year-old agreement, maintaining the same wage, hour and other provisions established in the 1937 contract. The new agreement, which will run indefinitely, was hailed "as a triumph for moderation and sound business judgment," by Chairman John L. Lewis of the C.I.O.

He declared it would serve to give "leadership to the confused and bewildered in business," and chart a definite course "which all industry will do well to follow."

U. S. Steel Head

Myron C. Taylor, chairman of the board of directors of the United States Steel Corp., which this week renewed indefinitely its contract with the Committee for Industrial Organization. Taylor will retire on April 4 after several years' service to "Big Steel."

The contract, signed by a union negotiating committee headed by Chairman Philip Murray of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, covers all U. S. Steel's principal subsidiaries, with the exception of Columbia Steel Co., its Pacific coast corporation. The Columbia agremeent was to be signed later in the week.

The new steel agreement, Lewis declared, was preceded by a series of conversations between himself and Myron C. Taylor, chairman of the board of U. S. Steel, which began last December. Praising Taylor's attitude on the questions discussed, Lewis said that it was unfortunate that "Little Steel" did not follow his advice and leadership.

"Had they done so stockholders' money would not have been squandered and workers' lives would not have been destroyed," he declared.

Murray's Statement

Declaring that the new contract would help in stemming the tide of wage slashing, Philip Murray, S.W.O.C. chairman and head of the union negotiating committee, said that the renewal of the contract was "due to the excellent record made by the S.W.O.C. as a responsible labor union."

The agreement was renewed as it stands, with the addition of a reopening clause providing for 10 days' written notice by either side to reopen negotiations for changes, and providing that, if an agreement is not reached within 20 days the contract will lapse.

About 240,000 steel workers are covered by the pact, Murray said.

U. S. Steel subsidiaries covered by the contract are the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corp.; American Steel and Wire Co.; National Tube Co.; and Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Co.

Commenting on the settlement, John Brophy, C.I.O. director, declared that it "insures that the gains won for the workers in steel will be maintained, and provides a basis for completing the work of establishing collective bargaining and decent employer-employe relationship throughout the industry."

Murray Hails Pact

Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, issued the following statement:

"These wage agreements maintain the purchasing power of steel workers—the key to prosperity. Thus, while we hail the signing of the agreements as a victory for labor, we likewise look upon these new contracts as a victory for America, because of the stabilizing effect they will have on business, particularly in the steel industry.

"It is well to note that what the United States Steel Corporation does is generally followed throughout the entire steel industry. Thus some 800,000 workers will be affected by these contracts.

"The signing of the new agreements is an evidence fo the fact that the Steel Workers Organizing Committee has proved its responsibility during the life of the agree-

New Unions Coming of Age

The renewal of the agreement between the Steel Workers Organizing Committee and the United States Steel Corporation signalizes the coming of age of the new unionism of the C.I.O.

All have acknowledged the almost miraculous success of the C.I.O. in organizing new industrial unions with hundreds of thousands of members in industries where unionism did not exist before.

But enemies and sceptics have advanced the claim that this is just a "mushroom growth," or a "flash in the pan," and that it has not yet been demonstrated that permanent unions can be built for the great masses of semi-skilled and unskilled workers in the mass-production industries.

Yet the permanency of the new C.I.O. unions is being most effectively demonstrated today, when they are meeting their severest test of unemployment and depression.

The final expulsion of the Federation of Flat Glass Workers from the A. F. of L. came just a few days after it had reached what amounted to a national agreement with all the major manufacturers, protecting the workers against wage cuts for another year and bringing them a number of improvements in conditions.

And now the biggest and most basic of the new C.I.O. unions has won similar protection for the steel workers employed by the largest corporation in the world.

The S.W.O.C. some time ago proved that it could organize hundreds of thousands of workers in record time and win contracts from most of their employers.

It proved last year that it could withstand a long and grueling strike, with all the country's most powerful forces of reaction and violence aligned against it.

It has also proved its staying power as an agency of regular and peaceful collective bargaining where employers, as in the case of U. S. Steel, are willing to accord their employes their collective bargaining rights.

But above all the S.W.O.C., together with the Glass Workers and other C.I.O. unions, have rendered a great public service in these days of depression and attempted wage cuts, by maintaining the wage levels and purchasing power of hundreds of thousands of workers who previously have been the first to suffer when they had no unions.

Furuseth's Warning

Andrew Furuseth, the veteran seamen's union leader who has recently passed away, was given to expressing himself freely and pointedly.

One of the last speeches he made before an A. F. of L. convention was on the subject of industrial unionism in the mass-production industries—at the 1934 convention in San Francisco.

Some of the smug, swivel-chair leaders who are now singing Furuseth's praises and claiming him for their own, may not care to remember his indignant words on this occasion. But here they are:

Speaking of the new industries that have come into being, and warning that company unions would control the workers if labor did not allow them the type of unions they needed, Furuseth said:

"For the labor movement to oppose in any way the kind of organization necessary for these men who manufacture these new appliances would be nothing short of suicidal for the labor movement. . . .

"If we should commit the damnable crime of robbing them of their self-determination and freedom we are nothing better than a new tyranny taking the place of the old.

"I have heard many times in the labor movement the term, 'these are my men.' A delegate or a labor council or a man who is sent out to organize says, 'you are my men.'

"Who the devil is he? That is the way the master talked for centuries of the slaves. It was the same thing for centuries with the serfs tied to the soil and belonging to the land owner."

But Furuseth's warning was not heeded. The workers in the new mass-production industries were not allowed the kind of industrial unions they needed. The A. F. of L. craft leaders committed the "damnable crime" of denying them their right of self-determination.

And if this has not been as suicidal for the labor movement as Furuseth predicted, it is chiefly because the healthiest and most vigorous unions refused to heed the claims of the craft leaders that workers who did not want their type of union "belonged" to them; and because, through the C.I.O., these unions presented to millions of unorganized the opportunity for industrial organization which they sought.

U. S. Should Buy Union Steel

(From an editorial in the Philadelphia Record)

What has traditionally been the most reactionary wing of American business, Big Steel, met yesterday with what has become the most advanced wing of the labor movement, the C.I.O., and . . . and . . .

And they signed a sensible, moderate contract, in which both sides realistically made concessions. Nobody struck any attitudes; nobody called anybody any names; the Statue of Liberty is still standing.

We think both sides deserve a national handshake. Nothing more cheering, nothing more hearteningly sensible has happened in many months.

Business and labor have demonstrated that it is possible to forget catch-phrases, Liberty League bunk, cat-calls, the standard capital vs. labor Bronx cheers to effect sensible, realistic agreements that help both sides.

This is so important that something more than congratulations is called for. We think the Administration, as an act of national policy, should confine its steel orders for the new arms program to those firms which signed union contracts and show that they are willing to contribute to the national well-being.

C.I.O. Issues New Pamphlet on Relief

WASHINGTON—With the publication of its newest pamphlet, "Relief for the Jobless—And How to Get It," the C.I.O. takes a further step in its campaign of help to workers thrown out of employment by the present industrial recession.

The pamphlet, in 16 pages, describes essential step in getting direct relief, WPA employment, and unemployment compensation, and suggests ways of securing adequate help in the three divisions.

"Bulletin No. 1 on Unemployment Relief," 16 pp., price 10 for 20 cents, 100 for $1.50, 500 for $5.00. Obtainable from C.I.O., 1106 Connecticut Avenue, N. W., Washington, D. C.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

HARD TO FIGURE OUT

MANY have wondered on what principle the A. F. of L. executive council picked the three C.I.O. unions it did for formal expulsion.

Some effort was made to explain why the United Mine Workers, biggest and backbone union of the C.I.O., was singled out. But the reasons given in the case of the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers and the Federation of Flat Glass Workers (that they refused to leave the C.I.O. and gave no indication of complying with the council's orders) would apply equally to any of the other C.I.O. unions.

Those who know the council well, however, are not surprised. They did not expect any more logic or principle in this case than in the usual jurisdictional award.

The A. F. of L. has long been run by an oligarchy. A half dozen men, wielding despotic power over some of the larger craft unions, control enough convention votes to have their way on any important issues.

Union jurisdictions in the A. F. of L. do not follow strict craft lines, any more than they do industrial lines. The only lines they follow are the personal wishes of these half dozen union bosses.

And that is all the rhyme, reason, logic or principle there is to it.

What's the Difference?

The "expulsions" themselves have little significance. They are just a little meaningless mumbo-jumbo to put the finishing touches on a crime committed long ago.

The actual splitting of the labor movement occurred a year and a half ago, when the council "suspended" the C.I.O. unions.

The only differences between that act and the formal "expulsion" that has now followed, are of a minor and technical character.

The A. F. of L. leaders did not make the one more important distinction they might have made—namely to refrain from setting up dual unions until final expulsion.

A. F. of L. Dual Unionism

Months ago, while the United Mine Workers was still "suspended," a small dual union of miners in Illinois was issued a charter identical in wording to that issued to the U.M.W.

In the case of the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, the A. F. of L. leaders chartered an outright company union, known as the "Blue Card" organization.

This outfit was formed during a strike to fight the union and, just before William Green issued the charter, it had distinguished itself by marching its gunmen to raid union halls and beat up union men.

To fight the Federation of Flat Glass Workers, long before it was "expelled," the A. F. of L. council hired a discredited former officer and gave him credentials to start a dual union.

In the midst of the recent negotiations between the F.F.G.W. and all the major manufacturers, this individual tried to pull the traitorous stunt that Green himself pulled in the General Motors negotiations.

He wired a demand that the employers sign no agreement with the union. But having nothing to back him up but his own gall and an A. F. of L. charter, without any members, he was laughed out of court.

The Aim Is To Divide

But the three unions were not singled out because the A. F. of L. already had some miserable attempts at dual unionism in their fields. Every other C.I.O. union has also had to contend with such A. F. of L. dual union activities, not only since suspension, but in a number of cases while still in good standing in the Federation.

Such logic as there is to the council's action is in the consistency of its attempts to rule through division.

The council nabobs have only held their power in the A. F. of L. by insisting on craft division of the workers and preventing the growth of large industrial unions.

When the C.I.O. unions began promoting industrial organization, the council was willing to divide the movement in half in order to retain its control of what was left after suspension of the C.I.O. unions.

The recent unity negotiations again were utilized chiefly by the council leadership to promote division and dissension within the C.I.O.

And now that the council is carrying the split to its logical conclusion, it still seeks to divide its opposition by singling out C.I.O. unions a few at a time, without any particular rhyme or reason as to which.

2,000,000 New Homes Needed Throughout Nation

Brophy Asks Unions Protest WarLaborBills

WASHINGTON — Renewed warning on the dangers to labor of the Sheppard-Hill bill for industrial mobilization during war was sent to all C.I.O. affiliates in a telegram over the signature of John Brophy, Director of the C.I.O.

Sponsors of the bill, who include anti-labor as well as strongly militaristic groups, have been trying to rush it through this session of Congress. The Brophy telegram points out that the bill "would menace the entire freedom of labor unions during a war and would grant dictatorial powers in the fixing of wages and conditions of employment."

C.I.O. affiliates are urged to send immediate telegraphic protests to their Representatives and Senators.

The Story in a Nutshell

This chart, issued by the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, shows clearly how the number of new homes has fallen in recent years. Housing authorities estimate that we need at least a million homes a year for the next few years to bring the country back to its normal housing standards. C.I.O. unions are calling for adoption of measures designed to let the government conduct a real housing program.

Federal Expert Seconds Demands Made by CIO

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON—America needs 2,000,000 new homes, right now.

By 1950 it will have need for another 6,000,000 housing units.

Yet the demand for adequate building is far out-running the production of homes. For in the last seven years this country has produced an average of less than 160,000 new housing units a year.

These facts, which indicate a picture of rapidly deteriorating living conditions for millions of American citizens, were pointed out recently by Catherine Bauer, consultant for the United States Housing Administration.

Writing in the January issue of the Labor Information Bulletin, published by the U. S. Dept. of Labor, Miss Bauer warned that "Many houses must be built immediately if we are to avert an extremely serious shortage.

Situation is 'Serious'

"Estimates as to the number of houses needed immediately and over the next 10 or 15 years vary, but all agree that the present situation is serious and is apparently not being met by the current rate of house building."

The estimate of the government's housing consultant agrees in almost every detail with recent statements of Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, which together with other C.I.O. unions is calling for a government housing program aimed at the expenditure of some five billion dollars to provide decent homes for at least a million American families.

The United Mine Workers, at their recent convention, joined the S.W.O.C. and other C.I.O. affiliates in stressing that the need for such a program ranks high on labor's legislative "must" list.

Slum Areas Growing

"Our cities are growing older," Miss Bauer writes, and as a result, "systematic replacement of substandard and obsolete dwellings must be undertaken."

Many American cities, she continues, are "now being forced to face the fact that a large proportion of their area is definitely and irretrievably 'slum' and a much larger proportion is rapidly approaching that state. It is now generally agreed that a minimum standard of decency in housing must be established, and that millions of substandard buildings now inhabited must be replaced."

"Of the new homes needed, by far the greatest proportion must be within reach of families of average and low income," the article asserts.

Private Industry Incapable

Who is to build these millions of needed new homes?

Not private industry, Miss Bauer predicts, for private industry has proven itself incapable of handling such a mammoth housing program. And thus it remains for the government to step into the breach and set about the job of rebuilding the nation's housing facilities.

"In spite of the large potential demand for new homes," the article points out, "the residential building industry remains more backward and depressed than any other major industry in the country.

During 1937 less than 300,000 dwellings were built in non-farm sections of the country. That number was slightly larger than in the preceding year, but it was some 900,000 less than in the "boom" year of 1925—and at least 1,000,000 less than now necessary.

Homes Needed for Workers

The importance of these figures is increased when it is realized, as government housing authorities point out, that most of the new homes were unavailable to the lower three-quarters group in the nation's income scale.

The workers, then, are holding the housing bag. Building trades workers, though they enjoy a high hourly scale, are employed a relatively few hours a week. And the rest of the working population is living in homes which in the vast majority of cases are either obsolete or rapidly reaching that state of disrepair.

Clearly, government action is needed and that is why in a growing number of instances organized labor is marshalling its economic and political strength to force speedy adoption of its $5,000,000,000 program.

Bridges Assails Procedure at Hearing; Miss Perkins Attacks 'No-Strike' Bill

No Rebuttal Allowed West Coast C.I.O. Leader as Ryan Appears on Stand

WASHINGTON—Harry Bridges, West Coast C.I.O. director, will not be given a chance to defend himself against charges now being heard by the Senate Commerce Committee.

That announcement was made by Sen. Royal S. Copeland of New York, leader of the movement to place restrictive maritime labor legislation on the statute books, as he boasted that his was an "American committee" which could learn from Bridges nothing "that we do not already know."

From San Francisco, Bridges wired the Senator that, "As a mouthpiece of shipowners and reactionary interests, you dare not allow our testimony proving shipowners and persons such as yourself are responsible for maritime industry unrest."

His statement preceded the appearance of Joseph Ryan, president of the Intl. Longshoremen's Assn., before the committee.

Ryan, clearly on the defensive as a result of the growth of progressive forces in his racket-run union, resorted to calling all the C.I.O. union leaders opposed to him "Communists" and charging Labor Board officials and other authorities with being "allied with the reds."

Before the day was over the committee was confronted with a dozen denials, more amused than indignant, on points in the Ryan testimony.

Bridges Denies Charges

The committee has charged that Bridges, an Australian by birth, gained entry into this country illegally. Bridges has denied the charges.

In New York the C.I.O. Maritime Council pointed out that Copeland has been politically discredited, while Ryan has been forced to resign his position as head of the Central Trades & Labor Council of the A. F. of L., a job he held for many years.

"Neither of these men, nor the persons for whom they are carrying the ball, care whether there is one alien, more or less, in this country," the council's statement said. "Their chief interest is in removing from the ranks of maritime labor one of the most effective and progressive leaders who has appeared in recent years.

"The present move by these men is simply the latest in a series of attacks against the organized marine workers. The purpose as outlined time and again by Sen. Copeland, is to scare Congress into passing compulsory arbitration."

Compulsory Arbitration Proposal Called "Mistake"; N.M.U. Lauds Stand

WASHINGTON — Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins last week warned the Senate Commerce Committee that it would be "a mistake" to enact a compulsory arbitration bill for the maritime industry.

Her statement was in sharp contrast with the views of Sen. Royal S. Copeland, chairman of the committee, and Joseph Kennedy, former chairman of the Maritime Commission, whose report called for the passage of such legislation.

Miss Perkins declared that the commission can "help a great deal by encouraging and promoting the practices and procedures of collective bargaining among the shipping companies.

"If it used its influence to promote the making of proper collective bargaining agreements by the shipping companies, it could do more towards establishing and maintaining peaceful labor relations in the shipping industry than the enactment of this bill could possibly hope to accomplish."

Miss Perkins agreed with the statements of labor leaders that there is no similarity between conditions in the maritime and railroad industries, in the latter of which the Railway Mediation Act is operative.

In the shipping industry, she pointed out, "the employes are not fully organized. The employers are not convinced that collective bargaining is a good thing, and many of them do not want to deal with the unions."

N.M.U. Wins Again

NEW YORK—With four more election victories won in the latest series of polls being conducted among the unlicensed seamen by the New York Labor Relations Board, the National Maritime Union now has chalked up a total of 39 elections out of 46 held so far.

Miss Dorothy Thorenson, elected "Queen of Stenographers" at the annual ball given by the United Office & Professional Workers, C.I.O., in New York City.

Los Angeles C.I.O. Elects Officers

LOS ANGELES, Calif.—L. H. Michener, a leader of the Chrysler local of the United Automobile Workers and one of the organizers of the Los Angeles C.I.O. relief committee, has been elected president of the city's Industrial Union Council.

C. H. Jordan, representative of the American Radio Telegraphists Assn., was re-elected secretary of the council without opposition. William Gateley of the Intl. Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, was named treasurer.

Refute Anti-Labor Charges

Mrs. Elinore Herrick, Natl. Labor Relations Board director in New York City (at extreme left), appears before the Senate Commerce Committee to declare that the board had not been prejudiced in favor of the Natl. Maritime Union, C.I.O., which has won a string of elections. On the right are Secretary of Labor Perkins and Senator Copeland of the committee, shown talking shortly after Miss Perkins had warned against adoption of compulsory arbitration measures in the maritime industry.

In a Dancing Mood—

ORGANIZER FINDS NEW WAY TO ATTRACT ATTENTION TO BAD LABOR CONDITIONS

BECKLEY, W. Va. — Howard Greene, versatile organizer of the United Retail & Wholesale Employes of America, C.I.O., danced himself into a $50 fine in municipal court in nearby Mullens, but not before he had called the attention of the general public to unfair labor conditions in the town's Dollar Store.

Greene was doing a straight piece of routine picketing until the store resorted to playing phonograph records over its loud speaker system. The songs drowned out Greene's lustiest attempts to make himself heard above the din.

The union organizer then turned to the execution of fancy dance steps to the accompaniment of the store's music. His artistry attracted scores of passersby, who stopped to watch the performances and lingered to hear a short talk about labor conditions in the establishment.

City police arrested Greene and he was judged guilty by a six-man jury.

Nevertheless, picketing is being continued until a contract is signed by the Dollar Store with the clerks' union.

Wagner Files New Bill to Hit Violators of NLRA

Would Bar U. S. Buying From Anti-Labor Firms

WASHINGTON—Employers who have been profiting from government contracts on the one hand, while violating provisions of the National Labor Relations Act on the other, will be forced to comply with the Act under the terms of a bill introduced into Congress by Senator Robert F. Wagner of New York.

Beneficiaries of all government contracts, loans or grants, as well as their subsidiaries and subcontractors, are required by Senator Wagner's new bill to bargain collectively with their employes according to the public policy of the United States as laid down in the Labor Act.

In a statement endorsing the bill, Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee called attention to the fact that a number of large steel companies enjoying substantial and profitable government contracts are consistently violating the Wagner Labor Act.

"This contradiction between the public policy of the United States in furtherance of collective bargaining and the antiquated anti-labor policies of these steel corporations must be eliminated," Murray declared.

"Flagrant violations of the terms of the National Labor Relations Act," the Senator said, "and continued refusal to comply with decisions of the National Labor Relations Board, whether or not affirmed by the courts, were no grounds for denying Government contracts to the law violators," according to a ruling made by the Comptroller-General.

5,000 Texas Pecan Pickers Strike Against Wage Cut

SAN ANTONIO, Tex.—Five thousand workers in the pecan shelling industry are on strike in San Antonio, Tex., against a wage cut of 20 per cent and for recognition of their union, the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers, affiliated to the C.I.O. Operations in 200 shops are crippled, with more than 60 reported tight shut.

Demands of the workers, in addition to rescinding of the cut and recognition of the union, include a wage raise of 15 per cent, free health examinations to be provided by the companies for the protection of consumers and workers, and establishment of union committees to weigh the nuts as they are shelled and cleaned.

Donald Henderson, president of the Cannery and Agricultural Workers, reported that negotiations are under way and that progress has been made on the questions of collective bargaining rights and a committee to check the weight of the nuts.

Attack on Tunnel Union Shows Need For New Labor Bill

WASHINGTON—Citing the bloody six months strike in the Metropolitan Water District of southern California as an example of why the new bill introduced by Senator Robert F. Wagner should be passed, John Brophy, C.I.O. director, declared that the 1,200 tunnel workers involved, were struggling for their collective bargaining rights against "an open-shop, anti-New Deal political subdivision which has already borrowed approximately $150,000 from the R.F.C.

The new Wagner bill would require all persons and concerns receiving government contracts, loans, or grants, to comply with the National Labor Relations Act.

R.F.C. board directors admitted, Brophy stated further, that more than $50,000 had been spent to break the strike called last August by Local 270, International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers at the San Jacinto tunnel, Banning, Calif., in protest against wholesale dismissal of union members.

The R.F.C. disclaimed responsibility, he said, because the money spent for deputy sheriffs, tear gas and other materials, did not actually come out of government funds. Brophy termed this a "mere bookkeeping legalism."

Seattle Star Signs With News Guild

SEATTLE, Wash.—The seven-month strike of the American Newspaper Guild against the Seattle Star ended in a smashing union victory as the management signed a contract reinstating the strikers and paying them $29,500 in back wages.

Under the contract the Guild gained sole collective bargaining rights for employes of the advertising, business and editorial departments of the publication, while the status of 19 employes of the circulation depatment was left to a future decision from the Ninth United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

A lock-out of the circulation men, over whom jurisdiction had been claimed by Dave Beck, Seattle czar of the A. F. of L.'s International Brotherhood of Teamsters, precipitated the long walk-out. The men had refused to give up their Guild membership at Beck's request, and were fired by the newspaper.

Rubber Workers Push Toy Balloon Campaign

AKRON, Ohio — The United Rubber Workers, C.I.O., is set to put an end to sweatshop conditions in the toy balloon industry, it was announced here by Organizer O. H. Bosley, in charge of the organization drive.

An attempt to secure a meeting with the Toy Balloon Manufacturers Assn., ended in failure when only one member of the organization replied to Bosley's invitation.

Howard Denies A.F.L. Version of Parleys

MIAMI, Fla.—The A. F. of L. version as to why peace parleys with the C.I.O. broke down is absolutely untrue, Charles P. Howard, president of the Intl. Typographical Union, declared here. Sharp disagreement with A. F. of L. statements on the subject was also expressed at the same time by most of the other members of the C.I.O. committee in answer to a questionnaire sent out by The Advance, official organ of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

"The report to the executive council of the committee that represented the A. F. of L. in peace negotiations with the C.I.O. is inaccurate and utterly false in some of its statements," said Howard, who acted as chairman of the C.I.O. committee in the absence of Philip Murray, the official chairman.

"It is astounding that Vice-Presidents Harrison, Woll and Bugniazet, who composed the committee, would attach their names to a statement that so badly misrepresents the facts.

Proposal Never Accepted

"It is utterly untrue that the committee representing the C.I.O. at any time accepted the proposal of the A. F. of L. or that there was agreement that the suspended international unions would reaffiliate with the A. F. of L., and subcommittees be named to agree upon conditions under which the 20 other international unions composing the C.I.O. would secure affiliation.

"The statement that this agreement was reached at a meeting when Chairman Murray was absent is unqualifiedly false. It is fortunate that the 10 members composing the C.I.O. committee were in attendance and know the facts. They can attest that at no time was there any such agreement."

"The C.I.O. committee consistently refused to agree that subcommittees should be named to take up the question of jurisdictional conflicts until such time as the principle of industrial organization was accepted and all international unions affiliated with the C.I.O. had been granted certificates of affiliation with the A. F. of L."

"The conference finally adjourned because concessions to the C.I.O. that had been suggested were withdrawn and it was insisted the suspended unions should apply for readmission to the A. F. of L., after which disposition would be made of the other international unions composing the C.I.O.," he said.

Leader of Marine Engineers

Pres. S. J. Hogan of the Natl. Marine Engineers' Beneficial Assn., C.I.O., who presided at the recent convention of the organization in San Francisco. Highlights of the meeting, the first held by the M.E.B.A. on the west coast, included a refusal to accept an A. F. of L. bid for affiliation with that body; strong support of the activities of Labor's Non-Partisan League and commendation of the league's fight against compulsory arbitration in the maritime industry; and a pledge of joint action with the Natl. Maritime Union and other bona fide groups of marine workers. Next convention of the association will be held in Washington next January.

Group Forms to Fight Deportation of Pritchett

SEATTLE, Wash.—John L. Lewis, chairman of the C.I.O., has agreed to serve on a national committee now being formed to press for a permanent entry visa to this country for Pres. Harold Pritchett of the International Woodworkers of America.

The State Department, in collaboration with certain employers and reactionary A. F. of L. leaders on the west coast, is trying to deny Pritchett the right of permanent residence in this country.

Evidence that the members of Pritchett's union want him in this country was seen in his recent re-election to the presidency. O. M. Orton, re-elected first vice president, has been instrumental in forming the committee for Pritchett's admission to the U. S. Bartel McCarty was elected secretary-treasurer.

The committee plans an immediate campaign to secure a visa for Pritchett through resolutions and petitions both from labor groups and progressive organizations and individuals throughout the country.

The evidence on which Pritchett has been denied a visa, according to the committee, has been kept secret by the State Department, with no chance given to Pritchett or his attorneys to hear it.

Leading unionists and progressives on the committee include John Brophy, director of the C.I.O.; Lee Pressman, C.I.O. general counsel; E. L. Oliver, executive secretary of Labor's Non-Partisan League; Heywood Broun, president of the Newspaper Guild; Representatives John T. Bernard and Jerry O'Connell, and Roger Baldwin, head of the American Civil Liberties Union.

Police Nab Leaders Of 'War' on C.I.O.

PORTLAND, Ore.—The "war" of Dave Beck and other A. F. of L. leaders in the Pacific Northwest encountered new difficulties here when police arrested a dozen men on charges of bombings and assault.

Four of the group admitted charges of attempting to bomb boats carrying lumber handled by C.I.O. Woodworkers union and of beating up pilots of river boats.

WASHINGTON — Headquarters of the United Shoe Workers of America, C.I.O., have been moved to the Edmonds Building, 917 Fifteenth St., NW., Washington, D. C.

ment, which expires Feb. 28, next.

"We are of the opinion that the agreements definitely stem the tide of wage slashing which has been imminent throughout the country. Heretofore there has been a decided hesitancy on the part of consumers to purchase steel, due to the belief in many circles that price slashing would take place. This was to be followed by wage reductions.

"Hesitancy on the part of buyers should now be set at rest. Likewise should apprehension on the part of workers concerning wage reductions.

"It is the express determination of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee to continue its policy regarding contracts as sacred, a policy which is building a great union in steel and a union welcomed by management, as indicated by our conferences with the U. S. Steel Corporation."

PACKING HOUSE UNION WINS

MILWAUKEE—Local 491 of the United Packing House Workers Unon, C.I.O., scored a smashing victory when employes of the Cudahy Bros. plant here named it as sole bargaining agency in a labor board poll. Its vote was 406, compared to 243 for its A. F. of L. rival. Gunnar Mickelsen, C.I.O. director here, called the victory "the key to the entire Milwaukee packing industry."

The American Standard of Living?

Have you ever "looked forward" or tried to "plan a home" on wages of $1.45 to $2.02 a week? Pecan farm workers in San Antonio, Tex., got a wry laugh every time they looked at their pay envelopes; but when their employers ordered a wage cut of 10 per cent, they walked out on strike. Steel Independents Deal With Union Committees

By HOWARD J. MCCARTNEY

PITTSBURGH—The breakdown of antagonism towards the Steel Workers Organizing Committee in "Little Steel" corporations is under way. Both Bethlehem Steel and Great Lakes Steel, the latter a subsidiary of E. T. Weir's National Steel, are now dealing with union committees in settling grievances for union men.

This development, following closely the action of U. S. Steel Corp. subsidiaries in signing new contracts with the steel union, was made known in a formal announcement by Philip Murray, chairman of the S.W.O.C.

Negotiations with these companies have been going on for some time, Murray said, between mill officials and sub-regional directors of S.W.O.C. and union lodge officers.

Union Committee In Johnstown

The first union committee was set up in the Johnstown, Pa., plant of Bethlehem Steel where 28 men were recognized to handle grievances of union members. Philip Clowes, S.W.O.C. sub-regional director, and officers of Lodge 1074 carried on negotiations with S. D. Evans, management representative for Bethlehem in Johnstown.

In the Bethlehem. Pa,, plant of Bethlehem Steel, 32 union men were recognized by the company as comprising the union grievance committee. George Medrick, S.W.O.C. sub-regional director, and officers of Lodge 1409, set up these committees in conferences with J. K. Robinson, management representative for Bethlehem in Bethlehem, Pa.

Other Plants Too

Negotiations are under way to set up similar union grievance committees in other plants of Bethlehem Steel.

In addition to winning recognition of union committees in Great Lakes Steel, the S.W.O.C. through Julius Sobonya, sub-regional director, and officers of Lodges 1299 and 2051, effected a definite policy for observance of seniority rights in all future layoffs. The Great Lakes plants are located at Ecorse, Mich.

Copies of the agreement recently signed by U. S. Steel subsidiaries are being mailed to all regional, sub-regional, field directors and lodge officers of S.W.O.C., with a letter of instruction for negotiations with the 252 other steel manufacturing, processing and fabricating plants whose contracts expire Feb. 28. The remainder of the 463 companies under contract do not expire on that date.

GUILD WINS IN AP

NEW YORK—Collective bargaining rights for Associated Press workers are assured through Newspaper Guild victories in elections recently held in three large AP bureaus.

The Guild, affiliated with C.I.O., won by 81 to 10 in Washington, 18 to seven in Philadelphia, and 39 to nine in Boston.

Labor's Choice

Thomas Kennedy, Lieutenant-Governor of Pennsylvania and Secretary-Treasurer of the United Mine Workers, who is acclaimed by organized labor and progressive voters generally in Pennsylvania as the logical man to become the next Governor of the state.

Need Urgent For More WPA Funds, CIO Tells Congress

WASHINGTON—Appropriation of at least $600,000,000 to provide WPA jobs up to the end of the current fiscal year was demanded last week by both the Committee for Industrial Organization and Labor's Non-Partisan League.

In communications to the House Appropriations Committee and the members of the Senate and House, both Director John Brophy of the C.I.O. and E. L. Oliver, executive vice president of the League, pointed out that the $250,000,000 WPA deficiency appropriation asked by Pres. Roosevelt was woefully inadequate to provide work for the unemployed.

"At least 3,500,000 jobs are needed to cope with the present unemployment," Brophy said.

"It will take at least this many jobs to fulfill the administration's declared policy that it will not permit any needy American who can and is willing to work to starve because the federal government does not provide work. Already in many states and cities the plight of American unemployed is desperate."

League Letter to Congress

Oliver, in a letter to all members of Congress, pointed out that although 3,000,000 workers have lost their jobs in the past three months, according to the administration's own figures, it is proposed to put only 500,000 of them on WPA.

"On the basis of the Census of Unemployment, there were 10,800,000 able-bodied jobless, between the ages of 15 and 70, as of November 15, 1937," he said. "Since then there has been an increase of at least 3,000,000 in persons unemployed. This gives us a total of more than 13,000,000 out of work today.

"Even with the additional $250,000,000 deficiency appropriation, the WPA will be caring for only about one in five of the unemployed, on the basis of these official figures. Its plans call for an increase through June to only 2,400,000 with no provision for the rest of the 13,000,000 unemployed. The proposed expansion of WPA rolls does not even keep pace with the current rise in unemployment."

C.I.O. Sugar Union Wins Agreement After Vote Victory

BALTIMORE—The United Sugar Refining Workers Union, C.I.O., after winning a decisive election victory by 486 votes to 67 for an A. F. of L. union, has consolidated its gains by signing an agreement with the American Sugar Refining Co.

Aided by C.I.O. Regional Director Frank J. Bender, the workers made many gains in their first agreement.

Under the terms of the agreement, they will receive a week's vacation with pay; time and one-half for overtime after an eight-hour day; a 40-hour week; four hours work guaranteed when a member is called out to work; meals provided when working overtime; full seniority for union members; preference of union members over those not in the union; rest periods; change of night shift hours to meet street car schedules.

C.I.O. Wins in Detroit

DETROIT — The Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel & Tin Workers, C.I.O., has been certified by the National Labor Relations Board as exclusive collective bargaining agent for producing employes of the Fedders Manufacturing Co. The Board action follows a run-off election won by the C.I.O. union.

Another Company Union Bites Dust Before C.I.O.

ERIE, Pa.—The spread of C.I.O. union organization has resulted in the collapse of another company union.

General Electric's company union, known as the "General Electric Industrial Union," has been officially dissolved, following a report by investigators of the National Labor Relations Board on charges filed by Local 506, United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers of America, C.I.O.

The union charged that the management had "aided and abetted in the formation of a company union," and the Labor Board investigators held that the G.E.I.U. came under the Labor Relations Act ban on company unions.

Following the N.L.R.B. report, H. L. R. Emmet, works manager, announced that the company would "no longer deal with the General Electric Industrial Union as a collective bargaining organization."

The General Electric Company plant affected employs some 6,500 people.

Vote for C.I.O.

MARLBORO, Mass.—United Shoe Workers of America, C.I.O., has won a Labor Board election at the Bennet Shoe Co., Inc., getting 166 votes as against 134 for the company union.

C.I.O. Furniture Union Makes Rapid Progress

NEW YORK—Swift progress in building the United Furniture Workers of America, C.I.O., is reported by Morris Muster, provisional president, just returned from an extended trip around the country.

Organized at a unity convention called less than three months ago in Washington, the U.F.W.A. today numbers close to 30,000 members in 35 locals ranging in size from a few hundred to over 2,500.

This growth has been achieved in spite of the continued opposition of leaders of the A. F. of L. Upholsterers Union, who have quickly forgotten pledges of cooperation with the C.I.O. made at the unity convention.

Sal B. Hoffmann, president of the Upholsterers, and Al Rota, vice president, have been trying the usual splitting tactics of discredited A. F. of L. leaders to halt the swing of locals to the C.I.O., but without success, Muster says.

Rockford Goes C.I.O.

In Rockford, Ill., Rota attempted to take over Local 707 wholesale, on learning of the rank and file desire for C.I.O. affiliation. The executive board of the local was suspended, books were seized, even the locks on the meeting hall were changed, by Rota's orders. His efforts were in vain, for the membership turned out 1,000 strong to hear Muster and to vote overwhelmingly for the C.I.O.

Similar tactics were tried on the west coast, where Art Mesero, representing Hoffmann, worked closely with the anti-union mayor and police chief in trying to check organization. Local 15 faced the same tricks of suspension, seizure of books, and the like, but again the membership voted three to one for C.I.O.

Union Victories

In Philadelphia, Local 77 withdrew from the A. L. of L. Upholsterers, and elected a committee to hold the union funds in trust until the question of C.I.O. affiliation is finally decided. Sentiment among the members is strongly pro-C.I.O., according to Muster.

During this period of the formation and first organizing drive of the Furniture Workers, notable victories have been won with employers throughout the country. In Baltimore, a four-month strike of workers at the Comfort Spring factory was ended by a contract bringing wage increases of 20 to 25 per cent and union recognition.

C. I. O. Built on Rock

This rock, on exhibition at C.I.O. headquarters, was brought up from hundreds of feet below in a Pennsylvania mine. The letters C.I.O. are a natural crystal formation, produced by nature thousands of years back in geological time. Each letter is perfect, and was produced without help by man. Evidence enough—say C.I.O.-ers—that the C.I.O. has its roots deep in American history and American soil!

Technicians Set For C. I. O. Ballot; Get Union Aid

DETROIT—The Society of Designing Engineers, an independent organization in the technical field, voted here to hold a referendum April 1 on the question of affiliation to the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians, C.I.O.

The vote came after a letter from John L. Lewis urging affiliation had been received by the executive board of the Society, which has more than 1,500 members organized in the automobile plants, chiefly in Detroit.

The plan of affiliation would make the engineers' society an autonomous body in the F. A. E. C. T. It would be granted national jurisdiction in auto, auto parts, aviation and machine tool industries.

The Society plans an organizing campaign to get under way during the referendum period. Representatives of the Federation are cooperating.

The United Automobile Workers has assured its cooperation through action of the executive board, which passed a resolution supporting the engineers and appointing a board member to assist in the drive.

Lewis A. Berne, president of the Federation, has also sent Marcel Scherer, national organizer, to help in the drive.

Should U. S. Traffic With Lawbreakers?

The policy of the government of the United States, as decreed by Congress, is to protect the right of American working people to engage in collective bargaining through unions of their choosing.

The National Labor Relations Act lays down this policy, and under it collective bargaining has become established in most of the country's industries.

But there are still many large corporations which refuse to obey the law, which refuse to engage in collective bargaining with the bona fide unions of their employes, and which fight union organization with every weapon at their disposal.

Surely it is the duty of the United States government to crack down on these lawbreakers. Certainly it should not encourage them in any way to continue their lawlessness.

And yet the situation actually exists that these law-defying corporations are receiving federal funds and government business, despite their violations of the labor act.

In a recent letter to Senator Wagner, Chairman John L. Lewis of the C.I.O. points out that "certain large corporations, like Bethlehem Steel, Republic Steel, Weirton Steel and the Electric Boat Co., dominated by men like Grace, Girdler and Weir, enjoy very profitable contracts from the United States government while they brazenly flout the provisions of the National Labor Relations Act.

"Agencies such as the Metropolitan Water Board of Southern California obtain hundreds of millions of dollars from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and then practice the most vicious anti-labor policies," Lewis says.

"These wholesale violations of a basic federal law by reactionary corporate interests are supported by federal funds."

To end this intolerable situation and to insure that the government itself live up to the spirit of the labor relations act, Senator Wagner has introduced a bill (S. 3390) which requires that all beneficiaries of government contracts, loans or grants must comply with the National Labor Relations Act.

The passage of this bill is of first-rate importance to organized labor and to all citizens who believe that the government should be the first to insist on law-observance in its business dealings.

Let Your Voice Be Heard

It is coming to be generally recognized that the campaign of C.I.O. unions throughout the country on behalf of the unemployed has been the biggest factor in winning such increases in relief and WPA appropriations as have been made in the present emergency.

Unemployment committees have been set up by most of the C.I.O. unions, and in every city they have been on the job not only to protect their own jobless members but also to demand more adequate relief for all unemployed.

Nobody should be allowed to starve in this rich country of ours, and there will certainly be no starving in silence, if C.I.O. organization can help it.

It has taken constant vigilance, organized protest, and many demonstrations, such as the huge unemployed rallies in Detroit, Flint, Toledo, Indianapolis, and elsewhere, to win what little relief is now forthcoming.

But still greater and more vigorous protest is needed if the unemployment emergency is to be adequately met.

A $250,000,000 WPA deficiency appropriation means only the adding of 500,000 workers to WPA rolls, at a time when 3,000,000 have lost their jobs in the last three months.

That is why the C.I.O. and Labor's Non-Partisan League have raised the demand for an appropriation of at least $600,000,000, pointing out that the proposed expansion of WPA rolls does not even keep pace with the current rise in unemployment.

It is urgently necessary also that the Schwellenbach-Allen resolution be passed, to repeal the Woodrum amendment restricting WPA expenditures and to insure that WPA provides work for all who cannot find private employment.

The C.I.O. has issued a pamphlet entitled "Aid for the Unemployed—and How to Get It." This explains the different kinds of relief which are available, or should be available, for the unemployed and describes means whereby unemployed committees can take effective action to obtain it.

This subject deserves the study of every union, so that more and more organized demand can be made effective to obtain work and a decent living for the millions now thrown on the street through industrial layoffs.

It's An Art

L is for Labor

Many labor terms in common use today, such as blacklist, check-off, preferential shop, yellow-dog contract, are not to be found in the standard dictionaries. While a number of such words and phrases have been everyday talk for years to those active in the labor movement, they had little more meaning than Greek to the average person until the upsurge of labor organization in the past two years made labor front page news.

To meet the need particularly of that part of the general public concerned with shopping, where information concerning fair labor conditions is needed to buy intelligently, the League of Women Shoppers has issued a glossary of labor terms, called "L is for Labor." It contains up-to-date definitions of some 80 or more words and phrases and was compiled by Leane Zugsmith, well-known novelist.

"Labor is building for itself a new world and for this new world it needs a new language," states the preface. "Where there are not new words there are old words with new meanings.

"The front page of the daily newspaper would be confusing to the man or woman of 50 years ago, to the man of 100 years ago, it would be gibberish."

"L is for Labor," League of Women Shoppers, 220 Fifth Ave., New York, N. Y. 5 cents a copy. 24 pages.

I.L.G.W. Play Hit Starts Second on Way

NEW YORK—Success of "Pins and Needles," the musical revue produced by members of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, will be followed by a second production "The Outward Room," adapted for the stage by Sidney Kingsley from a novel by Millen Brand.

Tryouts will be held for union members throughout the country to select the cast for the new play.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

COPELAND'S ROMAN HOLIDAY

THE ancient practice of throwing Christians to the lions to get the Romans into a holiday mood, has recently been revived in the Senate of the United States for more business-like purposes.

Senator Royal S. Copeland has converted what was once a dignified Senate committee into a threering circus, in which not a few dozen but tens of thousands of Christians have been regularly insulted, slandered, spat upon and generally clawed up by a bunch of suspiciously rat-like lions.

The Christians upon whom Copeland has picked to make his Roman holiday are the American seamen.

An essential part of the old Roman sport was that the Christians were given no chance to defend themselves, and Senator Copeland has painstakingly followed this sporting tradition.

* * *

The Senator's committee seems to have shown a truly pagan disregard for the commandment, "Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor." For against the seamen and their leaders anything has been allowed to go.

Some of the testimony was so foul and malicious that the committee went into closed session to hear it.

No seamen were given a chance to refute the testimony of the alleged sea captain whose name was never disclosed. But his hysterical and obscene slanders were later given to the press in full.

The Senator himself joined in the slanderous charges against Harry Bridges, president of the Intl. Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's union and West Coast C.I.O. director—and then refused to allow Bridges any chance to defend himself.

But Joseph Ryan, an A. F. of L. leader who is fast losing his following to the C.I.O. and who is a personal foe of Bridges, was given full leeway to call all the chosen leaders of the maritime workers "Communists" and to make every sort of ridiculous charge against labor board and other public officials.

* * *

There is, however, just as serious a business purpose to Dr. Copeland's present line of Roman entertainment as there was to his radio talks for Fleischmann's yeast.

The purpose is to paint American seamen as a species of wild beasts who have to be tamed by anti-union, strike-restricting legislation.

It is an interesting commentary on the short-sightedness of union-hating shipowners that they should countenance and encourage propaganda so damaging to travel in American ships.

But perhaps their tie-up with other financial interests has given them a wider class-consciousness. Apparently they are willing to sacrifice some of their shipping profits to secure enactment of legislation which they hope may eventually be applied to all of American labor.

* * *

The whole business is part of an attack on democratic trade unionism. The fact that collective bargaining through unions and representatives chosen by the workers is bringing orderly labor relations and improved conditions seems to enrage labor's enemies.

The plots to frame up and deport Harry Bridges and Harold Pritchett, recently re-elected president of the Intl. Woodworkers of America by referendum vote, are part of this offensive. They are designed to cripple the unions concerned by depriving them of their democratically chosen leaders.

The attacks on the Natl. Maritime Union and its leaders are similarly directed against a union chosen by the seamen almost unanimously in a series of labor board elections. They occur at a time when the N.M.U. has brought peace and union discipline, as well as better conditions, to the industry and is negotiating agreements with most of the shipowners.

* * *

In the city which gave its name to the "Roman holiday," the goose-step has recently been introduced by Mussolini and called the "Roman step."

Today's Roman holidays a la Copeland are designed as a prelude to the destruction of democratic trade unionism and the imposition of goose-step legislation on American labor.

C.I.O. Has Plan To Fight Business Depression

Lewis Supports Bill To Bolster Labor Act

WASHINGTON—Full support for the Wagner bill (S. 3390) requiring compliance with the National Labor Relations Act by all holders of government contracts was expressed in a letter written last week by John L. Lewis to Senator Robert F. Wagner, sponsor of the bill.

Lewis' letter points out that the bill is "in consonance with the program of the Committee for Industrial Organization, of the United Mine Workers and of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee" as adopted at the Atlantic City Conference of the C.I.O. and the recent conventions of the United Mine Workers of America and the S.W.O.C.

Implements Labor Act

"I am convinced that legislation of this character—requiring beneficiaries of government contracts, loans or grants to comply with the National Labor Relations Act—is imperative to implement the policy of the United States as set forth in the National Labor Relations Act and to secure full enforcement of the law," Lewis said.

"Organized labor now sees certain large corporations, like Bethlehem Steel, Weirton Steel and the Electric Boat Company, dominated by men like Grace, Girdler and Weir, enjoying very profitable contracts from the United States government while they brazenly flout the provisions of the National Labor Relations Act.

California Water Board

"Agencies such as the Metropolitan Water Board of Southern California obtain hundreds of millions of dollars from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and then practice the most vicious anti-labor policies.

"These wholesale violations of a basic federal law by reactionary corporate interests are supported by federal funds. The measure which you have introduced would end this intolerable situation."

Bridges Demands Right to Be Heard; Anti-Union Plot Hit

WASHINGTON—Harry Bridges, West Coast C.I.O. leader, last week carried his fight for the right to remain in the United States directly to Secretary of Labor Perkins.

In a telegram to the Secretary, Bridges, who is president of the Intl. Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, demanded a hearing on the deportation proceedings.

This demand followed statements by C.I.O. National Director John Brophy and E. L. Oliver, executive vice president of Labor's Non-Partisan League, in which they urged that Bridges be given a chance to defend himself against the "scandalous charges" hurled against him in the Senate Committee on Commerce and Labor, by Royal S. Copeland.

Attack On All Labor

Brophy declared that the statements made by Copeland were an attack on organized labor generally, but were particularly vicious as regards Bridges.

"Notwithstanding the fact that an investigation of the files of the Labor Department failed to support his charges," Brophy said, "Senator Copeland has continued to denounce Bridges in the most violent terms . . . in disregard of every principle of fair play and justice."

Storm Center

Harry Bridges, president of the Intl. Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union and West Coast C.I.O. director, whose effective and militant union leadership has won him a barrage of brickbats from labor's foes. Efforts to frame up and deport Bridges are a prominent feature of the present drive to disrupt the maritime unions and hamstring them with strike-restricting legislation.

Sheppard-Hill Bill Little Changed In May Measure

WASHINGTON — Sponsors of the Sheppard-Hill bill to enforce Fascist military rule on American workers in time of war are trying a new dodge to neutralize labor's objections to the measure. They have changed its name and number, calling it the May bill (H. R. 9391) and have struck out a phrase from the previous bill.

The phrase referred to gave control over "service" to the President in the Sheppard-Hill version. Labor objections to the old bill centered on this feature, which meant conscription of workers in time of war. The new bill carries the same features, but the wording has been toned down.

Control Over Labor

The features that remain under the new phrasing are military control over labor, direct control over hours and wages, with penalties of $100,000 for workers who try to strike for higher wages, and censorship of the press.

The Committee for Industrial Organization and Labor's Non-Partisan League are continuing the fight against this measure.

Indianapolis C.I.O. Holds Big Rally on Unemployment

INDIANAPOLIS—Fifteen hundred workers crowded Tomlinson Hall in Indianapolis last week for an unemployment rally at which John Brophy, director of the C.I.O., told what the C.I.O. has already done, and what it plans to do, about unemployment faced by millions of American wage earners in the present industrial depression.

Leo Krzycki, vice president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, coming direct from a large and enthusiastic rally at Flint, Mich., also addressed the meeting.

Pointing out that the C.I.O. was the first union organization in America to do anything to aid unemployed workers, Brophy told of the early recognition by C.I.O. leaders of the gravity of the economic situation.

In detailing the present activities of the C.I.O. for the unemployed, Brophy told of the formation, on C.I.O. initiative, of unemployment committees by local unions and industrial union councils. In many cities, he pointed out, these committees have been able to secure quick action on relief from the authorities.

Right To Work Is Key To Economic Security

By C. W. Fowler

WASHINGTON—The C.I.O. has a program to beat the present industrial depression.

This program was very simply stated in the resolution on legislation passed at the Atlantic City conference of the C.I.O. It centers on one main point: every worker has a right to a job and must be given security of employment.

"The most important factor for every worker is his security of employment," the resolution said. "Such security must yield to each worker a sufficient income to permit him to maintain his family on a decent standard of living.

"Organized labor through the A. F. of L. heretofore, has not given enough attention to this fundamental demand. Certainly American industry has had no qualms about sacrificing any such security for the worker in order to meet the business requirements and competitive conditions in industry."

In this program, the C.I.O. places the responsibility for the welfare of the American people squarely where it belongs—with government. It laid down principles at Atlantic City with which President Roosevelt expressed agreement in his message to Congress of January 3, when he said:

Call for Government Aid

"If private cooperative endeavor fails to provide work for willing hands and relief for the unfortunate, those suffering hardship from no fault of their own have a right to call upon government for aid, and a government worthy of its name must make a fitting response."

The first step in such a program is jobs for all workers willing and able to work, at decent wages. The C.I.O. has consistently demanded the expansion of WPA to provide these jobs. It has opposed the Woodrum Amendment to the relief act, which requires that the current appropriation be strung out over a period of 12 months, resulting in a constantly decreasing number of relief jobs.

It has called for an immediate appropriation of $600,000,000 to the end of the fiscal year in June, after which a further $2,000,000,000 should be appropriated. It has demanded that a minimum of 3,500,000 WPA jobs be provided at once, to take care of the increasingly serious unemployment situation.

The C.I.O. has supported wages and hours legislation of the type presented in Congress and temporarily defeated at the last session. This has been done to put a floor to wages and a ceiling to hours and to increase employment throughout industry. Dozens of industries are still worked under sweatshop conditions, with inadequate living standards and lowered purchasing power the economic result.

Supports Social Security

The C.I.O. has also supported the principle of social security. Today we have unemployment compensation, old age benefits, a small provision for health and child aid—none of which is adequate. The average payment for unemployment compensation is $10 per week. The maximum is $15.

The C.I.O. urged at Atlantic City that Social Security payments be increased so that the unemployed, the sick and the disabled and the aged can have enough income to maintain themselves in decency, and can make their contribution to the economic life of the nation.

In addition, large groups of workers are left out of the present social security benefits. These include all agricultural workers, government employes, marine workers, and domestic workers. The C.I.O. has urged that they be included in the benefits, so that no class of wage earners shall be left out simply because they do not come under a certain classification.

Right to Organize

The C.I.O. has already made a major contribution to the fight against economic insecurity by winning higher wages and shorter hours for its 4,000,000 members. Wage increases of more than one billion dollars have been won. Seniority rights, dismissal pay, vacations, and other concessions are features of C.I.O. contracts.

These gains have been won by organization. The C.I.O. therefore has as a main plank in its platform for economic security the right to organize and to bargain collectively.

Without this right, labor can do nothing. The C.I.O. stands against all attempts to cripple these rights, either by company terror against union workers, by police and gunmen cooperating with anti-labor employers, or through attempts to wreck the Labor Relations Act.

Resist Wage Cuts

The C.I.O. program against depression is one of higher wages, shorter hours, and job security for all workers. At the same time, the C.I.O. fights any attempt on the part of industrialists who have brought on the depression to shove its effects onto the backs of the workers.

John L. Lewis, speaking at the convention of the United Mine Workers in Washington in January, told the delegates and the workers of America that organized labor would resist wage cuts wherever they were tried:

"For labor let me say this: As I understand what is in the hearts and the minds of the members of organized labor in this country and in the hearts and minds of every member of our own great union, labor in America will fight and resist wage reductions to the bitter end.

"In coal, in steel, in automobiles, and glass, and in lumber, and in other basic industries, labor will oppose wage reductions as a solution for the conditions that now beset the country, because labor has bought its knowledge and its experience and its conviction on that subject through long years of trial and sacrifice.

"Labor has paid a great price in human tragedy and human agony and denied opportunities, and it does not like the thought of another experience of the same character."

C.I.O. Aluminum Union Claims Thirteen Plants

NEW KENSINGTON — Certification of local unions affiliated with the Aluminum Workers of America, C.I.O. international, in 13 plants of the Mellon-controlled Aluminum Company of America, either by election or investigation has been asked from the National Labor Relations Board, according to N. A. Zonarich, A.W.A. president.

In six of the plants in the following cities, the A.W.A. is the only union in the field: Badin, N. C., Cleveland, Ohio, Detroit, Mich., Fairfield, Conn., Logan's Ferry, Pa., and New Kensington, Pa.

At the Edgewater, N. J., plant, a company union is attempting to challenge the A.W.A., and at Alcoa, Tenn., and Massena, N. Y., A. F. of L. locals also claim jurisdiction.

A.W.A. officials say that the Alcoa A. F. of L. local has only a remnant left since the breaking of the A. F. of L. strike last summer, and that a weak company union is also trying to rival the A.W.A. local.

The C.I.O. union is also asking for certification as the collective bargaining agent for employes of three southern power houses, subsidiaries of the Aluminum Co., at Calderwood, Tenn., Rymer's Ferry, N. C., and Topoco, N. C.

Union Message on Billboards

The United Automobile Workers are using billboard advertising, radio and many other modern devices in the drive to organize employes of Ford, the only big company which still holds out against the triumphant C.I.O. union. The billboards seem to have gotten Henry's goat particularly, because the union reports attempts by Ford servicemen to burn some of them down.

Marine Union Replies To Lies About Seamen

Curran Hits Back At Red-Baiting Slanders

WASHINGTON—Joseph Curran, National Maritime Union leader, hit back vigorously at the slanders and red-baiting directed against the organized seamen, when he testified this week before the Senate Committee on Commerce and Labor.

He described the propaganda campaign launched against the maritime workers, through this committee, as part of an attempt to legislate their unions out of existence.

Curran is one of the few labor men who has been allowed to answer this propaganda. Harry Bridges, president of the Intl. Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union and West Coast C.I.O. director, was subjected to the same kind of slanders as Curran, but Senator Copeland, head of the committee, refused him an opportunity to defend himself.

Attempt to Coerce

"Because seamen have won better wages and conditions through their courageaus struggle of the past few years, the shipowners are attempting to do everything in their power to coerce and intimidate them," Curran said.

"They could not defeat us on the economic front so they are asking the government they have cheated so many years, to legislate the seamen's organization out of existence, and to drive the seamen back into conditions that existed before."

Answering an attack by Joseph P. Ryan, head of an A. F. of L. union which is rapidly losing ground to the C.I.O., Curran accused Ryan of responsibility for the deaths of 17 N.M.U. seamen attacked by A. F. of L. strong-arm men on the waterfront.

Labor Men Branded Reds

Denying the "red scare" charges of Ryan, Copeland and the shipowners, Curran said that anti-labor publications "are continually branding all citizens as 'reds' and 'Communists' who have the courage to ask for real American living conditions or a change in the sweatshop wages that are being paid throughout the country.

"In the maritime industry," he said, "it has been proven conclusively that conditions exist that need correction and because the seamen had the courage to oust the leaders that were working in collusion with the shipowners, and elect from among themselves their own leaders, they were immediately branded as 'reds.'

All Bona Fide Seamen

"So far as the officials of the National Maritime Union are concerned, they are all bona fide seamen and must have at least three years' experience at sea before being eligible to hold any office in this organization.

"As to their politics and beliefs, the National Maritime Union is an organization founded upon the same democratic lines as the American government and we do not inquire into the political beliefs of our union officials.

"It is my opinion," Curran declared, "that unless this continual branding of every worker as 'red' for having the courage to demand decent living and working conditions is stopped, and unless legislation is enacted designed to protect the constitutional rights of organized labor, we are not going to help this country maintain democracy."

C.I.O. Wins 42nd Maritime Election

NEW YORK—The National Maritime Union, C.I.O., won its forty-second election in a poll of employes of the Pocahontas Steamship Co., which gave 198 votes to the N.M.U. as against 21 for the A. F. of L. union.

This brings the total vote cast for the N.M.U. in recent elections to 16,142, against 2,550 for A.F.L.

Recent elections include one on the Gulf Oil Corporation ships where the N.M.U. got 575 votes to 36 for the International Seamen's Union, A. F. of L., and an election on the American Scantic Line which gave the N.M.U. 325 votes as against seven for the I.S.U.

Ford Dubbed No. 1 Lawbreaker of U. S.

NEW YORK (UNS)—Henry Ford was denounced as "America's outstanding lawbreaker," because of his violations of the Labor Relations Act and other laws which permit workers to organize, in a speech by Pres. Homer Martin of the United Automobile Workers before an audience of 2,000 dressmakers at the forum of Local 22, Intl. Ladies' Garment Workers.

"Despite the law," said Martin, "the Ford workers know that their jobs and their homes are at stake if they even think of a union. The servicemen and policemen of Henry Ford have caused the only real bloodshed in the auto industry."

Passengers Praise American Crews

NEW YORK—A campaign to counteract the anti-union propaganda of the shipowners and their spokesmen on the Senate Commerce and Labor Committee has been set under way by the National Maritime Union.

First step in the campaign to meet the attacks of Senator Royal S. Copeland and the owners on the seamen is a poll of ship passengers and testimony from a ship's captain, a New York City councilman, and a group of American Legionnaires.

The poll shows that the men and women who come in contact with union seamen have a high opinion of their qualifications, on points of service, courtesy, sobriety and efficiency.

Workers Prefer C.I.O.

WASHINGTON—Recent elections won by C.I.O. unions include the following:

Joeslin Schmidt Corp., Lockland, Ohio, C.I.O., 114 out of 166 votes.

American Farm Machinery Co., Minneapolis, United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, C.I.O., 95 out of 129 votes cast.

Chris Laganas Co., Lowell, Mass., United Shoe Workers, C.I.O., 170 votes to 129 for company union.

The Board has certified the Natl. Maritime Union, C.I.O., on Socony-Vacuum Oil Co. ships, where it got 922 votes, against only 22 for the A.F.L.

Pecan Workers Hold Strike Ranks Despite Clubbings

SAN ANTONIO, Tex.—Five thousand striking pecan-shellers in the San Antonio area are holding firm after three weeks of their walkout, in which they have been met with police violence, including wholesale arrests, clubbing, and tear gas on the picket line.

The causes of the strike were reported as follows by the State Industrial Commission, sent to investigate by Governor Allred:

"We find wages paid to pecan workers abnormally low and living conditions insupportable. We find no justification for police prohibiting picketing or assembling of workers."

The workers, members of the Cannery, Agricultural and Packing Workers Union of the C.I.O., are on strike against a proposed wage cut of 20 per cent in their already low wages of $2 to $3 per week. They demand a 15 per cent raise, free health examinations for protection of worker and consumer, a union committee to check the weight of the nuts, and collective bargaining recognition.

Mayor Quin of San Antonio and Police Chief Kilday have declared that "no strike exists" and that therefore no picketing can be permitted, although the Governor of the state, the U. S. Labor Department, and the National Labor Relations Board have sent investigators into the situation.

Police have been used to break picket lines, to arrest whole families, including women and children, as "agitators," and to make threats of deportation against Mexican-born workers. Tear gas used against strikers resulted in serious injury to 15 workers and an infant.

Governor James V. Allred of Texas, in Washington last week, was asked by a delegation from the C.I.O. to order an end to the police and company violence.

The Governor stated when the delegation visited him:

"The rights of collective bargaining, peaceful picketing, freedom of speech, and assembly still obtain in Texas. I trust they will not be infringed in San Antonio or elsewhere in the state."

Mexican Government Protests

An international angle was added to the strike picture with the protest of the Mexican government on the wholesale terror against its citizens in the struck plants. Representations from the embassy to the State Department in Washington, as well as through the local Mexican consul, resulted in the speedy release of more than 60 workers who had been arrested for "obstructing traffic."

Evidence of workers' enthusiasm for the strike was seen in the numbers attending mass meetings and indoor demonstrations, held in spite of company-inspired police terror. Meetings of 5,000 workers have been held, with speakers both in English and Spanish. Application cards by the hundreds have been coming into the strike committee's office. In one week 1,000 workers joined the union as the result of a strike meeting.

Federal Workers Rally For Bills On Wages, Jobs

WASHINGTON—More than 2,000 federal workers crowded the Labor Department auditorium here last week to listen to four members of Congress and John Brophy, C.I.O. director, discuss bills of major interest to government employes. Jacob Baker, president of the United Federal Workers of the C.I.O., which called the meeting, presided.

Speakers from Congress were Senator Lewis B. Schwellenbach and Representatives Robert Ramspeck, John W. McCormack, and Herbert S. Bigelow.

Director Brophy concluded the meeting with a talk on "Responsibilities of Government as Model Employer," emphasizing the contradiction between the government's declared labor policy for private employers and its practices with its own workers.

Board Ruling In Postal Case Draws C.I.O. Fire

WASHINGTON—The decision of the National Labor Relations Board on the appeal for an election among Postal Telegraph Co. employes was denounced as "union busting" in a sharp statement by Mervyn Rathborne, president of the American Radio Telegraphists Assn., C.I.O.

The decision called for a so-called "national election" but excluded from the vote four states and four cities in which A. F. of L. unions have agreements with the Postal Telegraph Company.

In effect, the Board ordered an election only in those cities in which the A.R.T.A. is organized and barred from the election those cities in which the union had an opportunity to win nationwide representation.

Another point in the order which met Rathborne's fire was an attempt to nullify the agreement the A.R.T.A. has with Postal covering some 10,000 employes. The Board's ruling ordered the provision which gave the A.R.T.A. members preference in the matter of layoffs nullified for the period preceding and during the election.

The union notified the Board that it would not participate in any election held under such terms.

Rathborne's protest was expressed in a letter to the members of the Board. He stated that the union was wholly in favor of the National Labor Relations Act but that it was opposed to "maladministration of this type."

He Votes C.I.O.

Milwaukee packinghouse workers are rejoicing over an outstanding victory won by the United Packinghouse Workers Union of the C.I.O. at the Cudahy Brothers plant. Armour's Milwaukee plant is already 100 per cent C.I.O., and local C.I.O. leaders predict further election victories. The Cudahy vote was two-to-one for C.I.O. as against A. F. of L.

State Board Called In Furriers Lockout

NEW YORK—Conferences between the fur workers of New York, organized in the Fur Workers International Union, C.I.O., and the employers, began last week under the sponsorship of the State Labor Relations Board, requested by Mayor La Guardia to help in ending the lockout ordered by a minority of the members of the employers' association.

Lockout a Failure

The union, describing the lockout as a "failure," said that less than 100 of the association's 650 members had attempted to carry it into action. The union stated also that the lockout was undertaken as a desperate effort to avoid meeting the legitimate demands of the organized workers.

These demands were, according to Ben Gold, union president, for an equal division of work in the present slack period, and for no dismissals. Gold further described the action of the employers as an attempt to stampede the union into a general strike.

South Carolina League Meets

COLUMBIA, S. C.—A statewide convention of Labor's Non-Partisan League of South Carolina is scheduled to be held in Columbia Feb. 19, according to Dowell E. Patterson, state chairman.

Representatives of C.I.O. and A. F. of L. unions and railroad brotherhoods are sending representatives.

Packing Company Told To Quit Anti-Union Fight

CAMBRIDGE, Md.—The Phillips Packing Company has been ordered to end its efforts to discourage membership in the United Cannery, Agricultural Packing & Allied Workers, C.I.O., and to refrain from dealing with its company union, the Cambridge Workers Association. Four employes dismissed for union activity have been ordered reinstated with back pay.

TWOC Suspends Locals For Accepting Wage Cut

BOSTON—Denouncing acceptance of a wage cut by secret agreement, the Textile Workers Organizing Committee has suspended the charters of seven unions of the New Bedford Textile Council.

"We are moved to this act of suspension by your violation of a basic provision of the constitution of the United Textile Workers of America and the fundamental principles of trade unionism," says the order of suspension, signed by Emil Rieve, acting national chairman of the T.W.O.C.

Nashville Council Active In Elections; Aids Jobless

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—Some of the things a C.I.O. city council can do to advance the interests of labor along civic, economic and political lines are shown by the experience of the council recently started by C.I.O. unions in Nashville.

Started by ten local unions several weeks ago, the council now has affiliated membership of 7,000 workers. R. H. Brazzell of the Textile Workers Organizing Committee was elected chairman.

"We have rendered assistance in getting our members properly classified and listed for their unemployment insurance, as well as rendered service in the securing of WPA and other public employment," says Brazzell.

"We have a standing committee to look after the interest of our members in seeing that they are treated with fairness in the application of our unemployment insurance laws."

Active In Elections

In the recent mayoralty elections, the C.I.O. union members held the balance of power, according to Brazzell, and were successful in electing a mayor with a pro-labor record, who has pledged himself not to use the police force as strikebreakers or in any way to encourage strikebreaking.

"Previous to the election, and during a special registration, we had our union leaders in several wards 'on their toes' to see that all members were registered and qualified to vote in the approaching election," Brazzell says.

The Nashville C.I.O. Council is preparing to engage actively in state elections which are to follow, in order to mobilize labor's voting power to the best advantage.

C.I.O. Local Aids President's Fight

SCHENLEY, Pa.—To assist Pres. Roosevelt in his fight against infantile paralysis, an assessment of 10c per capita was adopted by the 800 members of the United Distillery Workers Local 3 of the C.I.O. The check was forwarded to the President with best wishes for success in his campaign.

The C.I.O. local operates under a closed shop agreement with the Schenley Distilleries.

INCREASING STRENGTH OF C.I.O. SHOWN IN NEW GENERAL ELECTRIC, STEEL PACTS

SWOC, Jones & Laughlin Renew 1937 Contract

PITTSBURGH—Jones & Laughlin this week became the second major steel producer to renew its union contract with the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Less than two weeks after renewal of the pact with the United States Steel Corp., the Steel Workers Organizing Committee and the company extended the existing agreement indefinitely, subject to termination after 30 days' notice.

The union is sole bargaining agency for J. & L. employes.

The signing of the agreement, which maintains the existing wage structure, showed the weakness of an "independent" union which had been established at Aliquippa.

Steel Union Busy Writing New Pacts

By HOWARD J. MCCARTNEY

PITTSBURGH — The nation's leading steel corporations, by quickly renewing union contracts with the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, are demonstrating their complete faith in the C.I.O. union.

Following closely on the heels of the new agreement signed by the United States Steel Corporation to cover 210,000 employes, 24 of the largest steel producing companies have renewed their contracts. These new agreements, together with "Big Steel," cover some 235,000 steel workers.

The balance of the 550,000 steel workers employed under S.W.O.C. contracts will be affected by agreements that will be renewed or extended in the next few weeks.

Closed Shop Contracts

Definitely entrenching S.W.O.C. in the industry, numerous steel firms are signing contracts with closed-shop, check-off clauses. Federal Enamel & Stamping Co., of Pittsburgh, employing 1,000 persons, has signed a closed shop contract, as did John J. Nesbitt Co., Philadelphia.

Companies extending last year's agreement include Timken Roller Bearing Co., and subsidiaries, with 12,000 employes; Cooper-Bessemer Corp., Grove City, Pa., with 2,500 employes; Columbia Steel & Shafting Co., Carnegie, Pa., with 450 employes; and Union Electric Steel Co., Carnegie, Pa., with 200 employes.

New union contracts have been signed by Walworth Co., Greensburg, Pa. (2,000 employes); Pittsburgh Screw & Bolt Co., Pittsburgh (1,500 employes); Coolerator Corp., Duluth, Minn. (900 employes); National Enameling & Stamping Co., Granite City, Ill. (775 employes); Canton Stamping & Enameling Co., Canton, O. (500 employes); Wald Mfg. Co., Maysville, Ky. (350 employes); Ontario Malleable Iron Co., Oshawa, Can. (250 employes); Richmond Structural Steel Co., Richmond, Va. (200 employes); Morrow Mfg. Co., Wellston, O. (100 employes).

All in all, including new contracts, extensions and contract renewals, some 512 steel manufacturing, processing and fabricating companies are under contract with the S.W.O.C.

WIN CLOSED SHOP

PHILADELPHIA—The American Federation of Hosiery Workers, C.I.O., has signed a closed shop contract with the Apex Hosiery Co. of this city.

Wage Slashing Stemmed by Steel Union, Says Murray

CLEVELAND—The C.I.O. steel union's fight to uphold present wage scales was successful in stemming the tide of wage slashes, Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, said at a C.I.O. meeting in Cleveland.

Giving what he termed the "inside story" of the negotiations with U. S. Steel officials which resulted in a renewal of the contract without any wage reductions, Murray said that a formula based on the proposal that wages be reduced when production fell below 50 per cent was definitely turned down by the union.

"We would not agree that workers in the steel industry should be tied to a formula that would include immediate wage reductions," Murray said.

Paving Cutters Leave A. F. of L.

ROCKPORT, Mass.—The Paving Cutters International Union has withdrawn from the American Federation of Labor in protest against the executive council's war upon the C.I.O.

The union had been an A. F. of L. affiliate for 50 years.

Albert M. Anderson, president of the International, stated his union's decision as follows:

"After 50 years of affiliation we have withdrawn from the A. F. of L. in protest against its per capita tax, as this increase is being used to fight the C.I.O. in organizing the unorganized, which the A. F. of L. has been unable or unwilling to organize."

Lewis Lauds Contract As 'Intelligent Solution'

WASHINGTON — Chairman John L. Lewis of the Committee for Industrial Organization praised the contract with General Electric, won by the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, as a step towards bringing about "intelligent solutions" to industrial relations problems.

"Both the U.E.R.&M.W. and the General Electric Co. are to be congratulated for their contribution to the establishment of enlightened industrial relation," Lewis stated.

"This agreement serves as one more example of the task the C.I.O. is undertaking—to develop intelligent solutions for complicated employer-employe problems, and to benefit the entire American public by bolstering the national wage structure at a time when wage cutting would be disastrous."

UER & MW Recognized As Bargaining Agency

NEW YORK—The United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, C.I.O., has won a signed contract from the General Electric Co., largest manufacturers of electrical equipment in the country. The pact followed a series of conferences between union leaders and heads of the company during the past two weeks.

The contract, the first national agreement signed by the company with any union, makes the U.E.R.&M.W. sole bargaining agent for the workers in seven plants, while others of the company's plants will come under the terms of the agreement as soon as the union gains a majority of the workers.

The 40-hour week, seniority rights and the company's current wage scale are included in the contract, which provides that the pay schedule can be revised only after negotiations with the union.

Seven Plants Covered

The contract is to go into effect immediately upon ratification by the locals in the seven plants covered—Schenectady, River Works and West Lynn Works at Lynn, Mass.; Bridgeport, Conn.; Cleveland; Fort Wayne, Ind., and New Kensington, Pa.

The company employs 27,000 workers in these locations, and about 33,000 in its other plants.

Pres. James Carey, Sec.-Treas. Julius Emspak and Organization Director James Matles represented the union in the conference with G.E., while Gerard Swope, Owen D. Young and William Burrows, vice president in charge of manufacturing, negotiated the pact for the company.

The following is a summary of the contract:

1. The company agrees to recognize the union as sole collective bargaining agency in plants where the union has or shall in the future be so designated, whether by an election under the auspices of the NLRB, by certification by the NLRB or by other appropriate

C.I.O. Wins Armour Plants in New York

NEW YORK—Workers at two breach houses of Armour & Co. in New York will be represented by the C.I.O. United Meat Workers local industrial union No. 635, as a result of a National Labor Relations Board election. The Board has certified the C.I.O. union.

The branch houses located in Jamaica, together employ about 60 workers.

Newspaper Guild Gains Three New Victories

Signs Agreement With Boston Publisher

BOSTON—Wage increases totaling $100,000 were gained by the Boston Newspaper Guild when the Herald-Traveler signed a contract covering editorial, building maintenance and mechanical workers.

The new contract, hailed by Guild leaders as a major advance for the union in New England, brought with it the five-day week for editorial department employes, while providing non-editorial department workers with sick leave and vacations with pay.

While members of the bookkeeping and clerical departments were not covered by the pact, the Guild's strength brought them increased minimum pay rates.

Typical of the new deal brought to the Herald-Traveler staff by the guild contract was the case of a watchman whose hours were cut from 72 to 48, while weekly salary was raised some 30 per cent.

Moves Ahead on New York Tabloids

NEW YORK—All non-mechanical workers on Ne wYork City's two tabloid papers—more than a thousand in all—will in the future be represented by the New York Newspaper Guild, C.I.O.

The Natl. Labor Relations Board certified the guild as sole bargaining agency for all editorial and business department employes of the Hearst-owned Mirror. The decision, made after a board examiner had held hearings late last year, pointed out that the various departments are so bound together that their problems are completely related.

The NLRB decision in the Mirror case was the first of its sort in the newspaper industry.

At the same time the Daily News, the city's other tabloid, announced that it will recognize the Guild as bargaining agent for the employes of the commercial and allied departments. The News has been under contract with the Guild for several years, but the pacts have covered only the editorial workers.

Negotiated Contract With General Electric

Leaders of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, C.I.O., who this week negotiated the first national pact yet made by the General Electric Company with a labor union. Left to right, Sec.-Treas. Julius Emspak, Pres. James Carey and General Organizer James Matles of the U.E.R.&M.W. Contract will go into effect following its ratification by locals in G.E. plants.

Goobers Go Union; CIO Signs Planter's

WASHINGTON — You can get your goobers from a union shop now. The Cannery and Agricultural Workers, C.I.O. affiliate, has signed a contract with Planter's Peanuts, largest firm in the country, covering 1,200 workers in its plant at Suffolk, Va.

The agreement, negotiated by John Suttle, C.I.O. director in Virginia, and Leif Dahl, Cannery Workers' representative, provides for sole bargaining rights, seniority, a 40-hour week, overtime pay, and grievance machinery for settlement of disputes.

Girdler Gets Bonus!

PITTSBURGH — Members of Lodge 1074 of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee at Johnstown this week gave Tom Girdler, president of Republic Steel Corp., a pay raise of $1 a year.

Learning from published accounts that Girdler's 1936 salary amounted to only $174,999, the union boys collected a dollar, and sent it by registered mail to the Republic union-baiter "so as to bring Girdler's salary to an even $175,000."

VOL. I WASHINGTON, D. C., FEBRUARY 26, 1938 No. 12

C.I.O. Is Still Advancing

With the General Electric agreement, the Committee for Industrial Organization has become firmly entrenched and accepted in another of America's basic mass-production industries.

General Electric is the U. S. Steel of the electrical industry. Its national agreement just signed with the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers of America is comparable to the history-making C.I.O. agreement last year which signalized U. S. Steel's acceptance of collective bargaining.

It is significant also that the C.I.O. is able to announce this great forward stride in the midst of depression and unemployment—at a time, that is to say, when all its foes predicted it would not only fail to hold its ground but have to retreat.

Now it can be shown that the sensational gains made by the C.I.O. in the period of industrial upturn were built on a solid foundation.

C.I.O. has more than held its ground in the steel, automobile, rubber, electrical manufacturing and other previously unorganized industries.

In the steel industry, the renewal of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee agreements with U. S. Steel and Jones & Laughlin is being followed by renewals with all the other companies with which it held contracts. In addition, the S.W.O.C. is winning new agreements with companies which never dealt with it before, and even the opposition of the big independents is beginning to crack.

In nearly every other industry, C.I.O. contracts are similarly being renewed and new ones signed.

A great dam has thus been built by the C.I.O. in the basic industries against the flood of wage cuts which might otherwise engulf the land, spreading wholesale misery in their wake.

At the same time, the C.I.O., so far from retreating, is advancing into new industries which never knew collective bargaining before, as witness the recent winning of a nationwide agreement with the Postal Telegraph Co. by the American Radio Telegraphists Association.

Unemployment therefore has not checked the advance of the C.I.O. On the contrary, by forcing the C.I.O. to mobilize its membership to demand jobs for all who need them and for more adequate relief, it has shown that this new labor movement can serve the workers through both weal and woe —and has thereby increased their loyalty to the movement.

Previously it was an axiom that labor marked time or retreated in times of depression. But the new and more vigorous movement which C.I.O. has brought into being has not retreated, nor is it marking time—it is still advancing.

A Conspiracy Against Labor's Rights

A loathsome conspiracy is under way against the right of American workers to engage in collective bargaining through representatives of their choosing.

Outright assaults on this right have been defeated by the organized industrial and political strength of labor. So now labor's enemies are engaging in the most slimy maneuvers, with the aid of stoolpigeons and labor spies, to deprive some of the unions of their chosen representatives.

The lumber workers of the nation have elected to engage in collective bargaining with Harold Pritchett as their leading representative.

They have elected him to the honorable and responsible position of president of their great international union, the International Woodworkers of America.

The longshoremen have similarly placed their faith in Harry Bridges, president of the International Longshoremen and Warehousemen's union, whose outstanding record of labor leadership has also won him appointment by Chairman John L. Lewis as West Coast director of the C.I.O.

These two men have been singled out by labor's enemies for a campaign of slander, petty persecution and outright frame-up which is a disgrace to any civilized community and a deliberate affront to the whole labor movement.

The persecutors of these two presidents of C.I.O. international unions are now demanding that the Federal Government aid them in their plot to deprive the workers they represent of their chosen leaders.

The Committee for Industrial Organization will do all in its power, not only to defend Bridges and Pritchett in the exercise of their full legal rights, but also to defend the whole labor movement against this type of underhanded conspiracy against the democratic right of American workers to have union leaders of their own and not the employers' choosing.

The Handwriting On The Wall

Steel Strikers Hail C. I. O. As Labor Sampson

TARENTUM, Pa.—Members of Penn Iron & Steel Lodge 1044, who have been locked out of their jobs since October 27, this week went on record to "highly commend the C.I.O. with our steadfast support and strength."

The lodge is composed mostly of Negroes, and the resolution, according to Sec. Earl Lee, "is the answer this local gives at the end of a year of C.I.O." With a picket line on the job 24 hours a day, most of the men are loyal "although some times hungry, but unionism must go on, and contract breaking companies must respect unionism —at least ours," Lee declared.

Salutes the C.I.O.

The lodge's resolution declared "we have at last found our Moses in the great C.I.O., that has been able to weld labor into a solid mass, that it might enter the conflict against the hitherto unconquerable foe that has so long harassed us and our families."

The pledge of support concluded: "We salute you, C.I.O., in bringing cheer to our firesides, hope to our families, possibilities to our children, freedom to us as workers, and although you are an infant as to age, you are a Sampson for strength, and the battle cry of the captives whom you have delivered shall ever be, 'The C.I.O. Forever.'"

CIO News To Become Eight-Page Paper

Plans are under way to increase the size of The C.I.O. News from four to eight pages, beginning about the middle of March.

The make-up of the paper will be changed and improved and new features added.

With the larger paper, The C.I.O. News will be able to offer more pages to unions wishing to subscribe for special editions.

Through such editions, C.I.O. unions without papers of their own, can have an official organ featuring their own news on as many pages as they desire, and at the same time including the national C.I.O. news and features.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

DORE'S DEFEAT

THE defeat of Mayor Dore in Seattle has anti-C.I.O. politicians worried — and with good reason.

Dore is a west coast version of Jersey City's Mayor Hague. Unable to distinguish himself in any other way, he has achieved some notoriety by his violent threats against the C.I.O.

More humble than Hague, however, Dore cheerfully and publicly admitted he was not his own boss. He paid constant tribute, by word and by deed, to Dave Beck, the real boss of Seattle.

Beck is a Teamsters' union official who rules over his rank and file with a rod of iron—or rather, with a whole arsenal of rods, wielded by his "goon squads."

Not content with beating up teamsters who disagree with him, Beck has attempted to extend his goon empire, not only over all west coast labor, but over whole cities as well.

In Seattle, it was Beck's goons who ruled, and Dore was a puppet King Blozo whom they kept in power.

Getting Tough With the C.I.O.

When Beck decided he didn't like the C.I.O., Dore at once Charley-McCarthied, "Me too."

When Beck had his goons get tough with C.I.O. workers, Dore gave him full license to get still tougher.

When Beck threatened C.I.O. strikers with injury of life and limb, Dore publicly stated that "pickets who resist too much will go to the hospital or the morgue."

Another classic utterance of Seattle's Blozo, king of Beck's goons, was to the effect that he and they had the C.I.O. backed to the waterfront and were going to shove it off into the sea.

Up and Down The Coast

Beck tried to shove the C.I.O. into the sea last year in San Francisco, but his strike-boycott against the longshoremen failed miserably.

He sent his goon squads down to Los Angeles, but the C.I.O. organized thousands of unorganized there and has established a solid labor movement which Beck cannot dent.

In Portland, Beck and his crowd have tried to boycott the C.I.O. woodworkers' union out of existence, with as little success as in San Francisco.

Unable to defeat the C.I.O. in open battle, Beck and the employers are now resorting to subterfuge. They are trying to pressure the federal authorities into becoming their tool, as Dore has been, to rid them of the C.I.O. leaders, Harry Bridges and Harold Pritchett, who have led the successful fight against them.

Beck's Rule Totters

But now the C.I.O. has pushed the war right into Beck's own camp.

Just before the election, the American Newspaper Guild won an outstanding victory in the Seattle Star strike, which Beck and Dore tried desperately to break.

And in the recent elections the C.I.O. had the support of all decent citizens, including much of the A. F. of L. rank and file, in its drive to clean the city of Beck-Dore politics.

The result is that Humpty-Dumpty Dore has had a great fall, and all of Beck's horsing and all of his goons failed to get him even a place in the run-off elections. He rated a poor third in the primaries.

By thus defeating Dore, the C.I.O. has struck at the very seat of Beck's tottering power. For he and his kind rule by force and corrupt politics, not by the consent of the governed. Once their political power is gone, it is the beginning of the end.

How To Court Defeat

The C.I.O., on the other hand, bases itself on the active desire of the workers for strong unions of their own choosing. It has shown a remarkable ability to establish itself in face of the most violent opposition of employers and administrations like those of Dore and Hague.

Politicians of their stripe have thought it a smart trick to combine service to union-hating employers with pretensions of friendship for labor, by declaring they love the A. F. of L. officials and hate the C.I.O.

But the Seattle primaries have shown that labor voters are not so easily fooled, and that C.I.O. is becoming a first-class political power.

Politicians elsewhere may also take note that, if they yearn for retirement, one way to get a good boost in that direction is to pick a fight with progressive labor, as represented today by the C.I.O.

NLRB Official Blasts "Union Irresponsibility" Myth

Senate Passes Relief Bill; CIO Pushes Drive

WASHINGTON—Passage by the Senate of the $250,000,000 relief deficiency bill was seen as a partial step toward the realization of the C.I.O. program for unemployed workers.

At the same time, the Senate voted that the Woodrum amendment to the 1937 relief act should not apply to the defficiency appropriation.

The Woodrum amendment, which the C.I.O. has vigorously opposed, requires the WPA to stretch its money over a period of 12 months, rather than to spend it according to need. The Senate action is a first step in ending this limitation on relief spending, hastening jobs for unemployed workers. Action by the lower house, however, is still required.

An attempt by Senator Bone of Washington to raise the appropriation to $400,000,000 was defeated in the same vote, as was an attempt from the tory side by Senator Hale of Maine to cut the bill to $200,000,000.

Result of C.I.O. Drive

The C.I.O. has campaigned for a much greater appropriation to carry on relief work during the present industrial depression, demanding an immediate minimum of 3,500,000 jobs, for which $600,000,000 in deficiency money is needed.

"It will take at least this many jobs to fulfill the administration's declared policy that it will not permit any needy American who can and is willing to work to starve because the Federal Government does not supply work," John Brophy, director of the C.I.O., stated in a telegram to the House Appropriations Committee.

Labor's Non-Partisan League, through its executive head, E. L. Oliver, made a similar plea, pointing out that 13,000,000 was a conservative estimate based on the administration's own figures for the number of men and women out of work today.

Ask for $600,000,000

The League statement criticized the $250,000,000 proposal as insufficient, and joined with the C.I.O. in demanding a minimum of $600,000,000 as a step toward meeting the crisis caused by the industrial recession.

Reports coming in from C.I.O. affiliates all over the country confirm the critical need that exists in every industrial city and in the small towns as well. Detroit reports an immediate need for 150,000 relief jobs. Buffalo has over 90,000 unemployed. Indianapolis needs 30,000 jobs immediately,

7,000 Hold Ranks In Pecan Walkout Despite Police

SAN ANTONIO, Tex.—Their unity unbroken after a month's police violence, more than 7,000 pecan shellers in the San Antonio area are holding their strike against cuts in wages of $2 to $3 per week, with hundreds of members joining the union, a local of the C.I.O. Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers, each week.

The police and the mayor of San Antonio have disregarded reports of the Texas State Industrial Commission, the U. S. Labor Department, the labor relations board, and labor and liberal groups throughout the country.

Mass meetings in support of the strike have been held every night in San Antonio, with an average attendance of 5,000 to 7,500 workers. In spite of Mayor Quin's announcement that there was no strike, and that therefore picketing could not be allowed, more than 60 pecan shelling shops are tight shut and close to 200 crippled in their operations.

Five hundred strikers have been arrested in 25 days, and a large number ordered to leave the city.

LNPL Watches Votes Cast By Congressmen

WASHINGTON — Congressmen and Senators going to the people for re-election in the next campaign will find union and progressive voters in possession of their complete records on bills of importance to labor, as a tabulation of their votes on such measures just prepared by Labor's Non-Partisan League will show.

The League, from its Washington headquarters, has prepared the study on the basis of each Representative and Senator's action on 12 major bills affecting workers and farmers, and is distributing it to voters in every Congressional district throughout the country.

Bills Of Concern To Labor

The tabulation takes in bills either favored or opposed by the League, according to their effect on labor and the working farmers.

Included in these are three bills in the Senate that would reduce relief and are opposed by the League; an anti-sitdown strike bill presented in both Houses, also opposed by the League; the wages and hours bill, favored by the League; the anti-lynching bill, vigorously pushed by the League throughout the session; and the farm bill and farm tenant aid measure, also favored.

Cudahy Ordered to Give Up St. Paul Co. Union

CHICAGO—Cudahy Packing Company, Chicago, has been ordered by the Labor Board to disband a so-called independent union at its plant in Newport, Minn., which it had recognized as sole bargaining agency for all employes.

The Board in announcing issuance of a cease and desist order, said that the company "had dominated and interfered with the formation and administration of the Packing House Workers Union of St. Paul" to forestall the organization drive of the C.I.O.

Bus Drivers Strike Against Pay Cuts

FLINT, Mich.—Every bus in this city was idle as 110 drivers and other employes employed by the Flint Trolley Coach, Inc., went on strike against pay cuts of five cents an hour.

The cut, which went into effect February 1, cut the pay scale to 65 cents an hour. The strike is being conducted by the Transport Workers Union, C.I.O.

SWOC Lodge Fights Attack By AFL Unions

DETROIT — Lodge 1511 of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee this week moved to protect itself from attacks by the officials of the Sheet Metal Workers, A. F. of L.

The A. F. of L. outfit, which according to Pres. D. A. Downing of Lodge 1511, has never been able to organize 1 per cent of the workers in the sheet metal industry, is now seeking to tear down the S.W.O.C. gains. Eight industrial sheet metal shops, which have been under contract for some time with the S.W.O.C., have been placed on the A. F. of L. union's "unfair" list.

Lodge Asks Support

The companies — the Newcomb David Co., the Schmieg Sheet Metal Works and the Industrial Sheet Metal Works — have been seriously hampered by the A. F. of L. boycott, and as a result C.I.O. workers have been thrown out of work.

The S.W.O.C. lodge recommends that C.I.O. members ask to see the cards of mechanics who may come into their shops to handle the products of these companies and "if found to be A. F. of L., take such steps as may be necessary to advise them of their position."

Seeks Cooperation

S.W.O.C. officials have also asked that C.I.O. workers refuse to allow employes of the R. C. Mahon Co. to do fabricating work in their plants, since the company has been waging a stubborn fight against the C.I.O.

Saposs Says Anti-Labor Forces Magnify Troubles

WASHINGTON—Anti-union employers can't have their cake and eat it, too.

This fact was pointed out here by David Saposs, chief of the Natl. Labor Relations Board's division of economic research, in a statement issued by the government agency.

"For employers to combat unionism on the one hand and advocate more union responsibility on the other are two mutually contradictory positions," Saposs stated. "Union responsibility is unattainable without internal union strength."

"Union responsibility," he continued, "is essentially a function or consequence of the willingness of employers to accept unionism as a normal and natural institution."

Saposs declared that "proofs of union irresponsibility are hard to find." Usually, the charges come from "staunch open-shop advocates," who merely fling accusations into the press in order to further their long-time program of hostility to organization of labor.

Unions Beneficial

"On the other hand," he shows, "there have been relatively few complaints from employers who have dealt with unions over a period of years and who have found from their own experience that unions keep their agreements and thus also relieve the employers of many small annoyances. Some violations of agreements do undoubtedly occur, but it is rarely possible to put the blame for those entirely on the union.

"Resort to a short walk-out, which is always conspicuous as a violation of the agreement, is often in protest against less obvious breach of contract, such as an accumulation of small violations committed by the foreman."

"Mutual respect and good faith rather than acrimonious disputes before the law are the bases on which union responsibility must be founded.

"A collective agreement carries with it a moral responsibility more effectively binding upon its signers that that legal responsibility which lets them feel free 'to hire a lawyer to drive a coach and four' through an agreement."

Utopia for Racketeers

Meeting the argument that incorporation would increase responsibility by eliminating racketeering from unions, Saposs pointed out that labor racketeers would gloat over the opportunity to use "paper corporations and dummy offices" to achieve their ends.

Those who argue that labor unions should be forced to incorporate because some business concerns do, the National Labor Relations Board officials said, overlook the fact that:

"If we take more nearly analogous organizations, such as trade associations, Chambers of Commerce, or fraternal organizations, we do not find insistence that they be compelled to incorporate."

What About Registration?

In recent years there has been a growing tendency to suggest registration of unions, often along English models. Those who sponsor such measures overlook, however the following facts:

1. That registration legislation was passed in England, only after trade unionism had been fully accepted by all groups in the population, and the unions were sufficiently strong to bargain equally with employers.

2. Registration is voluntary. In 1935, only 449 out of 1,042 English unions had registered under the terms of the act.

3. English unions administer government funds for old age and unemployment pensions, so that "there exists here a real basis for governmental supervision."

American unions, Saposs pointed out, fear compulsory registration, for "by withholding approval of union by-laws or by cancelling a union charter, a government agency could reduce a union to a status of illegality and thus greatly hamper its activities."

PHILADELPHIA — The Industrial Union Council in Philadelphia, delegate body of C.I.O. unions, will be reinforced shortly by four large locals of leading C.I.O. international affiliates.

C.I.O. Collects $3,000 For Jersey Drive

NEWARK, N. J. — Embattled Jerseyites once again came to the aid of the C.I.O. in its fight against Mayor Frank Hague's Jersey City dictatorship, when 3,000 people attending a union rally here contributed $2,764 to the C.I.O. campaign.

The money, collected in addition to the 25 cents admission charge, was given on the promise that "every 25 cents puts a new union member in Jersey City."

The crowd, which filled the Mosque Theater here, heard Congressman Jerry J. O'Connell of Montana, urge that Hague be placed "in the penitentiary, where he belongs." William Carney, C.I.O. regional director in Jersey, described new attacks on union organizers by the Hague machine.

N.M.U. Gets Charter As C.I.O. Affiliate

NEW YORK—The Natl. Maritime Union was presented with its C.I.O. charter this week.

The union, which has long been closely tied to the C.I.O., only recently completed a referendum of its members, which found 19,072 in favor and only 1,084 against the affiliation move.

The charter presentation took place at Manhattan Plaza, with Allen Haywood, C.I.O. regional director, in charge of the ceremonies.

Rapid Progress!

Here's evidence that District 50 of the United Mine Workers, C.I.O., hasn't been lying down on the job of organizing gas, coke and by-products workers. The district has signed close to 70 contracts, provisions of which are indicated in this chart prepared for the union.

Labor's Non-Partisan League Active In Eastern States

PENNSYLVANIA

HARRISBURG — Labor's Non-Partisan League has swung into action throughout the entire state to prepare for the 1938 election campaign.

Hundreds of thousands of circulars have been distributed, and all state league subdivisions are being mobilized in a campaign to get every eligible worker to register before the primaries.

The League is expected to play an important part in the Keystone State elections.

DELAWARE

WILMINGTON, Del.—Labor's Non-Partisan League has come into Delaware, the state of the duPonts.

At a preliminary meeting here, representatives of both A. F. of L. and C.I.O. unions united to form the new state political organization. Leaders of the state federation of labor, the A. F. of L. central labor union, and Miles Sweeney, regional director of the C.I.O., were among the speakers at the meeting, which took action to form a permanent state league.

ILWU Asks Copeland to Give Hearing to Bridges

C.I.O. Counsel Attacks Proposed No-Strike Bill

WASHINGTON—Collective bargaining rather than compulsory arbitration for the maritime industry was demanded in a letter from Lee Pressman, general counsel of the C.I.O., to Senators Thomas and Copeland of the Senate Commerce Committee.

Pressman pointed out that the refusal of the shipowners to bargain collectively in good faith with the seamen was the cause of "abominable conditions for the seamen on board ships and exceedingly low wages for all maritime workers."

In a second communication, Pressman stated:

"The Intl. Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, having over 25,00 members, is the collective bargaining agency for an overwhelming majority of the longshoremen and warehousemen and other dock workers on the Pacific Coast, and for a substantial number of such workers on the Gulf and East coasts.

Requests Turned Down

"This union has not yet had an opportunity to present its views before your joint committee with reference to the proposed legislation.

"Mr. Harry Bridges, its president, is now in Washington. The C.I.O. has repeatedly requested this joint committee that an opportunity be afforded to Mr. Bridges to present evidence regarding such legislation.

"Furthermore, Mr. Bridges desires an opportunity before the joint committee to answer the wild and loose-lipped accusations that were made against him by several irresponsible witnesses and discredited labor officials, such as Joseph P. Ryan, of the Intl. Longshoreman's Assn., A. F. of L."

Union Agreements the Solution

"On the Atlantic coast," he said, "although the National Maritime Union has been certified by the N.L.R.B. as the proper collective bargaining agency for the seamen in over 40 elections, many shipowners have adopted an arrogant attitude that they will not enter into collective bargaining agreements."

The C.I.O. counsel stated that when collective bargaining agreements are made by the shipowners, there will be no need for compulsory arbitration measures such as those now proposed by the shipowners and their allies on the Senate committee.

General Electric Signs With C.I.O.

means satisfactory to both company and union.

No Discrimination

2. There shall be no discrimination by the company or any of its agents against any employe because of union membership.

3. Points which cannot be settled by negotiation between local union officials and plant managers may be referred to an executive officer of the company.

4. In the event no agreement is reached through direct negotiation, the company and the union will consider referring the dispute to an impartial arbiter.

5. The company and the union agree that neither will take overt action against the other in case of dispute without first exhausting all means provided in the contract for settlement of disputes.

6. The company will not give financial or other aid to any labor organization.

Wages and Hours

7. Company policies as to wages, hours and conditions of employment, previously determined solely by representatives of the company, are incorporated in the contract and made subject to modification through negotiation.

8. On questions affecting employes and not covered in this agreement the company agrees to notify the union as soon as the supervisory force of the company is notified.

9. The company will permit the union to use company bulletin boards.

10. Either company or union may present proposed modifications of this contract to the other and a conference for consideration of such modification shall be held within 30 days.

11. The agreement shall be in effect for one year and from year to year unless either party gives the other 90 days' written notice of cancellation.

JAP EXPORTS DOWN

SEATTLE, Wash.—The boycott of Japanese-made goods is cutting sharply into the Island Empire's exports passing through the port of Seattle.

Value of the exports shipped here in May was $1,462,450, but by December the total had dropped to $684,290.

Toys, novelties, porcelain and crockery were among the commodities registering sharp drops between the two months.

C.I.O. Shipyard Union Wins Closed Shop

NEW YORK—Members of the Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, C.I.O., won a closed shop contract, providing for union hiring halls, the 40-hour week and wage increases, from the Deck & Engine Repair Co. of Brooklyn.

The pact was a step towards elimination of the "auction block" system of hiring, whereby workers line up at the pier and are picked by foremen for their jobs. This system had led to discrimination against union men.

Tory Proposal Criticized By Lawyers Guild

WASHINGTON — Opposition to incorporation or registration of labor unions, and support for minimum wage legislation was expressed by the National Lawyers Guild as the liberal attorneys' organization concluded its second annual convention here.

Ferdinand Pecora of New York, who gained national prominence early in the Roosevelt administration as counsel for the Congressional Committee which went into the activities of big business, was elected president of the Guild.

In an address to the 500 delegates, Pecora called upon members of the bar to preserve the "essential principles of democracy."

The Guild recommended that the Senate Civil Liberties Committee investigate Mayor Frank Hague's dictatorship in Jersey City.

Maurice Brigadier, head of the Guild in Hudson County, N. J., declared that the only factor lacking in Hague's domain to make it similar to Nazi Germany was the establishment of concentration camps. Civil rights, he continued, have not only been violated—they have been abrogated.

Sen. Robert La Follette of Wisconsin, a speaker at the convention, urged the Federal Government to make plans to employ the millions of jobless workers and the billions of idle investments throughout the nation.

"Save Democracy"

The National Lawyers Guild was called upon to aid in reforming the legal profession, and to join with other progressive organizations in resisting "dagger thrusts at the heart of democracy," in a speech delivered by Lloyd K. Garrison, dean of the University of Wisconsin Law School.

Pritchett Wins Round In Deportation Fight

WASHINGTON—Harold J. Pritchett, president of the C.I.O. Intl. Woodworkers of America won a first round in his fight to remain in this country when Immigration Commissioner Houghteling of the Labor Department stated that he would give "favorable consideration" to a six months' visitor's permit application as soon as Pritchett established his Canadian residence under the law.

Pritchett has been denied a permanent entry visa by the State Department, and has had to rely on short term visitors' permits to continue his work as president of his union. The Labor Dept. has renewed these permits from time to time, but hitherto has refused permission for an extended stay.

Commissioner Houghteling's assurance came as the result of a call by a C.I.O. delegation this week. Present on the delegation were Pritchett; Lee Pressman, general counsel of the C.I.O.; and John Brophy, director.

Under the Commissioner's ruling, Pritchett will be required to return to Canada February 28, to make a new application for entry into this country. Principal snag in the department's view has been the question of legal residence. Once this is cleared up, Pritchett was told, he may expect to be allowed to stay in this country for a maximum of six months.

Attempt Aroused Protests

The attempt to oust Pritchett, like a similar attempt to deport Harry Bridges, west coast longshore leader, has aroused protest throughout the nation. A committee to secure his right to live and work here has been formed, with John L. Lewis, Heywood Broun, John Brophy, Lee Pressman, and other leading labor and liberal figures on its membership. A campaign of petitions and resolutions to the State Dept. urging that he be given a permanent visa has been set under way.

Pritchett was recently reelected president of the Intl. Woodworkers by a two to one vote. Under his leadership, the international has made rapid progress in organizing timber and wood workers on the northwest coast and elsewhere in the country. In the eight months since its formation and entry into the C.I.O., the union has enrolled 100,000 members in 172 locals, with 45 women's auxiliaries and nine district councils.

Three-quarters of the membership are under contract, with a basic minimum wage of 62.5 cents per hour, preferential hiring, hiring halls, safety and hospitalization rules, overtime pay, a 40-hour week, and other benefits. This progress has been made in spite of A. F. of L. opposition, including wholesale use of goons and gunmen and corrupt political machines in Seattle and elsewhere. Mill owners have also fought the I.W.A. with every weapon they could pick up, relying chiefly on the lock-out.

NLRB Orders Firm End Contract With Company Union

WASHINGTON — A manufacturer who had attempted to use the Intl. Assn. of Machinists, A. F. of L., to curb an organizing drive of the United Automobile Workers, C.I.O., this week met with an adverse decision from the Natl. Labor Relations Board.

The Zenite Metal Corp., of Indianapolis, was ordered by the board to set aside its closed shop agreement with the A. F. of L. affiliate, and bargain with Local 42 of the auto workers union. The board named the C.I.O. union as sole collective bargaining agent for all workers in the plant, with the exception of buffers, polishers and platers.

The Zenite Co. entered into the closed shop agreement, the NLRB statement declared, "in an effort to stem an organizing drive" by the United Auto Workers. Employes fired when they refused to join the A. F. of L. union were ordered rehired with back pay.

Seattle Voters Whip Dore, Beck's Ally in Anti-CIO War

SEATTLE, Wash. — Seattle voters this week brought to an inglorious end the Beck-Dore political alliance which had allowed the Pacific Coast A. F. of L. teamster's union boss to enlist the aid of the city machine in his fight against the progressive unionism of the C.I.O.

Mayor John F. Dore—who had boasted he would push the C.I.O. into the Pacific and destroy the Seattle Newspaper Guild—finished a poor third in the primary elections, and will therefore be barred from the final election on March 8. He has served two terms as mayor of Seattle.

Big Defeat for Beck

The winning candidates in the mayoralty race were Arthur B. Langlie, who polled 50,000 votes, and Lieut.-Gov. Victor Meyers, who had C.I.O. support. Meyers received upwards of 27,500 votes.

Labor forces in the city won an additional victory when two of their candidates won nominations to the city council. James T. Sullivan and Michael Smith, both of whom had C.I.O. and A. F. of L. union support, were nominated on the basis of a program which included upholding "the right of workers to join unions of their own choosing and the right of business to operate without paying tribute to protective associations and without being coerced into obeying regulations designed to destroy small business and to advance monopoly."

The Dore defeat marks the greatest setback suffered by Dave Beck, district head of the Brotherhood of Teamsters, since he embarked on a campaign several months ago to bring all Pacific coast labor under his personal domination.

With Dore's defeat, Seattle observers predict a speedy and inglorious finale to the attempts of the teamsters' czar to bring the city's labor movement, as well as its government, under his personal control.

Indict Ringleaders In Anti-C.I.O. War

PORTLAND, Oreg.—Three leaders of the Pacific Coast A. F. of L. officialdom's war on the C.I.O. have been indicted by a Polk County grand jury on charges of arson.

The trio are: Al Rosser, Portland teamsters' head; Clarence Adams, chief of the teamsters' hiring hall in Portland; and Leslie Henry, business agent of the A. F. of L. building trades council at Salem.

The indictments grew out of a fire in a Salem box factory last November. The plant was being picketed by the A. F. of L. because the management had recognized the International Woodworkers of America, C.I.O.

Discipline Improves At Sea, Union Shows

NEW YORK—The anti-labor charges made by Joseph Kennedy, retired chairman of the Federal Maritime Commission, received final refutation from the New York C.I.O. Maritime Council as Kennedy prepared to sail for London, where he will serve as U. S. Ambassador to England.

The council, comprising nine unions, accused Kennedy of having given "ill-considered" testimony to the Senate Commerce Committee, and linked him, together with Sen. Royal Copeland and Rep. Schuyler Bland, as allies of American shipowners.

"Quickies" Now History

The companies, the statement said, are seeking to curb the unions by "force and intrigue."

The "quickie" strike, which brought special criticism from Kennedy, is almost a thing of the past, the council statement pointed out. It was used "a few months ago when the shipowners were leaving no stone unturned to break the back of a struggling new union.

Establishing Discipline

The council laid stress on the fact that even Kennedy was forced to admit that the unions themselves "are establishing a far more effective discipline than legislation will ever establish.

"They are disciplining themselves.

"But it is a discipline that is based on cooperation between the master and the crew. It is not the discipline that is founded on the whip and the brig.

"It is a discipline of free men—not serfs and lackeys."

C.I.O. Wins Relief For Buffalo Jobless

WASHINGTON—The C.I.O. came to the rescue in the relief situation in Buffalo, N. Y., this week when Hugh Thompson, C.I.O. regional director, got a promise of additional relief funds for the unemployed workers in his city.

Thompson saw Aubrey Williams, acting WPA administrator in Washington, and secured a promise of $10,000,000 in WPA funds for Buffalo, provided Buffalo would raise 20 per cent of that sum as its contribution towards new relief projects.

The C.I.O. regional director told Williams that the situation in Buffalo was desperate, with an immediate need for 90,000 WPA jobs.

SHOE WORKERS NAMED

WASHINGTON — The Natl. Labor Relations Board has ordered the Somerset Shoe Co. of Skowhegan to reinstate with back pay a group of employes laid off after a plant shutdown last March, and to displace other workers taken on in their place. The company was also ordered to bargain collectively with the United Shoe Workers of America, C.I.O.

C.I.O. UNIONS UNITE RANKS, FORM NEW PENNSYLVANIA, OHIO STATE COUNCILS

Pennsy Unions Defy Green's "Purge" Order

HARRISBURG, Pa.—The Pennsylvania Federation of Labor swung into the ranks of the C.I.O. thereby giving an effective answer to the splitting orders of Pres. William Green of the A. F. of L.

Severing all connection with the A. F. of L. on receipt of Green's order to expel all "disloyal" affiliates, the Federation, headed by Pres. John Phillips, changed its name to the Pennsylvania Industrial Union Council and affiliated with the C.I.O.

The move, decided at a meeting of the body's executive council, left Lewis Hines, Green henchman who had been appointed to head the federation, in control of less than 25 per cent of the federation's members. All the rest were in the C.I.O. camp.

The council, immediately after making the switch, called for a statewide convention of all labor organizations for March 29 to elect permanent officers. Phillips will continue to act as head of the council until that time.

Phillips Resisted Split

The meeting of the executive council came after Green had revoked the federation's charter and ordered the removal of Phillips as its head. Phillips, along with other officials, had resisted attempts of the A. F. of L. to split the ranks of labor in the Keystone state, but with no success.

Pennsylvania has been a center of C.I.O. activity. It is a stronghold of the United Mine Workers, and in the last two years the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, the Federation of Flat Glass Workers, the Aluminum Workers and other C.I.O. affiliates have brought hundreds of thousands of workers into their organizations.

Increasing strength of the labor groups in the state was shown at a Western Pennsylvania Legislative Conference, called by the Steel City (Pittsburgh) Industrial Union Council of the C.I.O.

C.I.O. Victor In Voting At Intl. Harvester

CHICAGO—The C.I.O. won its most important labor board election in the midwest when a vast majority of the 5,500 employes of the Intl. Harvester Co.'s tractor works here voted to name the Farm Equipment Workers Assn., C.I.O., as their sole collective bargaining agency.

The 3,255 votes cast for the C.I.O. union buried the hopes of the so-called independent union, the Employees Mutual Assn., from dominating the Harvester labor picture.

The "independent" union, a successor to the company's streamlined company union organization, which flourished for years until the passage of the Wagner Act, received only 1,821 votes.

VOTE FOR S.W.O.C.

PHILADELPHIA — Workers in the J. E. Lonergan Valve Co. voted two to one this week for S.W.O.C. as collective bargaining agency in a Labor Board election here. Ninety-six ballots were cast.

Toy Union Pact Lifts Wages 40%

CLINTON, Mass.—A contract won by the Toy and Novelty Workers Organizing Committee of the C.I.O., binds the Ralph A. Freundlich Co., of Clinton, Mass., large doll and toy manufacturer, from moving the concern out of town for the length of the agreement.

Wage increases ranging from 10 to 40 per cent, a closed shop, check-off, hiring hall and overtime pay for work in excess of 44 hours a week, were also included in the contract, according to Sam Sandberg, C.I.O. organizer.

At the height of production, the plant employs more than 700 workers. At present about 350 are working, Sandberg said.

Ohio C.I.O. Head

John Owens, C.I.O. regional director in Columbus, Ohio, and president of District Six of the United Mine Workers, who last week was elected president of the newly-formed Ohio Industrial Union Council of the C.I.O. Delegates from scores of C.I.O. locals throughout the state attended the convention in Columbus.

TWOC Victories Climb To 26 In Southern States

NEW YORK—Textile contracts covering 6,000 workers employed by seven important concerns in Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, North Carolina and Virginia were signed recently, according to an announcement made by Emil Rieve, acting chairman of the Textile Workers Organizing Committee.

Recent elections held in Southern mills, Rieve said, "indicate the confidence of southern industrial workers in the new industrial union developed in the textile industry." Of the 29 elections so far held in the south, 26, covering around 35,000 workers, have been won by the T.W.O.C., he declared.

Four of the new contracts were signed with companies employing about 800 persons in the silk and rayon throwing and weaving industries.

A union shop and maintenance of uniform conditions of employment is provided for by the agreements which were signed with three textile companies in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., and one in Lynchburg, Va.

Pact Covers 3,500

An agreement signed with the Farr Alpaca Co. of Holyoke, Mass., employing about 3,500 persons, recognized the T.W.O.C. as the sole collective bargaining agent for the plant and establishes the eight-hour day, 40-hour week.

Contracts were also signed with the Jennings and Mansfield Mills of Lumberton, N. C., covering 800 employes. Both firms recognize the T.W.O.C. as the bargaining unit, and grant an eight-hour day, 40-hour week. The existing wage scale is adopted as the prevailing minimum rate.

Among the union elections won in southern plants, Rieve listed the Golden Belt Mfg. Co., Durham, N. C.; the Fitzgerald Mills, Fitzgerald, Ga.; Burlington Mills, Burlington, N. C.; Pacific Mills, Columbia, S. C.; Erwin Cotton Mills at Durham, Erwin and Cooleemee, N. C., and Beaumont Mfg. Co., Spartanburg, S. C.

WIN UNION SHOP

PRICE, Utah—The United Laundry Workers Local Union 745, C.I.O., has signed a closed shop contract with the Price Steam Laundry Co.

Ohio Council Shows Labor's Power in State

COLUMBUS, Ohio—A quarter of a million C.I.O members were represented at the first convention of Ohio C.I.O. unions held at Columbus. More than 1,000 delegates attended the convention at which an Ohio C.I.O. Industrial Union Council was set up for this key industrial state.

This makes the fourteenth state which has now formed a new state labor body to unite all C.I.O. unions.

National C.I.O. headquarters was represented by Director John Brophy, who spoke on the achievements of the C.I.O., which he said was "the most important development in labor organization during our lifetime."

Around 600 local industrial unions in miscellaneous trades are now affiliated directly to the C.I.O., he said, in addition to 135 city and state councils.

Among the unions represented were: Amalgamated Clothing Workers; S.W.O.C., United Mine Workers; United Automobile Workers; Federation of Flat Glass Workers; American Newspaper Guild; United Rubber Workers; United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers; and the Intl. Ladies Garment Workers.

The delegates represented 250,000 Ohio workers.

Owens Elected President

David McDonald of Pittsburgh, secretary-treasurer of the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee, praised the progress of the C.I.O. in Ohio and told of the gains made nationally by the S.W.O.C.

John Owens, C.I.O. regional director in Ohio and chairman of the convention, attacked Governor Davey in his opening speech, declaring that "if half the things are true that have been carried in the public press, then Governor Davey ought to be impeached."

Owens, who is also president of District 6 of the United Mine Workers, was elected president of the new Council, and T. F. Silvey of the Typographical Union was chosen secretary.

Among the outside speakers were E. L. Oliver, executive vice-president of Labor's Non-Partisan League, and James B. Carey, president of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers.

Blast Davey's Policies

Among the 100 or more resolutions passed by the delegates were those covering the relief situation, housing, WPA, and charges against the administration of Gov. Davey, particularly for the use of troops against the union during the "Little Steel" strike.

The Sheppard-Hill-May bill, aimed to conscript labor and set wages in war time, was condemned and the movement to boycott Japa-

6,500 Join C.I.O. As Pecan Strike Grows In Texas

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. — More than 6,500 of the 8,000 pecan shellers on strike in San Antonio have joined the union, a local of the Cannery and Agricultural Workers, C.I.O., as their answer to police and vigilante attempts to break the strike.

The strike, now in its fifth week, began as a spontaneous walkout in protest against a proposed cut in already low wages of $2 to $3 per week.

Demands of the workers include a rescinding of the cut, an arbitration board of three to fix new wages, recognition of the union, and cooperation to help the industry to its economic feet, in order that better wages and working conditions can be maintained.

Mayor Quin and Police Chief Kilday of San Antonio have been responsible for a series of illegal mass arrests, beatings, tear gassing, and dumping of pickets and strike leaders, according to union officials, who estimate that more than 500 strikers have been arrested since the strike began.

LEAGUE IN SPOKANE

SPOKANE—Labor's Non-Partisan League has organized a branch in Spokane. A large number of delegates from important progressive organizations in the area were present at the first meeting.

Ohio CIO Delegates At Work

The Constitution Committee of the Ohio C.I.O. Industrial Union Council put in plenty of work during the convention at Columbus. Left to right are George Addes, auto workers; Thomas Price, mine workers (standing), committee chairman; Irwin De Shelter, glass workers, committee secretary. Seated on soft are Albert Brilliant, clothing workers; Lee Hall, C.I.O. regional director in Cleveland; and Bill Davy, newspaper guild.

C.I.O. Union Asks Contract in Reading

READING, Pa.—An agreement asking recognition of the State, County and Municipal Workers as the sole bargaining unit has been asked of the Reading City Council by the C.I.O. union.

The mayor told members of the union committee that the matter of a contract would be brought up when the Council meets. Elected officials, the City Clerk, policemen, firemen and a few others would be exempt.

VOL. I WASHINGTON, D. C., MARCH 5, 1938 No. 13

Two Plus Two Makes Four

It's a simple matter of addition to tell how the C.I.O. is doing these days.

Granting that the bottom has almost been knocked out of American industry by the depression, that millions have been laid off, and that the biggest fight of C.I.O. is to see that the government provides work and adequate relief for them—yet in spite of this C.I.O. is scoring daily victories in organizing the unorganized, winning elections and new contracts, renewing old contracts and generally maintaining wage levels against concerted attack.

* * *

Just write down the following events of the past couple of weeks, and then add them up:

C.I.O. wins biggest labor board election in Midwest with biggest majority at the Intl. Harvester Co. in Chicago.

General Electric signs nationwide contract with C.I.O. union, covering nearly 30,000 workers.

Renewal of U. S. Steel contract by C.I.O. is followed by renewals with scores of other companies and new contracts, bringing total to record figure of 512.

C.I.O. Industrial Union Councils are established in leading industrial states of Pennsylvania and Ohio.

Inland Boatmen's Union, C.I.O., reports organization of 7,000 workers in recent past in East and on Mississippi.

Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, C.I.O., wins contracts with several New York companies, and gets nearly two-to-one vote at Alabama Drydock Co., Mobile, biggest ship repair concern on Gulf coast.

American Newspaper Guild, C.I.O., wins strike on Superior, Wis., Evening Telegram, with Guild shop and 35 per cent wage increase—this following new contract on Boston paper bringing $100,000 in higher wages, and recognition on New York tabloids as sole bargaining agency for all non-mechanical employes.

Textile Workers Organizing Committee reports winning of 26 out of 29 labor board elections in South, and signing of seven new agreements covering 6,000 workers in four Northern and Southern states.

C.I.O. Toy Workers Union signs contract with big Massachusetts manufacturer, including wage increases and closed shop.

Cannery & Agricultural Workers of C.I.O. sign agreement with Planter's Peanuts, covering 1,200 workers at Suffolk, Va.

Natl. Maritime Union, C.I.O., continues almost unbroken chain of election victories and follows them up with more signed contracts.

And labor board reports show C.I.O. winning other elections too numerous to list.

* * *

All of the above is but part of the C.I.O. record for a couple of weeks, in the depths of depression, and is to be added to the previously established C.I.O. strength in all the basic industries.

Add these events together and the answer is as plain and positive as any answer in simple arithmetic. It is, that C.I.O. is so solidly organized and accepted now that it is able to push right ahead through all the fiery tests and torments that afflict America today.

If it can do so well when times are so bad, what will C.I.O. not be able to accomplish when industrial upturn gives new impetus to another great forward drive by labor?

Kill the May Bill!

"The Sheppard-Hill-May Bill to provide for "taking the profits out of war," has been reported to the House of Representatives by the House Military Affairs Committee.

Here is what a minority of the committee—composed of Cong. Maverick of Texas, Kvale of Minnesota and Anderson of Missouri—had to say in opposition to the bill:

"Full of pretense, a draft of human beings, and a serious danger to democracy . . ."

"An honest title to this bill would be: 'A bill to take democracy out of America on the declaration of war'."

"It sets up in advance the machinery of a dictatorship."

"A blue print for Fascism."

Send your protest, at once, to your Congressman and Senators. Ask them to vote against the Sheppard-Hill-May Bill.

Signs of Spring

C. of C. Gets Taste Of Own Medicine

WEST TULSA, Okla.—"What Helps Labor Helps Business" is the slogan of the Oil Workers Intl. Union local here.

In a campaign to offset the billboard advertising of the Chamber of Commerce, which claims that business must get the aid, the local has distributed several hundred blotters with the slogan.

"Our union feels that labor should be alert to understand the significance of what the Chamber of Commerce is doing, and do everything possible to counteract this propaganda," declares C. F. Jarrett, secretary of the oil workers' local.

Tennessee Labor School Completes Winter Term

MONTEAGLE, Tenn.—Students from six southern states and one foreign country recently completed a six weeks' intensive training course for activity in the labor movement at the Highland Folk School, one of the two year-around resident labor schools in the country.

Among the organizations represented by the 18 students completing the course were three C.I.O. unions—International Ladies Garment Workers, Amalgamated Clothing Workers, and Textile Workers Organizing Committee. The foreign student came from the Transport Workers of Sweden.

Beefsteaks vs. CIO; C.I.O. FAVORED!

DANBURY, Conn.—It seems to be beefsteak vs. the C.I.O. at the Danbury & Bethel Gas & Electric Co.!

The dinners, to be handed to the firm's employes once each month, are seen as a "good-will" offering aimed at keeping the white collar workers from signing C.I.O. cards.

Offsetting the beefsteaks, as far as the workers are concerned, is the fact that wages are low, and that many of them were losers in a scheme whereby they were forced to buy stock in the Cities Service, Inc., from their weekly pay envelopes.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

THE BASIC INDUSTRIES ARE C.I.O.

TWO of the country's greatest industrial states, Pennsylvania and Ohio, have just swung into the C.I.O. column with the establishment of state Industrial Union Councils.

In Pennsylvania the labor movement is so predominantly C.I.O. that it has managed to preserve its unity, despite the attempt of Pres. Green of the A. F. of L. to split it.

The State Federation as a whole has simply decided on C.I.O. affiliation rather than commit suicide as Green decreed.

Pennsylvania is the biggest industrial state in the nation, and Ohio is the state which boasts having the most complete cross-section of America's basic industries.

The establishment of C.I.O. councils in these states registers C.I.O. predominance in heavy industry, at the same time as it gives permanent form to the new majority movement of American labor.

* * *

In Pennsylvania the biggest industries are coal mining, steel production, textiles, clothing manufacture, electrical and radio manufacture—in all of which the A. F. of L. has not even a toe-hold. Glass and aluminum, also C.I.O., are other industries which figure large.

In Ohio, besides coal mining, steel and others of the above-mentioned industries, there is the center of the rubber industry, almost 100 per cent C.I.O. There are great concentrations of the auto industry, all C.I.O., as well as glass and numerous other manufacturing industries. And on the Great Lakes, labor has been going decisively C.I.O.

If we extend the cross-section presented by these two states to the whole map of industrial America, we find that labor in the basic industries is not by any means seriously split—it is almost entirely C.I.O.

In the great extractive industries, such as coal and metal mining, oil, and quarries and the manufacture of their by-products, gas, coke, etc., the C.I.O. unions are not seriously challenged. Lumber is now C.I.O. through the Intl. Woodworkers of America, and furniture manufacture is following fast.

In manufacturing generally, the C.I.O. has little competition. Automobiles, rubber, glass, aluminum, radio, electrical and machine manufacture are almost entirely C.I.O. And the recent winning of elections in the Harvester Co. puts agricultural implements in this category.

In clothing, all the way from textiles and leather to the finished products of men's and women's wear, furs and shoes, C.I.O. unions have unquestioned predominance.

In food production, C.I.O. is first in agricultural labor and canning, while in meat packing and other branches of food-processing, the mass-production plants are mostly C.I.O., with A. F. of L. strength chiefly in small plants and retail shops.

In distribution, the C.I.O. union is leaving the A. F. of L. behind by its successes in the great department stores.

In transportation, the maritime industry is now 75 per cent C.I.O., and city transportation in New York is almost 100 per cent C.I.O. In communications, C.I.O. contracts with RCA and Postal Telegraph put it far ahead.

In the white-collar fields of newspapermen, technicians, office and insurance workers, as well as among state, county and municipal employes, C.I.O. by far predominates.

* * *

The two biggest industries outside the C.I.O. are building construction and railroad transportation, and on the railroads the transportation brotherhoods are not in the A. F. of L.

The printing trades are still A. F. of L., but they include a large body of pro-C.I.O. sentiment, as does also the Hotel and Restaurant Workers Union.

The A. F. of L. has made some membership gains in the wake of the C.I.O. organizing drives, but its relative strength is rapidly declining. Practically all of the basic industries are now C.I.O., with little A. F. of L. dual outfits eking out a miserable and scabby existence on their fringes; while in the crafts where the chief A. F. of L. strength lies, rank and file sentiment is constantly increasing for unity with the C.I.O.

A straw which shows which way the wind is blowing is the recent withdrawal of the Paving Cutters International Union from the A. F. of L., after 50 years of affiliation, on the grounds that the A. F. of L. is levying money "to fight the C.I.O. in organizing the unorganized, whom the A. F. of L. has been unable or unwilling to organize."

New Steel Mills Kill Jobs of 85,000 Workers

Los Angeles C.I.O. Bucks War on Unions

LOS ANGELES—Undiscouraged by the depression and attacks from both business interests and the officials of the A. F. of L. teamsters union, the C.I.O. is mapping plans for further activity in this city of sunshine and Tory reaction.

In a report delivered to the Industrial Union Council, C. H. Jordan, its secretary, outlined the need for increasing labor activity in politics, and urged that a corps of volunteer organizers be formed to complete the unionization of the city's industries.

More than 500 delegates, executive board members, organizers, and international representatives attended the meeting and unanimously voted that the program be put into action.

"During the past 15 months, some 50,000 workers have been organized in the Los Angeles area by the C.I.O.," Jordan said. Most of the new members are in the auto, rubber, steel, oil, transportation, communication, mining, warehouse, and utilities industries.

So fast did the C.I.O. organizing campaign progress, Jordan pointed out, that "it caught the reactionary open-shoppers, headed by the Chamber of Commerce, unprepared to cope effectively" with the situation.

Organize Vigilantes

Since that time, however, the anti-labor groups in the city have caught their breath, and are now organizing a League of "Independent" Unions, together with a swarm of semi-vigilante outfits, in an attempt to stem the union tide.

Joining this anti-C.I.O. fight are Teamsters and Carpenters' Union officials. But when leaders of the carpenters brought the members to the docks in an effort to boycott C.I.O. lumber, large numbers of the rank and file left the scene in disgust, and later presented bills for $8.00—a day's wages—to the Carpenters' District Council.

Nevertheless, C.I.O. membership continued to rise, and when the depression brought unemployment to many thousands, C.I.O. unions, under the auspices of the council's unemployment committee, took up the fight of winning adequate relief.

To increase labor's strength in the Los Angeles district, plans are being made for increased activity for Labor's Non-Partisan League, with each union electing a league committee composed of assembly district captains.

Furniture Workers Vote C.I.O., 75-1

BALTIMORE—Workers in the Baltimore local of the A. F. of L. Upholsters union voted almost 75 to 1 to affiliate with the United Furniture Workers of America, C.I.O.

The vote was taken after discussion of the question of affiliation with Frank J. Bender, Baltimore C.I.O. director, and Morris Muster, president of the United Furniture Workers. The local has an enrollment of 300.

Ohio League Calls Convention; Will Form Organization

COLUMBUS, O.—Ohio labor will start its political ball rolling March 19, when several hundred delegates will gather in Columbus for a state convention to build a permament branch of Labor's Non-Partisan League.

A provisional committee has sent out invitations to local C.I.O. and A. F. of L. unions and railway brotherhoods to send delegates for the meeting, which will adopt a constitution, elect officers and draft a political program.

Temporary chairman of the League in Ohio is John Owens, president of the state's C.I.O. Industrial Union Council. Irwin DeShetler, secretary-treasurer of the Glass Workers Organizing Committee, serves in a similar position for the League.

"Farmers, labor and the middle class too long have been the victims of reactionary forces," the call to the convention declared.

"In Ohio particularly, these groups have suffered. Action is needed."

League Activities Grow in Pittsburgh

PITTSBURGH—Labor's activities in the western Pennsylvania political arena have recently been crystallized through plans for a reorganization of the Allegheny County branch of Labor's Non-Partisan League.

A series of meetings, stretching over the past month, have culminated in the establishment of permanent committees and selection of new officers. Anthony J. Federoff, regional C.I.O. director here, is the chairman.

"Reorganization of Labor's Non-Partisan League in Allegheny County has for its purpose a closer cooperation with the Pennsylvania League," said Mr. Federoff.

RELIEF CONFERENCE

WASHINGTON—A National Conference on Work and Security, called by the Workers Alliance, will be held here March 19 and 20. Invitations have been issued to unions, farm groups, civic organizations, church and other groups, to send representatives.

Hits Hitler

Adolph Hitler was described as "the arch-enemy of our whole western civilization" by Dr. Ernst W. Meyer, who resigned as first secretary of the Nazi government's embassy in Washington in protest against Der Fuehrer's policies.

Supreme Court Upholds Labor In 5 Rulings

WASHINGTON—Labor gained a major victory here when the United States Supreme Court ruled that the Natl. Labor Relations Board may order business firms to cease bargaining collectively with a company union.

The court's ruling, another in the long series of legal victories gained by the N.L.R.B., ordered the Pacific Greyhound Co. and the Pennsylvania Greyhound Co. to withdraw recognition from an "Employes Association," and a "Drivers Association," respectively.

In both cases the high court overruled decisions made in the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals.

To Review A.R.T.A. Case

In still another victory for labor unions, the court promised the N.L.R.B. a review of the ruling of the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, which had refused to compel the Mackay Radio & Telegraph Co. to comply with a labor board order for reinstatement of five members of the American Radio Telegraphists' Assn., C.I.O.

Lose Fight Against T.W.U.

A fourth decision showed marked contrast with the court's rulings two years ago. It dismissed an appeal of six non-union employes of the New York Rapid Transit Corp., who had waged a fight against the closed shop contract signed by the company and the Transport Workers Union, C.I.O.

The decision in that case was made without any specifically passing on the closed shop issue.

The court's final ruling of the day on labor cases reversed a finding by Judge Geiger of Wisconsin, who has sought to bar a union from picketing a Milwaukee meat shop to gain members for the union.

SWOC Calls Strike At Stove Firm

HATBORO, Pa.—Their ranks still firm at the end of three weeks of striking, some 600 members of Lodge 1839 of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, C.I.O., are continuing their fight against the Roberts and Manders Stove Co.

The strike followed a threatened lockout designed to smash the union. Now, it appears as though the company will be forced to give in to the union, which has the backing of organized labor in its area.

S.W.O.C. Asks Probe Of Work Opportunities

The article from which the following excerpts were taken appeared recently in the New Republic magazine. The writer, who is research director for the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, describes a problem which is of interest to every worker in the nation.

By HAROLD J. RUTTENBERG

If the jobs of the 85,000 steel workers in 50 different communities were abandoned permanently on the same day, every newspaper would send its star reporter to these communities to write about the "85,000 victims of progress."

But their jobs are taken from them gradually—1,100 in Clarksburg, W. Va., one week; 1,500 in Portsmouth, Ohio, the next month; 1,400 in Weirton, W. Va., and Steubenville, Ohio, a week later, etc.—as they join the ranks of the millions of unemployed, group by group, without as much as an obituary appearing in the columns of the metropolitan press. And the current depression is speeding the day they join the ranks of the unemployed.

Steel rolling mill technique has been revolutionized. The old-type rolling mill technique requires the steel to be handled over 25 times by hand tongs before it can be pickled (acid bath) and heat treated (annealed). In contrast, the hot strip mill takes a 6,500-pound slab of steel out of the furnace automatically, removes the scale, and rolls it into 1,000 feet of hot strip at the rate of a third of a mile (1,800 feet) a minute.

The strip is coiled like thread on a spool, automatically placed on a continuous conveyor, and taken to be pickled and annealed by a continuous process. All this is done without one pair of hand tongs touching the steel. Only a handful of men are required to operate the electric control levers of the strip mill.

Labor Is Displaced

The continous strip mills reduce man-power 85 per cent.

Fifteen men on a strip mill can produce as much steel as 100 men on the hand-mills. The maximum annual capacity of the hand-mills (sheet bar, heavy plate, sheet, and black plate), before any were dismantled, was 15½ million tons.

Approximately 125,000 men manned these hand-mills under normal operations. The 27 hot strip mills in operation or under construction have a maximum annual capacity of 14 million tons and are manned by 15,000 men. The strip mills will not replace all of the hand-mills because of technical operating problems.

Drastic Cuts

I was told by the president of a large steel company that around 20 per cent of the hand-mill capacity, employing approximately 25,000 men, will be kept in operation to fill specialty and small tonnage orders. He added that 80 per cent of the hand-mill capacity, normally employing 100,000 men, will be scrapped entirely when the 27 strip mills are in full operation.

"Would you agree," I asked him, "that it is accurate to say 15,000 strip-mill workers can produce as much, if not more, than 100,000 men working on hand-mills?"

He replied, "That's a conservative statement."

What will happen to these 85,000 victims of progress? Can something be done, or are they doomed to the relief rolls? Is the 30-hour week the complete answer, or will it accelerate the adoption of still more labor-saving equipment? Can steel prices be lowered without adversely affecting steel wages?

What to Do About It?

The recent convention of the S.W.O.C. demanded "a thoroughgoing survey of curtailed job opportunities in specific industries by the Congress of the United States." We must turn to Congress for such an investigation because industry refuses to reveal the necessary facts voluntarily.

We will be able to develop from the investigation's findings a comprehensive program to counteract technological unemployment. Or we shall learn that as long as there are millions of unemployed able-bodied workers glutting the labor market, when a machine displaces a man, job opportunities are not provided for him elsewhere and he is a "victim of progress" within our economic system.

Floating Down to Rio—

ON 150,000 QUARTS OF BUBBLING WATER

NEW YORK—Depression? What depression?

The mythical man from Mars would never have believed it possible had he been given an opportunity to read the New York Times account of the South American cruise of the French luxury liner, the S. S. Normandie.

As the ship reached New York harbor on its return from a 22-day trip to South American ports, officials of the line released figures showing that:

Vital Statistics!

1. The 975 passengers had paid fares totalling more than $1,000,000—more than $1,000 a person.
2. They had consumed close to two tons of caviar—fish eggs, to you.
3. They had, according to the Times story, guzzled 150,000 quarts of champagne.

Students of the art of champagne drinking were inclined to dispute that last figure, attributing it either to a typographical error or a flight of imagination on the part of the company.

Floating Down to Rio

One hundred fifty thousand quarts of champagne, it is pointed out, would average 6.7 quarts a day for every man, woman and child—possible, but improbable in view of the two tons of caviar and the 269 tons of other food consumed in the three-week period.

In Rio De Janeiro, Brazil, alone, the tourists were said to have spent more than $500,000 in four days.

Depression? What depression?

Bridges Raps "Trickery" of Copeland Committee

Charges Senator Seeks Union "Witch-Hunt"

WASHINGTON—Harry Bridges, west coast C.I.O. leader, charged the Senate Commerce Committee with deliberately denying maritime workers a chance to give their views on proposed compulsory arbitration legislation, when it refused to give him a hearing before the committee this week in Washington.

The committee's refusal to hear him, Bridges said, was based on a trick, when Senator Copeland stated he would not be heard until his status in this country has been cleared up by the Labor Department.

"My request to the committee for a hearing," Bridges said, "was based entirely on the ground that as president of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, with over 25,000 members, I have the right to be heard for the purpose of expressing the views of maritime workers on the pending maritime legislation."

"Deliberate Misinterpretation"

"Copeland's action is a deliberate misinterpretation for the purpose of depriving the maritime workers of this right. We have been refused a hearing behind a smoke screen of witch-hunting and red-baiting."

Bridges charged that Copeland was acting as the shipowners' agent in trying to destroy the maritime unions that the owners failed to break by anti-union tactics in the past.

"Having failed in their attempt to destroy the maritime unions through lockouts and other vicious anti-union policies," he said, "the shipowners have now appealed to Senator Copeland who very generously is carrying their burden through sponsoring such legislation as is now before the committee." He added that the shipowners have been getting huge sums from the public treasury in subsidies, which they have used to break strikes and to destroy labor unions.

Oppose Compulsory Arbitration

The Labor Relations Board, the National Mediation Board and the Labor Department have all opposed the compulsory arbitration bills, Bridges explained.

"We agree with their views," he said. "The only ones who don't agree are Copeland and the shipowners. Frankly, I don't see much difference between the two."

"If this legislation goes through, conditions in the maritime industry will revert to those of two or three years ago," he said.

Bridges also charged that the investigation of maritime unions voted this week by the Senate was a further attempt to break the unions for the shipowners.

"Shipowners and their agents, such as Joe Ryan of the A. F. of L., who are making a racket out of their position, are not going to be investigated," he said. "Ryan and people like him couldn't stand an investigation."

C.I.O. Unions' Record Clear

"Our unions can stand all the investigation in the world. We are free of rackets and tie-ups with the shipowners. But the investigation now voted is solely for the purpose of staging another witch-hunt against the legitimate maritime unions.

"We can also expose the Maritime Commission in their collaboration with the owners to build company unions. Naturally, the Senate Committee will not want to get itself into a spot where these things will be exposed."

Depressions Don't Hurt Huntsville C.I.O.

HUNTSVILLE, Ala.—"Business recessions may come and go, but our unions in Huntsville are growing stronger daily," according to Sec. Ernest Brooks of the city's Industrial Union Council of the C.I.O.

Before unemployment insurance checks came through, the affiliated unions of the council appropriated an amount of money which was matched by a state grant to feed some 8,000 jobless workers.

Shipyard Union Gains New Election Victories

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—Several victories fell to the lot of local 13, Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers within the past week. An election won at the Ira S. Bushey & Sons repair yard by a vote of 112 to 58, was followed by the signing of a closed shop contract with the Deck and Engine Repair Co.

Another contract was signed later between the shipbuilding local union and the Salvage Process Corporation of Brooklyn, providing for a preferential shop, a 40-hour week, arbitration machinery and a wage scale of 90 cents an hour.

The contract covers 50 men engaged in cleaning tank ships.

The Bushey election was the first poll held by the Labor Board among the drydock workers in Brooklyn. Union officials say that it will be followed by a series of other elections in which the C.I.O. Shipbuilding Workers "will sweep the port."

Bridges Denied Hearing

Harry Bridges, president of the C.I.O. Intl. Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, was refused a hearing by the Senate Commerce Committee on the pretext that his "status" has not been cleared by the Labor Dept. Shown above are Bridges (left) and Lee Pressman, C.I.O. counsel, discussing an item in THE C.I.O. NEWS.

C.I.O. Unions Form Council In Ohio

nese goods was approved. Continuation of the activities of the La Follette Committee on Civil Liberties was also approved, and passage of the wage-hour bill was endorsed.

The convention met at the Neil House, across the street from Governor Davey's office, which has been turned into propaganda headquarters for attacking the C.I.O., union leaders charged.

The delegates launched a bitter attack on Gov. Davey. Though a motion to have his picture removed from the hotel lobby was ruled out of order, the picture was missing when the delegates met for their second session.

"It is time to renovate the State House, and before any other man goes in there, fumigate it," Owens said.

Pact Renewals Pour Into SWOC

PITTSBURGH—New agreements continue to flood the national headquarters of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee. Some of the larger companies to sign include:

Pittsburgh Steel Co., Pittsburgh (7,000 employes); Sharon Steel Corp., Sharon, Pa. (3,000 employes); Page Steel & Wire Co., Monessen, Pa. (1,200 employes); MacIntosh-Hemphill Co., Pittsburgh (600 employes); Robertshaw Thermostat Co., Youngwood, Pa. (525 employes); Washington Tin Plate Co., Washington, Pa. (550 employes); Coshocton Iron Works, Monongahela, Pa. (500 employes); and Liggett Spring & Axle Co., Monongahela, Pa. (150 employes).

Sole bargaining rights have again been written into the Pittsburgh Steel and Sharon Steel agreements. The S.W.O.C. won smashing victories at both companies in National Labor Relations Board elections last year.

Mobile Workers Choose C.I.O.

MOBILE, Ala.—Employes of the Alabama Drydock and Shipbuilding Co., largest ship repair concern on the Gulf coast, voted 794 to 545 in favor of the C.I.O. Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers in a recent Labor Board election.

In addition to 454 votes for the A. F. of L. union, 38 were for neither union, 20 were challenged and three voided, out of 1,309 votes.

The Mobile local of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's union, also affiliated with the C.I.O., has asked for an election to establish itself as the collective bargaining agent for local stevedoring companies, and the National Maritime Union, another C.I.O. affiliate, is lining up the seamen of the Waterman Steamship Co. in preparation for a labor board election.

CIO Asked to Form New Union Group

PITTSBURGH—Formal authorization was asked from the C.I.O. for the establishment of an organizing committee in the nation's important farm equipment industry, it was decided at a meeting of C.I.O. union leaders.

Present at the meeting were John Brophy, director of the C.I.O.; Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee; Wyndham Mortimer, vice president of the United Automobile Workers; A. Hummel of the Farm Equipment Workers Assn., C.I.O., of Chicago; and Nicholas Fontecchio, John Doherty, James Robb and J. R. Weber, all S.W.O.C. regional directors.

The meeting followed a preliminary conference of representatives of many S.W.O.C. and auto union locals in Chicago, when the request for the new committee was first put forward. Both union groups have done organizing work in the farm equipment industry in the past.

Ft. Wayne Council Speeds Activities

FORT WAYNE, Ind.—The Industrial Union Council of the C.I.O. is going to town in Fort Wayne.

Already it has some 26,000 affiliated members, representing steel, hosiery, electrical and radio, furniture, and auto workers. The council, established a year ago, has been active on a score of issues.

In elections just concluded, Bernard O'Connell, a member of Local 57 of the United Automobile Workers, was elected president, and Charles E. Foster, of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, was named secretary.

C.I.O. Locals Aid Guild Win Strike

SUPERIOR, Wis.—C.I.O. support on the picket line helped the Newspaper Guild to win again, this time in Superior, Wis., where a five-day strike won for workers of the Evening Telegram, a Guild shop contract with wage increases of 35 per cent, a five-day week, dismissal pay, and other features of the Guild "model contract."

CHEYENNE, Wyo.—With an affiliated membership now of some 7,000 the newly formed C.I.O. Wyoming Industrial Union Council is pushing its program towards further union gains.

C.I.O. Opens Drive In Canadian Gold Fields

TIMMINS, Ont. (UNS)—The Intl. Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers has opened an organization campaign in the Timmins gold fields, where some 9,000 miners have in the last three years brought profits totaling $43,704,130 to three major gold mining companies.

The companies—Hollinger, McIntyre and Dome—had not given a wage raise since the war until Local 241 of the C.I.O. affiliate made its appearance here. Almost immediately, the company raised pay scales by 5 cents an hour.

Gotham Unions In Wall St.

Into Wall Street, headquarters of America's "Sixty Families," marched 20,000 unemployed workers led by the Trade Union Committee for WPA & Relief. The parade, which braved bad weather, is shown as it passed in front of the Treasury Building at Broad and Wall Streets. In New York, as in other parts of the nation, C.I.O. unions are leading the fight for adequate relief for the jobless.

Tenant Farmers Union Meeting Forced to Move

LITTLE ROCK, Ark.—Proceedings of the fourth annual convention of the Southern Tenant Farmers Union were forced to halt when the delegates were forced to leave the community hall in this city.

The union's affiliation with the C.I.O., as well as the fact that both Negro and white delegates attended the convention, were given as reasons for the vacate order. The union has made considerable progress in unionizing the semi-peon cotton fields of the eastern section of Arkansas, despite a widespread reign of terror employed to combat it.

"The entire nation must be made aware of the injustice and inhospitality shown in the capital city of the state of Arkansas," declared H. L. Mitchell, S.T.F.U. secretary.

UNIONS RALLY TO SUPPORT KENNEDY'S BID FOR PENNSYLVANIA GOVERNORSHIP

Gimbel's New York Store Signs Contract With CIO

NEW YORK—More than 2,200 employes at the Thirty-third Street store and warehouses of Gimbel Brothers, Inc., are covered by the new contract signed between the United Retail and Wholesale Employes, C.I.O. union and the company, under which wage increases totaling $160,000 will be given. The agreement runs for one year.

In addition to the pay increases which will amount to $1 and $2 a week for many of the workers involved, the agreement also provided for a 45-hour week, seniority rights, time and one-third for overtime, vacation schedules and provisions for the amicable settlement of disputes.

The contract was signed after the Committee won a petition for certification filed with the State Labor Relations Board, which established it as the sole bargaining agent for the employes on the basis of an investigation of the membership records.

Samuel Wolchok, president of the United Retail and Wholesale Employes, and Samuel Null, counsel, were the signers for the union. The Department Stores Organizing Committee of the C.I.O., was formed last October under the leadership of Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, and Wolchok.

Third Big Victory

Classes of employes excluded from the contract are the building service and maintenance department workers, as well as all those in "executive, supervisory, protective and confidential capacities." Temporary, superannuated, and veteran employes are not covered.

The agreement which was reached after weeks of negotiations, is the third big victory to be won in the New York department store field recently. A closed shop agreement was signed not long ago with Hearn's covering 2,000 workers in the Bronx and Manhattan stores of the company, and in December R. H. Macy's signed up with the Department Store Organizing Committee for 2,000 workers in the delivery, warehouse and manufacturing departments of the firm.

At the present time, the union is negotiating for a contract with Bloomingdale's.

Pennsy Unions Call C.I.O. Meet

HARRISBURG—A call for the first convention of the C.I.O. Industrial Union Council in Pennsylvania was issued this week from headquarters in Harrisburg. The convention will be held in this city March 29.

The convention call follows a resolution of the executive council of the State Federation of Labor passed after Pres. Green of the A. F. of L. revoked its charter last month, thereby ousting 80 per cent of the organized workers in Pennsylvania from the Federation.

The C.I.O. Industrial Union Council was formed at the time to furnish a delegate body for the protection of Pennsylvania workers.

All affiliated C.I.O. unions in the state are requested in the call to send delegates to the convention.

TELLS OF C.I.O. SUCCESS

FORT WAYNE, Ind.—"The United, Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers of the C.I.O. have accomplished more in organizing the electrical industry during two dramatic years of growth than the A. F. of L. did in 50 years," Pres. James L. Carey told a convention of local delegates in this district.

C.I.O. Ship Union Wins

WASHINGTON—Workers in the Atlantic Basin Iron Works of New York voted 236 to 26 for the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers, C.I.O., defeating the A. F. of L. union.

Insurance Union Wins Pay Raise

CLEVELAND—C.I.O. organization of insurance company agents paid its first dividend in the Cleveland area when the Monumental Life Insurance Co. lifted its minimum pay rates $5 a week for premium collectors.

Other raises were handed out to workers in higher categories. The new minimum pay will be $20 a week for the collectors.

'White Collar' Steel Workers Seek CIO Pact

PITTSBURGH—"White collar" workers of Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation, through a newly formed local of the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians, have asked for conferences with the company to open the way for a collective bargaining contract.

Conscious of the benefits brought to the mill workers through the S.W.O.C. by maintaining high wage standards, and at the same time taking drastic wage reductions, "white-collar" membership has boomed in the last few months.

While the S.W.O.C., through its new contract with "Big Steel" has been successful in pegging wages at the $5-day rates, the Technicians union revealed that "technical and white collar staffs have been especially hard hit through wage cuts and layoffs without regard to seniority."

"It is mainly for this reason that these heretofore unorganized employes are responding in increasing numbers to our campaign of organization," declared J. S. Jacoby, representative of the organization in this district.

Board To Arbitrate Lettuce Walk-Out; "Scabs" Join Line

YUMA, Ariz.—Settlement of the strike of lettuce field workers here appeared closer this week when the employers, H. P. Garin Co., agreed to accept arbitration by the regional Labor Relations Board representative.

The strikers are members of Local 30 of the C.I.O. Cannery and Agricultural Workers, who walked out when the company both refused to bargain collectively and announced a wage cut of 15 per cent. Cutters, loaders, and teamsters are involved.

Demands of the union include collective bargaining, recognition, reinstatement of fired union workers with back pay, double pay for holiday work, and wages of 35 cents an hour for teamsters and field packers, 40 cents for cutters, and 50 cents for loaders.

A picket line of more than 300 has been maintained at the property. Indian and Filipino workers brought in as scabs horrified the local fink-herders by joining the line as soon as they found out what the strike was about.

PASSAIC, N. J.—Labor's Non-Partisan League of New Jersey has urged the formation of local legislative committees to conduct activity in behalf of bills favored by the League.

U.M.W. Secretary Enters Democratic Primary

HARRISBURG, Pa.—Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America, announced here that he would seek the Democratic nomination for governor of Pennsylvania.

Kennedy has been the Keystone State's lieutenant-governor for the past four years.

He will run with the support of Labor's Non-Partisan League, which has strongly-organized branches throughout the state. In addition, he will get powerful support from hundreds of thousands of workers who have been organized by the C.I.O. in the last two years, as well as from A. F. of L. union members, who have indicated they will mark their ballots for him.

Only recently Kennedy won the endorsement of a Western Pennsylvania legislative conference called by the Steel City (Pittsburgh) Industrial Union Council of the C.I.O. The State C.I.O. Council has also endorsed him.

Kennedy, a life-time resident of the anthracite regions of eastern Pennsylvania, announced his candidacy after a close study of the state's political situation.

Opponent is Little Known

Opposing him in the nominations will be Charles Alvin Jones, an almost unknown Pittsburgh lawyer who was picked by the state Democratic committee in an effort to leave labor voters out in the cold. Atty.-Gen. Charles Margiotti is also a candidate for the gubernatorial position.

As secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers for a number of years, Kennedy has established a reputation as an efficient administrator. His term as lieutenant-governor of Pennsylvania has similarly won him acclaim.

Kennedy, in addition to being secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers, is also secretary-treasurer of the Textile Workers Organizing Committee.

Kennedy has repeatedly declared that his actions will be guided by the best interests of labor and the people of Pennsylvania.

Heywood Broun to Write Column for The C.I.O. News

A new kind of column, written by Heywood Broun exclusively for THE C.I.O. NEWS, will be a leading feature of the enlarged and improved paper which will make its first appearance with the issue of March 19.

Broun, besides being a world-famous columnist, is president of the American Newspaper Guild and a long-time champion of labor's cause.

His witty, penetrating and stimulating comments will cover the world of labor affairs, bringing out novel angles to the biggest and most exciting story of the century—the upsurge of American labor through the C.I.O., with all the implications this holds for social change.

Through this column, which will appear only in THE C.I.O. NEWS, Broun will write directly to American working people, hitting straight from the shoulder on labor issues, in the official organ of the progressive labor movement.

Beginning with the next issue, THE C.I.O. NEWS will be enlarged to eight pages, with a new and snappier make-up, more pictures and many new and important features, to be announced in following issues.

VOL. I WASHINGTON, D. C., MARCH 12, 1938 No. 14

The C.I.O. News Steps Out

Beginning with the next issue, THE C.I.O. NEWS will step out with new make-up, new features and with eight pages instead of four.

Heywood Broun, outstanding columnist and president of the American Newspaper Guild, has agreed to contribute an exclusive weekly column.

Those who have enjoyed his writings in the daily press on the widest variety of subjects, will look forward eagerly to getting his slant on labor events—in a new kind of column, written by one of the world's most entertaining writers who is also writing in this case as a labor man directly to American workers.

* * * *

To get an exclusive column by Broun is a major event for any newspaper. But for THE C.I.O. NEWS, this event also coincides with the paper's first big step forward generally.

Started modestly and experimentally, THE C.I.O. NEWS announced at its inception that its future would depend upon the reception it would receive from the movement and upon the service it could render the C.I.O.

In the three months that it has been appearing, the four-page tabloid has won a place for itself among C.I.O. unions and members.

Four unions have already subscribed for their whole membership and are obtaining special editions as their official organs, with their own news featured. A number of other C.I.O. unions are also considering doing the same. In addition, individual subscriptions are coming in rapidly, though no particular circulation drive has yet been launched.

* * * *

The demand from all sides, however, has been for a larger paper, so that unions may have more pages for their own news and so that the general news and policies of this great movement of four million American workers may be given more adequate treatment.

THE C.I.O. NEWS is now ready, therefore, to take the next step forward by increasing its size and adding new features which should win for it many new readers. Its aim is to become truly representative in coverage and circulation, as well as in policy, of America's giant new labor movement, and the aid of every C.I.O. unionist is solicited to help in the achievement of this high ambition.

Big Department Stores Sign With C.I.O.

Characteristic of the C.I.O. organizing tactics which have established union organization in America's basic industries, is the direct approach to the heart of each industry, through concentration on the key mass-production plants.

After the crafts had for decades skirted around the fringes of the unorganized industries, trying to sign up the smaller employers here and there, the C.I.O. boldly went after the biggest and most trustified corporations.

The first major successes of the C.I.O. were in signing up the big Akron rubber companies, General Motors and Chrysler in the auto industry and the United States Steel Corporation.

That this procedure is still being followed with success is shown by the recent agreements with General Electric and Postal Telegraph, and still more recently by the contract with Gimbel Brothers in New York, one of the world's largest department stores.

* * * *

The Gimbel agreement follows similar successes by the Department Stores Organizing Committee of the C.I.O. with such big stores as Hearn's and Macy's in New York and Frank & Seder in Pittsburgh.

Though chartered by the C.I.O. less than a year ago, the United Retail & Wholesale Employes union, through such agreements, already has a solid base in the greatest "mass-production" plants of the distributive industries.

From this base it is now ready to extend its organization far and wide until higher wages and union conditions are won through collective bargaining for hundreds of thousands of unorganized and low-paid retail employes, for whom the crafts could do nothing.

It's the Latest Fashion!

The signing of a union contract by Gimbel's, the big New York department store, adds another to the growing list of the country's largest stores whose employes are organized in the United Retail & Wholesale Employes, C.I.O., and working under union agreements.

Arbitration Cut From Marine Bill; Victory For C.I.O.

WASHINGTON—Maritime workers throughout the country hailed the victory of the C.I.O. in persuading the House Maritime Committee to reject compulsory arbitration in its new bill.

The C.I.O. unions waged a vigorous fight against the proposal to establish no-strike rules for the maritime industry, on the ground that it was a threat to all unions in the nation.

At the same time, Harry Bridges, president of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, endorsed the House proposal for a complete study of labor relations in the maritime industry.

Maritime Study Endorsed

"The C.I.O. maritime representatives endorse that part of the committee's report which promises a further study of maritime labor in all its phases," he said.

"They will ask an opportunity to be heard during this study, and will produce evidence to prove that the basic reason for present unrest in the industry is the shipowners' refusal to bargain collectively with the workers, and their use of every vicious device to undermine and break the C.I.O. maritime unions and their leaders," Bridges declared.

'Generals' Without Armies To Lead . . .

WASHINGTON—Item for those who see the A. F. of L. carpenters' union "waging war" on the C.I.O. —an excerpt from a letter received by THE C.I.O. NEWS this week.

"Don't let Bill Hutcheson know that I have subscribed for THE C.I.O. NEWS, for I am secretary of the Carpenters Local Union No. ——, and if he finds out that I am a subscriber to your paper, he may have me deported.

"I don't know that my ancestors were naturalized, but they were not far off when John Hancock made that pot of tea from the salt water and made Johnnie Bull drink it and say that he liked it.

"I am ready to steep another pot for Bill Green and Bill Hutcheson."

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

TRYING TO KEEP LABOR IN SHORT PANTS

IT IS wrestling with the impossible to try to stop a child from growing up. Yet all too many misguided parents make the attempt.

Curls are not cut till the child revolts, long pants forbidden till he looks like an elephant in tights—and still worse, the growing youth is given an inferiority complex by being constantly told he is too young or undeveloped to undertake the man-size responsibilities that in due course confront him.

Such "parental love" is but thinly disguised selfishness—and the same goes for the attitude of those who now, with such tender concern, try to keep American labor in the short pants it has outgrown.

* * *

The candidacy of Lieutenant-Governor Tom Kennedy, of the United Mine Workers, for the governorship of Pennsylvania has let loose a flood of editorials designed to make labor people think their status falls short of full manhood and equal citizenship in a democratic republic.

Ignoring the many victories of labor-sponsored candidates, the writers dig up and expand endlessly upon any defeats they can find, to convey the impression that the lot of American workers is to stick to their toil, or to aspire only to minor office.

The general purpose of all such propaganda is to keep working people from realizing the full extent of their growing political power, so they may be content with the candidates whom their richers—but not their betters—see fit to bestow upon them.

* * *

What is there in the constitution of the United States that says a man from labor's ranks may not aspire to any elective office?

What is there in American political history that says he can't be elected—or hasn't been in many cases—when he so aspires?

What is there that says the man who is labor's choice may not also be the choice of farming and middle classes and progressive businessmen?

Why should any of these classes prefer the corporation lawyers, bankers and professional politicians who are so regularly offered them as candidates by boss-controlled political machines?

Is it not logical that a labor man should better serve the common people than the usual corporation candidate?

What better training is there for public service than elective leadership and responsibility in a great and democratic labor union?

Why should not the farming and laboring classes, who make up such a great majority, put forward and elect men from their ranks who have devoted their lives to their service, rather than men whose service has been to a wealthy few?

Those who think labor looks cute in swaddling clothes, curls or a Little Lord Fauntleroy suit, but who fear its coming of age, have no real answer to these questions. They are just trying to keep their control by kidding the lusty youth into clinging to apron strings like a timorous Momma's boy.

* * *

Certainly American labor has been slow in reaching maturity. It has been stinted, starved and terrorized by harsh masters, until it struck out for itself through union organization. Its growth has been checked by outmoded craft forms which shortsighted bureaucrats have sought to impose.

But in the last few years, with the aid of industrial organization, it has shot up rapidly to full manhood.

And now American labor no longer fights with one arm tied behind its back. Through the solid organization of Labor's Non-Partisan League in state after state, it is learning to bring its political as well as its economic arm into play —with a real wallop, as recent elections have shown.

By putting forward and electing its own candidates, in that natural alliance with farming and other progressive groups which will make its and their victories possible, labor will lose the last traces of that inferiority complex which wealthy ruling minorities always seek to instill in the majorities they would exploit.

It will insist on the full representation that is its due—and American democracy generally will be the better for it.

LaFollette Committee Probes N. A. M. Activities

Pay Slash Threat Used To Fight Rubber Union

By ROBERT L. CRUDEN

AKRON, Ohio—What rubber union leaders see as a drive to smash the union has been initiated by the B. F. Goodrich Co., in Akron.

The company has served demands upon the union for a 17½ per cent wage reduction, abolition of the six-hour day, and a step-up in output, on threat of moving one-third of its production out of town.

It accompanied its statement to the union with a campaign to mobilize middle-class sentiment against the union on the grounds that the union is driving industry out of Akron. Since Goodyear, Firestone and General, and Goodrich itself, have already located large plants in other centers—bitterly anti-union towns—the company counts on this campaign receiving response.

Previous efforts to use the Akron Ministerial Assn. to push the company program failed when the ministers called upon the union to explain its position.

Conference Refused

Leaders of the five leading rubber locals in Akron invited representatives of the companies to sit down in joint conference to iron out disputes, but the companies uniformly rejected the proposal. Then the B. F. Goodrich Co. took the lead against the union.

Attempts of the union to secure written guarantees from the company against further decentralization, if a wage reduction were granted, drew from the company the response that the company would not make such an agreement.

Union leaders feel that industry, foiled in its attempt to drive down steel wages, has turned to rubber, and to Akron, as the strategic spot to launch an attack on the C.I.O., and incidentally, on the anti-wage-cut policy of the administration.

Aluminum Union Sees New Victory

PITTSBURGH—The Aluminum Workers of America, C.I.O., appeared ready to win another victory when the A. F. of L. failed to intervene in a request that the Natl. Labor Relations Board certify the union as sole bargaining agent for 6,150 employes of the Aluminum Co. of America at Arnold, New Kensington and Logan's Ferry, near here.

R. M. Ferry, superintendent of the company's New Kensington plant, seconded statements by Pres. N. A. Zonarich of the A.W.A. that union and management had been having no trouble. A contract with the union is being renewed monthly pending the certification.

Bridges Welcomes Immigration Trial As End to 'Red' Cry

WASHINGTON—Harry Bridges, C.I.O. west Coast longshore leader, said here this week that he welcomed the hearing on his status in the U. S. to be held April 25 in San Francisco, pointing out that it would force an end to the red-baiting campaign against him by shipowners and their "stool-pigeon allies."

"I welcome this hearing," Bridges said, after explaining that it had been called at his request. "It will end once and for all the campaign of witch-hunting and red-baiting that has been used against me as president of the C.I.O. Intl. Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union."

Campaign Called Smokescreen

"The campaign has been used as a smoke-screen for shipowners' attacks on the longshoremen and all other maritime unions," he declared. "It is an obvious attempt to confuse the public on the real issue, which is one of organizing maritime workers for better living and working conditions."

Bridges described the charges filed against him as perjured testimony framed with the obvious purpose of trying to destroy the organization of the maritime workers he represents.

Certify CIO Union At Cudahy Plant

WASHINGTON—An election won 406 to 243 by the United Packinghouse Workers, Local 491 of the C.I.O., at the plant of Cudahy Bros. Packing Co., Cudahy, Wis., has resulted in the certification by the Labor Board of the C.I.O. union as sole bargaining agency for production and maintenance employes.

A total of 811 votes were cast, 153 for neither union, and nine were protested, blank or void.

NEW YORK (UNS)—Various jokers in the Burchill bill purporting to give the right of collective bargaining to employes of New York City's independent subway system, were pointed out by the Transport Workers Union in a memorandum sent to all members of the Legislature.

Mayor Maloy Talks At League Meeting

CLEVELAND—Elmer Maloy of Duquesne, Pa., former C.I.O. organizer who became the first labor mayor of what had always been a company-dominated municipality, will be the keynote speaker at the Cuyahoga County convention of Labor's Non-Partisan League.

Scores of A. F. of L., C.I.O. and railway brotherhood locals will be represented at the meeting, which will lay plans for activity aimed at replacing Gov. Martin Davey of Ohio with a labor-endorsed candidate.

Other speakers at the meeting will include Pres. Bernard McGroarty of the A. F. of L. Stereotypers Union; Berle Whitney, educational director of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, and Elmer Fehlhaber, executive secretary of the Cleveland Industrial Union Council, C.I.O.

Supreme Court Upholds Union

WASHINGTON—Labor gained another point from the U. S. Supreme Court, when the justices agreed to review an appeal of the Intl. Ladies Garment Workers Union, C.I.O., against an anti-picketing decree issued by a lower court.

The I.L.G.W. has been fighting for the right to picket the Donnelly Garment Co. of Kansas City, owned by the wife of former Sen. James A. Reed. The lower court had issued the injunction on the grounds that no labor dispute was in existence at the plant.

A recent decision by the Supreme Court justices, however, upheld the right of a Milwaukee union to picket a restaurant to solicit members.

Bosses' Group Favors 'Mohawk Valley' Plan

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON—Gently but firmly, the LaFollette Civil Liberties Committee is plucking the few remaining shreds of sheep's clothing still left to the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers, revealing it for what it is—an organization aimed at the smashing of legitimate unions throughout the nation.

Climax of the first week's testimony came when an N.A.M. pamphlet introduced as evidence by the committee was shown to give full endorsement to James Rand's "Mohawk Valley" formula of union-busting.

The pamphlet was titled "Labor Strife and the Third Party"—the third party being the public. Methods paralleling those of the Mohawk Formula of stirring up vigilante spirit against strikers were outlined in the booklet, which was circulated among executives of the Natl. Industrial Council, an affiliate of the N.A.M.

Anti-Unionism "Constructive"

The N.A.M., in furnishing the formula to its members, spoke of its appreciation of the opportunity to bring "to industrial America the constructive manner" in which the controversy had been handled.

Pointing out that the Natl. Labor Relations Board had backed the strikers' claims in the Rand case, and that Rand and Pearl ("my mother wanted me to be a girl") Bergoff, leading fink, had been tried on charges of violating the Byrnes anti-strikebreaking act, Sen. LaFollette asked:

"Did the finding of the N.L.R.B. alter your opinion that the strike was handled in a constructive manner?"

Noel Sargent, executive secretary of the employers' group, who was on the witness stand, replied that the N.L.R.B. decision had made no difference to them.

N.A.M. spokesmen continually sought to make the point that their organization merely fights "unscrupulous unionism," but nothing in the testimony gave assurance to union members that the N.A.M. was expert in distinguishing one brand of labor organization from another.

Employed "Innocents"

Committee investigators recalled that an article by John Kirby, II, one time head of the organization, had asserted that the "A. F. of L. is waging open warfare on Jesus Christ."

That "peace on earth, good will to men," is definitely not a part of the Association's attitude towards unions became more clear as evidence mounted to show the use of "front" organizations to put the N.A.M.'s preachings into practice.

During the Little Steel strike, for instance, the Youngstown, O., Vindicator carried advertisements praising industry for providing jobs. The ads appeared under the sponsorship of such organizations as the Mahoning County Dental Association and the Monday Morning Musical Club.

Actually, however, the anti-union tune was being played by the Mahoning Valley Industrial Assn., which had placed the ad in the paper and which was active in fighting the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

The campaign fitted in nicely with the N.A.M.'s method of "community organization" against strikers.

Cash From Big Boys

Advertising by the N.A.M. was conducted through the MacDonald-Hook Co., South Bend, Ind., advertising firm, which had described the campaign as one "to provide the means of organizing a community against labor agitators before they get in their work." Under this arrangement, the civic clubs appeared as sponsors of the campaign, while the big employers remained anonymous—but supplied the cash.

The Association, the LaFollette committee charged, is a giant propaganda mill, turning out a variety of features aimed at coloring opinion to suit N.A.M. tastes.

Thus, the American Family Robinson radio program is broadcast by 268 stations; George Sokolsky, leading red-baiter, is heard over 246 stations; the "Let's Go America," movie was exhibited in 1,812 movie houses; the Industrial Press Service, is distributed to 6,252 papers, and "Uncle Abner Sez," a feature is printed in 270 papers. None of these features indicate their N.A.M. origin.

The Association's income has grown 600 per cent in five years to support this widespread program, the committee revealed. Its 1937 "take" was $1,439,000, half of it collected from 207 firms. In the 1933-37 period, the E. I. duPont de Nemours Co. poured $116,800 into the treasury, General Motors $64,295; Natl. Steel, $42,050, Bethlehem Steel $29,250 and Pittsburgh Plate Glass $16,000.

How Much Is Enough?

BUSINESS WRITER WONDERS HOW HIGH PROFITS HAVE TO BE

NEW YORK — Long-suffering man took a substantial bite out of the proverbial dog last week, when a business page writer on the New York Times cracked industrialists for their hostility to the administration.

Citing "attack after attack" on the government by big business, C. F. Hughes, editor of the Merchant's Point of View in the Times, declared:

"One would imagine, naturally, that the earnings statements were disclosing great distress.

"The Natl. City Bank compilation of 1,020 companies, however, indicated an average gain of 8.5 per cent for 1937, on top of a gain of 47 per cent for 2,140 companies in 1936."

The record, he continued, showed a profits increase of 53 per cent for the first quarter of 1937, "only" 24 per cent, "as one writer put it," for the second quarter, 18 per cent for the third period and a loss of 34 per cent in the final three months when the "speculative boom" caught up with business.

"Then," the article continued, "there may be cited the case of a leading utility executive who said, 'It's my baby that is hurt now—maybe your baby later.' His Tennessee company last year, in the midst of TVA competition, grossed 8 per cent more than in 1936 and earned a net 13 per cent higher.

"It seems appropriate to ask just what profit return these parties seek before they will agree that the system is not in danger."

Shipyard Union Wins In Brooklyn

CAMDEN, N. J.—Continuing its election sweep in Brooklyn ship repair yards, Local 13, Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers won the poll at the Atlantic Basin Iron Works by a vote of 236 to 26 over the A. F. of L. union.

Two weeks earlier, an election was won at the Bushey & Sons repair yard by a vote of 112 to 58.

The National Labor Relations Board has also called for elections at two New York firms, the Stephen Ranson, Inc., and the three plants operated by the United Shipyards, Inc.

Garment Union Gets Pact

PHILADELPHIA — After a one-week strike led by the International Ladies Garment Workers, some 175 employes of the Prudential Knitting Mills of Philadelphia won a contract restoring paycuts of five to 50 per cent, a 40-hour week, a closed shop and other concessions.

CIO Pecan Workers Win Six-Week Strike

SAN ANTONIO, Tex.—Nine thousand pecan shellers are back at work in San Antonio, their six weeks' strike ended in victory for the union, a local of the C.I.O. United Cannery and Agricultural Workers.

The contract ending the strike was signed by J. Austin Beasley, union representative, and Julius Seligman for the employers. Seligman had previously said that he would not sign any agreement with any union, under any circumstances.

Under the contract the question of wages will be arbitrated by a board of three, one member selected by each side and the third mutually agreed upon. Decision of this board must be rendered within 15 days from the signing of the contract.

The contract also provides sole collective bargaining recognition for the union in all plants where a majority of the worker sare members, for no descrimination against union members, and for the immediate firing of all scabs.

In addition, all police court charges against strikers are to be dropped, and arrested pickets released.

Signing of the contract followed closely on the filing of Labor Relations Board charges against Seligman, who had been the chief obstacle to a settlement. The strike began February 1 when the operators proposed a cut of 15 per cent in already starvation wages of $1 to $3 per week. During the six weeks it lasted the strike spread from an original 5,000 to approximately 8,000 workers, and the union grew from 500 to 7,500 members.

Repeated mass arrests, clubbings, and close to a dozen tear gas attacks by police failed to break the strikers' ranks. Chief Kilday from the start announced a "no strike, no picketing" policy that he employed 200 cops, firemen and plain clothes thugs to enforce.

Wage-Hour Bill Delay Deepens Depression

League Says Passage Would Aid Recovery

WASHINGTON—Blame for the current business depression was placed on delay in passing a Wages and Hours Bill in a letter sent this week to Congressmen by E. L. Oliver, executive vice president of Labor's Non-Partisan League.

"Every day of delay in enactment by Congress of legislation placing a floor below wages and a ceiling above hours deepens the current business slump," Oliver said.

"Wholesalers and retailers, fearing future wage—and therefore price—reductions, are buying on a hand to mouth basis that is retarding business in all parts of the nation," he added.

Normal Buying Needed

"When minimum wage and maximum hour standards are fixed by law, removing the possibility of price cuts through further drastic slashing of wages and lengthening of hours, a normal buying program will be adopted."

Oliver's letter hailed the appointment of a subcommittee of the Labor Committee to draft a bill within two weeks as "the most encouraging development on Capitol Hill in this session of Congress." The letter also pledged the full cooperation of the League in pushing the new bill.

"The position of labor on this question is clear," Oliver declared. "The President of the United States has repeatedly urged Congress to enact a fair labor standards bill and is the leader today in the fight to end sweatshop exploitation."

I.L.G.W.U. Certified for Riverside, N. J., Workers

WASHINGTON—Workers in the Century Mills of Riverside, N. J., won sole collective bargaining recognition when their union, the Intl. Ladies Garment Workers, C.I.O., was certified by the Labor Board after a check of membership cards with company personnel records.

Attorneys for the company alleged that the union cards were "dubious," but were overruled by the board, which announced that 105 of the 152 production workers were union members at the time of a strike some months ago.

News Guild Wins Bayonne Strike

BAYONNE, N. J.—A contract with the American Newspaper Guild, providing for a 40-hour, five-day week and wage increases, brought to a close the 17-week strike of eight editorial employes in the editorial department of the Bayonne Times.

Other terms of the agreement, which will be in effect for one year, include a wage schedule ranging from $22.50 weekly for beginners to $40 for experienced reporters.

They Chose the C.I.O.—

Maritime Union Wins Lykes Poll 100 to 1

NEW YORK—In the 54th Labor Board election conducted for unlicensed personnel on east coast steamship lines, the National Maritime Union, C.I.O. affiliate, won another outstanding victory over the International Seamen's Union, A. F. of L., by defeating it 1,049 to 10 in the poll taken on the 36 vessels of the Lykes Bros. fleet.

The N.M.U. has won 47 of the 54 elections with a total of 17,583 votes. The I.S.U. has won five with a total of 2,577 votes.

The Board recently certified the N.M.U. as the sole collective bargaining agency for the Gulf Oil Corp., which has headquarters in Pittsburgh, Pa. The C.I.O. union won 575 out of a total of 661 votes cast. The I.S.U. received 36, and the remainder were blank, void or for neither organization.

Rice Mill Votes C.I.O.

SACRAMENTO, Calif.—Employes of Rosenberg Bros., rice mill at Biggs, Butte County, voted to affiliate to the Sacramento Warehousemen's Local 1-127, International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, C.I.O.

Long Island Auto Union Wins

NEW YORK—By an overwhelming majority, Local 259, United Automobile Workers, won an election conducted by the State Labor Board among employes of Joseph L. Daly, Inc., Long Island City Chevrolet dealer.

C.I.O. Certified For Loose-Wiles Workers

WASHINGTON—Employes of the Loose-Wiles Biscuit Company, Kansas City, Mo., will be represented by the United Bakery and Confectionery Workers Local Industrial Union, affiliated with the C.I.O., according to a certification made by the Labor Board.

At a secret election held in January, the workers voted 346 to 187 in favor of the C.I.O. union. The rival organization was the Employes Independent Union.

Oil Workers Win Rights In Findlay, Ohio, Plant

WASHINGTON—Sole collective bargaining rights were won by the Oil Workers International Union, C.I.O., in the National Refining Co. at Findlay, Ohio, when the Labor Relations Board certified the union as representing a majority of the workers there.

T. W. O. C. Wins Blanket Mill

LEAKESVILLE, N. C.—By a vote of 502 to 376, the Textile Workers Organizing Committee won a Labor Board election at the Draper Blanket Mill, Leaksville, N. C., the first of a series of polls being held at five Marshall Field & Co. plants.

Pritchett Gains Entry Permit For Next Three Months

WASHINGTON—Harold Pritchett, president of the C.I.O. Intl. Woodworkers of America, has been given a three months entry permit for the U. S. by the Immigration Dept.

Pritchett, who is a Canadian citizen, was ordered to leave this country last month after several renewals of his visitor's permit. A permanent entry visa has been refused on the grounds that he is "undesirable," in spite of the fact that he was recently re-elected head of his 100,000 strong union.

The renewed permit was secured after widespread protest by C.I.O. unions and progressive bodies, organized by the National Committee to Gain Entry for Pritchett, whose chairman is Heywood Broun, president of the American Newspaper Guild.

C. I. O. To Form Richmond Council

RICHMOND, Va.—Delegates from 29 C.I.O. unions in the tobacco, textile, steel, clothing, dye, and other industries will attend a conference to be held in Richmond, Va., March 15 for the purpose of setting up a C.I.O. Industrial Union Council for the city.

Similar central C.I.O. bodies in other Virginia towns and cities will also be organized, union officials said, to carry out the economic and social objectives of the C.I.O.

John H. Suttle, C.I.O. regional director, and other officials from the various unions are on the committee in charge of the plans.

Film on Southern Folk School

NEW YORK (UNS) — Erskine Caldwell, author of "Tobacco Road," will write the commentary for a film on the Highlander Folk School at Monteagle, Tenn.

Five Marshall Field Plants Vote For TWOC

NEW YORK—In a series of Labor Board elections held at five plants of the Marshall Field & Company in North Carolina, the Textile Workers' Organizing Committee won out by a total vote of 1,726 to 1,071, securing good-sized majorities in each plant and winning the right to represent the workers as sole bargaining agency in the five plants.

The plants are located in Draper, Leaksville and Spray, N. C., and manufacture blankets, sheeting, rugs and bedspreads. Results of the elections were announced by Emil Rieve, acting T.W.O.C. chairman.

He also announced that a five per cent wage increase had been obtained for workers in the Caledonia Woolen Mills, Clifton Heights, Pa., by the union's negotiations. The concern employs about 350 workers.

"This increase in wages represents a significant change in the trend of wages in the wool textile industry," Rieve declared.

New Wage Pact Won

A new contract with the Standard Woven Label Co., Campgaw, N. J., was also reported by Rieve. Terms of the agreement include an eight-hour day, a 40-hour week, and the same wages as prevail in union woven label shops.

An extensive campaign to complete the organization of the woven label industry is being carried on by the T.W.O.C.

An agreement by which 36 union employes discharged by the Dartmouth Woolen Mills, Claremont, N. H., will receive $9,000 in back pay, has been announced by the Labor Board. The workers, members of Local No. 2123, United Textile Workers, are also entitled to their former positions or equivalent employment without prejudice, according to the Board's order.

Lauds C.I.O.

Jay C. Hormel, Austin, Minn., meat packer, who told the Senate Unemployment Committee that he had no objection to his employes getting a C.I.O. charter, because they felt that a "strong union throughout the packing industry would raise the level of the industry." Hormel also said that a union helps get petty grievances settled.

Kennedy Enters Primary

At the recent convention of the United Mine Workers, thousands of whose members come from Pennsylvania, there was a concerted movement to draft Kennedy for higher office in the state government.

The resolution pointed out that American labor is "for the first time taking an independent role in the political life" of the nation, and stated that Kennedy "is not simply a friend of labor, but is one of us, so that his election to political office is a guarantee of the rights and interests of organized labor in the political field."

Excerpts from Kennedy's statement follow:

"We face many great problems, for the solution of which we must find sensible policies. Most of the problems that concern and challenge government arise from our industrial ailments and fundamentally are more economic than political.

"Farm labor and farm income in Pennsylvania bear a very important relation to the success of our economic structure. The State can do much to assist in the development of plans and policies that will be protective and will advance the best interests of agriculture in Pennsylvania.

"Unemployment and its demoralizing effect on prices, income and purchasing power constitutes our real basic difficulty. To bring about conditions that will tend to create employment, stabilize prices and increase purchasing power and income, with proper distribution thereof, is a contribution that the State can make to State and National stability and prosperity.

Asks Adequate Relief

"Relief must be maintained. It should be adequate. It must be administered without regard to creed, color, nationality or politics. . . .

"In a word, I want to help to insure in Pennsylvania a condition of affairs that will make for a liberal, efficient and just government; a government which will enure to the welfare and prosperity, and to the peace and happiness of the people and the State.

"In announcing my candidacy for the Democratic nomination for Governor, I would emphasize that the Democratic Party is a Party of the people. The Party is not owned and will not be controlled by any boss or bosses. The Democratic voters will finally decide the issue. One thing we ask—nay, we demand—that they be left free to make their choice and that no coercion or intimidation shall be used. Such coercion will not be conducive to the welfare of the Party itself, nor will it be consistent with the great principles upon which the Democratic Party was built."

Die Casters Expect Erie NLRB Victory

ERIE Pa.—The National Association of Die Casting Workers, C.I.O., is mobilizing for a labor board election at the Parker-White Metal & Machine Co. here next week.

The Association will seek to defeat a so-called independent union at the plant and to win recognition as sole collective bargaining agency for the company's employes.

In urging Parker-White workers to vote for the Association, an official pointed out that rates in other plants they have organized are much higher than in Erie, and that work is dividing during slack periods, thus protecting jobs.

"Every officer of our organization," the Die Casters declared, "works at a die casting plant every day."

Improved Conditions

In most plants working under contract with the Association, the Association has gained the preferential shop.

"In Erie," the Association official declared, "no guaranteed rate was paid up until the last few weeks. In organized shops, the guaranteed hourly rate is paid for breakdowns, and a definite minimum pay rate is established.

"In Mt. Vernon, N. Y., the Association has won from the Mt. Vernon Die Casting Corp. the highest minimum rates ever paid in the industry. There, aluminum die casting operators receive 80c an hour and piece work; white metal die casting workers get 75c an hour and piece work.

"Machine hands and filers in the cleaning department, as well as punch press hands, get 60c an hour and piece work. The work is divided evenly during slack periods, and unemployed union men must be given preference when jobs are open. A union committee is notified when there is a position to be filled."

In an attempt to keep the workers from joining the Die Casting Workers, the statement said, "a so-called 'independent union' suddenly springs up from nowhere, and promises it is going to help. Whom?

"The employes?—or the bosses?

C.I.O. Forges Ahead

"The C.I.O. is well known as a progressive organization, which was formed to organize the mass production workers. It has done this job very well. Proof of that is its immense membership in all mass production industries.

"Which do you think is best suited to help you?

"An 'independent' union which arrived in your midst overnight, and which has had no actual experience in unionism? Or, the C.I.O., which has already aided 4,000,000 other workers?

"We feel certain that a vast majority of Parker-White employes will vote for the National Association of Die Casting Workers."

Who Splits Labor?

C.I.O. AIDS A. F. OF L. STRIKE; A. F. OF L. REFUSES

KALAMAZOO, Mich.—Tell members of the United Garment Workers local at Kalamazoo that the C.I.O. is splitting labor, and they'll think you're crazy.

When the U.G.W. local, which is affiliated with the A. F. of L., went on strike recently, the C.I.O. offered full support to their fight to prevent a wage cut proposed by the management of the Kalamazoo Pants Co.

Not only had A. F. of L. officials sought to prevent the strike, but once it was declared they tried to keep the matter quiet.

When the local held a strike mass meeting, Frank Ingram, C.I.O. representative, offered aid for their picket line. An A. F. of L. representative did not.

As a result, many of the workers are anxious to see the local affiliate with the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of the C.I.O.

NATION'S WELFARE IS IN JEOPARDY, SAYS LEWIS

Jobs For All Is CIO Demand; Three Billion Fund Needed

Private industry has failed to provide jobs for 13 million unemployed.

It is the clear duty of the Government to provide work and a decent living for all who are in need—since private industry has failed them.

But only the surface of the problem has been scratched so far.

CIO estimates show that at least $3,000,000,000 will be needed in the coming fiscal year to provide 3,500,000 jobs.

Chairman Lewis this week addressed a letter to the House Appropriations Committee telling of the minimum needs of the jobless in this emergency. He urges work for all unemployed on socially useful projects.

All labor and progressive organizations are asked to act at once so that the needs of the unemployed may be adequately met.

Turn to page 3 for further particulars and to page 4 for an editorial stressing the importance of proper action by Congress.

Labor-Hater

Erie, Pa. — Committees from both the Erie Central Labor Union, AFL, and the Industrial Union Council, CIO, are working together to build Labor's Non-Partisan League in this city.

HEYWOOD BROUN begins his special column for The CIO News with this issue. See what he has to say about "white collar" workers on page three.

CIO Leader Asks Cooperation in Crisis

Washington — Declaring that the nation is drifting "with terrifying rapidity and deadly sureness to the never-never realm of financial bankruptcy, economic collapse, and social tragedy," John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, called on capital and government to co-operate with labor to save American democracy, in an international broadcast made from Washington over the British Broadcasting System.

"America is moving in economic reverse," Lewis said. "Our consumer goods industries began to slow down in June, 1937, and by October of the same year, our heavy industries began to feel the icy hand of the depression.

"Since that time the drift has been constant—shut-downs in industry being the order of the day—while the number of human beings thrown out of employment was augmented day by day."

Failure to Meet Crisis

Lewis accused government and industry of failure to meet the situation, while the wage-earning population suffers increasing misery and despair.

Read the full text of Chairman Lewis' serious warning, and the CIO stand on the present emergency, on page five.

"In the months that have ensued," he said, "neither industry or government has come forth with constructive proposals, designed to meet the problems of the depression.

"The Federal Congress, lacking adequate or competent leadership, in continuous session for months past has failed to devise or enact a single statute that would cause a glimmer of hope to penetrate the minds of millions of despairing Americans."

"Labor is willing to co-operate," he declared, pointing out that organized workers held the key to the future of America. "Let the leaders of the nation's business step forward. Let the statesmen of the nation do the same. Let the council of reason and mutual toleration be convened."

Cannery Union Gets Pacts

WASHINGTON—New victories keep coming in for the CIO Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers, according to reports received at the national office in Washington.

Two contracts signed with 10 companies in the clam digging and packing industry in the state of Washington cover 1200 workers, and provide wage increases to a base rate of 55 cents per hour, sole collective bargaining rights, a preferential shop, and no union discrimination.

The contracts were signed with locals 239 and 62 of the international union, chartered in Aberdeen, Washington.

CIO Backs Mexican Workers

Washington — Support for the Mexican Workers Confederation in its struggle with the American and British oil trust was voiced by John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, in a telegram sent this week to Vicente Lombardo Toledano, secretary of the Confederation.

The wire was in reply to a message from Toledano telling of the refusal to the oil companies to abide by recent decisions of Mexican courts ordering higher wages to be paid to the workers, who are organized in the Confederation.

Exploit Mexicans

Lewis's message stated in policy of the CIO in carrying out decisions of courts and labor tribunals, and its conviction that employers should show a similar respect for law.

Toledano pointed out that the American and British companies have made enormous profits from their exploitation of Mexican oil, while wages and taxes paid were 75 per cent lower than those paid by companies in the United States. Original capital investment has been paid back more than 10 years ago, Toledano added.

The Confederation represents more than 1,000,000 organized Mexican workers, Toledano said.

SWOC Wins Strike

Houston, Tex.—Lodge 2003 of the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee gained increases running up to 7 cents an hour, the 40-hour week and sole bargaining rights for workers in the Steel Barrel and Drum Plant here.

The men had previously worked seven days a week, and as much as 14 hours a day without overtime pay. Through the pact they gained a week's vacation with pay seniority rights and grievance committee rights.

It Can Be Done!

Providence, R. I.—Through the coordinated efforts of the local leaders the Textile Workers Organizing Committee and Labor's Nonpartisan League, the unions in Rhode Island have been able to secure relief and jobs on public works for thousands of workers mostly in textiles — laid off during the past few months.

Dressmakers Demonstrate

Members of the International Ladies Garment Workers parade through New York City to protest against non-union jobbing and trucking firms.

Rubber Union Lifts Wages

ERIE, Pa. — Local 74 of the United Rubber Workers, CIO, reports renewal of its contract with the Lovell Manufacturing Co., covering 500 workers. Wages which previously ranged from 50 to 70c an hour have been increased by 5 per cent under the new contract and piece rates have been increased 10 per cent.

Hours have been reduced from 45 to 40 a week, with an 8 hour day. The contract provides for a preferential shop, vacations and includes a number of improvements over the old contract.

Organize Your Votes!

Labor is on the march to the ballot box.

In numerous states, and in scores of cities and towns, union men and women are realizing that organization means strength, whether at the factory or at the polls.

As a result, Labor's Non-Partisan League, the political arm of the labor movement, is growing—and growing rapidly.

To help unionists better understand the problems to be faced in erecting a strong political organization, THE CIO NEWS has summarized a new pamphlet just issued by the League.

League Pamphlet Explains How to Do It

Washington—Specific suggestions on how to organize and conduct a state or local political campaign have just been prepared by the national office of Labor's Non-Partisan League in a special handbook which is being distributed to League affiliates in all parts of the United States.

Here for the first time in the history of American political writing is a practical working manual for campaign managers that offers them concrete answers for some of their most vexing problems. It is not intended, the League warns, as a complete program to fit all situations, but the points it covers can be adapted to any campaign.

The handbook, "How to Organize and Conduct a Local Political Campaign" outlines a general policy for labor compaigners and then sets forth a seven-point program of political action.

"If labor is to be effective in political action," the Handbook points out, "its activities must be carefully planned. Our political opponents have well organized machines and their leaders are seasoned veterans. Careful thorough organization by labor and progressives can elect the kind of men and women labor wants in office; but no amount of enthusiasm or optimism will win unless we PLAN the work."

PREPARE PROGRAM

Labor campaigners are instructed that a first step in any campaign is the issuance of a platform offering a positive program of honest government. Chief issues in any campaign should be an answer to the question: "Why are workers and progressives interested in this particular campaign?" Typical campaign issues are cited as police brutality against workers, better handling of relief needs, homes for workers, stopping graft, public ownership of utilities, etc.

Experience has shown, the League handbook says, that labor's effectiveness in politics is injured when it pitches its campaign on too narrow a note. It adds:

"Successful political action consists largely in developing the arts of education and persuasion, in winning a majority of the electorate to an understanding that labor is genuinely interested in the welfare of the community as a whole. . . .

"The issue, in broad terms, should be stated in terms of progressive and efficient government.

"This is desired not only by union members but by nearly all other elements. Serious efforts should be directed to show this similarity in aims and also to educate uninformed persons on the broad meaning of the word 'labor'.

"GENERAL PUBLIC"

"Labor only plays into the hands of its opponents when it lends support to the fiction that 'labor' is a special and separate element in the population. Labor is the 'general public'. It is only the reactionaries who seek to set 'labor' up against the whole community, as a special interest. Their purpose is to alienate from labor candidates all other groups and thus prevent progressive victories.

"Labor is in politics to serve the interests of the community as a whole; to obtain good government for all; and to unite all the voters against the fraction of exploiters of great wealth."

On candidates, the League suggests that labor groups should endorse those candidates or run candidates of their own who will pledge support of the labor platform and who by their past records can be trusted to carry out their promises after election.

Questionnaires to candidates asking them specific questions on the leading issues are proposed.

The handbook discusses at some length methods of getting the facts about labor candidates and platforms to the voters. It also contains suggestions for labor campaigners on how to go about getting the basic material for publicity. Campaigners are advised to publish a handbook of facts for all speakers in which is summarized the chief issues, the supporting facts, and labor's constructive proposals.

On this subject, it says:

"To get your facts and arguments to the voters you must use speakers at meetings and over the radio; regular newspapers already being published — daily and weekly papers, labor papers, neighborhood papers, foreign language papers, a campaign newspaper of your own, if possible; window display cards, auto tire covers, paper match box covers, buttons, etc.; outdoor billboards; and any other method which will work in your district."

Handling of speakers, radio programs and special literature are also outlined in the pamphlet as part of the publicity drive.

HOW TO DO IT

The booklet describes in some detail just how to go about the setting up of a ward and precinct organization. The general headquarters is said to be the nerve center of the whole organization and a plan of organization for this office is presented.

One of the first things necessary in forming a ward and precinct organization is the listing at general headquarters of the names of all members of organized labor and of other groups of friendly voters. From these lists are then chosen people to act as ward and precinct committeemen.

There is reproduced a chart which shows how the campaign organization should look when completed.

Registration of voters is stressed as the first objective of the precinct workers. The League advises that the facts on how, where and when voters can register should be given extensive publicity.

How to canvass voters is another subject treated in the handbook. Household meetings are suggested in the homes of precinct captains where the neighbors may meet in an informal friendly way and hear the story of the labor campaigners.

Women as election workers are emphasized and it is suggested that women be named as co-captains of precinct committees and also as canvassers of the neighborhoods. There is also proposed a separate women's committee.

Other phases of campaigning touched on in the handbook of the League relate to rallies and parades, work in unions, election day plans and challengers inside the polls while the votes are being counted.

Many hundred of copies of this handbook are being sent to active leaders in Labors' Non-Partisan League. Extra copies are available at the League at 5 cents each, or $3 a hundred. The League's address is Willard Hotel, Washington, D. C.

League Suggests Set-up

Here's the chart prepared by Labor's Non-Partisan League to explain to local groups how election campaigns should be run. The League suggests enlisting the aid of all groups in the community to help elect favorable candidates.

Hatboro Strike Won by SWOC

Hatboro, Pa. — A five weeks' strike at the Roberts and Mander Stove Company ended victoriously with a sole bargaining contract won by the Steel Workers Organizing Committee. It covers about 800 employes, more than 700 of whom already belong to the union, according to E. J. Lever, SWOC field director.

The end of the strike was marked by a tear gas attack on the sit-down strikers in the plant staged by a band of men claiming to be employes who wanted to return to work.

The union charged that they were outsiders instigated by the company in an attempt to force "employes back to work under a wage cut and without collective bargaining."

The attack was repulsed by the strikers, who later withdrew in good order at the request of the State Police.

The union wired a request to the Governor for an investigation of the attack, and John Sullivan, head of the State Civil Rights Bureau, said an inquiry would be conducted to find out where the tear gas used against the strikers was secured.

Bay State League Active

BOSTON, Mass.—A Massachusetts branch of Labor's Non-Partisan League, which will be organized at a convention here on March 27, has a good chance to achieve the balance of political power in this Commonwealth by the September primaries. Based on the figures of the 1936 bugernatorial election, a change of 1.6 per cent in the vote would have changed the choice of governor.

The convention for Labor's Non-Partisan League will be held all day Sunday, March 27, in the Hotel Bradford, Boston. Speakers will include Adolf A. Berle, Jr., assistant secretary of state, former chamberlain of the city of New York, and one of the original New Deal "Brain Trusters"; Congressman Robert G. Allen of Pennsylvania, a native of Massachusetts and co-author of the Schwellenback-Allen unemployment bill; E. L. Oliver, executive vice-president of the League, and others.

Temporary officers are: Chairman, Dr. Alan Sweezy, American Federation of Teachers; vice-chairman, Joseph A. Salerno, TWOC; secretary, Valery Burati, ANG; and treasurer, William Ross, ILGWU.

Vermont League Forms

Barre, Vt.—Labor's Non-Partisan League moved into this New England outpost of Republicanism when representatives of CIO and AFL unions joined to draft a legislative program for the farmers and workers of the Green Mountain State.

The program called for establishment of a State Department of Labor, wage-hour legislation, improvement in the unemployment compensation act, a State Wagner Act, reduction in hours for women and children, Government aid to farm cooperatives, and continuance of the Federal Soil Conservation Act.

Frank Manning, CIO organizer, was named head of the league; President Allan Raycraft, of the Vermont Federation of Labor, vice-president, and T. M. Newcomb, of the American Federation of Teachers, secretary.

Utah League Meets

Salt Lake City, Utah — More than 600 people attended a mass meeting called by Labor's Non-Partisan League here. State Senator E. M. Royle, a speaker at the meeting, called upon the League to protect the interests of Utah workers and farmers, who he said, are increasingly falling into the position of a tenant class.

Wage Slashes in South

Jasper, Ala.—Alabama lumber companies are paying as low as 25 cents an hour for common labor, and attempting to bring that figure down to 18 cents, according to Bernard Guthrie, editor of the Union News, CIO paper. Relief workers receive 30 cents an hour from the government.

West Allis, Wis. — The Allis Chalmers Workers Union, Local 248 of the United Automobile Workers, has opened negotiations for a new contract with the management of the Allis-Chalmers Company.

Safety at Sea Quiz Started by NMU

New York —— A study of safety at sea conditions has been started by the CIO National Maritime Union. Shipowners, who have been crying for "investigations" of the union, will be subjected to sharp scrutiny on their observance of Federal navigation laws.

The NMU, in undertaking the survey declares that the union has taken the initiative in this matter, since the Commerce Department has failed in its duty to keep a careful check on conditions vitally affecting the safety of passengers and seamen alike.

"It was only after strong protest by the rank and file that the Department took definite steps to force the companies to live up to many of its regulations," the union states.

Survey in Questionnaire

The survey will take the form of a questionnaire distributed to union seamen for replies to a series of 15 questions on safety. Stress is laid on fire-fighting equipment, lifeboats and preservers, duties of watchmen, and other safety provisions on board ship. Specific questions asked included:

"Are life-buoys and jackets readily accessible to all persons aboard, with positions plainly indicated?

"What is the condition of all lifeboats and gear? Rusty or thin plating, condition of falls, davit gears, laders to boats, equipment?"

CIO Asks Three Billion For Relief

Washington—Stating that unemployment has again become "the most insistent problem in our national life," John L. Lewis, chairman of the CIO this week wrote to Representative Taylor, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, calling for a relief fund of $3,000,000,000 to provide a minimum of 3,500,000 WPA jobs for the coming fiscal year.

Lewis described the existence of 13,000,000 unemployed as "a profound threat to our stability as a nation."

"The CIO is convinced that vigorous measures must be taken by government to keep these unemployed from being cast out of our productive economy," he said. "It has been one of the primary purposes of the CIO to promote employment in private industry."

Responsibility of Government

"But when private industry cannot take care of American workers," Lewis declared, "then the federal government must assume the responsibility it has announced it would accept—to provide jobs for the unemployed who are willing to work."

The Lewis letter, pointing out that appropriations for the coming fiscal year would soon be under consideration, called on Congress to appropriate at least $3,000,000,000 to provide at least essary minimum of 3,500,000 relief jobs.

Increased purchasing power, conservation of human resources, and alleviation of human suffering would be the first accomplishments of such a program, Lewis stated, adding that the appropriation would act as a national investment in the social and material wealth of America.

Principles of Relief

Outlining the principles on which the appropriation should be laid out, Lewis set forth a four point program for the federal government to follow in assuming its responsibility for America's jobless workers.

1. All workers should be employed on work suited to their needs and skills.
2. Projects should be socially necessary and productive. For example, housing, slum clearance, flood control, schools and hospitals, white collar projects,etc.
3. Relief workers should not be required to degrade themselves as paupers to obtain WPA jobs.

Hawaii Goes CIO

Hilo, T. H.—The CIO is moving into the sugar cane industry in Hawaii. Hawaiian workers just set up their fifth local of the CIO Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied workers, this time in the sugar cane by-products business.

The new local is known as the Canek Workers Association, No. 76-5, producing insulating board from sugar cane. Recognition of the new local has been won from the employers, the Hawaiian Cane Products Co., Limited, in a letter written by S. H. West general manager.

The letter recognizes the local as sole collective bargaining agent for all the workers involved. Negotiations for a contract are now under way.

Heywood Broun

On White Collar Workers

Try and think of some better words than "white collar" workers.

It is the only name we have. But we don't like it. The "we" refers to the members of the American Newspaper Guild.

Just imagine a reporter coming back to the city room after covering the fire at the glue factory and calling himself a "white collar" worker.

Whenever I have to use the phrase in a speech, I always wince and look down at my current shirt to see if I can make the grade.

But I object to this "white collar" business for other reasons than its lack of accuracy. It sounds snooty. It doesn't fit into the spirit of industrial unionism.

One of the most important tasks for the CIO is to carry on the organization of the unorganized. Reporters and clerks and traveling salesmen have been slow to realize that they, too, are a part of labor and belong in the movement. But it doesn't help to use a phrase which suggests that these particular trades-unionists are set apart from the rest. The thing to do is to heighten the sense of unity.

I wish anybody who has a good idea to replace "white collar" workers would let me know, care of The CIO News.

I don't want to have to keep changing my shirt in order to remain in good standing in the Newspaper Guild.

Kennedy Gets New Backing For Race

Harrisburg, Pa. — The candidacy of Thomas Kennedy United Mine Workers secretary-treasurer, moved into high gear this week, as support was pledged from a number of important sources.

In Washington, E. L. Oliver, executive secretary of the Labor's Non-Partisan League declared that the League will do "everything in its power" to aid the State organization in pushing Kennedy's campaign.

From Pittsburgh, came word that the powerful Steel City Industrial Union Council of the CIO, with a membership of 88,000 workers, had gone on record to endorse Kennedy and pledged "all of its members to work for his nomination."

Additional evidence that the Democratic state committee will have difficulty in rounding up votes for Charles A. Jones, little-known Pittsburgh lawyer and holder of the committee's endorsement, came when Senator Joseph F. Guffey announced he would support Kennedy.

Guffey, a powerful figure in Keystone State politics, declared:

"Constructive"

"As lieutenant-governor and presiding officer of the State Senate, Thomas Kennedy had a large part in the enactment of the constructive and forward-looking legislative program which so fully carried out the State Democratic program of 1934."

Guffey, who sponsored the bituminous coal legislation that bears his name, recalled that when Jones was seeking to "stop Roosevelt" in 1932, Kennedy had been active in building support for the Roosevelt campaign.

The Labor's Non-Partisan League statement declared:

"Organized labor and progressives throughout the United States are extremely gratified by the announcement of Thomas Kennedy, lieutenant-governor of Pennsylvania and secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers, for the gubernatorial nomination on the Democratic ticket in the Keystone state.

League Strong

"The national office of Labor's Non-Partisan League whole-heartedly endorses the candidacy of Mr. Kennedy and will do everything in its power to assist Labor's Non-Partisan League of Pennsylvania on his behalf. The League in Pennsylvania is strongly organized and played a decisive role in the 1936 presidential campaign when it supported Franklin D. Roosevelt. In the 1937 local elections, the League elected scores of candidates, including the mayors of a number of cities.

"Proven Ability"

"The liberal forces of Pennsylvania have, in Mr. Kennedy, a candidate of proven ability and character whom they can support without reservation, and who offers them an unusual opportunity to strike a blow for democracy and progressive principles."

The Steel City Industrial Union Council described the UMW leader as "peculiarly fitted through experience to understand the problems of all the people, and has proved this understanding in actual application of sound government."

Every indication pointed to a vast outpouring of labor votes, both from CIO and AFL sources, for Kennedy. In addition he is expected to poll a heavy vote in the farm country and from middle-class groups in the industrial cities, who see Jones as an obscure tool of the State's political bosses.

Hosiery Union Goes South

Philadelphia.—The annual convention of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, CIO, called for May 2 in Charlotte, N. C., will be a "springboard" for an intensive drive to organize southern knitters, according to a statement issued this week by Emil Rieve, president of the Federation.

Aim of the campaign will be to break down the wage differentials existing between the South and the North, frequent cause of runaway shops that seek to escape the union by locating in unorganized, low wage areas.

According to Rieve, the northern section of the industry is almost completely organized, with only scattered sections to be mopped up. The majority of the 55,000 seamless hosiery workers in the South, however are unorganized.

Fifty veteran organizers will be employed in the South, to supplement the present staff of 15.

Southern Leadership

"We will have almost 90 per cent. southern leadership," Rieve stated in commenting on the drive. "We mean to stabilize the industry. We want competition between the South and the North to rest on the normal competition of business skill rather than on labor differentials."

"We mean to dispel the notion that the South is the National haven for low-wage industries," Rieve added. "Our record will help us. We have never conducted a campaign in the South or elsewhere and then left some of our members stranded. We have never broken an agreement nor violated an obligation."

Berwick, Pa.—Wage raises and sole collective bargaining rights were won by the Steel Workers Organizing Committee in an agreement signed with the American Car and Foundry Company this week.

The raises amount to an increase of $1.20 per week for workers earning between 45 cents and 55 cents per hour.

Lancaster Council Fights Hagueism

By FORREST HECKMAN

Lancaster, Pa. — Acting promptly to nip incipient Hagueism in the bud, the Lancaster County Industrial Union Council is leading a widespread protest against passage of an ordinance introduced at a hasty session of city council to forbid distribution of circulars, handbills and leaflets.

Only newspapers and matter in addressed envelopes would be excepted by the ordinance, which provides heavy fines and prison terms for violation. Advertising would be included in the ban, and small business men have joined the CIO and Workers Alliance groups to deluge city council with a flood of protests. A resolution opposing the ordinance was also passed by the Central Labor Union, AFL.

In the organization field, the IUC is making strides forward, backed by a favorable intermediate report of the Labor Board examiner in the case of the Stehli Silk Mills, charged with violations of the National Labor Relations Act. The long-awaited decision, giving the TWOC bargaining rights and smashing company opposition, has served to encourage unionization of workers in all fields throughout the country.

IUC AIDS LEAGUE

Meanwhile, the IUC continues to play a leading role in many civic movements, including public housing and the formation of a branch of Labor's Non-Partisan League. Efforts of the CIO group to have city council set up a housing authority have rallied many civic organizations to their support.

A temporary county committee of LNPL has been established; the League has been endorsed by the CIO locals, the Workers Alliance and several AFL groups, and local politicians have been notified the workers will oppose the customary handpicked reactionary candidates. The IUC has endorsed Lieutenant Governor Thomas Kennedy of the UMW for Governor.

The IUC has voted affiliation with the newly established Pennsylvania Industrial Union Council, and will send a delegate to the State convention March 29, in Harrisburg.

Fights for Freedom

Still fighting for freedom is Tom Mooney, victim of a frameup in California 22 years ago. Turned down by the California senate in his request for a legislative pardon for the crime he did not commit, Mooney is now taking his case to Washington.

Vol. I March 19, 1938 No. 15

Congress Must Act

When a man is thrown out of work, the country suffers a double economic loss. It is deprived of the products which this worker could be producing, and it is deprived of the purchasing power put into motion when he spends his wages.

Such losses can be estimated in dollars and cents, but no figures can tell the extent of the social loss involved in the impoverishment of this individual and his family. Nor is there any measure of the misery and frustration which the unemployed worker himself experiences.

The total loss (both to the country and to himself) in the unemployment of a single worker is a terrible one. But when this loss is multiplied 13 million times, as it is today, the result is not only appalling — it is a desperate national crisis.

In such a crisis, when private industry has failed to provide employment, it is the obvious duty of the government to step in and see that work is provided for every single unemployed person — so that his right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness may be preserved, and so that he may contribute his share to the whole country's welfare.

This duty the government has so far failed to perform. With inadequate funds at its disposal, it has provided jobs for some but not for all. Countless unemployed are sorely stinted or confronting outright starvation; and even more are deprived of the opportunity to engage in socially useful labor.

Congress will shortly consider appropriations for the 1939 fiscal year, and the CIO has already estimated the absolute minimum which will be necessary for the unemployed, if the government is to meet its responsibility.

Through Chairman John L. Lewis, the CIO has called upon Congress to provide this minimum. It asks for appropriation for the coming fiscal year of $3,000,000,000 to provide an average of 3,500,000 useful jobs for the unemployed.

In calling for this minimum appropriation, the CIO also emphasizes that there should be no pauperizing of the unemployed; and that they should be given work on socially useful projects such as housing, slum clearance, flood control, building of schools and hospitals, and the like.

Every member of Congress shares in the responsibility of government to meet the present unemployment crisis in an adequate and constructive manner. And every member of organized labor and the public owes it to himself and his country to see that his representatives do not overlook this obligation.

Pass the Wage-Hour Bill

It is essential that the wage-hour bill be passed immediately.

That piece of legislation, demanded by labor and other progressive organizations and by Pres. Roosevelt, has been a favorite football of reactionaries for the last several months.

It is high time that the House pass a suitable measure.

At the present time a subcommittee of the House Labor Committee is drafting new legislation designed to meet the criticisms of previous bills.

The stumbling block will be the House Rules Committee, which held up the last wage-hour proposal for months, and which undoubtedly will seek to do likewise with the new measure.

Union members should demand that the House Rules Committee act quickly on the new bill. Send your demads to Representatives E. E. Cox, Ga.; William Driver, Ark.; Howard Smith, Va.; Bayard Clark, N. C.; Martin Dies, Tex.; Lawrence Lewis, Col.; Joseph Martin, Jr., Mass.; Carl Mapes, Mich.; J. W. Taylor, Tenn.; and Donald McLean, N. J.

Let's Get Busy

Looking Ahead By LEN DE CAUX

A MESSAGE HEARD AROUND THE WORLD

Hitler and his Nazis had just completed their conquest of Austria, and storm-troopers were standing on guard at factories with cat o'nine tails to apply to workers who showed insufficient enthusiasm about it—when the voice of John L. Lewis crossed the Atlantic to tell the story of American labor's struggles.

The CIO leader made no attempt, in this trans-Atlantic broadcast, to advise other countries on the handling of their affairs.

But while Fascist heels trampled on European freedom, and labor in the democratic countries was rallying to demand resistance to the march of tyranny which threatened their liberties too, the voice of American labor that crossed the ocean was reassuringly firm in its constant and repeated emphasis on preserving democratic institutions.

Warning that "the fabric of culture is menaced today as never before," Lewis declared:

"The workers of America desire to benefit not only themselves, but all other citizens of this country, by the establishment and preservation of a true democracy in their own country.

"It is our firm belief that upon our success or failure will depend not only the future of this nation, but in some degree the future of endangered civilization."

Fascism Feeds On Democracy's Weaknesses

European experience has shown that Fascism flourishes on the weaknesses and divisions of democracies, and more particularly on the suppression of organized labor.

If Schuschnigg and his associates had not crushed and outlawed the Austrian labor movement, their country would not have fallen such an easy victim to Nazi force.

Fascism has advanced in Europe with ruthless and unscrupulous determination every time democratic leadership has shown any signs of softness.

It has profited from the uncertainties of democratic leaders, from their failures to set their own house in order, and from their reluctance to meet Fascist aggression with equally determined and united resistance.

In resistance to Fascism, labor is the key factor. The great masses of working people have most to lose and least to gain from the destruction of democracy.

Where labor is solidly organized behind aggressive and determined leadership, it is the backbone of the democratic defense. But where it is weak, or its leaders are spineless and yielding, Fascism sees an invitation to advance.

In this lies the international significance of Lewis's speech. Though devoted to American affairs, its whole tone shows awareness of the forces that menace our liberties and labor's determination that Fascism "shall not happen here."

A Warning and a Call For Action

Fascism sprouts from economic collapse, from the "domestic strife and savagery" against which Lewis warns, and from the failure of democratic leadership to cope with such situations in time.

Consequently the CIO leader seeks to shock the country into a realization of the enormous gravity of the crisis that confronts us. With 13 million unemployed, he declares, America is drifting "with terrifying and deadly sureness to the never-never realm of financial bankruptcy, economic collapse and human tragedy."

While political leaders cavil, quibble and quarrel; while industrialists blindly hasten collapse by fighting labor and seek to throw on its bent and emaciated shoulders the full burden of their own failures, it is left for progressive labor, as represented by the CIO, to sound the urgently needed call for the cooperation of all who have their country's welfare at heart.

Those faint-hearts who constantly bewail the emergence of the CIO as a "division of labor," should rather thank their lucky stars that the leadership of labor no longer rests in the faltering hands of a hidebound craft bureaucracy which would spineless bow before the storm and offer its neck as a stepping-stone for Fascicts to climb to power.

Instead, through the solid organization of previously unorganized millions, a new and progressive labor movement has arisen capable of advancing a concrete program to cope with the emergency.

It is already offering leadership around which all democratic forces may rally to pull the country out of the present crisis, to resist advancing tyranny and to preserve and enlarge our liberties.

CIO Counters Attack on Lawyer

Washington — A campaign of protest against the attempted disbarment of Edward Lamb, labor lawyer of Toledo, Ohio, was set under way this week by John Brophy, CIO national director, and Lee Pressman, general counsel.

Disbarment proceedings were started against Lamb as a result of his work in defending United Shoe Workers strikers against a sweeping injunction issued by a compliant judge in Portsmouth, Ohio, last August. They originated with the judge who granted the injunction.

CIO affiliates were urged to send protests to Judge William R. White of Portsmouth, Ohio.

PICTURES WANTED

THE C.I.O. NEWS is anxious to receive pictures of general labor interest for publication.

C.I.O. union officers and members, and readers generally, are urged to send in photographs of interesting events affecting the C.I.O. in their localities.

Pictures will be carefully handled and promptly returned upon request, if not appropriate for reproduction, or after cuts have been made from them.

Lewis Sees Danger Ahead

Grave Problems Face Nation, CIO Head Tells Britons

The CIO NEWS presents the full text of a speech delivered by Chairman John L. Lewis of the CIO over the British Broadcasting Corporation network on March 15. The address, which was not broadcast in this country, was one of a series by prominent Americans to interpret American life and views for British audiences.

I address you in the name of the Committee for Industrial Organization, and the millions of Americans who are looking to labor to give them leadership and hope for the future. Almost three-fourths of the people of America are represented by workers gainfully employed. The future of organized labor, therefore, is in a broad sense the future of America.

American labor is today in the throes of the greatest struggle in the history of the United States. The workers of America are becoming articulate. They are demanding their just share in the government of their Nation. They desire to benefit not only themselves, but all other citizens of this country, by the establishment and preservation of a true democracy in their own country. The final determination of our endeavors lies many years in the future, but it is our firm belief that upon our success or our failure will depend not only the future of this Nation, but in some degree the future of endangered civilization.

The fabric of culture which has been built up by mankind through enduring centuries of painful toil and sacrifice is menaced today as never before. America is one of the group of remaining great democracies. If the citizens of the United States can pass on to their children the ideal and the practice of human freedom, we shall be not only fulfilling our duty as inheritors of the hard-won traditions of ages, but we shall be accomplishing our responsibilities to the future of our race.

CORRECT ABUSES

If the democracy of the United States is to survive and if its government is to be a true expression of the ideas of its citizens, there are abuses which must be corrected. Hundreds of thousands of the people of this nation have for years on years been exploited, oppressed, and denied the exercise of those rights guaranteed to them under our constitution. They have lived at the mercy of economic vicissitudes. They have been little more than industrial serfs. They have been unable to raise their wages, to ameliorate their working conditions, to assure themselves of economic security. Millions have suffered the ills that accompany partial starvation in America, and the children of these men have been unable to improve their lot.

It is not the purpose of the workers of the United States that these things should continue. We do not intend that our people shall trudge aimlessly from street to street seeking only that work which they will never find because our economic leaders have neglected to provide it for them. We do not intend that our children shall starve in the midst of plenty. We do intend to take an active part in the government of our nation, so as to insure to the average citizen an improved participation in its economic and political bounties. For these purposes the workers of the United States have elected to form unions to which they flock by the hundreds of thousands. The labor movement in America has been reborn. Socially, economically, politically, the workers of America are becoming articulate. They must and will participate in the determination of their destiny.

The Committee for Industrial Organization was formed by the heads of eight national and international unions in November, 1935. Its avowed purpose was the encouragement of workers in the mass-production industries to organize. Its success may be judged by the fact that its affiliates now comprise 35 national and international unions, about 1000 local industrial unions not affiliated to any national organization, and a number of state and local industrial union councils. The membership of the Committee for Industrial Organization now closely approximates four million.

It is not my desire to dwell upon the division in the ranks of American labor. The members of the Committee for Industrial Organization at its inception desired only to work within the framework of the existing Federation for the benefit of the unorganized workers in the United States. They were not permitted to do so. Our organizations were suspended from membership. After this action, we determined to extend our educational activities by independent organization of workers in the name of the Committee for Industrial Organization. The results of our efforts are apparent. In two years we have attained a membership of four million.

WANT ORGANIZATION

It has been urged that labor should make peace. We are willing to do so. We believe that the craft unions have a definite place in the structure of our labor movement. We will not, however, submit to the destruction or to the dismemberment of our constituent industrial unions as the price of peace. The workers of the United States want to be organized. We purpose that they shall be organized. If this might be done under the aegis of a united labor movement, the members of the Committee for Industrial Organization would be more than jubilant, but since it cannot be so, we shall not submit ourselves and the welfare of the yet unorganized millions to the treacherous mercies of those false and feeble leaders who have spurned our honest overtures.

The character and the success of the work of the Committee for Industrial Organization may be measured by the virulence of its enemies. We have been criticized by communists and fascists, by the National Association of Manufacturers, by elements of the public press, and by reactionary public representatives. The Committee for Industrial Organization has been called dangerously radical and dangerously conservative. The police forces of corrupt cities and the soldiery of some states have been marshaled against our people in their efforts to obtain for themselves increased wages, shorter working hours, better working conditions and a recognition of their right to bargain collectively.

To be brief, we have been belabored by the abuse of all those who do not desire that the workers of America should improve their economic condition and by all those who do not wish these workers to proceed in an orderly fashion toward the attainment of such objectives.

Our work will speak for itself. The activities of the Committee for Industrial Organization have raised the wages of American workers by billions of dollars. We have shortened their working hours and we have immeasurably improved their working conditions. We have provided for the adjustment of their grievances in their places of work. In many communities where workers have even been forbidden to exercise their right of political franchise, the oppressive political organizations of industry have been completely destroyed. Not less in importance to these chronicled accomplishments, is the fact that labor has become organized and articulate. It is henceforth capable of assuming a major degree of responsibility and leadership in the rehabilitation of economic America.

Thirteen million Americans are now unemployed. Their numbers are steadily increasing, as the nation drifts with terrifying and deadly sureness to the never, never realm of financial bankruptcy, economic collapse and human tragedy. This is appallingly true, despite the fact that government has dipped into the public purse to make possible the granting of huge subsidies to industry, agriculture, banking and finance.

Since 1933 the so grants, directly and indirectly, have amounted to the enormous total of twenty-two billion dollars. Our national internal economy has attained the amazing condition where it appears that practically all of our major enterprises are unable to exist or function on their own resources. Our banking structure is supported by federal funds. Our great shipping industry since 1917 has squandered nearly three billions of dollars, derived during that period from direct and indirect government aid. In addition, it has squandered its own revenue and its capital assets, and a recent report of a governmental agency startlingly reveals its financial prostration. Agriculture is the recipient of direct government aid, and the financial structure of our railway system is such as to require constant increases in freight and passenger tariffs to continue them in operation, all of which is added to commodity prices which inevitably increases the burden borne by the population. Countless business units in sundry industries are the recipients of huge government loans, given under circumstances where the borrowing corporations are unable to qualify for loans from our banking institutions, which are themselves overflowing with money upon which they cannot pay depositors interest.

GOING BACKWARDS

Since 1933, approximately seven billions of dollars of government money has been paid to the unemployed, in the form of direct or work relief. Most of this vast sum has trickled through the tills of the nation's shopkeepers, and thus has become a subsidy to our merchants and professional men.

America is moving in economic reverse. Our consumer goods industries began to slow down in June, 1937, and by October of the same year, our heavy industries began to feel the icy hand of the depression. Since that time, the drift has been constant — shutdowns in industry being the order of the day—while the number of human beings being thrown out of employment was augmented day by day. In the months that have ensued, neither industry nor government has come forth with constructive proposals, designed to meet the problems of the depression. The federal congress, lacking adequate or competent leadership, in continuous session for months past has failed to devise or enact a single statute that would cause a glimmer of hope to penetrate the minds of millions of despairing Americans.

Meantime, cavilling and confusion prevails, and our statesmen, and those carrying the responsibilities of the nation's manifold enterprises, are reviling each other with an anger and bitterness that defiles, sears and destroys. Meantime, the population suffers, and a creeping paralysis progressively impairs its functions.

What is to be done?

Reason calls for a change. More rational policies are indicated. America is menaced, not by a foreign foe that would storm its battlements, but by the more fearful enemy of domestic strife and savagery. It is time for Americans to cooperate. It is time for Americans to recognize each other's right of individual existence. It is time for capital to recognize labor's right to live and participate in the increased efficiency of industry and the bounties of our national resources. It is time for labor to recognize the right of capital to have a reasonable return upon its investment. It is time for statesmen to recognize their nation's peril and to decide to cooperate with labor and industry, to rationalize the nation's processes and alleviate a nation's distress.

Labor is willing to cooperate—now. Let the leaders of the nation's business step forward. Let the statesmen of the nation do the same. Let the council of reason and mutual toleration be convened. American leadership can accomplish this task, and in so doing will preserve its governmental structure and its democratic institutions.

High Points of Speech

"American labor is today in the throes of the greatest struggle in the history of the United States."

"If the democracy of the United States is to survive and if its government is to be a true expression of the ideas of its citizens, there are abuses which must be corrected."

"The workers of the United States want to be organized. We purpose that they shall be organized. If this might be done under the aegis of a united labor movement, the members of the CIO would be more than jubilant, but since it cannot be so, we shall not submit ourselves and the welfare of the yet unorganized millions to the treacherous mercies of those false and feeble leaders who have spurned our honest overtures."

"America is moving in economic reverse."

"The Federal Congress, lacking adequate or competent leadership, in continuous session for months past, has failed to devise or enact a single statute that would cause a glimmer of hope to penetrate the minds of millions of despairing Americans."

"America is menaced, not by a foreign foe that would storm its battlements, but by the more fearful enemy of domestic strife and savagery."

Mooney Case In Congress

Washington.—The long fight to free Tom Mooney, victim of California's most vicious labor frame-up, moved into new ground here as the House judiciary committee appointed a subcommittee to hold hearings and report on the O'Connell resolution, memorializing the Governor of California to pardon the famous prisoner.

Meanwhile, at Sacramento, Cal., the State Senate had turned down a proposal for a legislative pardon for Mooney, after the State's lower house had voted in favor of the measure.

Mooney, brought from San Quentin to address the State Assembly, faced a jammed chamber and overflowing galleries and declared once again his innocence of the San Francisco Preparedness Day bombing in 1916.

Tells of Plot

Referring to the famous picture of Market street, in San Francisco, which shows him far away from the scene of the bombing only a few minutes before it took place, Mooney charged that the State prosecutor of his case had sought to bribe a photo-engraver into changing the hands of a clock in the picture in order to incriminate Mooney.

His plea turned down by the State Senate, Mooney's remaining chances for freedom rest in Washington, where the Supreme Court will be asked to review his case.

The resolution in the House, introduced by Representative Jerry O'Connell, of Montana, is a companion measure to one filed in the Senate by Senator Murray of Montana, that a sub-committee of the committee hold hearings and report on the O'Connell resolution.

Though no one appeared to oppose the Murray resolution in the Senate, Senator Hiram Johnson, of California, a close friend of Publisher William Randolph Hearst, is seeking an opportunity to oppose the measure behind closed doors.

NLRB Gets Vanadium Case

Niagara Falls, N. Y. — Charges against the Vanadium Corporation of America for unfair labor practices and for encouraging the growth of a company union in their Niagara Falls plants will soon be heard by the National Labor Relations Board at Buffalo. Board officials in Washington are expected to set a date for the hearing in the very near future.

The charges were filed by Local 12067, United Mine Workers of America, Chemical Division, accusing the company of fostering a company union under the guise of the Vanadium Workers Association, a so-called "independent union." The company is also charged with intimidating and discriminating against CIO members in the plant.

Dist. 50 Confident

The CIO local, which has a majority of the employes signed, is confident that the Board will order the dissolution of the company union as a result of hearing the evidence against it. Many affidavits have been sworn proving that the company agents coerced workers into joining the "independent union," and it is clear to any impartial observer that the so-called union is an illegal attempt to evade the Wagner Act.

With the company union out of existence and intimidation stopped, the Vanadium workers intend to continue their efforts to win recognition through their own genuine union, Local 12067, U.M.W.A.

Lewis Backs Youth Act

Washington.—Full endorsement for the American Youth Act, a measure designed to provide jobs and education for young people, was voiced by John L. Lewis, CIO chairman, in testimony read before the Senate Committee on Education and Labor during the recent Youth Pilgrimage to Washington.

Lewis's endorsement was made in a letter to Senator Josh Lee, of the Committee, and to William Hinckley, of the American Youth Congress, sponsor of the pilgrimage.

"The provisions of this bill meet the policy of the CIO as adopted at its Atlantic City conference," Lewis stated, "where it was expressed that 'Federal funds should also be appropriated sufficient to afford opportunities for work and education to the youth of this country unable to find a place in industry or without sufficient funds to obtain an education.'

"It is my feeling that this legislation is very necessary and urgent at this time in order that full opportunity for work and education be provided."

Backed By Labor's League

E. L. Oliver, executive vice-president of Labor's Non-Partisan League, also testified in support of the Youth Act. Pointing out that the WPA program is inadequate for adults, he called for increased appropriations for the unemployed as a whole, as well as for youth.

"We find an amazingly large percentage of the unemployed and needy in this country are in the younger age brackets," he added. "The Federal Government has done little more than make pious gestures toward solving this problem."

"The American Youth Act has the support of Labor's Non-Partisan League and organized labor in general," Oliver declared. "It is a proper extension of the National Youth Administration and the WPA program, and, to some measure, acknowledges society's debt to youth."

CIO unions endorsing the Youth Act include the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, whose president, James B. Carey, testified at the hearings; the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, the Automobile Workers, the Cannery and Agricultural Workers, the Radio Telegraphists, the United Mine Workers, the National Maritime Union, and the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

CIO Unity Stand

BUFFALO, N. Y.—"The C.I.O. wants unity," Director John Brophy declared here, "but it must be effective unity."

"Until the A.F.L. leadership is prepared to recognize the C.I.O.'s stand for national industrial unions—in principle and in fact—there can be no peace," Brophy said.

Brophy said that the red-scare used against the C.I.O. was a tool in the hands of the enemies or organized labor, who use it as a "bugaboo for the purpose of smoke-screening the real issues."

Carborundum Men Fight Low Pay

Niagara Falls, N. Y.—Despite huge layoffs affecting as many as two-thirds of their number, workers at the Carborundum plant continue to build themselves an organization in order to fight for security and better working conditions.

The approximately 1000 employees remaining after the layoffs are working on short time, many of them receiving only one to three days every two weeks.

Citizens' Committee Activities Told to LaFollette Group

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

Washington — The LaFollette civil liberties committee of the Senate, digging deeply into the muck of industrial anti-unionism, this week brought to light for the first time the activities of the so-called Citizens' Committee which had fought against the Little Steel strikers last summer.

The Bethlehem Steel Corp., the testimony brought out, had pledged $25,000 to the citizens' committee.

This revelation came from the lips of Francis Martin, chairman of the Johnstown Citizens' Committee, who said the offer had come from Sidney Evans, Bethlehem personnel manager, at a meeting of the Committee's executive group, a week after the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee strike had got under way.

The alleged purpose of the committee, it was learned from Lawrence Campbell, its secretary, was to "stand ready to protect the sanctity of our homes and our community at all times . . . we feel that a man has a right to work and should be protected in that right."

Two Resigned

But two former members of the committee, who resigned in protest against its policies, told a far different story about the organization's aims.

Rabbi Abram Granowitz told the LaFollette hearing that he had resigned from the Citizens' Committee when it became apparent that it was designed only to get the strikers back to work, break the strike and smash the union.

Former Sheriff Michael Boyle of Cambria County, another one-time member of the committee, told a similar story.

When the strike got under way, he added, the company officials requested him to hire deputies, and upon his refusal, suggested that the national guard be asked to enter the situation. But when the guard came in and kept the factories closed, the Citizens' Committee asked that the guard be removed and plans be inaugurated for re-opening the mills.

How Awful!

A self-styled "friend of labor" brought smiles to spectators when he outlined his activities during the walkout. Rev. John H. Stanton, curling his arm over his head to avoid being photographed, declared, "My heart is with the laboring man but here was a strike that was breaking the rules of a strike." He explained that the strikers were demanding a contract with the Bethlehem management!

David Watkins, SWOC district director, had approached the company several times in an effort to reach an amicable understanding, but on each occasion the company had refused to discuss the situation, it was revealed.

Shields on Spot

Mayor Shields, of Johnstown, most outspoken foe of the SWOC during the strike, had a difficult time explaining to the Senate Committee how he had come to pay off some $23,000 worth of debts shortly after the strike.

He claimed that the money had come from his wife who had enjoyed a "windfall."

But Shields, who had allegedly received some $30,000 to combat the strike, declared that he had destroyed all records of the hiring and paying of some 500 special officers sworn in during the walkout.

"I personally destroyed them because they were finished business with me," he asserted.

Asked if the city always destroyed its records, Shields said, "This was an emergency."

SAN FRANCISCO—The United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing & Allied Workers, C.I.O., has filed charges of unfair practises with the N.L.R.B. against 15 major canneries in northern California.

2,000 to Vote

New York. — Two thousand shipyard workers in the three repair shops of the United Shipyards, Inc., will vote in National Labor Relations Board elections to determine their collective bargaining agency.

On the Spot

Mayor Daniel J. Shields of Johnstown, Pa., (left) looked worried as he prepared to take the stand as the Senate LaFollette Civil Liberties Committee probe of vigilante activity during the Little Steel strike. Shields is getting a last-minute bit of advice from his attorney, Samuel King, who looks a bit disturbed himself.

Niagara Falls CIO Thaws Out Relief

Niagara Falls, N. Y. — Speedy relief for the unemployed of Niagara Falls was promised to a delegation of CIO representatives this week by officials of the city department of public welfare.

Delays in unemployment compensation checks have been causing acute suffering among the unemployed, the delegation informed Carlos Lacy, head of the welfare department, who informed them that welfare officials would cooperate with the CIO in acting quickly on any cases of this kind brought to their attention.

The delegation, which was led by Peter Vaccarella, secretary of the provisional CIO Council, and Albert Pezzati, organizer of District 50, United Mine Workers of America, was the first public action taken by the new provisional council of CIO unions in Niagara Falls. The council, consisting of representatives from chemical, auto, transport and insurance workers unions, was organized last week to strengthen the march of the CIO toward organization of this industrial community.

To Organize Chemicals

The council is at present laying plans for an organizing campaign centering on the great chemical plants of this open-shop town dominated by the Morgan and Mellon interests. Included among the plans is a projected conference on unemployment, which is causing great distress among thousands laid off in the last several months, and wide-spread public action to make effective the CIO slogan of "The right of every man to a job."

At its second regular meeting the Council extended a helping hand to the newly organized AFL union of city employees, by calling upon the City Council to grant recognition to the union and to reinstate several members discharged for union activity.

HOPEWELL, VA.,—Final preparations are being made for a National Labor Relations Board election in the Hopewell, Va., plant of the Solvay Process Company, a subsidiary of the Allied Chemical and Dye Corporation.

The two organizations appearing on the ballot are Local Union 12103, affiliated with District 50, and the Works Council, affiliated management.

The CIO Moves Forward!

Brophy Points to Recent Gains

(Excerpts from a speech delivered to the convention of the Ohio Industrial Union Council at Columbus, February 26, 1938.)

By JOHN BROPHY

Director, The Committee for Industrial Organization

This demonstration of yours, I take it, is a testimonial of your confidence in the program, policies, and leadership of the CIO. It gives the answer, it seems to me, to those doubters who seem to think that the CIO is a temporary movement rather than a permanent, active, militant organization here now and always to advance the ends and purposes of labor.

This CIO movement is the most important development in the labor world during our lifetime. Nothing equals it. Nothing is as important as the rise of the CIO movement and its leadership of this great upsurge of labor activity throughout the country.

We are engaged in an historic movement and the labor records of the future will point to the past two years and to this movement as one of the great turning points in the history of labor. You men from the various industries throughout this great state know something of the record and achievement of this mighty dramatic movement of which we are a part and to which we are all making our contributions.

As a public man of by-gone days used to remark, "What is the record of accomplishment?" I am going to refer to it briefly.

At the present time there are some thirty-five unions comprising the CIO. It started out with eight and today there are thirty-five and practically all of these unions that have been added to the original ten are new unions, unions that have been created within the last two years—thirty-five great national unions united together in a combination for the purpose of bettering the conditions of the mass of workers.

135 COUNCILS

In addition to that there are at the present 135 city and state councils already set up. Every week new city and state councils are coming into being. In fact, at present the job of the CIO is to consolidate the great gains that were won organizationally in the first year and a half of our existence. Adding to that are some 600 local industrial unions organized in various miscellaneous trades and callings where as yet there are not sufficient locals organized to establish national unions. We are constantly building new national industrial unions.

Now this is just the arithmetic, just the bare record of what has been the results in material things for the workers. Last year the gains won by the CIO unions, that is the advances in wages, totalled an increase of one billion dollars at least, as well as a shortening of the work day and work week. Furthermore, a billion and a half dollars have been added to the other workers outside of the CIO unions as a result of CIO unions for better conditions and higher wages.

AFL CAUSED SPLIT

Unionism means power not only for social well-being, but also in the way of building up individual status and collective self-respect. And so the area of individual and mass freedom has been widened throughout this country as a result of the formation of the CIO and its drive for better conditions and a greater amount of human freedom. These things, I repeat, are solid achievements that mean much in bettering the life of the masses of the people throughout the land.

We are told by some that there is a split among the forces of labor. It is true that there is a split and that is unfortunate, but the split in the ranks of labor is not our making. Let it be noted, we were suspended and expelled by the AFL.

After all, we have added to the original million workers who comprised the CIO when it was first formed, three million more who previously were unorganized. We have now a membership of four million workers—a great army—and we have that four-million army of labor because we declared for a principle of industrial organization that was essential to the task of organizing the unorganized in the great basic industries, such as steel, rubber, etc.

The CIO came into being to do the job that the leaders of the craft unions in the AFL had failed to do. If they had done their job reasonably well, there would have been no occasion for the setting up of the CIO; but it was because of the continuous failure year after year to face the task of organizing steel, auto, rubber, the great machine manufacturing industries, that a group, a forward-looking group, within the AFL set up the CIO.

The results have justified the courage and determination of the original group in setting up the CIO. The record is there. It is a record of accomplishment. It is a record that wins the loyalty and devotion of the workers and all understanding and socially-minded people.

NO FLASH IN PAN

It simply had not been done and could not be done, so they said. Well, time has given them the lie. Events have proven that it could be done. We secured agreements with the great steel manufacturers of the nation. Then these melancholy "ravens," I might term the AFL Council who said it could not be done, had another line. "It is only a flash in the pan," they said "after a while the CIO will fade out."

And lo and behold, what do we find? After a year of collective bargaining in steel we find that agreements are renewed a second time with the greatest steel concerns in the country. We find that collective bargaining continues in autos. For the first time a national agreement in glass manufacturing takes place. In General Electric a national agreement is obtained by CIO.

No, the CIO is not a flash in the pan. It is too close to the hearts of the workers. It has won the right to permanence and it is exercising all of these democratic rights and social gains and goes steadily forward. But that is not all that the CIO has been concerned about. It has not only dealt with the problem of the worker on the job in the way of extending, organizing, and winning better conditions, it has dealt also with the problem of unemployment.

We declared at that time that the worker had inherent right to a job and if private industry was unable to provide him with a job then it was the responsibility of government to provide work or with the means to sustain life. As the recession crept on us and began to devastate the lives of the workers and their families, then we declared for the need for adequate extension of WPA and PWA works projects. We called upon government to do its part before the unemployment situation grew more intense and conditions got too bad.

It took some time to impress government with this. Mass meetings were held by CIO up and down the land to discuss with the people this question and the importance of calling government attention to this obligation. Finally as a result of the leadership of the CIO on this subject of aid for the unemployed the President of the United States called upon Congress to appropriate an additional sum of money, two hundred and fifty million dollars, to provide additional jobs for the unemployed for the balance of the fiscal year.

NOT ENOUGH RELIEF

We do agree two hundred fifty million dollars additional is substantial and important. We don't think it is enough however.

I mention this, my friends, that you may be conscious of the fact that CIO is not solely concerned with the narrow problem of taking care of people who are on the job. We have a responsibility to all workers whether employed or unemployed.

This, of course, is a new movement, a new movement with vision with a program and with leadership, and it is fortunate for the people of America—fortunate for the maintenance of democratic institutions — that the CIO came into being and was administered by men aware of their social responsibilities and with the courage to go forward.

A GREAT LEADER

I say that we are doubly fortunate to have as a leader of this great movement a man with the imagination and courage and determination of John L. Lewis. His service is not only to labor, to the trade union movement, but his service is also to his country and to the citizenship generally.

Only through adequate facing of social problems do we avoid the danger of great social disruption and chaos, and when we have a man who sees this and takes the necessary steps that the needs of the masses be cared for wisely and well, such a man, such a leadership renders service to his nation in a special degree.

This convention is epoch-making in the sense that you are taking on another task. You are building another segment in the great structure of the CIO. Your state, I have indicated, has been a pioneer in labor action. You in this convention in the setting up of your council, will give an impetus to other CIO groups in other states to do likewise. Pennsylvania will next month set up its State Council. Indiana will follow. All over this land this CIO movement of ours will consolidate its forces, will extend its influence for human betterment.

This task of ours, of course, is a continuous job. It is a job which brings great benefits in human and social well-being. This union of ours, as John Lewis said in one of his addresses—is a great crusade to win security and well-being for the masses and for the maintenance of democratic institutions. You people in this convention are making your contribution in this job of building and perfecting a great institution."

Will the CIO keep its strength?

This was a question asked eagerly by anti-labor employers and reactionary officials of the AFL as the depression cut across America, throwing millions out of work, shaking the union movement to its very foundations.

That question is asked no longer.

For in the last six months the CIO and its affiliated unions have shown the Nation that the structure of industrial organization of the mass production industries is here, and here to stay.

The CIO has not gone backward. It has moved ahead into new fields.

The story of this amazing progress was told to the 1,000 delegates at the convention of the Ohio Industrial Union Council a short time ago by John Brophy, Director of the Committee for Industrial Organization. Reprinted here are important excerpts from his speech.

John Brophy

Who told Ohio Industrial Union Council of important CIO gains in recent months, and promised further progress.

Toledo CIO Observes Birthday

Toledo—The Toledo Industrial Union Council of the CIO celebrated its first anniversary this week, able to look back at a substantial growth in membership and constantly increasing importance in the community.

Formed by nine CIO locals in six industries, the Council has increased its number of affiliated unions to 31 with a membership of more than 35,000 workers.

At the present time the CIO in Toledo has contractual relaxtions with 53 concerns, 19 of which are operating under the closed shop and checkoff.

Shorter hours and increases in pay "to the extent of $700,000 are some of the benefits gained for more than 4,000 workers who were organized under the banner of the Council in its first year of existence," Kenneth Cole, executive secretary of the council, declared.

"The council has established an unprecedented record for living up to the contracts signed with employers.

"Thousands of petty grievances were settled by union committees during the past year, satisfactory to both labor and employer."

Locals Build New Halls

WASHINGTON — What happens when real estate owners in a community refuse to rent their halls to C.I.O. unions, or when such halls are too expensive?

Here is what two District 50 locals are doing: They are building their own halls.

In Saltville, Virginia, every available meeting place was refused to the members of Local 13002, Mathieson Alkali Works, even the two schoolhouses. The members are now adding a story to the Variety Store in Allison Gap and are holding a drive to raise the necessary funds.

Chinese ILGWU Local Strikes

San Francisco. — The first Chinese local union in the country—organized by the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union, CIO—is waging a spirited strike against the National Dollar Stores here.

Though the pickets are Oriental, they are fighting the same sort of battle that thousands of American workers have had to wage to bring about higher wages and better living conditions, according to ILGWU officials here.

The Chinese local, organized early in the year, won agreement from the concern to its demands for closed shop and wage raises. But immediately afterwards, the shop was "sold" to a dummy concern of the chain store group, which then refused to deal with the union.

CIO Wins Again

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Local 13, Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America won its third labor board victory, when it triumped over Joe Ryan's "General Maintenance Workers", 68 to 6, in the Stephen Ransom ship repair yards, here.

The two previous victories were in the Atlantic Basin Iron Works, where Local 13 won over the A.F. of L. craft unions by a vote of 236 to 26, and in Ira S. Bushy & Sons where the vote was 112 to 58.

CIO Asks 3 Billion For Relief

Short time workers should be given supplemental jobs where needed.

4. Relief funds should be available to meet current needs as they arise.

The fourth point was seen as an attack on the principle of the present Woodrum Amendment to the Relief Act, which requires that 1937-38 funds be spread over a period of 12 months, without regard to increased need during the recession.

Lewis's letter follows out the program that the CIO has undertaken to help the unemployed workers of America secure a measure of economic security. It carries out the promise made by Lewis at the convention of the United Mine Workers of America last February, when he said:

"The CIO has taken upon itself the duty of presenting the case of the unemployed."

Steel Workers Gain $200,000

Anti-Labor Employers Paid Heavily For Illegal Firings

By HOWARD J. McCARTNEY

Pittsburgh — Upwards of $200,000 in back pay has been won for members of the CIO's Steel Workers Organizing Committee through charges filed with the National Labor Relations Board by the steel union.

The charges were filed against companies which had discharged union members. In addition to winning back pay the fired unionists were ordered reinstated to their jobs.

The exact amount of back pay —$203,000—is merely a cross-section of some of the cases. There were scores of smaller cases settled by mutual agreement and involved many more thousands of dollars in additional plants.

Significantly, in every case, the award has acted as a springboard for the SWOC campaign. Without an exception, membership greatly increased after each was announced and powerful unions have sprung up under the impetus given the union by the cash awards.

Typical of the sizeable amounts awarded, a check for $1,936.35 was received recently by a member of SWOC Lodge 1528, Milwaukee, Wis. He was discharged for advocating a wage raise before SWOC took the field. His check, in addition to back pay, covered a wage boost and a bonus previously granted the balance of employes.

The largest bulk amount was ordered paid to 67 discharged employes of the Fansteel Metallurgical Company in Waukegan, Ill. These men were discharged because of the important roles they played in a strike that hit the Nation's front pages last summer. The back pay due runs more than $70,000.

Over $15,000 was awarded to 10 discharged workmen at the Aliquippa, Pa. plant of Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp., and $15,000 was divided among several union members at the Peoria Cordage Co., Peoria, Ill.

It cost Tulsa Boiler & Machine Co., of Tulsa, Okla., $674.00 in its unsuccessful attempt to defeat the union. Six discharged employes were ordered to be given back pay totaling that amount.

Little Steel Case Up

Republic Steel Corp., through a large subsidiary — Union Drawn Steel Co., Beaver Falls, Pa. — was ordered to reinstate, with all pay lost, five union steel workers. The case is still in the course of litigation and a definite amount has not yet been specified.

Bethlehem Steel Corporation, Weirton Steel Company and Republic Steel Corporation, the backbone of "Little Steel," have all been the target of charges filed by the SWOC, and involve some 600 union men who were fired for joining the union.

When the decisions are eventually handed down by the Board in these three cases the total back pay awards may be greatly increased.

27 More Pacts

Meanwhile, the SWOC national headquarters announced that 27 steel manufacturing, fabricating and processing firms were negotiated during the week. These 27 agreements cover 25,375 employes.

Approximately 273,430 steel union members are covered by new agreements. These, together with some 225,000 under agreements not expiring until later dates, bring over 498,000 SWOC under contract. The balance will be effected by contracts yet to be negotiated.

Only 122 firms out of a grand total of 514 have not yet signed a new agreement. Most of these are being handled by sub-district offices of the SWOC and are now in the process of negotiations.

Some of the larger steel firms signing recently include:

Pittsburgh Steel Co., Pittsburgh (7,000 employes); Sharon Steel Co., Sharon, Pa. (3,000 employes); Cooper-Bessemer Co., Grove City, Pa. (2,000 employes); Page Steel & Wire Co., Monessen, Pa. (1,200 employes); National Can Co., New York City (1,100 employes); Latrobe Electric Steel Co., Latrobe, Pa. (750 employes); MacIntosh-Hemphill Co., Pittsburgh (650 employes).

Two Canadian Firms

Two Canadian steel firms have renewed their agreements with SWOC. They are the Ontario Malleable Iron Co., Ltd., employing 225, and the Fittings Limited, employing 200. Prevailing wage rates are maintained in both contracts.

Negotiations looking toward a union contract are under way at the Chicago plant of International Harvester Co., where the SWOC won a sweeping victory in a government-supervised election. The vote was 3,255 for SWOC and 1,821 for an "independent" union.

At the same time, a significant decision was handed down by the National Labor Relations Board in answer to a petition filed by an "independent" union at the American Steel & Wire Co. plant at Waukegan, Ill.

That organization—Steel & Wire Workers' Protective Association— petitioned the Labor Board for an election in an attempt to "chisel in" on the SWOC agreement with the company—a U. S. Steel Corp. subsidiary.

The Labor Board ruled that the proper method of bargaining collectively with a U. S. Steel subsidiary is on a nation-wide basis and refused to consider an election limited to one of the company's plants.

This action was a major victory for the CIO steel union which has contracts with all U. S. Steel subsidiaries.

Boss Out $148,000

Seattle, Wash. — The regional office of the National Labor Relations Board here ordered the Carlisle Lumber Company to pay $148,413.76 in back wages to workers who went out on strike on May 3, 1935. Highest payment ordered was $3019, while the average was $1100.

ACWA Builds NecktieCo-op

New York.—The Amalgamated Clothing Workers, CIO, is planning to enter the necktie business.

Immediately following ratification of the plans by its affiliated Men's Neckwear Union, the A.C.W.A. will establish a cooperative, non-profit manufacturing unit to enter the low-priced neckwear industry.

The project, according to Louis Fuchs, union manager, will be able to offer employment to members who would otherwise be jobless. The cooperative factory, he added, would strictly adhere to union working conditions, and would be under contract with the A.C.W.A.

The purpose of establishing the factory for 25c ties, which are not being produced in New York at the present time, is to take up the slack in unemployment, popularize the union label, and offer competition to wage chisellers in the low-priced necktie field.

Stock valued at $10,000 will be sold in $10 shares to union members, and the capital gained will be used to install 40 machines in the factory. The product will be sold to bargain basements, and later, it is hoped, to chain store groups.

TWOC Fights Wage Cuts

By VALERY BURATI

BOSTON, Mass.—A movement to cut wages in the woolen and worsted industry, starting in New Hampshire and Vermont, and threatening to spread to every mill in that branch of Textiles, has been stopped by the prompt action of the Texile Workers Organizing Committee.

Striking at the very source of the wage cuts, the TWOC forced six manufacturers to withdraw them and organizers are now campaigning against another half-dozen mills where reductions have been posted. This action has given pause to other manufacturers who contemplated similar action. The employes of three New Hampshire mills forced restoration of the old rates by strikes; negotations succeeded in the other three.

Though averaging about 12½ per cent, the cuts ranged from 9½ to 27 per cent. The TWOC's first action against reductions in woolens and worsteds came in Central Maine about a month and a half ago.

Seek to Use Slump

The manufacturers are taking advantage of the depression, and are trying to stampede the workers into supine acquiescence. Apparently they did not count on the rock-firm opposition of the TWOC.

The 12½ per cent wage cut in the cotton branch could have been prevented by the same methods except for the betrayal by the leaders of the New Bedford Texile Council.

They agreed to a 12½ per cent cut in secret with the manufacturers without first consulting their membership, and after they had promised Hyman Blumberg, regional director of the TWOC, that they would not agree to any cuts at all.

145 Seamen Ordered Retired

Washington — Reinstatement with back pay of 145 seamen, members of the National Maritime Union, CIO, was ordered this week in a decision handed down by the Labor Relations Board against the Peninsula and Occidental Steamship Co. of New Haven, Conn.

The Board's decision stated that the men were fired because they switched their union membership last June from the discredited Intl. Seamen's Union, A. F. of L. affiliate, to the NMU.

Used Intimidation

Testimony cited by the Board proved that officers of the line tried intimidation in an attempt to keep the men of the CIO. Captain Lord of the S. S. Cuba said to one of the men: "The NMU—all they want is to get you into the union and then get half your wages."

Referring to Marcus Elliott, NMU organizer, Capt. Lord said, "He looks like a Russian. He can't speak English."

In Tampa, First Mate Donovan of the S. S. Florida said that unless the men changed their affiliation back to the ISU, they would be discharged. Immediately the deck crew stepped forward in a body, accepted their discharges, and left the ship.

Call Farm Confab

Camden, N. J.—A state wage conference of New Jersey farm hands has been called by the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers, CIO, for March 20 in this city. The conference will establish union rates for all classifications of farm labor and will plan further organization of farm labor by the CIO.

Insurance Men Flock to CIO

New York. — Company union strategy by the John Hancock Insurance Company seems to have a strange effect on the employes, according to Leon Berney, of the insurance division of the United Office and Professional Workers, CIO. It makes them join the bona fide union.

In Attleboro, Mass., Berney reported, 26 of 29 insurance agents joined the CIO immediately after a company union talk by the local manager. Before the manager called his meeting, CIO membership in the branch was zero. In Brockton, UOPWA membership jumped from eight to 34 as a result of an intensive company union drive.

The same story is true in Boston, Waltham, Malden—all Massachusetts cities — where the best laid plans for Charlie McCarthy unions were upset by the employes flocking into the CIO.

Charges Filed

The Office and Professional Workers have filed charges against the John Hancock Company with the Labor Relations Board, pointing out that the "independent" unions all have the same constitution and by-laws. The CIO union has applied for certification from the Board.

According to the insurance drive director, the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, biggest of all in the business, is the grand daddy of company union efforts in this field.

Metropolitan's anti-union plans however got a set-back this week when Father Boland, chairman of the New York Labor Relations Board, ruled that it could not be represented on a ballot for a collective bargaining election.

Oil Workers Progress In Southwest

Port Arthur, Tex.—The Oil Workers International Union, pushing its organization drive in the important southwestern oil district, expects a series of National Labor Relations Board cases will speed up the drive to win better wages and working conditions for employes of major petroleum companies.

In the hearing on the Southport Petroleum Co. case, it has been learned, the trial examiner of the NLRB has filed an intermediate report calling for the reinstatement with back pay of three men who the union declared were fired illegally for union activity. The recommendation will call for restoration of seniority rights.

Violate NLRA

At the present time the board is hearing charges against the Humble Oil Co. at Baytown, and immediately following that will take up the case of the Magnolia Petroleum Co.

This corporation has been cited by the Board on charges of aiding and abetting a company-dominated union, interfering with the organizational work of the Oil Workers Union, intimidating and coercing members of the CIO union and discharging its members because of their union activity.

The Oil Workers, according to E. W. Johnson, representative in this district, are signing up new members rapidly. He pointed to the fact that office workers in oil refineries are also anxious for union organization.

The Oil Workers are also aiding in the formation of a CIO Industrial Union Council and are fighting for higher wages for WPA workers.

Oil Union Leaders

Harvey C. Fremming, president of the Oil Workers International Union (right) and E. C. Conarty, Secy-Treasurer (left), who have just returned from a nation-wide tour of the seven districts of their union. They report a fine response from the oil workers at all the meetings they addressed, and found the union functioning in good shape and offering a firm bulwark for the maintenance of wages and hours, despite the business recession.

A new local has been established at Wichita Falls, Texas, Fremming and Conarty report, and particularly large and enthusiastic meetings were held at Hammond, Ind., Long Beach, Cal., and Port Arthur, Texas. The oil union leaders met with district councils and local unions wherever they went to plan a national organization program and to establish a uniform bookkeeping system.

Washington—In an effort to educate the public about one of America's most deadly industrial diseases, the U. S. Department of Labor is issuing a new one-reel motion picture entitled, "The Story of Silicosis."

RUBBER UNION CHECKS SLASH IN WAGE RATES

Dixie---
Land of Cotton

Home of hundreds of thousands of loyal, enthusiastic CIO members. Newly organized textile workers.

In the deep south, where President Roosevelt warned that wages must be lifted, hours shortened, where working conditions must come into line with the rest of the nation — here the Textile Workers Organizing Committee is playing a major part in winning new conditions for literally millions.

"When you come down to it," said the President, there is little difference between the feudal and the fascist system. If you believe in the one, you lean toward the other."

The CIO and the TWOC do not believe in either.

So, they are together bringing about — in many cases, for the first time — an end to industrial feudalism and supplanting that semi-fascist system with industrial democracy.

To learn what is happening in the south in 1938, turn to page seven and read about the progress of CIO southern unionism.

John A. Phillips

Head of the Industrial Union Council of the CIO in Pennsylvania, who has issued a call for a State convention to adopt a constitution for the new organization. Formation of the Council followed an order by AFL President Green to expel CIO unions from the State Federation of Labor. The State body refused and instead transferred its affiliation to the CIO.

Opens Drive on Anti-Union Propaganda

AKRON — Hurling back an attack upon their union and living standards, Akron rubber workers have carried the fight to the anti-labor interests which plotted the war against them.

Here is what they have done:

1. Called off the election on the Goodrich 17½ per cent. wage cut proposal at the request of the U. S. Dept. of Labor.

2. Filed charges with the National Labor Relations Board charging the Goodrich Co., the Akron Chamber of Commerce and numerous other organizations with conducting a propaganda campaign to coerce and intimidate Goodrich workers prior to the scheduled election. They also charged that Goodrich's threat of moving 5000 jobs out of Akron if the wage cut was not accepted was coercion, and a violation of the National Labor Relations Act.

3 — Organized a Congressional drive to secure passage of legislation to curb "run away" plants from moving out of Akron.

4 — Staged a monster demonstration against wage cuts—the biggest Akron has ever seen. Two days later the Goodrich Co. announced that the wage cut notices, scheduled to go into effect that day if the workers had accepted them, would not go into effect, even if the vote had been called off.

Situation Tense

The demonstration, which was addressed by Vice-Pres. Frankensteen of the United Auto Workers and Rep. John T. Bernard of Minnesota in addition to local speakers, was called in the midst of what observers said was Akron's most tense labor crisis.

All week employers had staged an anti-labor propaganda drive which created near hysteria among business men and unorganized employes. Rumors were prevalent that if the Goodrich workers voted no, vigilante groups were ready to start violence against union members.

Labor countered with a newspaper and radio drive which built up union morale and had an effect even on certain sections of small businessmen. At the last moment a group of them, feeling the local drive had failed, went to Washington in an attempt to secure government backing for their campaign to allow non-union workers to vote in the wage cut election.

They were turned down.

Rubber workers are jubilant at their success in holding the CIO line firm against wage-cuts. In the words of their President, S. H. Dalrymple, they know, "It is a good deal easier to take a wage cut than it is to get it back!"

Will Speak

Swings to CIO

Susanville, Calif.—Employes of the Lassen Lumber and Box Company held a meeting of their company union here, and voted to join the International Woodworkers of America.

The company union had masqueraded under the guise of an "independent union." With a full crew the plant employs 300 men.

At one meeting alone following the disbanding of the company union, over 50 men signed up with the IWA.

CIO Wins

Camden, N. J.—By a vote of 68 to 6, the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers won its third election in a row in New York Harbor, by defeating the AFL at the Stephen Ransom, Inc., marine repair shop.

Local Bucks AFL

Seattle, Wash.—When the reactionary officials of the Seattle Central Labor Council mailed a resolution to AFL Lumber and Sawmill Workers Local No. 2519 of this city, calling for the deportation of Harold Pritchett, president of the International Woodworkers of America, the local almost unanimously voted the resolution down.

Fight Wage Cut Threat

CIO rubber workers in Akron, Ohio, found a 100 per cent. successful way of checking a 17½ per cent. wage decrease. This picture shows part of a mass meeting of several thousand union members who held a demonstration in the rubber capital to forestall the cut planned by Goodrich Rubber Co. The following Monday the company decided it wouldn't cut wages, after all!

Aluminum Union to Hear Murray

New Kensington, Pa.—Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, will address the first annual convention of the Aluminum Workers of America, CIO which convenes here April 4.

He will speak at a mass meeting in the evening at the high school auditorium.

Director John Brophy will represent the national CIO at the convention.

The union, which held its constitutional convention about a year ago, now has 20,000 members in 18 locals.

It is applying for Labor Board certification as sole bargaining agency in all plants where it is organized and is pushing out to organize new territory, at the Aluminum Ore Co., Mobile, Ala., and at Lafayette, Ind., where a new extrusion plant is being erected by the Aluminum Co.

URW Wins

New York — The United Rubber Workers, CIO, ended a strike against the Rand Rubber Co. here when they gained an agreement providing for sole bargaining rights for the union, seniority rights and improved working conditions.

New York — The Steel Workers Organizing Committee won the check-off in a pact signed with the Art Steel Co. here.

NEED FOR RELIEF SHOWN

Social Workers' Report Shows Distress

By Edward Leavitt

New York — (FP) — Revealing dangerously low levels in welfare practices in many parts of the country, the American Association of Social Workers, in a report released here, strongly urged a system of Federal grants-in-aid to impoverished localities to insure a humane program of general assistance for those not cared for by a government work program.

The report, based on a recently-completed survey of 28 states, shows that "insufficient funds available locally in many states have dictated a whole sale reduction of relief grants, the elimination of essential items from relief allowances and harsh policies governing acceptance of applications designed to make relief hard to get and difficult to endure."

The Association found employable workers being denied relief in many sections, wholesale evictions of relief families, and malnutrition everywhere.

Low Allowances

Migrants from dust bowl region live in ditch-bank camps in a sea of mud in San Joaquin valley in California. Couples receive $12.40 a month for all needs in Colorado.

Average monthly grants for all relief are as low as $5.87 per case in Georgia; $6 in Arkansas, $8 in Alabama, and $12 in Nebraska.

WPA wages fail to provide minimum subsistence to large families in many sections. Periodic stoppages of relief are common in many large areas. Eligibility rules are tightening, with in many large areas. Relief elegibility rules are tightening, with relief harder to obtain and allowances more and more meager as funds run low.

Many receiving as low as $11.90 a month a family for food are doomed to rations even poorer than those described as a "restricted diet for four persons for emergency use only" by the bureau of home economics of the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture.

NLRB Poll at Firestone

AKRON, Ohio.—One of the National Labor Relations Board's major polls will be held here soon when workers at the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company vote to see if the United Rubber Workers of America, CIO, shall be sole collective bargaining agency for workers in Firestone's plants.

Opposing the URWA on the ballot will be the "Firestone Employes' Protective Association."

The vote, asked by the CIO union, will precede the negotiation of a new contract with the company to supplant the agreement which expires April 28. The URW won its first contract with the company following a strike here last spring.

Des Moines, Ia. — Don Harris, CIO regional director here, has announced plans to run for state representative in the June primaries.

Insurance Union Files Charges

BULLETIN

The New York State Labor Board has accepted jurisdiction in the case against the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. Elections have been ordered.

New York.—Charges of unfair labor practices have been filed against the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company by the Albany and Boston locals of the United Office and Professional Workers of America, CIO, Leon W. Berney, insurance division director, announced here.

The union now has petitions for collective bargaining certification in the Metropolitan agency offices pending before the New York State and Massachusetts Labor Relations Boards.

Berney said the intimidation and coercion of union members is most intense in New York City, where the home offices of the Metropolitan are located.

Charges "Slanders"

Metropolitan managers, he charged, "in an attempt to stem the tide of organization among insurance agents, are indulging in a campaign of slanders and falsehoods directed against the entire CIO movement."

The insurance organizing drive is progressing rapidly in a number of cities throughout the nation, according to reports reaching the union headquarters here. In many cities, groups of union members who hold insurance policies are banding together to help force the company to deal with the UOPWA.

Anton Kinch, a member of Lodge 1528 of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, found out what a union could do for him when he was handed this check for $1,936.35. Kinch had been fired for union activity, but the SWOC took his case to the labor board and won reinstatement and a year's back pay. Altogether the SWOC has won upwards of $200,000 for its members in this fashion.

Guild Complains

Pittsburgh — The American Newspaper Guild has filed complaint with the National Labor Relations Board here, charging that the United Press, major wire news service, violated the Wagner act when it dismissed Edward McCann a month ago. The Guild asserts that McCann was fired because of his election as chairman of the union unit at UP.

Independents Go to CIO

Susanville, Calif. — Workers of the Lassen Lumber and Box Company, employing 300 men normally, voted at a meeting of the "independent union" to join the International Woodworkers of America, CIO.

Guild Members Get Dividends

New Guild Local

Syracuse, N. Y.—The Syracuse Newspaper Guild, with units on the Herald, Journal and Post-Standard, has been chartered by the American Newspaper Guild, CIO.

Los Angeles—Members of the Los Angeles Newspaper Guild don't need to be told that unionism pays.

Their proof is based on recent Guild negotiations through which two of its members received over $1000 in cash.

James Parent, an editor of the Daily News, received $955 in severance pay, when he was discharged from the paper. The severance rates had been established by the Guild. Parent's dues during the period that he had been a Guild member cost him $10, leaving him with a net profit of $945.

The Guild won another victory when Art Koontz, a worker on the Evening News, was reinstated and paid $204 in back salary. He had been discharged for organizing workers in the circulation department some time ago.

Conference Asks Funds

Washington. — The need for a government co-ordinated program covering work relief, unemployment assistance and social security was voiced at the National Conference on Work and Security, called by the Workers' Alliance here.

The program, similar to that worked out by the CIO, calls for a 3½ billion-dollar relief expenditure program and the adoption of a five-billion-dollar housing program.

Delegates representing a number of CIO, AFL, jobless and civic groups attended the meeting.

CIO Utility Workers Seek Contract

Los Angeles.—As sole bargaining representative for the large part of the production workers in the Central Division of the Southern California Gas Company, Local 1414, United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, CIO affiliate, is negotiating for a contract with the company. The union is demanding wage adjustments, including equal pay for equal work and an increase in the base rate.

The "Old Man" Guesses Wrong

Open - Shoppers Still Stick to Out-Dated, Musty Arguments

CIO Success Gives Answer to Silly Charges of the Tories

By McAlister Coleman

Did you see that full page advertisement headed; "The Old Man"? It was put out by a New York advertising agency. And it was as crude a piece of Open Shop propaganda as has appeared in recent years.

It was so good that labor-baiters all over the country have been writing for copies of it and sending it around to other labor-baiters and their help.

It was about the "Old Man," the boss of a factory, looking out of his window at the lunch-hour and watching an "agitator" go to work. The agitator had long whiskers, of course, and he had a soap-box, naturally, and he was making a speech at the gate telling the boys to snap out of their dope and join a union of their own choosing.

The "Old Man" was very glad to see that one of the audience, who was a special pet of the "Old Man's," a guy named Tom or Jerry—I've forgotten now—wasn't taking this agitator seriously. Tom or Jerry or whatever, was thinking about how he was going to be in the "Old Man's" swivel-chair in the front office some day, looking down into the factory yard.

Long Hours

Tom was thinking about what a great chap the "Old Man" really was, providing a nice, cool factory for all the boys to work non-union hours in, and taking the last possible cent out of their slim pay-envelopes so they wouldn't get into trouble and get running around with CIO and such. Or so the "Old Man" guessed.

So there was the "Old Man" up in the window and there was this poor sap down in the yard and they had one common interest, which was to work hard as anything so that the "Old Man" could sit up in the window and cheat hell out of his help and his competitors and his customers. Because when everyone worked hard for the "Old Man" it was good for everybody in this fine, old America of ours. Or so the moral of this ad seemed to run.

I'll bet when the bespectacled copy-writer got back to his stuccoed home in a Westchester suburb after finishing up that mulligan, he stuck out his puny little chest and strutted up and down in front of his dumpy wife and said: "Darling, I helped stop John L. Lewis today."

Few propagandists find much nourishment in facts. They live by their illusions and just now the anti-unionists are maintaining such life as is left in them by chewing on the illusion that they have the CIO stopped. They figure that the repeated shocks of recession shut-downs, lay-offs and lock-outs, the stirring up of internal strife in the labor movement, the vigor and viciousness of the propaganda drive against the CIO—all this will suffice to check the onward march of the greatest labor movement in American history.

There was never such a group of bum guessers as the economic autocrats lined up against us today. They have guessed wrong with astonishing consistency about every major event that has taken place here and abroad since the Armistice.

They do no better when they go out and hire professional guessers in the shape of confidential services, news-letters etc. to guess for them. Because their guesses are colored, as any of their high-brow psychologists could tell them, by what they want to be true, not what may be true.

Childish Stuff

If these enemies of labor are counting on such childish stuff as the "Old Man" ad to influence any considerable number of American workers, it is just too bad for these enemies. American workers are not quite the saps that the bespectacled galley slaves in advertising agency offices figure them out to be.

They know why it is that spying on his overworked employees, up in the front office window, the "Old Man" moves uneasily these days. They know that it doesn't take any soap-boxing, bewhiskered "agitator" to send them to CIO headquarters.

They know that all the agitation needed is the sort of hours, wages and conditions in most non-union plants today. And all the fancy writing of all the bright ad men in the country can't change the collective mind, nor bend the collective will of labor on the march towards the peace, plenty and freedom that genuine industrial unionism brings with it.

More Steel Pacts

Pittsburgh. — Steel companies never before under contract with the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee are now signing up with the union, according to SWOC officials. In addition, the number of renewals of agreements continues to mount each week.

Two recent companies to sign first contracts with the union are the Oil Well Supply Company, Oil City, Pa., U. S. Steel subsidiary, and the Wilson Snyder Company, Rankin, Pa., subsidiary of the Oil City company. About two dozen contracts altogether have been signed in little over a week.

40-Hour Week

The agreements are similar to the one signed with U. S. Steel, providing for the 40-hour week, seniority rights, maintenance of present wage scales, vacations with pay and machinery for the settlement of disputes.

Negotiations for further contracts are being scheduled continually, one of the most recent being a conference with officials of the American Bridge Company, Pittsburgh.

CIO Backs New Wagner Bill in Senate

Washington—Representatives of the CIO this week told the Senate of the desirability of passing the new Wagner Bill (S. 3390), designed to require all firms getting government contracts or loans to observe the collective bargaining provisions of the National Labor Relations Act.

This measure is probably one of the most important pieces of pending labor legislation.

Testifying before a sub-committee of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor were John Green, president of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers, and Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel; Larry Davidow, counsel Auto Workers; Henry Freming, Oil Workers; John Walker and James Robertson for Local 290 of International Mine and Mill Smelter Workers.

Senator Robert Wagner of New York, sponsor of the bill, spoke in its favor early in the week.

Later Green told the committee that the union of which he is head "has had a long and bitter experience with the private shipbuilding and repair industry of this country, and especially with those shipyards which do a great deal of government work."

Taken Millions

"A brief summary of our experience will show that while these companies have taken millions of dollars from the Federal government for naval and other construction, they have flagrantly defied the labor policy of the government as exemplified in the Wagner Act."

Bethlehem Shipbuilding, Bethlehem Steel, Electric Boat Co., Republic and Weirton Steel were pointed out by Pressman as typical of the companies which have always fought the Wagner Act and yet get the benef' from government contracts running into millions of dollars.

The passage of the bill was seriously threatened by President Green of the AFL, who, assuming his customary role of flaying legislation favored by the majority of union workers, had called for an amendment to the bill requiring administration of its provisions by the court rather than the NLRB. This amendment was supported by witnesses for contractors and surety companies who opposed the bill.

Would Cause Delay

Pressman said that the CIO was desirous of having the bill administered through the Board, so that when the NLRB declared that corporation tax was violating the law, the government would automatically cancel its contract with the offender.

Green's amendment would bring endless delays in court procedure, and permit conflicting court decisions, it was pointed out, and would in reality kill the entire purpose of the bill.

"Since the government of the United States clearly has the power to establish conditions in its contracts consonant with its declared public policy, and make those conditions immediately effective," Pressman told the committee, "the employer who has been found guilty of a violation of the Act must immediately comply under penalty of losing the benefits which he has thus far received from the government and of being disqualified from receiving benefits in the future."

The CIO attorney recalled that although steel companies objected violently a year ago to the Walsh-Healey Act, they nevetheless changed their practices to conform with it. They would do the same thing with the new Wagner bill, he predicted.

CIO Still Ahead in NLRB Polls

Washington — Votes in Labor Board elections throughout the country continue to pile up evidence of an overwhelming preference for CIO unions.

The Board's latest list of recent polls issued March 22, discloses that out of a total of slightly over 5,000 votes cast, nearly 4,000 were for the CIO.

Approximately 500 were for AFL unions.

From silver mines in Colorado, textile mills in Carolina, ship yards in Virginia and New York, and silk plants in Pennsylvania, workers went to the polls to register their desire to have CIO industrial unions in their industry represent them as sole collective bargaining agency.

CIO Wins 14

Out of a total of 21 elections in which they participated, unions affiliated to the CIO won 14.

AFL unions took part in nine elections, winning four and losing five.

The total number of votes cast in the 22 elections was 5,421. Of these 3,973 were for CIO unions, 504 for the A. F. of L. and 944 for an independent union.

She Died-- She Did

Hershey, Pa.—CIO union leaders in Hershey, Pa., hailed the annulment of the chocolate concern's contract with the Independent Chocolate Workers of Hershey as the beginning of the end of another company union.

Charging that the Hershey Chocolate Company virtually admitted by its action that it was guilty of unfair labor practices, as claimed by the CIO local industrial union, CIO officials said that the company was trying to avert hearings before the National Labor Relations Board.

They declared, however, that the union would continue to press for hearings before the board. The CIO has been conducting an intensive organizing campaign in Hershey for the past year.

Pennsylvania Unions Meet In Convention

Harrisburg, Pa.—Meeting to set up a permanent CIO council, 2000 delegates are expected for the first convention of the Pennsylvania Industrial Union Council in this city March 29, according to John A. Phillips, president of the CIO body.

John L. Lewis, chairman of the CIO, has been invited to address the convention, as well as Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America and labor's candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor of Pennsylvania.

Presidents and other officers of a number of CIO national and international affiliates have also been invited to speak, making the convention a high-light in Pennsylvania labor history.

Splitting Order Rejected

The call for the convention was sent to all unions in the state earlier this month, shortly after the formation of the Council, which was formerly known as the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor.

The State Federation became a CIO council when President William Green of the AFL revoked its charter because it would not obey his order to split off 80 per cent. of its membership, in CIO unions.

As stated by the executive council of the State Federation, the new CIO group was set up to protect the vital interests of organized labor in Pennsylvania, which would have been left without a delegate body by the illegal action of Green.

To Protect Labor's Interests

The executive council of the Federation described the step as "an essential means of protecting the interests of the preponderance of the membership of the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor, the charter of which stands revoked by President Green."

"The need for the continuance of State-wide organization for the protection of this group is clearly evidenced," the council added, "especially in view of the fact that this group represents 80 per cent. of the membership of the Federation."

"The officers of the Federation were duly elected in convention to administer its affairs," they said, "and feel in duty bound to protect and defend the interests of all organized labor."

Council spokesmen pointed to the special significance of the convention at this time, when the campaign for Kennedy as governor is getting under way. Organized labor is the largest unified force in Pennsylvania, they added, and as such a force that must occupy an increasingly important place in the social and economic life of the state.

Formation of the Pennsylvania Council brought the number of CIO delegate bodies to close to 150, organized in cities and states throughout the nation.

Heywood Broun

On World Peace

All American trades-unionists should keep a weather eye on the affairs of Europe.

No matter what policy labor follows, it ought to be a program based upon every bit of information which is available. Mental isolation will not be profitable.

Trades unionists probably have a bigger stake in peace than anyone else. Labor not only provides the sinews of war, but is also largely represented in the front line trenches. And so labor should be organized at all times to make its voice heard for the preservation of peace.

But the world in which we live has moved into a mood where a single nation, even a large and powerful one, may find that while some individual imperialist can easily start wars, two or more countries may be required to make peace.

Labor is right in feeling that it has had its fill of diplomats. The wire-pullers of the world have brought little into being but confusion. Even those who had hopes of the League of Nations are ready to admit that it does not function effectively.

It seems to me that we need an entirely different sort of League. I have faith in the potentiality of a League of Labor.

One of the most powerful moves for peace would be an international conference of trade union representatives. And in my opinion the Committee for Industrial Organization might well take the initiative in bringing such a congress about.

Peace should be put squarely in the hands of those who prize it most.

Stop Runaway Plants, Unions Tell Ohio Congressmen

WASHINGTON — Ohio Congressmen heard from Ohio union leaders this week of the pressing need for wage-hour and other remedial legislation to prevent industry from seeking refuge in the non-union, low-wage sections of the south.

Arranged by Labor's Non-Partisan League, the confab here brought together almost every member of the Ohio congressional delegation and representatives of some of the Buckeye State's most important unions.

Included in the labor delegation were President Sherman Dalrymple, Vice-President Thomas Burns and Thomas Owens of the United Rubber Workers; Merle Vincent of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, and others.

The Congressmen were told of 93c-an-hour wage rates in the Akron rubber industry, compared with 63c-an-hour pay in the south for the same tasks. Burns told the legislators that minimum wage legislation would tend to boost southern wage rates in all classifications of work.

Urge Legislation

At the same time he called for a Congressional probe of emigration of industry from northern states to the south. Vincent urged passage of a federal law to prevent companies from evading their union contracts by moving their factories to gain lower wage costs.

In the past few years, the Congressmen were informed, the manufacture of 10,000 rubber tires a day has been moved from Akron to southern localities in order that the manufacturers might benefit by freedom from taxes, the barring of unions and consequent exploitation of workers.

Showing the need for the wage-hour bill, President Dalrymple pointed to the fact that some workers in the reclaiming end of the tire industry are paid as little as 10c an hour.

Phoenix, Ariz.—Charging that they were unable to secure work or food, hundreds of hungry cotton pickers and farm laborers protested to the Governor of Arizona.

CIO Councils Planned For Michigan

DETROIT—The Committee for Industrial Organization this week took steps towards the formation of affiliated Industrial Union Councils in Detroit and in the state of Michigan.

Formation of the councils, declared Adolph Germer, CIO regional director here, will aid the CIO to consolidate its strength in what was once an unchallenged open-shop area.

The Detroit-Wayne County Council will be formed at a meeting on April 10, according to notices sent out by Germer to all CIO local unions in the city.

The object of the Council, Germer declared in the call, is "through united action to protect, maintain and advance the interests of all working people in its territory, to extend unionism on the basis of industrial organization, to secure and to enforce legislation in the interest of the working people, to promote recognition and acceptance of collective bargaining in industry, and to increase public understanding of the labor movement."

Meet April 23

There are several thousand CIO members in Detroit, not only in the auto industry but in numerous shops and stores as well.

The State CIO convention will take place two weeks later, on April 23-24, at Lansing, the state capital.

More than 1000 delegates from the 300 CIO unions throughout the state will attend the meeting.

Furniture Union Grows

Philadelphia—The four-month-old United Furniture Workers, CIO, reviewed its recent organizational gains at a conference of its eastern seaboard locals here last week.

The new CIO affiliate now has a total of 32,000 members in 46 locals throughout the country.

"Despite every handicap and obstacle put in our way by the AFL Upholsterers International Union and other AFL affiliates, and their use of terrifying tactics, our growth has been steady and our union has consolidated its strength enormously," declared President Morris Muster of the UFWA.

The CIO Has a Program

The general editorial comment on the recent radio broadcast of Chairman Lewis of the CIO (printed in the last issue of THE CIO NEWS) is significant chiefly for its omissions and its insinuations.

Lewis delivered a grim warning against the "financial bankruptcy, economic collapse and social tragedy" toward which the country is headed in the present crisis of depression and unemployment.

He indicted both private industry and government for their failure to advance any constructive or adequate proposals to cope with the situation.

As might be expected, the business and conservative press did not relish the indictment.

But in all its comment, it made little or no attempt to question the accuracy of the picture drawn by the CIO leader.

It made some effort to shift the blame for the crisis from big business to labor or the government. But in general the main line of its "defense" was to insinuate that if industry and government have no program to meet the crisis, no more does labor .

* * *

Yet ever since its Atlantic City conference last year took note of the growing depression, the CIO has had a clear-cut program to cope with it.

This program has taken concrete legislative form in the present Congress. It is advocated in nearly every official CIO pronouncement or speech by a CIO representative. The business press has no excuse for pretending to ignore it.

The CIO program places first emphasis on immediate relief for the human tragedy involved in unemployment. It calls for a job for every person willing and able to work —to be provided by the government where private industry fails to provide work.

To make this "right to work" effective, the CIO calls for passage of the Schwellenbach-Allen amendment requiring the WPA to give work to all who need it; and it demands that adequate appropriations (estimated at $3,000,000,000 for the next fiscal year) be provided for this purose by Congress.

To prevent the chiseling down of wages to starvation levels and cut-throat competition, the CIO is campaigning for immediate passage of wage-hour legislation—which will also give more employment through shortening of working hours.

To set the wheels of industry turning again, the CIO calls upon the government to assume its full responsibility by launching a huge housing program and other useful public works.

* * *

These are but some of the main planks in the CIO program for meeting the present emergency, before it goes from bad to worse.

The whole program, including aid for the farming population, is a concrete and constructive effort to meet the growing crisis. Chairman Lewis has called on all who have their country's welfare at heart to cooperate with labor in making this program effective.

Industrial Blackmail

No element in the population of any city has a greater interest in the welfare of that community than the working people. Business may have dollars invested in the community but their workers have their homes, their jobs and their very livelihood involved.

Union labor is therefore usually the first to act in defense of a community's real interests; and there is something essentially phony when employers' associations cloak attacks on labor standards behind slogans about "community interest."

Such a situation has arisen in Akron, Ohio, where the CIO scored its first successes in 1936 and where the anti-labor forces are now concentrating their main attack on the workers' hard-earned gains.

The B. F. Goodrich Co. has threatened to move 5000 jobs out of Akron if the rubber workers' union does not accept wage cuts ranging from 10 per cent. to 20 per cent.

It has mobilized the chamber of commerce and various businessmen's associations, together with the local press, for an unprecedented campaign of wage-cut propaganda. Organization of vigilante groups has been called for, and even the milk ompanies have been urged to deliver the mental poison to the workers' families along with their milk.

To this campaign Akron labor recently gave an answer in one of the most imposing demonstrations the city has seen. Thousands upon thousands turned out to proclaim their resistance to wage reductions.

The union points out that the proposed cuts are justified neither by competition nor by the company's financial position; that the real welfare of the city calls for maintaining purchasing power; that there is no guarantee in the company's proposal against its moving work from Akron; and that such cuts do not improve a company's competitive position but merely lead to a vicious circle of wage-cutting that leaves competition as it was before.

Further, the union has made charges to the National Labor Board that the whole campaign is designed to break the union chosen by the workers (by a vote of 10 to one) and thus to interfere with their collective bargaining rights.

It vividly describes such tactics as "industrial blackmail"—a hold-up directed against a whole community, and more particularly against those who have most at stake in the community, its working population.

Man vs. Machine

Looking Ahead By LEN DE CAUX

CONFUSING PUBLIC OPINION

THAT the press is not all-powerful in forming public opinion was decisively shown in the last elections by the Roosevelt majority achieved in spite of the opposition of most of the big dailies. .

But the extent to which the press can confuse public opinion is indicated by the results of many of the poll of opinion conducted by various publications.

Every such test has shown a large majority in favor of unions and collective bargaining. Yet a poll just conducted by Fortune is held to show a great demand for "laws to curb labor organizations."

This is but one sample of the many contradictions that appear in the results of such polls.

Without estimating the accuracy of these polls of opinion, it is obvious that the results will depend on the way a question is put—and on the degree of confusion which has been created on controversial issues.

If the nature of present efforts to curb and hamstring labor unions were fully and accurately described in the press, there is little doubt that any fair test would show majority opinion as solidly aligned against such efforts.

Partisan Publishers

But the publishers of the country's press are not interested in presenting such issues impartially. As big employers themselves, most of the publishers are partisans of every move to regulate, incorporate or otherwise cripple labor unions.

They not only campaign editorially for such legislation, but they treat labor news in such a way as to point their moral.

When a strike occurs, the blame for public inconvenience is seldom placed on employers who refuse to grant employes their collective bargaining rights.

On the contrary, the emphasis is constantly placed on the union pickets. Headlines on any violence that occurs give the impression that labor is to blame, though study of the facts—as by the La-Follette committee, for instance—will usually show that the instigation comes from employers' gunmen and provocateurs or from authorities they have corrupted.

Similarly disputes between CIO and AFL are played up as examples of labor's inability to order its own affairs and of the need for more regulation—though observance of existing Labor Board regulations would soon resolve such disputes.

The west coast boycotts against the CIO, for instance, with all the public inconvenience they have caused, could all have been avoided, if AFL officials had not received encouragement from employers and local authorities in their defiance of board elections in which the workers decisively chose CIO representation.

The Press Is Big Business

But the biggest confusion of all that the press seeks to create in the public mind is the idea that it itself reflects or represents public opinion.

"The big city newspaper represents an investment of millions of dollars," Irving Brant, St. Louis Star-Times editorial writer pointed out, in a speech at the Cleveland City Club. "Dependence on advertising ties it more closely to the business world. The typical large-city publisher lives and things in terms of million-dollar finance.

"In nearly all the relationships that affect his political and economic opinions, he stands in the same position as the steel manufacturer, the bank president, the mine operator, the public utility magnate.

"The newspaper publisher has an interest identical with that of any other big business man in matters affecting stability of investments, the weight and purposes of taxation, relations with labor and redistribution of wealth."

These facts are obvious to any thoughtful person. Yet the editorial line of the big-time press is constantly referred to as if it were public opinion—instead of merely the opinion of a sector of big business which concerns itself with influencing and often confusing the public.

LABOR ENTERS POLITICS

Non-Partisan League Gains Power in Many States

Nineteen thirty-eight is an historic year for Labor's Non-Partisan League, the political arm of the organized labor movement in the United States.

Millions of union members have mobilized their political strength in state and local affiliates of the League in recent months. Conventions have been held in virtually every industrial state and many farm states.

In Washington and at state capitals over the nation the League has been in the forefront of the battle for progressive legislation and against all legislative attempts to shackle labor.

Extensive plans have been mapped by the League for participation in the Congressional, state and local election contests to be held this Fall when thirty-four Senators, thirty-four governors, the entire House of Representatives, and hundreds of local officeholders must face the voters.

For Labor's Non-Partisan League 1938 is the most crucial year since it was born in 1936 to resist the fury of the reactionary attack on President Franklin D. Roosevelt and the New Deal.

Role Decisive

The role of the LNPL in the Roosevelt-Landon campaign was decisive in state after state where organized labor is a large factor in the voting. Since then the League has adhered to the plan laid down by its founders, i. e.—"to continue to support progressive and labor legislation, as well as to assure labor's recognition in any political realignment which might later develop."

Today, as a result of this policy, the League is recognized as a major force in the nation's political life. It is the balance of power in many key states of the nation.

Candidates supported by the League, or its affiliates, have demonstrated labor's pivotal influence at the polls in such states as Pennsylvania, New York, Michigan, Ohio, Indiana, Maryland, Illinois, California, Washington, West Virginia, Connecticut, and in scores of local contests elsewhere.

The 1938 program of Labor's Non-Partisan League is three-fold: Organizing, Legislative, Campaigning. Here, in brief outline is a picture of what is going on over the nation under these three heads:

ORGANIZING

Paralleling the swift advance of union organization in recent years, Labor's Non-Partisan League has marched steadily ahead in forming strong state units all over the union. Every industrial state and many farm states now have permanent League affiliates.

Hundreds of local meetings and a score or more state conventions have been held in recent weeks. Some of these are: California, where 400,000 voters were represented by delegates; New Jersey, 200,000 voters; Michigan, 400,000 voters; Illinois, 350,000 voters; South Carolina, 200,000 voters; Vermont, 100,000 voters; Maryland, 300,000 voters, and many more. Forthcoming state conventions include Ohio, Massachusetts, Indiana, Colorado, etc.

Similar meetings have been held in Utah, Delaware, Pennsylvania, New York, where a drive to solidify the upstate organization of the American Labor Party, League affiliate, is in progress, Rhode Island, Iowa, Missouri, Florida. The League is busy even in Vermont and Maine and the Solid South.

National headquarters of the LNPL in Washington issues twice monthly a national bulletin reciting the League's stand on vital legislative questions and summarizing the organizing activity in progress over the nation.

Link With Farmers

Ward and precinct organizations have been formed in many cities. League membership is being expanded in many places by issuance of cards for individuals in addition to those who join through their unions. Farmers' groups are being invited to send delegates to League conventions.

Outstanding among the achievements of Labor's Non-Partisan League during the past year has been the development of a formal working alliance with the most progressive group of organized farmers in the United States. Representatives of the League entered into an understanding with the national officials of the Farmers' Union, in a pact signed at St. Paul, Minn., on December 12, 1937. The agreement provides for mutual legislative support both at Washington and at state capitals for co-operation during the election campaigns of 1938.

Any person desiring to obtain more information about the League, or wishing to be placed on the mailing list to receive all its literature, should write to national headquarters of Labor's Non-Partisan League, Hotel Willard, Washington, D. C.

All segments of organized labor are represented in the League's membership lists and active officers. This includes Committee for Industrial Organization unions, American Federation of Labor affiliates, Railway Brotherhoods, and some independent units such as the Workers Alliance. The League forces represent a broad segment of labor-pregressive sentiment.

CAMPAIGNING

The reckoning day of the 1938 elections this Fall will find the League prepared to throw its weight against labor's enemies and to support labor's friends. Already, the League at Washington has compiled the voting records of Senators and Congressmen on the issues vital to labor and progressives. Copies of these voting records are being distributed in every Congressional district in the United States.

With this voting record before them, the voters will be able to cast intelligent ballots, based not on pre-campaign promises, but on what Congress did after it got to Washington. Twelve votes are listed in the Senate and a like number in the House. The League's position on each of these issues is listed along with a tally of how the Congressmen and Senators voted.

New Handbook

The League has just released to its affiliates generally a unique handbook, "How to Organize and Conduct a Local Political Campaign." This is a practical working manual for the use of campaign managers and tells them how to set up a precinct organization, how to organize the campaign, and other details.

Registration drives are now in progress by most League affiliates. Committees are being named to check the registration laws and to see to it that every eligible labor voter is registered.

Some time within the next few weeks the League will broadcast generally a list of Congressmen and Senators it endorses for re-election. League affiliates will get behind these candidates all over the nation.

LEGISLATIVE

On the Legislative front, in Washington and at the state capitals, the League is engaged in a thousand battles.

Its No. 1 item in Congress is the wages and hours bill, pledged by President Roosevelt in the 1936 campaign and repeatedly demanded since by him.

Pressure by the League which mobilized a barrage of thousands of letters and telegrams on Congress forced this bill past the reactionary clique on the House Rules Committee and out for a vote in the special session.

It was recommitted then by the slender margin of eighteen votes, but the issue is now as live as ever. A sub-committee of the House Labor Committee is now revising the measure and prospects are good for enactment this session.

Warning has been issued by the League that no Congressmen who opposes the wages and hours bill can receive labor votes in the elections this Fall. Thousands of copies of the roll-call vote on this issue in the special session have been distributed. The League has published a pamphlet, "Support Fair Labor Standards in Industry" which gives facts and figures on the appallingly low wages in many areas.

The new Wagner act, applying the provisions of the National Labor Relations Act to government contractors and loans, is also being supported vigorously by the League. Other items which the League is backing include: Investigation of mergers in the telegraph industry, more funds for the Senate civil liberties inquiry, the Fine Arts Bureau proposal; the anti-lynching bill, and progressive measures generally.

Relief Appropriation

Next to the wages and hours bill the No. 2 item on the League's legislative calendar is adequate appropriations for work relief. It led a nation-wide drive on behalf of a deficiency appropriation and was an important factor in obtaining the $250,000,000 supplemental sum voted. The League fought against curtailing the funds of the National Labor Relations Board and was successful here also.

An item to which the League is strongly opposed is the vicious Shepherd-May bill which would set up a dictatorship in the United States on the day war is declared. League affiliates have sent thousands of letters opposing this measure.

Throughout the last two sessions of Congress, E. L. Oliver, executive vice-president of the League, has worked hand-in-hand with the liberal bloc of Congressmen on Capitol Hill. Many of these Congressmen have spoken from time to time before League meetings over the country.

In addition to fighting for or against legislation, depending on its effect on organized labor and the people generally, the League has been active as a Washington information bureau and service agencies for affiliates and unions. It has taken up with government bureaus countless matters in which labor is interested.

There's a new deal in politics.

That fact is known to every union man—and to every potential candidate for office in the nation.

For labor has come of age. For the first time it is finding that organization means powers, both in the shop and at the polls. Through Labor's Non-Partisan League, the forces of unionism are gaining strength—both on Capitol Hill in Washington, and in every ward and precinct where working men and women are to be found. What has the League been doing since the history-making 1936 elections? Where is it going this fall in the important voting contests ahead?

The answers will be found in the article on this page.

Ohio League Ready For Action

Columbus, Ohio.—Moving rapidly to build its strength in this important industrial state, Labor's Non-Partisan League of Ohio met in its first constitutional convention here to map out plans for the coming state election campaign.

More than 400 delegates, representing close to half a million organized workers throughout the Buckeye state, adopted a declaration of principles which stated that the "power of public office has been abused in Ohio to create unnecessary suffering," and added that "corruption and graft are rampant."

The League declared it necessary to "defeat those responsible and place progressive forces in public office."

The delegates came from practically every union in the state. CIO unionists, representatives of a number of AFL union and delegates representing members of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen were present.

Members of the American Student Union, the One-House Legislature League and the Workers Alliance were also present. It was obvious that a letter sent out by Tom Donnelly, secretary-treasurer of the Ohio Federation of Labor, who called for a boycott of the convention, had proved a dud.

Owens Elected

They elected John Owens, president of the Ohio Industrial Union Council, CIO, to head the league, and named Elmer Felhaber, of Cleveland Newspaper Guild, as full-time executive secretary.

E. L. Oliver, vice-president of the National League, advised the delegates to align themselves with whichever political party would work most effectively to further labor's aims.

Owens declared, "Some persons think the plain people can't intelligently participate in politics. We are now serving notice on the vultures in public office who have betrayed us that we are going to exercise our full franchise in the future."

The Ohio League's executive comittee will meet in the near future to determine what position is to be taken in the primaries next August. It is certain that labor votes will be used to defeat Martin Davey, incumbent governor, who turned traitor to union people when he called out the National Guard to help break the Little Steel strike last summer.

Davey at that time made no apologies for his turn against labor, which had supported him in the 1936 elections. In the meantime a number of revelations have shown the Davey administration to be honeycombed with graft and corruption, and few believe that he will be re-elected.

List Principles

The Leagues statement of principles, aimed at uniting the support of all people against Toryism in public office declared in part:

"1. Democracy in our industrial and comercial life, including the protection of small businessmen against the unfair practices of monopolies.

"2. To strive for a tax program based on the ability to pay, with high taxation upon speculation, idle wealth and monopoly.

"3. Political action to elect and aid in the election of persons who will strive to carry into effect the principles and purposes herein stated, to unite in a comon movement all societies and associations for like purposes and to establish branches of Labor's Non-Partisan League throughout the state."

Workers Win Pontiac Vote

Pontiac, Mich.—Three members of the United Automobile Workers, CIO affiliate, running on a labor ticket, were nominated for the City Commission at the March 7th primary election in Pontiac.

The candidates, Arthur J. Law, Walter Hardin and Charles Barker, are all active members of U. A. W. Local 159. Law and Barker are seeking election to the two three-year terms on the Commission. They will be opposed by Roy S. Strausser, a banker, and Maurice Baldwin, an engineer, both outspokenly anti-labor.

Explain Platforms

Hardin, who will run for a one-year term against a business man, is the first Negro ever to be nominated for the City Commission in Pontiac.

Date for the final election is April 4.

The union political action committee has announced that the candidates, all of whom have been residents of Pontiac for many years, will explain their stand on decent housing and other civic improvements before various groups throughout the city.

Detroit League Backs Murphy

Detroit.—Labor's Non-Partisan League of Wayne county (Detroit) went on record last week to support the re-election of Governor Frank Murphy.

The endorsement was in the form of a recommendation to the state executive committee of the league.

Richard Frankensteen, vice-president of the United Automobile Workers, was elected chairman of the county league by the 138 delegates from 55 local unions. Other officers represented the mine workers, steel workers, electrical workers, rubber workers, municipal and state employes and the mine, mill and smelter union.

Bethlehem Paid $30,000 to Johnstown Mayor During Strike

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

Washington—The old baseball combination of Tinkers to Evers to Chance found a modern parallel in Johnstown, Pa., during the Little Steel strike last summer, evidence uncovered by the Senate Civil Liberties Committee revealed for the first time.

Mayor Shields, the Citizens Committee and the Bethlehem Steel Corp. comprised the strike-busting trio which operated in Johnstown against the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

As exposed by the committee headed by Senator LaFollette, Shields made the requests for money to fight the strike, leaders of the vigilante Citizens' Committee carried his requests to the company, and brought back from Evans bags of currency to pay Shields.

That Shields was not bashful about asking for large sums, and that the company showed no hesitation about parting with plenty of cash, was obvious from the record.

Last June 17, Fulton Connor, finance director of Johnstown and treasurer of the Citizens' Committee, told Evans that the Mayor needed $10,000. Evans handed over that amount, receiving a receipt, and the money went into the vault in the Mayor's office.

On June 18, another $15,000 went into the Mayor's office from the same source, although Shields sought to give the impression that he thought the money was coming from the Citizens' Committee.

On July 12 the combination went into action, this time transferring $5,621.25 to the Mayor's office, allegedly to pay bills incurred during the strike.

Again and Again

On July 23, the Mayor once again accepted the good will of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, this time to the tune of $4,372.

Again, on July 29, Bethlehem sent over $1,457 to the Mayor's office, once more "to pay bills."

How the money was spent is a question that has puzzled investigators.

Federal Laboratories, for instance, sold tear gas valued at $5,300.33 for use in Johnstown.

The Mayor claims he has the receipt for the payment, but his testimony fails to jibe with statements by C. R. Ellicot, Bethlehem general manager, who charges that the tear gas concern sold its product to a man named Adams.

Bethlehem Paid $30,000

Whatever the details, however, it is certain that the steel corporation turned over more than $30,000 to Mayor Shields.

That was just a drop in the bucket for Bethlehem.

For the records show that $75,637.05 was paid to maintain the commissary inside the company's Cambria plant during the week of June 10, 1937. This amount did not include expenditures for the company's regular restaurant at the mill.

In the one week, the company spent $48,063 for food, $14,766 for cots and bedding, $920 for soap, towels and matches, and $494 for ice!

How many people helped consume the $48,000 ration of food has not been determined.

Tory Allies

But the steel company found numerous Tory allies in its fight against organized labor, the LaFollette committee revealed, and many of these contributed substantial amounts to aid the Citizens' Committee anti-union battle.

From Robert S. Waters, president of the National Radiator Corporation, the committee learned that the citizens behind the Citizens' Committee were economic royalists and their would-be brothers.

Contributors of $1000 included the Mesta Machine Company, which makes steel mill equipment; J. T. Tierney, president of the Koppers Company, a Mellon subsidiary; E. T. Weir's National Steel Corporation and one anonymous donor.

Most of the money so collected was used to finance the "We Protest" advertising campaign of the committee, which tried to give the appearance that it was sponsored by the humble citizens of Johnstown. The committee still owes $17,597 to the John Price Jones advertising and publicity firm in New York City.

The Jones outfit, in a confidential memorandum, had suggested that the Johnstown strike-breaking incident be used as the basis for a national campaign to revise the Wagner Act in favor of employers.

Embarrassment!

Washington (FP).—The LaFollette committee revealed that Shields received $35,450 from the Johnstown Citizen's Committee and that shortly thereafter was able to liquidate $23,485 worth of personal obligations, paying off three mortgages and back taxes, in some instances unpaid since 1931.

Careful to avoid any direct charge that Shields appropriated the funds gathered by the Citizens' Committee to his own purposes, the Senate Committee nevertheless expressed considerable interest in the nature of the "windfall" to Shield's personal fortune.

After studying the ceiling, the floor, his shoes, the scenery outside the windows and the faces of the committee, Shields finally declared that the payments were made by his wife, who, he said, confidentially, is a "woman of property."

Money in sizeable quantities was passed from the offices of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation to Mayor Shields, of Johnstown, Pa., during the strike last year, the LaFollette committee revealed at hearings in Washington. Many wonder how Shields was able to pay off a lot of old debts after the strike was over—and most think they know the answer.

Hiawatha, Kans.—The right of county officials to deport a non-resident family because it may become a public charge is involved in a suit here. Members of the family contend they have a constitutional right to live where they please.

Engineers Vote on CIO

DETROIT. — Affiliation with the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians, CIO, is recommended by the executive board of the independent Society of Designing Engineers.

The society has a considerable membership among the technical employes of the automobile industry in this area. Members of the organization are now voting on the affiliation issue.

The SDE executive board pointed out in its statement that unity of technical men is "highly desirable" and that formal relations with industrial organizations are "vitally necessary."

Brophy Raps Lynching at Negro Parley

Washington—Delegates from 20 states and 30 organizations heard John Brophy, CIO national director, denounce lynching as a weapon of anti-labor employers at the conference of the National Negro Congress on the anti-lynching bill held this week in Washington.

"The crime of lynching has a definite economic base," Brophy told the delegates. "Unscrupulous elements in the south and elsewhere have used it for generations as a device to split white and Negro workers."

"It is as much a weapon in the arsenal of anti-union terror as clubbing, tear-gassing and other ways of breaking picket lines and destroying union organization," he declared.

"Behind every lynching is the figure of the labor exploiter, the man or the corporation who would deny labor its fundamental rights."

Support Anti-Lynch Bills

Brophy explained that the CIO supported anti-lynch legislation as part of its program for the organization of all workers, regardless of race, nationality or political belief. The AFL, he pointed out, had a long record of discrimination against Negro workers, which was a serious factor in its failure, after 50 years of existence, to organize industrial workers.

Broph: cited the record of the CIO in organizing Negro workers, pointing to the large numbers elected as officers of their local unions, and quoted the stand of the CIO at its Atlantic City conference against lynching and all types of terrorist acts on the part of employers.

Labor's Non-Partisan League promised its full support for the anti-lynching bill, stating that voting records of Senators and Congressmen were being closely watched for their action on this and all similar progressive labor legislation.

BROPHY TO SPEAK

Milwaukee.—John Brophy, director of the Committee for Industrial Organization, has been invited to address the National Catholic Social Action Conference in Milwaukee early in May.

CIO National Postal Workers Get Raise

New York.—Fifteen thousand Postal Telegraph workers are looking over their new pay checks this week, raised a total of $600,000 by action of the American Radio Telegraphists Association, CIO.

The raises came through as a result of ARTA work last December in securing an agreement with the company.

This was the first national agreement in the communications industry, and was secured after a brief series of "work demonstrations" in 15 cities.

BACK CONFAB

Seattle, Wash.—The Seattle Industrial Union Council of the CIO has endorsed the call of President Lazaro Cardenas of Mexico for a world conference of labor organizations in Mexico to work out a program against foreign oil interests which have been exploiting the Mexican workers.

AFL Plan Goes Boom!

CIO Workers Take Over Meeting

Birmingham, Ala — It's very very doubtful if the AFL will try holding any more mass meetings for CIO steel workers in the Birmingham area.

Last week AFL organizers distributed hand bills at the gate of the local steel plants containing a vicious attack on the CIO, announcing that a mass meeting would be held in a local hall to organize the steel workers in the AFL.

On the night of the meeting the hall was filled with CIO men. Included in the crowd were Noel R. Beddow and Thomas Pate of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, Vice President Heathcock of Alabama Industrial Union Council and President W. H. Crawford of the Birmingham Industrial Union Council.

Only about five AFL officials were present. The AFL organizer in charge saw that he had little chance of winning new recruits, and so he tried to bring the meeting to a close with an announcement about the location of the federation's offices in Birmingham. He refused to answer questions about the AFL, despite a notice on the handbills that this would be a feature of the evening.

When the AFL officials' delegation walked out, Crawford took the chair and Beddow spoke about the CIO and its organizing campaigns.

The meeting ended with the passage of a resolution thanking the AFL for paying the hall rent for a CIO meeting.

U. S. Court Rules For CIO

New York—The CIO gained a major victory here when the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld a National Labor Relations Board ruling which ordered the Consolidated Edison Co. to cancel its contract with the Intl. Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, AFL.

The court declared that the utility company had in effect signed a company union agreement with the AFL union and had helped it to organize Consolidated Edison workers following the signing of the pact.

The IBEW officials made the agreement with the utility management shortly after the utility workers section of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers had inaugurated a bona-fide membership drive among the company's employes last year.

Five Ordered Rehired

The court order also upheld a labor board ruling that five discharged members of the UERMW be rehired with back pay.

The company was ordered to cease and desist from interfering in any way with future union organizing work. The court found that the AFL union had no majority of the workers when it entered the agreement with the company, and was not entitled to speak for all the workers.

David Moscowitz, counsel for the regional office of the NLRB here, hailed the decision as the most important for the government agency since the Supreme Court upheld the Wagner Act. Company officials indicated they would appeal the decision.

In holding that the NLRB had jurisdiction in the case, the Federal circuit court delivered an opinion which many observers saw as the establishment of a new precedent governing the board's limits.

The Consolidated Edison Co., the court declared, served railway and communications companies engaged in interstate commerce, and as a result a stoppage of its power would seriously affect such commerce. The court held, therefore, that the power company came within the jurisdiction of the labor board.

Maryland League Maps Course

Baltimore, Md. — Labor's Non-Partisan League got off to a flying start in this state when representatives of 80,000 organized workers adopted a constitution, elected officers and worked out a platform for the state election campaign.

Some 400 delegates attended the one-day meeting here. They represented both CIO and AFL unions.

Drew Elected

Unanimously chosen president of the state league was Thomas Drew of Baltimore, international representative for the Printing Pressmen's Union, AFL.

Clyde Lucas, of the TWOC in Cumberland, was elected secretary, and Ulysses De Dominicis, manager of the joint board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers in Baltimore, was named secretary-treasurer.

Chart Activity

The League will devote its efforts during the 1938 campaign to supporting those candidates for office who advocate labor and social legislation, a resolution declared.

Other resolutions called for quick passage of the wages-and-hours bill and for the release of Tom Mooney.

SWOC Wins

Sterling, Ill.—The Steel Workers Organizing Committee, CIO, was named sole collective bargaining agency for the 1400 workers at the Northwestern Barb Wire Company plant here. The SWOC gained 687 votes in the labor board election, with the AFL getting only 482 .

TWOC Organizes the South

CIO Campaign Brings Hope to Workers

By HERMAN WOLF

The Textile Workers Organizing Committee is active in every textile field, but nowhere may it leave so far-reaching an imprint as in cotton.

First, cotton has long been known as a low wage industry; second, as cotton goes, so goes the South. If cotton textile pay can be raised and its labor practices standardized, other southern industry will inevitably follow suit.

In tackling cotton the CIO is incurring the active opposition of all the combined interests of southern capital. It is significant that the TWOC, contrary to the trend of earlier southern textile unions, is not disintegrating in the current recession, but is consolidating its gains through National Labor Relations Board cases, and is a strong enough threat to help prevent wage cuts.

Head of the southern division of the TWOC is A. Steve Nance, who has the majority backing of the craft of unionists in his state. In each of 30 major textile centers Mr. Nance has established headquarters in charge of sub-regional directors.

The sub-regional director's first move is to contact mill workers who have written to headquarters for information, or whose names have been culled form old union lists. In some milltowns it takes days of careful search and cautious injuiry to locate one contact who can be trusted. Doorbells cannot be rung haphazardly where it is a simple matter for company guards and spotters to trail an organizer and note each employe upon whom he calls.

Work Quietly

Often an organizer dares not enter a town in daylight; he relies upon a union-minded merchant or a handful of keymen to keep in touch with those workers who are sympathetic with the union. Mass meetings are seldom held, except in large cities, and unionists in the same village may not even know their fellow union members. In many areas, mill workers provide organizers with day and night bodyguards for there have been beatings and shootings by mill police, thugs and vigilantes.

Southern textile workeres do not hold the American Federation of Labor in high regard. They recall that the federation refused them financial assistance in the 1934 general strike, and that some of its leaders actually went into seclusion at that time, so frightened did they become at the mass proportions of the walkout. Despite a good deal of newspaper publicity the AFL is not waging a genuine textile drive today.

Union leaders are always described as "from the North" or, if southerners, "under dictation from the North." No mention is made of northern capital, yet twenty of the larger and many of the smaller Georgia mills, to take but one state, are wholly or partly controlled by northern interests. Four South Carolina mills pay their office workers with checks mailed from New York City; and some southern mill owners protest the TWOC in the South, yet sign with the union for their plants in the North.

The cry that CIO-ism is communism is shouted on every side. "The CIO is another of those 'foreign entanglements' General Washington warned us against. It is Soviet Russia's bid to control the United States and overturn our laws, our liberties, our morals," reads one newspaper editorial typical of a hundred others. "Our officers are from the South," boasts the Southern Golden Rule Association, an incorporated company union in Gastonia, N. C. "They are not from Russia, England, Italy, or Germany nor tainted with communism."

Many ministers and evangelists have taken up the communist refrain, and revivalists by the score erect their tents on company property to preach an anti-union gospel to the workers.

The red scare has been overplayed, however, and not even those workers who are honestly opposed to the TWOC believe the communist-CIO stories.

THOROUGH CAMPAIGN

The current CIO campaign in cotton textiles is the most thorough union move ever witnessed below the Mason-Dixon line. Upon its outcome may depend not only the employment conditions of the cotton mill workers over the next decade, but of all southern labor as well. A CIO victory here will lay the base for a mass labor movement among the most underpaid workers in the country —workers on tenant farms, and those employed in power, paper, chemicals, fertilizers, lumber, meat packing, shoes, furniture, pants, hosiery, dresses fruit orchards, department stores and other retail establishments.

In the present business slump there are signs of the stabilizing effect of the TWOC on the cotton textile industry's wage-hour structure. Major TWOC moves are now being carried on not on picket lines but before Labor Boards in the South, and union officials are bold enough to state that the business recession, far from wrecking the union, is proving for the first time that the TWOC and a genuine southern labor movement are both here to stay.

The TWOC has taken full advantage of the National Labor Relations Act. Labor Board decisions in all the regions covering the South substantiate charges of employer coercion and discrimination. Reinstatements have been won for more than 300 employes fired for union activity or refusal to join a company union, and back wages in excess of $60,000 have been recovered.

The union is attempting to stabilize the cotton textile industry by standardizing working conditions as between competing mills and competing geographical areas. It would eliminate chiselers through joint union-management, collective bargaining agreements. The importance of such stabilization from the employe's pay standpoint cannot be overemphasized in an industry where his full time wage was $685 in 1936 and $750 in 1937.

SIGN CONTRACTS

Signed agreements have brought wage increases ranging from 5 to 10 percent, and have set hours at 40 a week. In a number of instances chiselers have been brought down to this level from fifty and fifty-five a week, thus benefitting decent employers and their employes.

Excessive machine load-stretch-out and speedup—is an oft-heard employe complaint. In one mill, weavers working with the same machinery and grade of goods as five years ago are now tending 120 instead of 40 looms. In another mill, new and faster machinery has cut more than a third of the 2500 employes off the payroll.

Other contract terms cover overtime pay, seniority rights, and equal distribution of work, and provide arbitration machinery to adjust disputes. From the employer, the union has usually obtained agreement on a "majority shop" clause, and in return promised co-operation in disciplining union members who violate the pact, and aid in seeking enactment of tariff laws and other legislation benefitting the industry.

Charles K. Everett, manager of the new uses section of the Cotton Textile Institute states:

"Here in the United States there is a great and only partially developed market for cotton, represented in the lower income or so-called underprivileged group, whose needs and desires, as its economic status continues to improve, will absorb many hundreds of thousands of bales of cotton annually."

Clearly, higher wages mean a better market for cotton textiles, whether the increases are due to union-management agreements, federal wage-hour legislation, co-operative stabilizing policies among manufacturers themselves, or to a combination of all three.

CIO Wins First NLRB Case in DuPont Duchy

Wilmington, Del. — The first Labor Board case in the state of duPont has been settled out of court, with a victory for the CIO workers involved, members of the Bakelite and Fibre Workers Union of Wilmington.

The settlement binds the employer, the National Vulcanized Fibre Co., to reinstate 12 workers previously fired, without laying off others to make room for them, and with full seniority rights and no union discrimination, and to pay close to $1000 in back pay.

The victory was hailed by Miles Sweeney, CIO regional director in the state, as "a big step forward in our organizational work

The Mill Village

"In discussing wages, which average 25 per cent. lower in the South than in the North, management points to the expense of maintaining mill villages, and claims with this burden off its hands, wages could be raised to a level comparable with the North. A dozen or more villages have been sold or partly sold in the last few years, with employes paying for them over a long term at twice the usual weekly rental of 25 cents to $1 a room.

"The employes dislike the villages for their company-run schools, churches and stores, and ill-insulated homes, often lacking running water, tubs and toilets. Employers want to be rid of their villages, but sole prospective purchasers are their employes, who do not wish to buy because their pay is too low even for instalment buying, and because such purchases would keep them tied to the mills."

Farmers, CIO Work Jointly in South

Birmingham, Ala—Evidence of co-operation between small farmers and the CIO was seen in the joint campaign between the CIO Cannery and Agricultural Workers and the Farmers Union in Alabama for a large turnout in the vote on the crop control plan under the AAA act.

Leaflets, meetings, and other publicity activities were arranged for by a joint committee of the two organizations, resulting in one of the largest proportionate votes in the nation at the time of the Administration's ballot.

Follows Agreement

The co-operation is a result of the agreement signed last December by the Farmers' Union, the Cannery and Agricultural Workers, and Labor's Non-Partisan League, in which mutual aid was pledged on all matters affecting small farmers and workers.

The Alabama district of the Cannery and Agricultural Workers reports four locals set up among the wage hands and sharecroppers since last month, with eight more ready for charters.

TWOC Certified

Washington. — The Textile Workers Organizing Committee has been certified by the National Labor Relations Board as the sole bargaining agency for employes of the Union Buffalo Mills Co., Fairmont, South Carolina.

Out of a total of 189 ballots cast, 118 were for the TWOC and 70 against.

TWOC Wins in Silk Plant

Hazleton, Pa.—A stronghold of anti-unionism for many years crashed with the winning by the Textile Workers Organizing Committee, CIO affiliate, of an election at the plant of the Duplan Silk Corporation in Hazleton, Pa.

Out of a total of 1,034 votes cast, 763 were for the CIO union. No other union was on the ballot.

The South Speaks

Lucy Randolph Mason, active in the TWOC campaign, in a widely quoted letter to southern editors, thus analyzes the end results of current anti-union policies:

"Southern labor should have the same right to organize as labor in other sections, and southern workers should have protection through labor legislation. The economic level of southern purchasing power could be materially raised by giving southern labor more adequate returns from the profits of industry in periods of normal production, and while less money would go out in dividends to other sections, more would stay in circulation in local communities.

"We in the South have got to face and correct certain facts before we can expect the rest of the nation to understand our problems. Southern industry has successfully fought state hours and wage legislation; our Congressmen have so far defeated enactment of a reasonable federal wage and hour law; and employers have solidly combined to prevent labor's exercising its right to organize and bargain collectively.

"As a sporting proposition, the South might persuade its industrialists to lift their heavy hands from the steadily growing southern labor movement and request its Congressmen to accept a sound federal wage and hour bill, while it continues to fight against any and all real discrimination whether in freight rates or other matters."

More TWOC Victories

Washington.—The Textile Workers' Organizing Committee, CIO, has been certified as sole collective bargaining agent for the workers in two more southern mills. They are the Fitzgerald Cotton Mills at Fitzgerald, Ga., and the Beaumont Mfg. Co. at Spartansburg, S. C.

In the Fitzgerald mill, the TWOC recently won a Labor Board election by 197 to 22, in the Spartanburg mill by 291 to 208.

UAW Seeks Poll at Chrysler

85,000 Workers to Vote If Election Order Is Given

Detroit—The National Labor Relations Board last week received a request from the United Automobile Workers, CIO, for an election among the 85,000 employes of the Chrysler Corp., to determine their choice for sole collective bargaining agency.

The election, when held, will be the largest in the NLRB's crowded history. Previous record-holder was the election at Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp., last summer, when about 20,000 workers were polled.

R. J. Thomas, UAW vice-president in charge of Chrysler locals, said the petition was in answer to one filed by the "Independent Association of Chrysler Employes" last week. The "independent" group asked for a vote to determine the bargaining agent in Detroit Chrysler plants.

Seek to Hit UAW

"The question of the independent union is being revived at a time when it is thought it might be embarrassing to the UAW during its current negotiations with the corporation," Thomas said.

"We are therefore willing to have this thing settled once and for all by the NLRB so there will be no further doubt as to who represents Chrysler employes.

"We have asked an election on a national basis to remove any doubt that might remain if we only asked for an election in Detroit. The independent union petition covers only the Detroit area."

The UAW branded the "independent association," a company union when it first claimed representation in Chrysler plants.

CIO, AFL Unions Cooperate

Eureka, Calif.—CIO lumber and sawmill workers in the Redwoods area are establishing unity with AFL rank and file workers in both union and political fields, in spite of opposition from the Hutcheson machine of the Carpenters Brotherhood.

This week the second meeting of the newly formed council of CIO Intl. Woodworkers and AFL Lumber and Sawmill Workers of Northern California took place.

On the political front, the two union groups are working toward the establishment of a branch of Labor's Non-Partisan League in every nothern California lumber town.

Similar political action, initiated by the CIO Woodworkers and involving Farmers Union and Grange locals as well as AFL unions is under way in the lower Columbia River Valley of Oregon.

In Crescent City, Calif., Teamsters Local 415 recently refused to recognize a scab local chartered by Hutcheson after a successful strike of Woodworkers in which Local 415 joined, along with CIO longshoremen.

Pecan Strike Victory Hailed

San Antonio, Tex. — Twenty-five thousand pecan shellers with their families crowded San Antonio's main plaza this week in a victory celebration and dance after winning their six weeks strike for union recognition and an end to wage cuts.

Massed under banners proclaiming, "Viva CIO" the workers heard J. Austin Beasley, Cannery and Agricultural Workers organizer in charge of the strike, warn enemies of labor in San Antonio to cease their attacks on the right of workers to organize for a better way of living.

1000 Jailed

Close to 1000 workers raised their hands when Beasley asked the audience to tell how many had been jailed during the strike, which was met with extreme police terror from the city authorities.

Futher meetings are being arranged throughout Texas, in which pecan workers will tell of their victory and aid in the organization of other workers similarly exploited throughout the state.

Observers testified that the San Antonio meeting was the largest labor gathering over held in the southwest.

Fur Workers Talk General Strike

New York—A general strike in the fur industry will be called March 31 unless the lockout of 2,000 workers in New York shops which was declared more than a month ago by the fur manufacturers association is called off and an agreement signed with the International Fur Workers Union. Decision to call the strike was made at a Joint Council meeting attended by 2,500 shop chairmen.

Full support and co-operation of all CIO unions in the New York area was promised by Allan Haywood, regional director.

"The demands made upon the employers by the fur workers," he said in a statement to the fur union, "are calculated to eradicate evils of long standing in the fur industry and to provide the workers with a measure of security on the job which they have a right to expect from the industry.

Demands Refused

Equalization of work and job security were the principle demands made by the union in bargaining for a new agreement with the Associated Fur Coat and Trimming Manufacturers. The employers group turned down the demands and locked out the workers in more than 1000 shops.

Several days before the lockout occurred, the employers association also refused to take part in a conference proposed by Mayor LaGuardia and the State Mediation Board. Union officials called the lockout a "bosses sit-down strike."

There are 14,000 fur workers in New York shops, according to Harry Begoon, secretary-treasurer of the Furriers Joint Council. During 1937 they earned a total of about $16,000,000, he said, their average weekly earnings ranging from $23 to $25.

Stability Impossible

Begoon thinks it is ridiculous for the fur employers to talk about stabilizing the industry when they permit "petty chiseling manufacturers" to come into the industry and ruin it.

"They work all day and all night," he said of the 'chiselers,' "and can't manage to exist." The result is that they drag the entire industry down to the level of the 'good old days' of the sweatshops."

Die Casters Launch Drive

Toledo — George Peacock of Pottstown, Pa., was elected national president at the fourth annual convention of the National Association of Die Casting Workers, CIO, which met in Toledo March 19-21.

It was decided to launch a nationwide organizing drive, in conjunction with the CIO, to bring all the unorganized die casting workers into the organization.

Retiring President C. B. Henri presided over the convention. He was given a rising vote of thanks for his services and presented with a gold watch.

Henri stressed the assistance given by the CIO to the union since its affiliation six months ago and gave an encouraging report on the progress made.

Re-elect Ramsey

Wm. Ramsey of New York was re-elected national secretary-treasurer for his third term, and T. Neill of Local 2, Garwood, N. J., was elected to the new office of general executive vice president, to take over the duties of either president or secretary-treasurer in the event of a vacancy between conventions.

The convention was addressed by Len De Caux, CIO publicity director and editor of The CIO News, who brought the greetings of Chairman John L. Lewis on behalf of the national CIO; by August Scholle, CIO regional director in Toledo, and by K. L. Cole, secretary of the Toledo Industrial Union Council.

Nine Contracts

Secretary Ramsey reported on organization activities during the past year. These included the winning of a 22½ weeks' strike and the signing of nine contracts, all bringing wage increases and one including a preferential clause for hiring.

"All of these nine contracts were signed without the loss of one day's time to any of the men employed, through shop meetings and with the assistance of a negotiating committee," Ramsey said.

Vote For UOPWA

Boston.—Employes of Sampson and Murdock Co., of Boston, publishers of city directories, voted 32 to 7 in favor of Local 3, United Office and Professional Workers, CIO, at a recent Labor Board election.

The company which was established 92 years ago, is the second largest directory publishing house in the country.

ARTA Demands Win Senate Utility Probe

Washington. — A resolution to investigate the telegraph industry has been introduced into the Senate by Senator Matthew M. Neely as a result of information placed before him by the American Radio Telegraphists Association, CIO.

The resolution calls for an inquiry into three main aspects of the industry which the union charges has been seriously dislocated by the undercover manipulations of the telegraph companies. These aspects are the eficiency of service, tendencies toward monoply, and the conditions of labor.

The companies, particularly Western Union Telegraph, have laid off so many employes in the last few months that they do not have enough workers to handle the current volume of business, ARTA claims, and as a result employes remaining on the payroll have been speeded up almost beyond endurance.

Despite this speed-up there has been a decided slow-down in service as a result of the lay-offs, union spokesmen say. They charge that the companies are enabled to decrease their efficiency at the expense of labor and the public because they are no longer in competition with each other, and call attention to the fact that recently the companies have taken steps to consummate an unsanctioned merger without any consideration for the employes in the industry.

In preparation for a merger and as a result of new improvements in transmitting apparatus ARTA spokesmen declare that the companies have fired or "furloughed" thousands of employes, and yet have refused to shorten the 48-hour work week which still prevails in the industry.

Guild Certified

Washington.—The American Newspaper Guild has been certified as collective bargaining agent for Associated Press workers in three AP offices in Washington, D. C., Boston and Philadelphia.

Certification follows overwhelming majorities for the Guild in recent Labor Board elections.

Distribute the CIO News

Representatives of the Glass Workers Organizing Committee, CIO, distribute copies of The CIO News to workers at the Crystal City, Mo., Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. The papers proved so interesting that the management's main office asked for 12 copies!

15 Shoe Workers Win Back Pay

Washington.—United Shoe Workers, CIO, have won reinstatement and back pay for 15 members of the union in a decision of the Labor Board handed down this week against the General Shoe Corp., of Nashville, Tenn.

The order followed revelations of company unionism by the corporation, violence against CIO members, and the use of goon squads recruited by the company union, known as the Shoe Makers Assn. Foremen acted as bouncers, attacking union men in the plant and as they were leaving work. Girl workers were also mistreated.

Following these strong arm tactics, the company signed an agreement with the Association, gave it free space in the factory for an office, and allowed dues collections on company time.

The Board's order also called for dissolution of the stooge union.

SUPPORT FOR KENNEDY GROWS IN PENNSYLVANIA

Sheep -- In Wolf's Clothing

The Wagner Act and the growth of CIO industrial unionism sounded taps for the little-loved company union in America.

But like the pre-historic dinosaurs which didn't know when they were dead, company unions still pretend they're alive—as "independent unions.

Weak, but still potentially dangerous, these fake unions are trying to hold together. For the last few months they have been seeking to form a new "federation" of labor, but with little success.

On page 5 the CIO NEWS tells the story of this attempted survival of the most "un-fitted."

61 Canneries Face NLRB Charges

San Francisco, Calif. — Hearings affecting 61 west coast canneries and 60,000 cannery workers began this week as the National Labor Relations Board acted on charges of anti-union activities filed by the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers, CIO.

The charges are an outgrowth of AFL collaboration in trying to foist company unions on the workers, according to the UCAPAWA. Edward Vandeleur, California State Federation secretary, aided the bosses in forcing workers into "closed shop" contracts that gave them little but the privilege of paying dues to the AFL.

Workers who refused to join the AFL were fired by the companies. Originally the workers had organized AFL Federal Labor unions, which fell out of favor with Federation officials when they voted by overwhelming majorities to affiliate to the CIO.

Cannery Workers union spokesmen stated that the cases will have a chastening effect on the AFL campaign being carried on throughout the west coast.

Leaflet Campaign In Jersey

Jersey City, N. J.—Taking advantage of the Supreme Court decision which ruled unconstitutional any attempt to abridge the right to distribute leaflets, the CIO announced it would start a vast leaflet campaign in Mayor Hague's Jersey City.

A wire to Hague, now vacationing in Florida, was sent by William Carney, New Jersey CIO regional director, and Roger Baldwin, head of the American Civil Liberties Union.

Fight Wage Cuts

Members of the Federation of Flat Glass Workers outside their strike headquarters in Cincinnati. They took to the picket line when the management of the Cambridge Tile Co. offered drastical wage cuts.

Cleaners Vote For Strike

New York — Pending the result of negotiations for a new contract to replace the one which expired March 31, 2,500 members of Local 239, Cleaners and Dyers Union, affiliate of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, voted to strike if their demands for improved working conditions and wage adjustments were not granted.

The union is seeking to renew an agreement with the Cleaners and Dyers Board of Trade, which represents about 60 wholesale firms. There are some 25,000 workers employed in the industry in the area.

Seek 40c Minimum

Alexander Hoffman, general manager of the CIO Dyers, said the union was demanding 40 cents an hour minimum wage, a 40-hour week, 15 per cent. wage increase for inside workers, drivers and commissioners, week's paid vacation a year, and time and a quarter for overtime.

He accused the wholesale plants of working many of their employes from 70 to 90 hours a week, and paying less than 30 cents an hour for unskilled labor.

Hoffman said the union was trying "to improve wages and working conditions in wholesale plants as the foundation necessary for the stabilization of the entire industry."

He claimed that "the present chaotic conditions in the industry are due to cut-throat competition," and that uniform wages and working conditions sought by the union would help eliminate this. The union is also negotiating for a contract with some 30 firms operating chain shops and employing about 2500 workers.

Fight Tariff Cut

Washington.—Protesting against any cut in the aluminum tariff, President N. A. Zonarich, Secretary George Hobaugh, and John Haser of the Aluminum Workers of America appeared before the state department committee considering the reciprocity agreement with Great Britain.

The state department has proposed a 50% cut in the 7c a pound tariff, but the union points out that imports have been increasing and more than two million pounds of foil came in from Switzerland in nine months of 1937, causing lay-offs among American workers.

Favor Bill

Washington—The United Federal Workers, CIO, is organizing support of H. R. 1543, which provides decent living wages for government workers, particularly those in the immigration and naturalization service of the Department of Labor, where employes have been working at their meagre entrance salary for from 10 to 15 years.

CIO Council on Record For UMW Leader

Harrisburg, Pa.—New signs of favor for the candidacy of Thomas Kennedy, United Mine Workers' secretary-treasurer, for Governor of Pennsylvania, appeared this week.

The newly-organized State Industrial Union Council of the CIO, meeting in Harrisburg, went on record for Kennedy in his fight against the bosses of the Pennsylvania Democratic party.

Mayor S. Davis Wilson of Philadelphia cast his lot with the Kennedy group. He will run for Senator against George Earle, the present Governor.

Meanwhile, from scores of sources throughout the State came pledges of support, and offers to work in behalf of the UMW official.

Every indication points to a Kennedy victory at the primary elections next month.

Strikers Fight "Pro" Scab

Members of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, CIO, who have been on strike against the S. W. Farber Co. in Brooklyn, N. Y., rallied to protect themselves from "Fink" Tibbets, one of four strikebreakers sent in by the National Metal Trades Association. Picture at top shows Tibbets; at bottom are pickets who greeted the srikebreaker when he stepped from a car near the plant.

CIO Aids Stranded Workers

Wins Relief Funds For 10,000 In Arizona

Phoenix, Ariz.—The CIO won a victory here for 10,000 stranded cotton pickers who were left to shift for themselves in hundreds of camps throughout the Salt River Valley after wealthy cotton growers had finished with them.

From Governor Stanford of Arizona and relief officials, E. A. Kope, international organizer for the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers of America won the following agreement:

1. That relief, immediate relief, with trucks and case workers working to the limit would be given on a mass scale in all the cotton camps of the Salt River Valley.

2. That the governor and the various Government officials officially recognize the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers of America, CIO, as the agency for employed and unemployed cotton workers.

3. That arrangements be made for definite future relief for these workers.

4. That the governor would cooperate with the union in gathering evidence for an official public exposure of the methods resorted to in fooling cotton pickers to come to Arizona.

At the same time UCAPAWA national headquarters got busy in Washington, D. C. The result was that the stranded cotton pickers were certified for WPA jobs in Arizona and relief will be made available by the Farm Security Administration.

Union Spreads

The organization of Salt River Valley cotton workers began when 500 of these stranded people camped on the capitol grounds of Phoenix. Refusing to put up with starvation and neglect, workers planned to picket the capitol until something was done for them and the thousands of others who were in the same plight.

E. A. Kope, of the UCAPAWA, took the matter in hand. He led them to the union hall, organized them and helped then plan action. The following day 1000 came to the hall. Since then unionization has been spreading among these 10,000 cotton workers. There are now three or four union representatives in over 100 camps.

Cotton workers come from Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Illinois and other states. When they go back home they intend to spread the union there.

False Promises

For several years cotton growers in the Salt River Valley of Arizona have lured thousands of cotton workers from all points in the states to their rich fields with false promises.

Workers are promised good housing, good wages and transportation home. When they arrive they find themselves forced to live in unsanitary camps. They cannot earn more than $1 per day and at the end of the season they are left stranded.

Vigilantes Foiled

As usual city officials, police and growers tried to stop organization with vigilante terror. Their efforts were in vain. Kope was arrested twice and his room searched without a warrant. These actions made the cotton workers all the more determined to build the union fast.

One of the cops made the following statement to Kope while taking him to jail:

"If you don't get out of here in 48 hours, we'll pull our badges off and show you what a real mob is and run you out. We don't want you G——D—— organizers and rats in this state organizing these scum and trash that can't pay dues, anyhow. I'm a union man. I'm a member of the Teamster's International and we'll organize and run you out of town."

TWOC Asks Vote

Claremont, N. H.—A National Labor Relations Board election held among the employes of the Dartmouth Woolen Company this week marks another step in the fight of the Textile Workers Organizing Committee against wage cuts in the woolen and worsted industry.

This election will determine the sole collective bargaining agency in arbitration proceedings now pending to settle a dispute between the union and the management over a 9½ to 12½ per cent. wage cut.

36 Rehired

Upon petition of the union the National Labor Relations Board in February ordered the Dartmouth Woolen Mills to reinstate 36 discharged union employes and to pay them wages totalling $9000. One man, Peter Delage, received back pay amounting to $1000.

The dispute over the wage cut arose shortly after the NLRB decision on the discharge cases.

Louis J. Guilmet, in charge of the work in Claremont, is certain of a TWOC victory. The wage cut dispute will be arbitrated for all employes immediately after the election. Mr. Guilmet said he is confident the TWOC will be able to restore wages to their former level in the Dartmouth Mills just as it did in seven other New Hampshire woolen and worsted plants.

"The union does not propose to allow such practices to go unchallenged, and is now preparing to press charges against the management of the Verd Mont Mills for failure to observe the mandate of their workers who voted 3 to 1 in a National Labor Board election for the TWOC as their exclusive bargaining agency.

"Reprehensible"

"The manner in which the management of the Verd Mont Mills imposed this wage cut on the workers is so reprehensible and in violation of all the rules of collective bargaining that it stands out as a classic example of what methods employers ought not to use.

Minor bosses called at the homes of the workers, informing them that they could go back to work if they accepted a 15 per cent. cut in wages. These bosses told the workers they had better take it, or they might find other workers on their jobs.

It is clear that there is no more conceivable form of intimidation than this one . . . Instead of meeting the issue squarely and dealing with the union officially, the management chose to use coercive methods coupled with cunning and deceptive statements."

URW Wins

Akron, Ohio—In the face of a concerted propaganda campaign against unionism, workers at the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company this week voted the United Rubber Workers their sole bargaining agency.

The vote was 3696 for the CIO union, with only 2564 casting ballots for the "Firestone Employees Protective Association," an independent group.

Libel Suit Filed

Cumberland, Md.—Libel suits totalling $30,000 have been filed by John T. Jones, CIO regional director in western Maryland, against a Cumberland newspaper and the local radio station, WTBO, for false and slanderous statements made against him by the defendants.

The suits are an outgrowth of the recent mayoralty campaign, during which anti-labor forces in Cumberland stooped to every trick of libel and slander in an effort to defeat labor.

According to the complaint, Jones and other leaders of the CIO were openly called traitors to their country, atheists, despoilers of liberty, thieves, and similar names.

UERMW Wins at GM

Washington—Local 717 of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, CIO, became the first union to win exclusive bargaining rights in a General Motors plant when the Natl. Labor Relations Board announced its certification in the Sunlight Electric Division of GM here.

A comparison of union membership cards in January showed that 381 out of the firm's 627 production workers had signed up with the UERMW, while only 86 held membership in the Sunlight Electric Workers, Inc., an incorporated "independent" union.

CIO Union First in Dwight

Dwight, Ill.—The CIO has come to Dwight, bringing trade unionism to the town for the first time in its history.

The new union is a local of the United Federal Workers, CIO, and has just been chartered in the Veterans hospital here, an institution employing 125 workers. Charles Ely is president and Victor Youngquist, commander of the local American Legion Post, financial secretary.

The local is the newest addition to the UFWA drive among veterans facilities throughout the country, where the twelve-hour day and the sixty-six-hour week were common before CIO organization got under way.

Four hundred veterans in the hospital at Danville, Ill., have already won an eight-hour day with no reduction in wages through the UFWA, and similar progress is reported in other sections where the drive has been successful.

SWOC Wins Strike

Muncie, Ind. — A strike at the Indiana Steel & Wire Mill, Muncie, Ind., won the promise of a signed contract within 30 days between the company and the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

Another Indiana plant, the E. C. Atkins Saw Co., of Indianapolis, has renewed its contract with SWOC for a year, granting the CIO union sole bargaining rights.

Kokomo, Ind. — Continental Steel of Kokomo, Indiana, has entered into and signed a contract with the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

Buffalo CIO Unions Demand Work

Buffalo, N. Y.—Declaring that unemployment is the creation of business, and calling on the government to take its proper responsibility in providing jobs for jobless workers, John Brophy, CIO director, addressed 1,500 workers this week in Buffalo's largest meeting devoted to the present industrial crisis. The meeting was called by the CIO.

"Unemployment today is the nation's crisis" Brophy said. "Throughout our country—usually described as the richest and fairest in the world—we have the specter of unemployment and want haunting every household."

Purchasing Power The Problem

"If we can increase purchasing power to the point where American workers can buy the things that American workers can make, "Brophy said, "we will have achieved the answer to this problem of recurrent crisis."

This solution would be achieved, he pointed out, when the CIO program for American workers was carried out in full. He recalled the main basis of this program in the right to work, quoting from the CIO platform as formulated at the Atlantic City conference last fall:

The CIO Program

"The CIO now announces that the basic feature of its legislative and economic program is: Each worker has a right to a job and must be guaranteed security of employment."

Supplementing this, Brophy pointed out that the CIO in its fight for wages and hours legislation, for the NLRA, for the Wagner bill to require compliance with labor laws, for a $3,000,000,000 relief appropriation, and similar measures, was making a real contribution to the struggle for higher incomes and standards of living for American workers.

Quotes Lewis

Quoting Chairman Lewis of the CIO, Brophy stated on the unemployment problem: "The Administration has taken on itself this obligation, and the workers of America expect it to fulfill its promise. The CIO has taken on itself the duty of presenting the case of the unemployed."

Frankensteen Speaks

Richard T. Frankensteen, vice-president of the United Automobile Workers, advised unemployed workers in Buffalo to demand from their city officials and local business men that they find funds for relief, in spite of protestations that the city was broke.

The meeting was also addressed by the Rev. Herman J. Hahn, Charles A. Maxwell and Harry Richmond, who warmly supported the unionization drive of the CIO, declaring that it was the duty of all workers to join the organizations of their free choice.

Hugh Thompson, Buffalo CIO regional director, acted as chairman.

Shoe Union Stops Wage Cuts

New York. — The United Shoe Workers, CIO, won another battle in its war against wage cuts, when seven New York orthopedic shoe firms signed agreements with the union providing for establishment of the work-week system and increases in pay.

The pacts followed a strike of 300 workers employed by the companies. Months of negotiations had failed to bring any concession from the employers.

Four Strikes

Meanwhile the USWA called strikes against four slipper concerns which had refused to renew existing contracts and had sought instead to institute wage reductions.

The union is also negotiating with the employers of 475 shoe repair shops throughout the city.

LAUNCH DRIVE

Seattle — Immediate launching of a drive to organize the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company offices in Seattle was announced here by the United Office and Professional Workers, CIO.

ALP Criticizes N. Y. Legislature

Unions Win McNaboe Veto

New York — Governor Herbert Lehman vetoed the McNaboe bill, barring "Communists" from holding state office, following protests from CIO and progressive organizations, which maintained that the bill seriously destroyed civil liberties in the state.

The Governor's veto message declared it would "abridge freedom of speech, freedom of thought, freedom of press and freedom of assembly."

Commenting that the 1938 session of the legislature was "marked by an absence of any real decisive labor legislation," the state CIO called the McNaboe bill a "menace to the civil and political liberties of all.

"While it seeks to curb one group, it can just as easily be used to jeopardize the liberties of the rest of us, and is a very convenient method of attacking progressives and labor unions.

"Should this legislation be adopted for civil service, it would not be long before repressive legislation is extended to cover all workers".

Progressive organizations throughout the state have been fighting the bill.

Failed to Act on Important Issues

New York, (FP)—While raising red scares to "subject those in civil service and in the teaching professions to spiritual and intellectual blackmail," the recently-adjourned New York State Legislature failed to meet the "pressing problems which beset our people," according to charges made by Alex Rose, executive secretary of the American Labor Party.

Tasks the legislators ignored include the high cost of living, a workable solution of milk costs, utility rates, high rentals and prompt construction of low-cost housing.

ALP Will Fight

The Legislature also voted against ratification of the child labor amendment.

"The ALP will carry the fight for measures killed in the Legislature," Rose predicted.

"The Labor Party's proposal is to elect more laborites to the Legislature. In support of this contention there can be cited the liberalizing effect the presence of five ALP members in the assembly has had on their colleagues.

"The ALP accepts the minor accomplishments of the 1938 Legislature as a victory and the major failures as a challenge."

"Elect Kennedy" Campaign Gains Speed

Harrisburg, Pa.—Moving rapidly ahead in preparation for the May primaries, the campaign of Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers, gained added strength this week as prominent Democrats throughout the State moved into his camp.

Backed by Sen. Joseph Guffey, by Mayor S. Davis Wilson of Philadelphia, who will run for U. S. Senator on the Kennedy ticket, and by a growing number of politically prominent figures throughout the Keystone State, Kennedy gained new pledges of strong union support from CIO and AFL unions alike.

Form Committee

In Philadelphia John Edelman, regional director for the CIO, announced the formation of a committee of 20,000 CIO and AFL unionists to support Kennedy.

"The rank and file of Philadelphia trades unionists will support Kennedy," Edelman stated.

He rapped a couple of inconsequential union leaders in the city whose announcements that they would support Charles A. Jones, Kennedy's machine-backed opposition, had been given considerable prominence in local papers, always eager to spot a non-existent "revolt" against labor-endorsed candidates.

Edelman pointed out that "we in the labor movement are supporting Tom Kennedy because of his splendid trade union record and necessarily because of his CIO affiliation. Had there been an AFL representative more capable than Kennedy, we of course would have endorsed him."

Edelman announced that a door-to-door campaign will be undertaken by the unions to win Democratic support for Kennedy and to induce Republicans to change their registrations to Democrats so that they may cast votes for Kennedy in the primaries.

In Wilkes-Barre, the Luzerne County Labor's Non-Partisan League swung into action on behalf of Kennedy.

League Active

The league will circulate petitions in the country's farm communities pledging support to the labor leader and his ticket.

"This is labor's fight, and if labor is to survive and progress in maintaining the American standard of living, we must nominate and elect the Kennedy candidates," the league said.

In western Pennsylvania, too, there was evidence of increasing activity in behalf of the Kennedy ticket.

Local 700 of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers at Braddock endorsed Kennedy, pointing out that to elect men whom "labor can trust" is the "best means to defeat wage cuts."

Wilson's decision to run on the Kennedy ticket followed a statement by Governor Earle, who has the backing of the badly-discredited state machine, in which he attacked Kennedy. The UMW leader now has a full slate in the campaign to buck that of the boss-controlled state Democratic committee.

Union Backs Kennedy

Reading, Pa.—Gathering here for a one-day legislative session, 45 delegates of Pennsylvania locals of the United Retail and Wholesale Employes, CIO, representing several thousand members, endorsed the candidacy of Secretary-Treasurer Thomas Kennedy of the United Mine Workers for governor of Pennsylvania.

The union representatives heard reports showing the formation of 17 locals throughout the State since last July. Some 6000 members are now working under closed shop contracts in the State.

State Council Convention Hails Kennedy For Governor

HARRISBURG, Pa. — Lieut.-Governor Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers, was unanimously endorsed for Governor by the 1280 delegates attending the first convention of the Pennsylvania Industrial Union Council.

The delegates represented 508,000 workers organized in CIO unions throughout the State. More local unions were represented than were affiliated to the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor, which the new CIO Council succeeds.

The State Federation decided to reconstitute itself as an Industrial Union Council of the CIO rather than to drive out 80 per cent. of its membership, as ordered by President Wm. Green of the AFL. It was thereupon joined by many large unions which had not been affiliated before.

President John A. Phillips and Secretary-Treasurer Lester Thomas of the old Federation were both elected by the convention to similar offices in the CIO Council.

The resolution on Kennedy pledged support to his candidacy "to the extent of our resources and the utmost of our devotion, to vindicate the faith of the people in democratic government, to fulfill the promise of industrial stability and economic security, for the advancement of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania."

Received with an enthusiastic ovation, Kennedy pledged himself to serve the interests of both labor and the people generally of Pennsylvania.

"You cannot draw a line between labor and the people generally," he said, "because labor makes up the bulk of the population generally, whether it is represented in conventions like this or in the farming, medical, legal, small shopkeeper, white collar classes. We are all of labor."

Lewis Sends Greetings

John L. Lewis, chairman of the CIO, was unable to attend the convention, but he wired his greetings and delegated Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, and CIO Director John Brophy to represent him.

"They said, 'Labor, you can sweat, you can fume, you can break your limbs, you can lose your life, you can starve, but for God's sake don't run for public office,'" Murray declared.

'Follow Through,' Says Murray

He stated that the CIO has elected 172 public officials in Pennsylvania, mayors, justices of the peace and other local officials and "now we should follow through."

Brophy related the successes of the CIO in organizing the mass-production industries and emphasized that the splitting of labor had been caused entirely by the suspensions and expulsions ordered by the AFL executive council. William Green, he said, "talks unity and practices division."

Resolutions were adopted in support of Labor's Non-Partisan League, to which locals were urged to affiliate; calling for a $3,000,000,000 relief fund and for a big housing program; and urging immediate passage of wage-hour legislation. The Shepherd-Hill-May bill was denounced.

Fascist Aggressors Hit

Special attention was paid to the menace of Fascism, and a resolution was adopted denouncing the Fascist aggressor nations and calling for passage of the O'Connell resolution to amend the neutrality act.

The Spanish Fascists were assailed in a separate resolution, which urged support for the Loyalist government in putting down the Fascist revolt.

Besides electing Phillips and Thomas, the convention picked the following vice-president from the main industrial groups, to constitute an executive board:

John Kmetz, anthracite miners; James Marks, bituminous miners; Charles Weinstein, needle trades; James Thomas, steel; Harry Boyer, textiles; W. B. Gravatt, aluminum; Wm. J. Collins, glass; Harry Bloch, radio and electrical; David Kanes, state, county and municipal workers; and John W. Edelman and Tom Shane, for the remaining miscellaneous industries.

Workers Back Kennedy

Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers, received enthusiastic backing from thousands of CIO union members in his campaign to win the Democratic nomination for governor of Pennsylvania. CIO Industrial Union Council in the state, as well as numerous other groups, have endorsed the Kennedy candidacy.

Aluminum Union Meets

New Kensington, Pa. — Delegates representing some 20,000 aluminum workers throughout the nation will meet here for the annual convention of the International Aluminum Workers of America.

Celebrating their first anniversary as an international union, the delegates will review activities which have carried their organization into practically every important aluminum center and established it as sole bargaining agency in many plants of the Aluminum Company of America, as well as in several independent firms.

Murray to Speak

Representatives will be present from New Kensington, Fairmont, W. Va.; Badin, N. C.; Eau Claire, Wis.; Pittsburgh and Logan's Ferry, Pa.; Alcoa, Tenn.; Cincinnati, Cleveland, Detroit, Edgewater, N. J., and Massena, N. Y., according to President N. A. Zonarich.

Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee; John Brophy, CIO director; William Carney, New Jersey regional director, and Representative Robert Allen, liberal Congressman from this district, are to address the convention.

The convention will discuss the importation of foreign aluminum, the southern wage differential, and organization of unorganized workers in the industry.

"Despite the existing recession," President Zonarich declared, "we will see displayed at the convention more unity and progress among the aluminum workers than ever before."

Sign Agreement

Ottumwa, Ia. — An agreement has been signed between the United Packing House Workers, CIO, and the Morrell Packing Company, covering more than 2200 employes. The union was made sole bargaining agency.

BACKS KENNEDY

Pittsburgh—Judge M. A. Musmanno, prominent liberal, has endorsed Thomas Kennedy for governor of Pennsylvania.

CIO to Meet

The Committee for Industrial Organization will meet Tuesday, April 12, at 11 a. m., in the Board room of the United Mine Workers Building at Washington. . .

Heywood Broun

On Political Strategy

It has always seemed to me that labor should proceed along the political as well as the economic front.

But various tough problems come up in the political field. What I have in mind is the danger of depending too much upon governmental agencies. Trade unionists ought to be squeamish of the risk of ever getting on the reservation and becoming wards of the great white father after the manner of the Indians.

Still there is also the danger of demanding and getting too little by law. I have specifically in mind the attitude of unionists toward the National Labor Relations Board. On the whole I think that the Board has been distinctly useful to the cause of organization.

Some of its decisions have not been helpful to industrial unionism. It is the opinion of the American Newspaper Guild that some of the agents in various regions have been dilatory in arriving at decisions. But it is well to remember that the chief opposition to the NLRB has come from the forces of reaction.

And so I think that the CIO should be careful in the kind of criticism which it makes. Obviously unionists have a right to holler about a ruling which seems to be unfair and ill judged. But is is a bad thing to join in any general attack which strengthens the hands of the stand patters.

I have much the same feeling about Frances Perkins, the Secretary of Labor. The lady has done some things which I don't like. And yet when her record is set beside that of her predecessors it must be admitted that she is more friendly and useful to labor than anyone who has recently held the same Cabinet position.

The very fact that Girdler and Weir hate her vitals ought to indicate which side she is on. Miss Perkins has much courage, a lot of wisdom and no tact whatsoever. Leaders of labor should not be too much concerned about charm and suave manners.

We ought to remember our friends. And a pat on the back is often more useful for a cause than a punch in the nose.

FAECT Signs Pact

Oakland, Calif.—The Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians, CIO, has signed its first contract in the Bay district with the El Dorado Oil Co.

The pact covers the company's Oakland and Berkeley plants, and provides for the closed shop, $25-a-month pay raises, the 40-hour week, seniority rights and a month's dismissal notice.

Labor's Interests Are the People's Interests

Democratic government, industrial stability and economic security were the three main principles advanced by the Pennsylvania Industrial Union Council, in the resolution with which it endorsed Lieutenant Governor Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers, for governor.

A great labor convention, representing nearly 500,000 workers organized in CIO unions throughout the State and voicing the sentiments of countless other workers both in AFL unions and unorganized, gave its unanimous endorsement to a union man for the highest political office in the State.

* * * *

Although Kennedy was the logical candidate and the one who could command the widest support on his record, the Democratic party State Committee refused to endorse him, for no other reason than that he was a "labor man."

Corporation lawyers and millionaires can be endorsed without qualms, according to the reasoning of this committee, but to run a labor man forsooth is to put forward "a representative of a special group or class interest!"

There are perhaps a few hundred corporation lawyers in the average state and certainly no more than a baker's dozen of millionaires. The group or class interest they personally represent through their own background and associations is that of a tiny minority of wealthy people in the State.

A labor man like Kennedy by personal background and association comes from a group consisting of literally millions of working people and their families throughout the State.

Yet a labor man, we are asked to believe, is suspect as representing a special group or class interest, while the corporation lawyers and millionaires are not!

* * * *

Any citizen of Pennsylvania who may have been fooled by this line of propaganda would certainly have had their eyes opened if they had attended the convention of the State Industrial Union Council.

They would have found that this special group interest which organized labor is supposed to represent was strangely similar to, in fact identical with the interests of the overwhelming majority of the people of the State of every walk of life.

In all the speeches and resolutions on the subject they would have heard the interests of farmers, professional people and the citizenry generally stressed along with those of labor as needing the services of a candidate like Kennedy.

And they would not have heard a single speech or resolution in which any special labor interests were advanced that ran counter to the interests of the whole Commonwealth.

On the other hand, if the same skeptical citizens could somehow gain entry into the exclusive clubs where the corporation lawyers and millionaires so favored by old-guard political machines discuss their political interests, we are willing to bet they would hear plenty of selfish minority group interests being advanced that run directly counter to the welfare of the citizenry generally.

* * * *

What are the main political interests of labor, as advanced by the Pennsylvania State Council or by any other similar labor body throughout the country?

Democratic government, industrial stability and economic security. These are also the main poltical interests of the great mass of the people of every state.

It is entirely natural that the best interests of labor should also be the best interests of those of the whole community or state in which they reside. For the working people have most to gain from general prosperity, stability and security; and they are too large a part of the generality to be able to have any anti-social interest from which they might profit at the expense of the general welfare.

Th interests of the people are the interests of labor, and the interests of labor are the interests of the people.

That is why the election of a tried and true labor man to public office is one of the best assurances that not selfish group interests but the general welfare will receive the first consideration.

Looking Ahead By LEN DE CAUX

On Freedom of the Press

"FREEDOM of the press" is generally interpreted as freedom for the wealthy to put out all the propaganda their money can command, and freedom for the poor to read this propaganda.

Of course, the poor are also free to buy million-dollar papers in order to give their point of view an equal circulation. All they need is the necessary millions of dollars.

Lacking these millions, the poor and their organizations are usually compelled to confine themselves to leaflets or pamphlets, or at best small weekly papers.

When it comes to circulating their free press, the poor have equal freedom with the rich to engage the services of the big commercial distributors.

All they need is sufficient money to break into the charmed circle of clients of the distribution monopoly, to get their papers on all the news-stands and street-corners-or else a few more millions to set up an independent distribution system of their own.

If they lack these millions of dollars, as sometimes happens with the poor, they are then free to get out on the streets themselves and dodge the cops while they pass out their little papers and leaflets.

So freedom and equality of opportunity prevail. The million-dollar publisher has equal freedom with the poorest union organizer to go out himself in the cold dawn and violate anti-litter ordinances and the like before the factory gates.

Or alternatively, the organizer is as free as the big-shot publisher to clothe himself in the fullest respectability and legality by purchasing a million-dollar publication and a million-dollar distribution system.

The Press of the Poor Has Its Rights Too

The United States Supreme Court, in its wisdom, has recently taken note of this freedom of the press for which our constitution calls.

It found that a humble minister of Jehovah's Witnesses at Griffin, Ga., desired her share of this freedom but lacked the wherewithal to partake of it in the million-dollar style.

So she went out herself and began distributing some pamphlets—only to find herself confronting a 50-day jail sentence for violating a city ordinance against the distribution of literature without written permission from the city manager.

The Supreme Court declared that the ordinance is unconstitutional because it "strikes at the very foundation of freedom of the press by subjecting it to censorship and license."

The Court asserted that "the liberty of the press is not confined to newspapers and periodicals. It necessarily embraces pamphlets and leaflets.

"These indeed have been historic weapons in the defense of liberty, as the pamphlets of Thomas Paine and others in our own history abundantly attest."

In other words, the Supreme Court rules that freedom of the press applies to the poor man's press as well as to the press of the rich—and that is distinct progress.

Good News For Union Organizers

This Supreme Court decision will be welcome news to union organizers throughout the land.

They cannot reach the workers with their message of freedom through organization, by placing it in pay envelopes or in the editorial columns of the daily press. For the most part, they are dependent on distributing leaflets at the factory gates.

And in the exercise of this poor man's freedom of the press, union organizers have been harried and driven and pushed about and jailed, on every kind of pretext and under every sort of ordinance that the minds of petty dictators can devise.

A Mayor Hague has openly refused to permit freedom of the press for any but millionaires or their stooges. He has brazenly set his cops upon union organizers who exercise their constitutional right to distribute leaflets and other union literature.

Now his dictatorship over Jersey City must challenge the Supreme Court itself, if he persists in interfering with labor's little share of freedom of the press.

The same goes for Henry Ford and the Dearborn police, who have arrested union men by scores for seeking to supply to Ford employes reading matter which does not meet with their bosses' approval.

The widow's mite is said to be as precious as the rich man's gift of gold. And by the same token, labor's freedom to distribute its leaflet press is at least as precious to it, as is his million-dollar press freedom to the millionaire.

Loose-Wiles Signs Pact With CIO

Kansas City, Mo.—Sole bargaining rights for 534 workers was won by the United Bakery and Confectionery Workers Local 184 in a contract signed with the Loose-Wiles Biscuit co. here.

The agreement followed a National Labor Relations Board poll in which the union polled 347 votes, to 187 votes for the opposition.

Under the pact the union gained seniority rights, time and a third overtime pay, an the establishment of grievance machinery. The eight-hour day, 40-hour week and previous pay scales were retained.

STFU Passes Anti-War Resolution

Memphis, Tenn—Copies of a strong anti-war resolution passed at the recent convention of the Southern Tenant Farmers Union, part of the CIO Cannery and Agricultural Workers, were sent this week to all members of the U. S. Senate by the Union's secretary, H. L. Mitchell.

The resolution urges that the one and a quarter billion dollars asked for armament this session be used to rehabilitate landless tenant farmers rather than for its present wholly destructive purpose.

The resolution further calls for the setting up of a National Tenancy Authority to deal specifically with problems of farm tenancy in the cotton areas, now suffering from the blight of the sharecropping and tenant farm system.

Machines are displacing men in the coal mines, this chart prepared for the United Mine Workers by Walter Polakov, prominent consulting economist, indicates. The chart, made for a study of the problem, reveals that for each 150 men needed to load 1000 tons of anthracite coal, 10 are displaced by a conveyor and 90 by a mobile loader. Tests in the Indiana-Illinois bituminous field showed that a mobile loader cut employment in the mines by over 60%, while a stripping operation cut down the number at work from 110 to 10.

Colorado Unions Plan CIO Council

DENVER, Col.—Colorado CIO unions will meet here April 7 and 8 to form a state Industrial Union Council and map plans for further organization of the state's non-union workers.

The action followed the splitting of the state federation of labor at orders of Pres. William Green and the executive council of the AFL.

The matter, brewing for months because of the resistance of Colorado unionists to Green's splitting tactics, came to a head when Meyer Lewis, Green's emissary, appeared in Denver and announced that he was "temporary president" of the federation.

He succeeded Frank Hefferly, district head of the United Mine Workers, CIO, who had led the battle against splitting the state's labor movement. The state federation, under his leadership, had continually refused to oust the CIO affiliated unions, and had boycotted the 1937 convention of the AFL, held at Denver.

CIO Strong

The CIO is particularly strong in the state's coal mining and metal mining industries. In addition there are locals of the United Packinghouse Workers and of the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers, which in recent months has been playing an important part in the Colorado beet sugar industry.

The CIO Industrial Union Council, it is expected, will have a membership far higher than that of the AFL in the state.

Hosiery Union Consults Governors

Philadelphia.—The governors of 14 southern, mid-west and eastern states have been asked to participate in planning the organization policy of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers in their respective states.

The first of the conferences was held between Governor Harry W. Nice, of Maryland and Isadore Katz, general counsel for the federation and personal representative of Emil Rieve, president of the federation and acting chairman of the Textile Workers Organization Committee.

In the immediate future, Rieve will meet with Governors Holt, of West Virginia; Clyde R. Hoey, of North Carolina and Fred P. Cone, of Florida. Other meetings await replies to Reive's requests for interviews from the Governors of Massachusetts, Delaware, Virginia, Illinois, South Carolina, Kentucky, Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessee and Georgia.

The conferences are designed to permit an exchange of views and possible arrival at definite organization plans and methods to be submitted for approval to the annual convention opening in Charlotte, N. C., May 2.

It is the union's first convention ever to be held in the South and will be the opening step in the intensification of the federation's organization activity in that area. The present Southern staff of the federation will be expanded from 15 to 50 organizers with accompanying increase in resources to be devoted to bringing working conditions there to Northern levels. The union asserts 90 per cent. of the hosiery industry in the North is organized and operating under union conditions.

100% Sweet

Sink your sweet tooth in a 100 per cent CIO candy bar!

All employes of the Ziegler Candy Co. are members of the United Candy Workers (CIO). The company makes the Ziegler Giant Bar, Clipper Mints, Half and Half, Cherry Pie, Ranger Bar, and Betty Jane box candies. Wrappings are union-made.

Locals are urged to bring this to the attention of business meetings, to seek to have Ziegler candies installed in shop vending machines and dispensed by shop concessionaries.

Discuss Viscose Pact

New York—Demands to be submitted to the American Viscose Corporation a ter ratification, were drawn up at a four-day conference in New York attended by 35 TWOC delegates representing 20,000 employes. The agreement signed previously between the Textile Workers Organizing Committee and the Viscose Corp., expires May 1.

Among the points proposed for ratification by the delegates were the setting up of a wage scale committee representing all mills in the Viscose chain, suggestions for improving health and safety regulations, wage adjustments, a closed shop, check-off and improved machinery for adjusting disputes.

The Viscose delegates also advocated support of the wage-hour bill, program for adequate legislation covering industrial diseases in the rayon industry for submission to the legislatures of rayon-producing states, and called for full cooperation with TWOC for the entire unionization of the rayon industry.

Local Swings to TWOC

Lawrence, Mass.—Another independent union swung to the ranks of the CIO here when the Independent Rayon Workers Union voted overwhelmingly to join the Textile Workers Organizing Committee.

Joseph Salerno, regional director of the TWOC, said that a committee representing the new TWOC local will shortly ask the management of the Pacific Mills to negotiate a union contract.

Second Largest

The action of the rayon workers brought about the establishment of a TWOC local in the second largest textile company in Lawrence. Last September the TWOC won a labor board election in the Wood and Ayer mills of the American Woolen Company.

TWOC officials hailed the affiliation of the rayon workers local as "the most striking victory of the TWOC in New England" since the elections last fall.

Employes of the Pacific Mills' plants in North and South Carolina recently voted to join the CIO union.

New York—Formal signing of the contract between the General Electric Co. and the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, CIO, took place this week.

Fur Union Asks Million Dollars Lost in Lockout

New York.—Back pay totaling more than $1,000,000 is due the 3,500 fur workers locked out of New York shops by the Associated Fur Coat and Trimming Manufacturers, Inc., the Joint Council of the Fur Workers International Union charged in a complaint filed with the New York Labor Board.

The manufacturer's association was accused of discriminating against union members by means of the lock-out, which the union charged was called by the employers' group solely "for the purpose of interfering, restraining and coercing the fur workers" in violation of the State Labor Act.

The Furriers' Joint Council demanded in its charges that the Labor Board compel the Associated and its individual members who locked out workers, to "cease and desist from continuing the lockout and all other forms of coercion," It also demanded that the employers be compelled to pay back pay to the locked-out workers in full from February 11, 1938 when the lockout began, to the present time.

The $1,000,000 demanded by the union is for the first seven weeks of the lockout, Louis Boudin, attorney for the Fur union said.

Sioux City, Ia. — Harold N. Sturgeon, a member of the American Newspaper Guild, CIO, led the field in the primary elections for Commissioner of Public Safety.

Fight Anti-Labor Order

St. Louis—An order barring WPA workers from wearing union buttons while on the job brought sharp criticism from the St. Louis Industrial Union Council of the CIO this week.

A resolution passed by the body called the action "arbitrary" and "contrary to the spirit and letter of the federal government."

A number of workers have been suspended from their jobs because of violations of the ruling, the resolution declared.

New York (FP)—Most popular workers' education courses are current events, public speaking, principles of unionisms, English and labor drama, according to the WPA workers' education project.

The Company Union Hides Its Face

By C. W. FOWLER

The bosses are trying to fix up new false-faces for their stooge unions. They lump them together and call them "independent federations" now. That's supposed to give them an air of standing on their own feet, without direct control by the company in which they operate.

Two different groups of these so-called federations have been started within the last two or three weeks. One calls itself "The National Federated Independent Union," which seems to have about everything in its title, and the other describes itself more simply as the "National Federation of Labor."

Opposed to Everything

The National Federated Independent Union is made up of about 38 miscellaneous company unions, headed by one Frederick C. Galloway. Galloway stated its aim at a recent "convention" as unyielding opposition to the CIO, the AFL and the National Labor Relations Board, all of which were classified as "outside organizations."

The anti-union nature of this outfit is indicated by its chief units, which come from Remington Rand, notorious for company union strike breaking activities in the past, and Hershey Chocolate, where strikers were driven out with clubs and guns in the hands of "loyal workers."

The National Federation is sponsored by the Society of Tool and Die Makers of Detroit, a group set up originally to keep the auto industry safe for the open shop.

An Outlaw Movement

Everybody knows about company unions. The National Labor Relations Act specifically outlaws them. Progressives everywhere condemn them — as well as the workers who have to suffer from them. The labor movement has fought against them all throughout its history. Hence the need for new names to describe a very smelly institution.

It is doubtful if workers or progressives anywhere will be fooled by the new false whiskers. A recent analysis prepared by a leading economist shows the true nature of these boss-styled 'independents."

Almost all of them, according to the analysis, were started after the Labor Relations Act was passed showing a desire to get around the Act.

Most of them were formed during a genuine union organization drive in the plant or industry where they originated. Many were adapted from strike breaking groups set up during a period of struggle with the employer.

All of them were firmly opposed to "outside organization"—that is, to real unions organized in national and international affiliates of a parent body.

Accept Incorporation

Two-thirds of those studied were incorporated. This incorporation cry is one of the bosses' favorites. Genuine trade unions recognize it as an attempt to muzzle them. Only a stooge outfit would willingly allow this gag to be placed on it.

Further studies of the internal structure of these "independents" show their true structure as company unions.

Dues, when they are collected from the membership, are usually so low as to be incapable of supporting real union activity. Often local banks will lend to these outfits, without security of any kind, indicating that the boss will make good their notes.

"Agreements" between the company and its Charlie McCarthy unions have a lot of words in them but never say anything about wages or hours or essential conditions of work.

Almost none of them have regular membership meetings. Whatever the outfit does is done by a few officers acting in secret.

Meetings are frequently held on company property, and even on company time.

To Fight the CIO

These are familiar company union methods. The success of CIO in organizing the unorganized and in bringing better wages and working conditions to millions of American workers has prompted anti-union employers to drag them out and polish them up to a new high of perfection.

The National Association of Manufacturers, the National Metal Trades Association, the Chamber of Commerce, the Liberty League and a host of fascist and near-fascist organizations are at the back of these "independent" unions.

The NAM in a recent issue of its "Labor Relations Bulletin" carried an article praising the "independents," and giving the game away by revealing the true source of such movements. The article was headed: "A typical announcement of the management of one company to its workers to acquaint them with the organization of an independent union."

Giving the Game Away

The Berkshire Employees Association, Inc., also gives the game away in a letter from one of its officials to a brother rat trying to start a similar outfit in another company.

Says the letter: "An alliance between your shop and ours would be the opening wedge that would split the hosiery union (the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, affiliated to the CIO). With the combined strength of our members we could line up the other shops, give them support and soon become a real factor in this affair."

That is why the bosses are trying to spread a layer of "independent" molasses over an old and unsavory mess of company union pottage.

LaFollette Group Opens Probe of Anti-Unionism In Cleveland

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

Washington — Leading officials of detective agencies throughout the Nation started off the year 1937 by destroying all records pertaining to their industrial espionage activities, testimony given to the Senate Civil Liberties Committee here indicated.

Opening an inquiry into anti-labor practices in Cleveland, Ohio, the committee heard from Ralph F. Smith, head of the Corporation Service Bureau of that city, how he had thrown out all evidence of the industrial phase of his business in the first weeks of January, 1937.

Smith, who also serves as secretary of the World Association of Detectives, told the committee that he judged most agencies in the business had taken similar action.

Feared Probe

The activities of the LaFollette committee, he admitted, had caused him to ransack his files. Smith, however, claimed that there had been no "concerted" activity by detective agencies and that he purged his records only on his own hunch.

Smith, a trifle nervous in the witness chair, at first testified that he had done "no industrial work—directly." A moment later he told Senator Thomas, presiding at the hearing, that he was not certain what "industrial detective" work meant, and still later admitted that he had destroyed only the records pertaining to his firm's industrial espionage.

Oral Business

Smith was obviously embarrassed when the senator inquired how he could conduct his business on an oral basis, since the Corporation Service Bureau had no written contracts or agreements with its employers. He agreed that it was a generally unsatisfactory method of procedure.

Spectators at the hearing were provided with an insight into the thought processes of the detective business when Smith told of a resolution passed by the last convention of the World Association of Detectives had gone on record against industrial espionage of any sort.

However, the resolution had had less effect in discouraging that phase of detective work than the LaFollette committee probes, Smith confessed.

Associated Industries

The Associated Industries of Cleveland, backed by some of the nation's largest industrial firms, was disclosed as one of the most brazen anti-union outfits in the country, the LaFollette committee discovered.

William Frew Long, general manager of the organization, admitted without a blush that it undertook to furnish guards for struck plants, supplied scabs, and hired stool pigeons.

The records of the Associated Industries, too, it was learned, had been destroyed. Long claimed they were torn up to prevent their getting into the hands of a police committee investigating the so-called "Secret Seven" of the Chamber of Commerce two years ago.

Long, a member of the resolutions committee of the National Association of Manufacturers in 1935, interpreted all workers' demands for higher wages or better working conditions as the "menace" of the closed shop, said his organization did not oppose "justified" strikes.

He was unable to recall any instances of such "justified" walkouts.

Contributors

By far the largest contributor to the Associated Industries, Long testified, was the Fisher Body Co. of Cleveland, which in 1935, 1936 and 1937 had paid in $9000. Addressograph - Multigraph, Aluminum Co. of America, Chase Brass & Copper Co., Cleveland Graphite Bronze Co., Natl. Acme Co., Natl. Screw & Manufacturing Co., Ohio Rubber Co., Thompson Products, Warner & Swasey Co. and the Willard Storage Battery Co.

Among the contributing members who wished to keep their relationship with the Associated Industries, a confidential matter were the Natl. Lamp Works of General Electric, Grasselli Chemical Dept., a branch of the DuPont corporation, White Motor Co., Chandler & Budd Co., Crane Co., and Westinghouse Electric.

Strikebreaking has taken on new styles, Long said, since James Rand invented the Mohawk Valley formula.

"The technique nowadays," he explained, "is the back-to-work movement. That's the thing.

"After all, these strike-breakers do too much damage—to machinery, I mean."

New York.—The International Ladies Garment Workers Union gained 11,000 new members in 1937, according to a report made by President David Dubinsky. The union's membership now stands at 253,646, he said.

Auto Union Renews Chrysler Pact

Detroit — The United Automobile Workers this week renewed their contract with the Chrysler Corp. The renewal was signed two hours before the pact was due to expire.

The agreement answered management statements in the Detroit press assailing UAW proposals for a new contract, on which negotiations have been proceeding for the last few weeks.

"Chrysler is using the recession as a club to fight any contract modifications asked by the UAW negotiators," R. J. Thomas, union official, had charged.

The Chrysler representatives had attempted to weaken the bargaining position of the union by recalling stoppages and slowdowns some months ago.

The Thomas Statement declared:

"We will not take the discredit for the alleged stoppages and slow-downs. On many occasions the minor supervisory force has pushed the buttons that stopped production when no action of the union was responsible. Many other stoppages were the direct result of ignorance of the contract or flat refusal to abide by it on the part of minor supervision.

Violated Pact

"As to slow-downs—the management has on many occasions labeled a situation a slow-down when the corporation officials tried to speed up the line in direct violation of the agreement and found that the men objected.

"The corporation declared 52 cases of men who have been beaten, coerced, or intimidated are on record. But the corporation didn't say who had done the beating and coercing. We can show that in the last year there were many times—perhaps more than 52 — when union members were beaten, coerced, or threatened by the Corporation's minor supervision.

"As to the charge that committeemen have spent too much time away from work: from my own experience with the old employes' representation plan in effect prior to the UAW the committeemen then

"I would like to suggest the corporation is as much on trial as the union in the present relationship. At the moment it is not fulfilling its part and is acting in a manner which suggests it has very little use for the laws of the United States on collective bargaining."

Worried

Ralph Smith, head of the Cor- Cleveland, wrinkled his brow as he answered questions at a hearing of the LaFollette Civil Liberties Committee. He testified that he had destroyed all records on industrial espionage last year in order to thwart the committee's probe.

Discharges Fought By NMU

New York — Charging discrimination against the National Maritime Union, CIO, pickets appeared this week in front of the offices of the Federal Maritime Commission here.

Captain Grenville Conway, local director of the commission was accused of having hired AFL seamen to take the places of NMU members who had been discharged for union activity.

Joseph Curran, general organizer of the NMU, declared he had asked that the "commission maintain a neutral attitude toward the NMU, and not act as an ally of our rival union," but that he had received no satisfactory reply.

41 Reinstated

Indianapolis, Ind. — Forty-one members of the United Packing House Workers here will be reinstated in their jobs with the Kingan & Co., and an election will be held within 30 days to determine if the union shall be exclusive bargaining agency for the workers.

IWA Wins

Milwaukee—Employees of the Roddis Lumber and Veneer Co. chose the CIO International Woodworkers of America in a National Labor Relations Board vote here, casting 72 votes for the IWA and only 24 for the AFL union.

Apollo, Pa. — The SWOC has filed charges of unfair labor practices against the CIO here.

Bay State League Opens Campaign

Boston — Delegates representing 162,569 members of CIO, A. F. of L. an independent unions organized Labor's Non-Partisan League of Massachusetts in a convention here on Sunday, March 27, which for attendance and enthusiasm outdid any other labor gathering in this State in recent years.

Adolf A. Berle, Jr., assistant secretary of state to Gordell Hull, as main speaker said, "Your action today brings New England labor into existence as a self-governing political force. I salute you and congratulate you . . . Labor has been, until recently, merely an organized pressure group in politics. Today you come of age.

"You enter public life in your own way, your own name, and your own right. The effect you will have on public life in this, my native New England, is incalculable."

It was believed to be the first time that a high official of the State Department has appeared at an exclusively labor gathering.

Sweezy Is Chairman

The convention, guided by Eli L. Oliver, executive vice-president of the national League, elected Dr. Alan R. Sweezy, Harvard instructor and labor lecturer as chairman; Joseph A. Salerno, acting TWOC director for New England, as first vice-chairman; Walter Risley, president of the Brockton Brotherhood of Shoe and Allied Craftsmen as second vice-president; Valery Burati, American Newspaper Guild as secretary, and Philip Kramer, international vice-president of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, as treasurer.

It condemned the anti-labor administration of Gov. Charles F. Hurley of Massachusetts; held him responsible for the fiasco of the Unemployment Compensation Commission and condemned the Republican Party opposition to the principle of the Social Security Act.

Fight Tories

The convention also passed a resolution to "take serious steps to help defeat those Congressmen who have opposed the Roosevelt New Deal program." It began the establishment of a political alliance with the farmers through a mutual attack upon the problem of milk.

Arthur H. Packard, president of the Vermont Farm Bureau, representing Gov. George D. Aiken of Vermont, attacked the milk monopolies.

Congressman Jerry O'Connell of Montana predicted that some day a man from the ranks of labor would sit in the White House. Congressman Robert G. Allen of Pennsylvania said that "unionization is absolutely essential to the preservation of American democracy" and with facts that punched home, proved that the security of all is dependent upon the security of labor. Attorney George E. Roewer, of Boston, leader of a potential Progressive Club for Massachusetts, pledged co-operation with the League.

Describes League

Mr. Oliver said that 10 votes could have passed the Wages and Hours bill and that 10 votes to defeat it were contributed by Massachusetts congressmen. When he read the names of Massachusetts congressmen who opposed the bill, there were loud booes and hisses.

The League, he said, has fought against the forces of racketeering and corruption in the United States.

"We are forming a political organization,' 'he said, speaking of the League's program throughout the Nation, "that can cope with any other political organization in the country."

A platform was adopted with the following planks: Large scale WPA, real federal public works program, revision of old age insurance law, extension of relief, amendment of state unemployment compensation law, immediate payment of old age insurance benefits, protection of labor's rights and civil liberties, ratification of child labor amendment, wages and hours bill, strengthen existing state minimum wage and maximum hour laws, defeat of the sales tax, establishment of consumer co-operative clubs to buy milk directly from farmers' producer co-operatives, enactment of the President's reorganization bill, preservation of peace, opposition to biennial sessions in Massachusets, a state youth act and opposition to the proposed censorship law.

A State committee of 52 was elected, which at its first meeting will elect 15 to sit with five officers as the State Executive Board. The organization of local branches has already begun throughout the State.

Gotham Unions Fight Spies

New York—Determined to rid the New York labor movement of industrial spies, local unions and progressive organizations are supporting the anti-stoolpigeon conference called by the Book and Magazine Guild Local 18 of the United Office and Professional Workers, CIO.

Nineteen unions, both CIO and AFL, and 31 prominent individuals have signed the call to the conference, to be held this weekend.

Counter-espionage tactics and anti-spy legislation are to be discussed.

"There is hardly a local in New York which has not had its quota of spies," the call to the conference declares.

"Some of these spies have risen to high places in the unions.

"The prevalence of industrial espionage has become a matter which trade unions can no longer neglect. It is up to the unions themselves to act to eradicate the espionage menace. Labor must take measures to protect itself. And now is the time to take full advantage of the results of the Sen. La Follette investigation."

Spies in Philadelphia

Philadelphia, Pa..—Charges of espionage on the part of the Philadelphia Gas Works Co, were aired in the State Labor Relations Board hearing this week during testimony showing the firm to be fostering a company union. Charges were brought by Local 12023 of District 50 of United Mine Workers.

George Knott, local president, testified that an executive to whom he complained about a supervisor admitted that the man was inefficient, but said:

"He was appointed to report on infractions of rules by employes. That's his job, and he's doing it."

Urged To Quit Union

James H. Summers, vice-president of the local, testified that a foreman urged him to quit the union and "get on the right side of the fence," and pointed to other workers who he said had received pay increases when they left the CIO.

Organization for the company union was permitted on company property and company time, according to further testimony, though one worker was fired for talking CIO union to a fellow worker during working hours.

Quick Work

BATON ROUGE, La.—The Oil Workers Intl. Union, CIO, signed up a majority of the workers at the Solvay Process Co., here, and called a meeting before employers were able to offer opposition.

"We intend to organize with a minimum of conflict, but we are going to unionize," declared A. R. Kinstley, union representative.

Bankers With Pitchforks

Office Union to Meet

New York.—Plans for the first annual convention of the United Office and Professional Workers, CIO, are rapidly maturing. The meeting will be held in Washington, May 18-22, with more than 250 delegates expected.

The UOPWA, founded and affiliated to the CIO less than one year ago, has grown from its original sponsoring membership of 8,000 to 45,000, with a reported increase of close to 1,000 members per week Chief. strength today is in insurance, banking, publishing, social service, and commercial art.

Contracts Won

The drive to enroll insurance workers, present spearhead of the organizing work of the union, has already brought results in a number of contracts with insurance companies and progress towards contracts with the larger firms. The recent decision of the New York State Labor Relations Board taking jurisdiction over insurance firms will result in a union victory in Metropolitan Life, largest company in the field, union spokesmen said.

Several contracts exist with publishing houses, and union officials are considering an exhibit of books and magazines for the convention that will be union made in every process. One firm under contract offers books of which even the authors carry union cards.

Lewis Asked to Speak

John L. Lewis, CIO chairman, and Len De Caux, CIO publicity director, have been invited to address the convention, as have Senators Robert F. Wagner of New York and Lewis Schwellenbach of aWshington. Union presidents invited to speak include Jacob Baker of the United Federal Workers, Heywood Broun of the American Newspaper Guild and Abram Flaxer of the State, County and Municipal Workers, all affiliates of the CIO.

Aims of the UOPWA

The convention call stated the aims and purposes of the UOPWA in the folowing words:

"The UOPWA is a foremost Spokesman of both organized and unorganized white collar employes of this country.

"It must become the permanent home of the millions of white collar workers who are daily demonstrating their growing determination to join together for their common achievement."

Renominated

Gov. Elmer A. Benson of Minnesota, Farmer-Laborite, who has been renominated by the state party on a ticket "to carry forward the people's demands for democracy ,social justice, economic security and peace."

Success of the Farmer-Labor party in Minnesota is an indication of the manner in which city workers and the people of the rural districts can co-operate to keep in power an administration which will care for their mutual interests.

Jersey Unions Tell Need of Wage Bill

Washington—Close to a quarter of a million New Jersey workers are receiving less than $15 a week, a group of the State's labor leaders told members of the Jersey Congressional delegation here.

The meeting, the third in a series arranged by Labor's Non-Partisan League to bring union representatives and Congressional representatives together for a discussion of problems, was concerned with the necessity of passing the wage-hour bill.

The union group consisted of Irving Abramson of the TWOC; Harry Wendrich of the printing pressmen; Sadie Reich, of the garment workers, and others.

New Jersey has always been known as a runaway employers' state, members of the delegation pointed out, but nevertheless in recent years employers in large numbers have moved to the south to take advantage of even lower wage rates. The wage-hour bill, they said, would put a stop to this practice.

Big Business, Big Farmers Support New War on West Coast Unions

San Francisco—When farmers fight workers, the controlled press and that section of the community which wants to see both labor and agriculture exploited, makes no secret of its rejoicing.

In California, and in seven other West Coast states, the Associated Farmers have waged an unceasing, violent war on unionism.

Their attack has been hailed by Tories as "proof" that the interests of farmers and workers are divergent, rather than identical.

But the Labor Herald, CIO paper in this city, has brought to the public's attention the fact that the Associated Farmers was organized by the same group of industrialists bankers who have fought union labor in San Francisco for decades.

Front For Big Business

The Associated Farmers was set up with funds provided by the Industrial Association of Assn. Francisco, the Shipowners Assn., the Pacific Gas & Electric Co. and similar groups. The Santa Fe and Southern Pacific railroads, the Southern California Edison Co. gave support, in addition to the huge farm corporations of the state.

At first, the Associated Farmers pretended that it was not opposed to "legitimate" unions in agriculture.

All such pretense has been dropped.

Philip Bancroft, vice-president of the Associated Farmers, declared in a recent speech:

"We would regard the unionization of farm labor, under existing conditions, as absolutely ruinous to us as well as to the laborers themselves."

More recently the farm bosses' organization moved into a working accord with the Committee of 43, representing San Francisco big business.

CIO Proposes Unity

That tie-up prompted the San Francisco District Industrial Union Council to propose united action with the San Francisco AFL council to protect unionism in the Golden Gate City.

"Behind a smokescreen of misinformation and prejudice, the Associated Farmers intend to form a combination with the city industrialists to make San Francisco an open shop town by objecting to union teamsters hauling products to market," the CIO letter said.

"By objecting to a declaration of support from one union to another, these so-called farmers clearly outlined that their intentions are to destroy the unions."

To aid in the preparation of the anti-labor propaganda, paid personnel of the state chamber of commerce, the California Farm Bureau Federation and the State Department of Agriculture were loaned to the Associated Farmers.

Statements by leaders of this bank-controlled outfit attacked not only the waterfront workers, but the teamsters, the butchers and the milk drivers unions.

"Declaration of War"

The CIO letter to the AFL council warned that "this declaration of war against organized labor should be the rallying standard for all unions, regardless of affiliation or declaration of policy, to unite to defeat this latest attack.

"All organized labor should fully realize the seriousness of the situation. If differences of opinion are not submerged for the common interest of all, this anti-union drive of the Associated Farmers and their industrial-banker allies will be successful."

Name Farm-Labor Committee

Washington.—Labor's Non-Partisan League this week named two union presidents to co-operate with the Farmers' Union to further the growth of consumer co-operatives.

President Jacob Baker of the United Federal Workers, an expert on co-op affairs, and President Homer Martin of the United Automobile Workers, were selected by Vice-President Eli Oliver of the League.

"This action by the League is in accord with the recent program of joint activities agreed on by the League and the Farmers Union," Oliver said.

Wagner Bill Passage Urged

Washington—Wide CIO support for the Wagner bill (S 3390) requiring companies supplying goods to the U. S. government to comply with all the provisions of the National Labor Relations Act was asked in a circular letter sent out this week over the signature of Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel.

The letter points out the importance to labor of the act, demonstrating the benefits to collective bargaining that would result, and urges that CIO affiliates wire to their Senators and Congressmen in support of the bill immediately.

Get Big Profits

Pressman's letter points out that many notoriously anti-union companies now deriving huge profits from government contracts would be forced to comply with the Labor Act which requires employers to bargain collectively with their workers.

The bill would also eliminate present interminable delays in securing enforcement of Labor Board decisions, Pressman stated.

Protest Attack on UAW Pickets

Detroit.—Leaders of the United Automobile Workers sent protests to Detroit public officials following a police attack on the union's picket line at the Federal Screw plant here.

The workers, members of the UAW's West Side local, had gone out on strike to prevent a 10c an hour wage cut. Leaders of the union pointed out that the company made $200,000 in the last two years, cut down its liabilities and piled up cash and inventory on hand totaling three-quarters of a million dollars.

Six pickets were hurt in the clash when the police, armed with clubs and tear gas, broke through the line of strikers.

Woman Hurt

Walter Reuther, president of the local, wired Governor Murphy that police had injured a housewife during the attack, while President Homer Martin of the UAW charged that the cops had clubbed and beaten "peaceful union men at the bidding of the plant's management."

In a communication sent to Mayor Reading, Martin charged that "a systematic attack is being organized by the police department against pickets and members of the UAW."

Some union men are of the opinion that Federal Screw has been pushed out in front in a test of wage cutting in Detroit, perhaps subsidized by all the auto manufacturers.

The Dawn Patrol

A New Hollywood Feature

By HAROLD COY

Los Angeles (FP)—The Dawn Patrol. Or do you like the Fog Lifters better?

Whatever you call them, they're a peppy bunch of fellows and girls who rise at 6, and two mornings a week bring them message of unionism to an unorganized plant in this onetime open shop stronghold of Los Angeles, now on the way to being a union town.

After the Dawn Patrol descends on a plant and electrifies the atmosphere by passing out handbills about meetings, getting labor board petitions signed and buttonholing prospects to sign union cards, its members have well earned the breakfast of steaming coffee and ham and eggs provided for them by the union which is sponsoring the drive.

But they've had one swell time too, these volunteer rank-and-file organizers for the Los Angeles Industrial Union Council (CIO) and they've learned a lot about organizing methods. Without going through the heartaches of the solo organizer learning his job, because they bolster up one another's morale and learn by seeing and doing. Over the breakfast coffee, they diagnose the early morning's work and discuss what was wrong and right about the way it was done.

Numbers 150

The Dawn Patrol, started by a handful of persons on the suggestion of Pat Comorre, Steel Workers Organizing Committee organizer, has grown to number 150 men and women. Before long it expects 500, and then it will be subdivided. At present they go out every Tuesday and Friday morning.

"The Dawn Patrol has pepped up union meetings 200 per cent. in many cases," P. J. McCarthy of the local CIO office told the writer. It brings more people out, and they take a more active interest in union affairs."

In the weeks since its organization the patrol has pushed unionization at foundries and furniture, packing and other plants and is tackling the Southern California Gas Co.

Unions Growing

There was a time when unions, like rainy weather, were unusual in southern California.

Today between AFL and CIO, there are about 100,000 organized workers in Los Angeles and environs. A Southern California Steel Council represents 10,000 workers.

Rubber and autos hum with union activity, and Donald W. Douglas, aircraft magnate called the Tom Girdler of the west, faces an intensive union drive by the United Auto Workers, despite his coup of several months ago in prosecuting 22 strikers.

The San Pedro Industrial and shipping district is a union stronghold, and oil workers in the Los Angeles basin are a third lined up. Garments are unionized here, as most places. So are building trades and various crafts. Utilities and miscellaneous industries are the target of lively drives.

Los Angeles is becoming a union town—and are the vigilantes and frameup artists nervous!

Oregon Unions Fight Anti-Labor Bill

Portland, Ore.—Labor and progressive forces throughout the state of Oregon are mustering their strength to fight an initiative petition aimed at placing in the state law an act designed to cripple legitimate labor activity.

The bill, openly sponsored by four organizations of big farmers, has received the backing of Oreg n Tories in the war against union organization of industry.

The bill claimed to "protect the employe, the employer and the public," is a conglomeration of outright threats and weasel-worded curbs on union labor.

Restricts Unions

It defines as a bona fide strike only one in which a majority of the employes is concerned in a matter of wages, hours and working conditions, and bars a strike in which two unions are seeking recognition, from the "labor dispute" classification.

The law would prevent strikes of any sort in connection with the handling, transportation or marketing of any agricultural product, would limit the amount of money unions might collect from their members, would ban mass picketing or picketing of concerns "not directly involved as a party in a labor dispute," would prevent secondary boycotts and would hold breaking of the law as a misdemeanor.

Demand Relief For Strikers

TWOC Delegation Urges Vermont Governor Order Benefits

Ludlow, Vt.—A delegation of strikers from the Verd Mont Mills here travelled to the State Capitol at Montpelier to lay the facts of the strike before Gov. George D. Aiken and to demand unemployment benefits from the Unemployment Compensation Commission on grounds that their strike was forced upon them.

Frank J. Manning and Louis J. Guilmet of the staff of the Textile Workers Organizing Committee led the delegation.

In their letter to Gov. Aiken they said: "We made every attempt to peacefully settle the wage question at the Verd Mont Mills, but the management stubbornly refused to arbitrate the question.

"It is our belief that the strikers are fighting for just cause and that they are entitled to sympathetic consideration. We are still ready and willing to settle this question with the management itself through any fair method of arbitration."

Struck March 21

The workers, who seven months ago voted three-to-one in a National Labor Board election to designate the TWOC as their exclusive bargaining agency, went on strike March 21, in protest against a wage reduction. This cut of 12½ per cent. on some operations was augmented by increases in work load which resulted in an actual reduction in wages of 40 per cent.

The fight against wage cuts in Vermont is part of the TWOC's campaign to stop wage reductions in woolens and worsteds at their source and thus prevent their spread to the 150,000 workers in this branch of textiles.

Already the TWOC has forced the withdrawal of wage cuts in seven New Hampshire mills in Newport, Guild, Franklin, Tilton, Penacook and Hillsboro. Coincident with its fight in Ludlow it is working to restore wage cuts in Troy and Lebanon, N. H., and in Quechee and Hartford, Vt.

Frisco Strike

San Francisco—Its picket line still solid, Local 50 of the Mine Mill & Smelter Workers Union, CIO, is keeping up its strike against the American Smelting and Refining Co. plants here. The union called its strike in January to win an agreement providing for living wages and improved working conditions.

AFL 'Drive' In Tailspin

Charleston, W. Va. — The long-heralded attempt of the AFL's executive council to smash the CIO in West Virginia sputtered to a damp climax when President William Green, addressing a meeting in Charleston, delivered one of his usual unsatisfactory oratorical efforts.

Prepared to protect its affiliated unions from any AFL craft raids, the executive board of the West Virginia Industrial Union Council announced it would combat any effort by the federation of labor to invade CIO fields.

Green's speech was described by Pres. John B. Easton of the CIO Council as that of a "broken man defending a lost cause."

"Bill Green, in phrasing the issue as the conflict of democracy, through the AFL, and autocracy, through the CIO, completely ignored the real issue—the issue of craft vs. industrial unionism," Easton said.

"Green was attempting to mislead the people by drawing a red herring across the path. He was ineffective because he believes heart and soul in industrial unionism, but is trying to retain his hold on the AFL by pleasing some of the craft union leaders."

Laundry Workers Want Contract

The Wisconsin CIO office has filed a petition for certification as exclusive bargaining agent on behalf of the South Side CIO Laundry Workers union.

The AFL laundry union, which has never been able to organize the plant, began causing trouble the moment the workers joined the CIO.

Supreme Court Upholds NLRB

Washington—The United States Supreme Court again extended the jurisdiction of the National Labor Relations Board this week, ruling that a California fruit packing company, only 40 per cent of whose product was shipped outside the state, must be governed by the Wagner Act.

The decision, read by Chief Justice Hughes, ruled that the Santa Cruz Fruit Packing Co., of Oakland, Calif., must engage in collective bargaining with employes and prohibit unfair labor practises.

In so doing, the Court upheld a decision by the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals.

31 To Be Rehired

"It would be difficult," Justice Hughes declared, "to find a case in which unfair labor practises had a more direct effect upon interstate and foreign commerce."

As a result of the decision some 31 workers, whom the NLRB had ruled were fired for union activity must be reinstated with back pay.

The court made two other rulings of interest to labor. In one it ruled that a local ordinance requiring the licensing of persons distributing circulars or advertisments was an infringement of the freedom of the press.

In the other, it over-ruled a decision by the District of Columbia Circuit Court of Appeals, which had prevented the National Negro Alliance from picketing a chain store outfit. The Court ruled that disputes arising from "discrimination in terms and conditions of employment based on differences of race or color" came within the scope of the Norris-LaGuardia act limiting the use of injunctions in labor disputes.

The court's ruling on the leaflet distribution case will have a marked effect in aiding union organization, it is believed.

The decision said:

"The liberty of the press is not confined to newspapers and periodicals. It necessarily embraces pamphlets and leaflets. There indeed have been historic weapons in the defense of liberty, as the pamphlets of Thomas Paine and others in our history abundantly attest.

"The press in its historic connotation comprehends every sort of publication which affords a vehicle of information and opinion. What we have had recent occasion to say with respect to the vital importance of protecting this essential liberty from every sort of infringement need not be repeated."

District 50 Wins NLRB Poll

Saint Louis, Mo.—Chalk up another victory for a District 50 union! On March 23 the employes of the Barton Dye and Shine Company voted in a Labor Board election and designated the district as its collective bargaining agency. Preliminary negotiations for a contract began March 25.

The Barton workers have applied for their charter and before the next issue of the CIO News they will have established a functioning local union.

This election is the first that the attorney for the company, Mr. Spoehrer, has lost. With the Barton Dye and Shine workers properly affiliated, it is full steam ahead for the Monsanto and United Drug workers.

CIO Lumber Workers Strike in Laona

Laona:—This little lumber town of northern Wisconsin is today a front line trench in the struggle of lumber workers for genuine unionism.

Striking against the Connor Land and Lumber Co. and the AFL union which is regarded as its mouthpiece, more than 200 members of the CIO International Woodworkers of America are fighting for their jobs.

The strike was called when a closed shop agreement which the company handed to the AFL on a silver platter was used to deprive CIO men of work and livelihood.

The Connor Land and Lumber Co. IS Laona. "King" William Connor rules there like a feudal lord. If you can't get a job in the plant, you can't get a job in Laona. In that case, you can either give up and crawl away, licked—or you can fight. The CIO union has chosen to fight.

Company Interfered

Here's what happened:

One election held at the plant was voided by the Wisconsin Labor Relations Board on the grounds that the company had improperly interfered with the free choice of the men.

An interesting feature of the board's findings was that Henry Puechner, town chairman of Laona and a former Connor employe, had tried to establish either a company union or an AFL union at the company.

Presto! Shortly after the election an AFL union appeared. The CIO union consented to a second election, losing by four votes and immediately filing a protest with the NLRB that terms for the consent election had been violated. The protest is now before the board in Washington.

Meanwhile, the AFL union was presented by the company with a closed shop agreement and immediately began a campaign to force out all CIO men. AFL leaders refused to accept militant CIO members and raised the initiation fee to $10 thereby depriving many others of the union membership which meant the job.

Fight May Bill

DETROIT, Mich—Local 12098 has gone on record as unanimously opposed to the May bill for industrial mobilization, in a resolution passed and sent to Senator Arthur Vandenburg of Michigan.

The May bill, previously known as the Sheppard-Hill bill, provides for fascist control of labor unions in the event of war, gags the press, threatens severe punishment to labor organizers, and sets up a dictatorship over wages, prices, and supplies of materials in industry.

The local's action is in line with sharp protests voiced by other CIO affiliates and by John Brophy, national director of the CIO.

NLRB ORDERS INLAND STEEL SIGN CIO PACT

Highlights of Inland Steel Decision

"The main objective of organized labor for long has been the collective agreement and the history of organization and collective bargaining may be written in terms of the constant striving for union recognition through agreement."

* * * *

"The Act does require the employer to accept the procedure of collective bargaining, that is, to negotiate with the honest intent to reach a collective agreement."

* * * *

"Implicit in all its reasons for not signing an agreement is an undercurrent of fear that the SWOC would thereby gain in prestige, and that the signed agreement would be used as an organizational aid."

* * * *

"The respondent can advance no reasons for refusing to conform to such practise except those solely anti-union in character."

Decision Upholds SWOC Charges; Establishes New Precedent

For Full Details, See Page Three

WASHINGTON.—Little Steel was told by the Natl. Labor Relations Board this week to get off its high horse.

In a precedent-making decision, the NLRB ordered the Inland Steel Co. to dissolve its "independent" union, to bargain collectively with the Steel Workers Organizing Committee and to sign an agreement with the SWOC.

A similar decision in the Republic Steel case is expected before long.

The ruling, signed by all three members of the board, spells doom for Little Steel's war on organized labor.

The board upheld every charge made by the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

Its ruling that the company must enter into a written agreement with the union was based on the fact that the "employes, in insisting on a written agreement, are merely asking what any prudent business man would expect as a matter of course from those with whom he deals."

Refusal to sign a contract, once an agreement has been reached, constitutes a refusal to go through all the steps of collective bargaining, as required by the Wagner Act, the board said.

The company is given 10 days in which to abide by the NLRB ruling. If it fails to do so, the board will seek action in the federal courts.

Cops Attack Pickets

Some 200 Detroit policemen attacked members of the United Automobile Workers at the Federal Screw Works during a strike against wage cuts. The police were escorting scabs when the fight started, and several pickets were injured. Photo shows Percy Key being carried off by an an observer and fellow pickets after he had been almost beaten to death by cops, though he has raised his hands in a token of surrender.

Protest Detroit Violence

BULLETIN

DETROIT—The Federal Screw strike ended with an agreement providing that the company would not cut wages for at least 60 days. The U. A. W. was named sole bargaining agency, and no other agency will be permitted.

DETROIT. — Defying murderous attacks by Detroit police, members of the United Automobile Workers, CIO, kept up their strike against the Federal Screw Works, determined to prevent drastic wage cuts.

While protests continued to pour into the city's police headquarters against the cops' attacks on peaceful pickets—in which more than a score were hurt, one perhaps fatally—union picket lines kept up their vigil at the plant.

Locals of the UAW were notified by Pres. Homer Martin that their members would not be expected to handle Federal Screw products while the strike continues. The company sells its products to General Motors and other major auto producers.

Man Bites Dog

Detroit. — In the "Detroit Times appeared a picture which should strike terror to the heart of every liberty-loving American citizen," Pres. Homer Martin of the United Automobile Workers declared.

It showed "a lone woman with terror written on her face being clubbed by two policemen; unarmed, she is falling to the pavement after having been slugged.

"And strangely enough, the picture is titled, 'A Woman Fighting the Police.'"

ILWU Convention Opens on West Coast

ABERDEEN, Wash. — Coming from points as far away as the Hawaiian Islands, San Diego, California, and Alaska, delegates from the numerous Pacific coast locals of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, gathered in Aberdeen, Washington, to attend the ILWU west coast district convention which opened April 4.

It is the first convention to be held since the ILWU voted to affiliate with the CIO in August 1937.

Mayor Krumholz of Aberdeen, a former longshoreman, himself, welcomed the delegates. Harry Bridges, ILWU district president and west coast CIO director, predicted in his opening speech that 90 per cent of the east coast longshoremen would vote to join the CIO through affiliation with the ILWU before the end of September.

At an early session of the convention, the delegates voted to send a telegram to the Senate Commerce Committee protesting against the attempts being made to set up a federal mediation board in the maritime industry, and demanding that this clause be deleted from the proposed amendment to the Merchant Marine Act.

A telegram of greetings from Tom Mooney read to the convention was greeted with prolonged cheers by the longshoremen.

"Vocational Education"

WASHINGTON.— Payments made by the Cleveland Associated Industries for anti-union detective work were entered on the books as payments for "vocational education," the Senate Civil Liberties Committee learned last week.

The money was paid to the Corporation Service Bureau, whose head, Ralph F. Smith, was shown to work closely with CAI.

Smith testified that he had been paid by Associated Industries for at least five stool pigeon jobs in the Hotel Statler, Carter and Cleveland, as well as for work in the Addressograph - Multigraph and Chase Brass & Copper Co. plants.

Other revelations made by the LaFollette committee on page six.

He Who Laughs Last

Baton Rouge, La.—In this capitol of Louisiana, where guards watch fearfully over the tomb of Huey Long, a company union representative was pitifully trapped in his attempt to disrupt the first meeting of the CIO's drive to organize workers of Standard Oil and Solvay chemical plants.

Demanding that he be allowed to speak, H. F. Dove, representative of the company union, hurled threats at the workers present, warning them against joining the CIO. He displayed a petition for a company union bearing the signatures of 100 workers and invited others to sign it on the spot.

Whereupon Organizer A. R. Kinstley asked if turn about was not fair play, and could some of those men take their names off the company union petition if they liked.

Dove left with only a handful of signatures remaining on the petition.

URW Wins Wage Boost

Oakland, Calif. — Wage increases of three cents an hour were won in a new agreement signed by Local 78 of the United Rubber Workers, CIO, and the American Rubber Co. here.

The pact, affecting 100 men, provides that any new man on the job must join the union inside of 30 days, but that new men are to be hired only after the unemployed workers on the union rolls are fully employed.

Ask Wage Raise

DETROIT, Mich.—A general 10 per cent, wage increase, revision of seniority clauses and a closed shop are being asked by the United Automobile Workers in negotiations with the Briggs Corporation for renewal of the contract which expires April 17.

Jersey Joins the Union

By McALISTER COLEMAN

Hold your hats, boys and girls; here's news.

Jersey City has come back to the United States. Not that Jersey City is any great bargain. But as you know, it has taken the CIO a long, long time to persuade the cops, district attorneys and other official whatnots of Mayor Frank Hague's Open Shop Heaven that there is a document around called the Constitution.

When the CIO first arrived in Jersey City nobody around those parts had apparently heard about this document. They don't go in for reading and, they take the law from "I-am-the-law" Hague, so the idea of free speech and free assemblage was not prevalent in J. C.

If you said "CIO", even in a whisper, a big cop jumped you and threw you into Hoboken. If you gave out a leaflet asking workers to join an organization that would give them half a break, a riot squad car whooped up and they heaved you into Hague's bastille.

"Orders From the Hall"

"We don't know nothin' about the Constitution," as a cop told your reporter a month ago, "We are taking our orders from the Hall."

He meant the City Hall, where Mr. Big used to swell around hollering at his pay-roll slaves and taking dictation from the railroads, the utilities and the sweat-shop maggots.

Then, as you will recall, Mr. B., after making a loud speech about how John Brophy and Bill Carney were boy-friends of Joe Stalin, broke down and went to Florida for his health. His health must have been pretty bad, because he has been down there a long time.

Carney

William J. Carney, CIO regional director in New Jersey, who leads the organizing drive in Jersey City.

In the immortal words of Irving Cobb we hope whatever ails Hague is nothing trivial.

Anyhow while the Big was knocking little white pills around the Miami cow-pastures, and while the constabulary were chucking the boys into the calaboose, a case arrived in Washington, D. C., having to do with the distribution of circulars on the streets of American cities. It had somehow got up to the Supreme Court.

It was quite a shock to the Justices to find that in order to express yourself in regard to matters of public concern you had to get a permit from a policeman. This looked a lot like the land of Der Fuehrer and the home of the slave to the Court which promptly said that anybody had a right to distribute leaflets and to hell with the local cops. Or words to that effect.

Took Court at Word

A brash young man and his wife, taking the Supreme Court seriously, proceeded to distribute leaflets announcing a meeting. But the cops took the leaflets away and tore them up and tromped on them in the gutter. They didn't know nothin' about the Supreme Court.

Word, however, finally leaked through, way down to Jersey City that there was a Supreme Court that was over even Mr. Big, so what happens?

Corporation Counsel James A. Hamill of Jersey City, one of Frank's top brief-bag toters, announces that, "with Mayor Hague's approval," Jersey City would permit the distribution of circulars on the streets, "if it is done in an orderly manner." Now isn't that generous of Jimmy?

Of course, he sort of modified this magnificant gesture by hitching on a statement from the Exile of Miami to the effect that "My attitude towards the invasion of Jersey City is still unchanged."

It's good to get that in cold print. Any time Bill Carney rides over the bridge from Newark to Jersey City that, my friends, is an "invasion" and Hague expects every sweat-shop owner to do his duty, rally to the barricades and protect the fair chiseling bodies of the bosses from the ravishments of the CIO.

CIO Benefits Jersey

Well, it takes quite a while to civilize New Jersey. It's an old state and it's sot in its ways. It was started by a bunch of land speculators, bewigged second-story men and peruked privateers and it carries on its back-yard tradition to this day.

Take it from one who has lived here too long that he likes to think about, the best thing that ever happened to New Jersey was the arrival of the CIO. Any organization that can gather up in so short a period the enemies that the CIO has made is something to command the respect of such decent men and women as still tread Jersey soil.

Against the CIO today in Jersey there are lined up those bemused white collarites who still think that "poor Dick Whitney" who tried to corner the applejack market over here, is a victim of unhappy circumstances, the readers of the columns emitted by General Johnson, Mark Sullivan, Westbrook Pegler and other ballyhooers for Big Business, the wispy-mustached, steel-spectacled bus riders who think that Mussolini is a good guy, and a ragtag and bob-tail of rich rif-raff whose social viewpoint is that of the sabre-toothed tiger.

That such a collection of dressedup nincompoops could long prevail over the hopes and aspirations of hard-working Jersey laborites was not in the books.

Jersey will be organized and that shortly. The air of freedom has a way of blowing even over the foetid stench of Hague's Open Shop flats.

Thousands Mourn Nance

Atlanta, Ga.—Hundreds of thousands of workers throughout the South this week mourned the death of A. Steve Nance, southern regional director of the Textile Workers Organizing Committee and one of the most outstanding labor officials in the South.

Nance died suddenly last Sunday. He was 42 years old, and had been in ill health since December.

Nance had gained the respect of workers and employers alike in his leadership of the southern forces of the TWOC. He was also an outstanding figure in Georgia CIO affairs.

A charter member of the mailers' local of the International Typographical Union in this city, Nance rose to the position of president of the Georgia Federation of Labor. When the AFL's executive council ordered him to oust CIO unions, he stoutly refused to split the labor forces in the State.

NLRB Kills More Company Unions

WASHINGTON.—Death blows to company unions are being dealt right and left by the National Labor Relations Board. One of the latest to fall is the Employes' Union of the Griswold Manufacturing Company, makers of kitchen equipment.

A cease and desist order issued by the Board charged the Griswold firm with refusing to bargain collectively with Lodge No. 1197, Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, although the CIO affiliate had been chosen as their representative by the majority of the employes.

The company was ordered to dissolve the Employes Union and to bargain with the CIO steel union. About 370 production workers employed at the Griswold plant are involved.

Refusal of the company some months ago to recognize the CIO union brought on a strike which lasted from May 13 to June 25, 1937, during which time the "independent union" was formed with the assistance of an attorney suggested by a company official.

Shoe Workers Win Case

Washington.—Employes of the Williams Manufacturing Company, ladies' shoe concern of Portsmouth, Ohio, were forced to sign individual contracts of employment, the National Labor Relations Board charged in a cease and desist order issued recently forbidding the company from interfering with the activities of the United Shoe Workers, CIO union.

The board ordered the firm to stop coercing its employes into entering individual contracts of employment and declared the contracts so signed invalid. The company also was ordered to reinstate with back pay, five workers discharged for union activity.

Williams employs about 1000 workers. In 1936 it produced more than 1,000,000 pairs of ladies' shoes.

Texas CIO Holds 2nd Convention

Port Arthur, Tex.—John B. Patella, president of the CIO Texas State Industrial Union Council, was re-elected for another year as the second annual convention of the CIO delegate body closed in this city.

Over 200 delegates were present at the two-day session, which marked a high point in CIO organization in the state. Roy B. Sessions, of Houston, was elected first vice-president; Fred Halestrap, second; John Crossland, third, and L. Stein, of Port Arthur, fourth vice-president. P. F. Kennedy, of Houston, was elected council secretary.

Resolutions Passed

Resolutions passed by the convention included a strong statement calling for a boycott of Japanese goods, in protest against Japanese aggression in China, and a call to the U. S. Government to issue an embargo order on all trade with Japan.

The Texas state employment service was criticised for using non-union printing in some of its literature. The body endorsed President Roosevelt's Reorganization bill, new center of a prolonged battle in Congress.

Wages and hours legislation, the anti-lynching bill, and the program put forward by Chairman Lewis of the CIO for three billion dollars in relief appropriation to provide a minimum of 3,500,000 WPA jobs were also endorsed in resolutions.

LABOR and the LAW

The Supreme Court of the United States has recently upheld the constitutional right to publish and distribute leaflets. The court reversed the conviction of Alma Lovell who had been sentenced to imprisonment for fifty days when she distributed leaflets without a permit from the city manager of Griffin, La., in violation of the city ordinance requiring a permit.

The Court was equally emphatic in holding that the right to distribute literature was just as important as the right to print it.

Far-Reaching Effect

The decision has a far-reaching effect upon similar municipal ordinances because it holds that any attempt to interfere with the peaceful and orderly distribution of literature is unconstitutional.

Under this decision any ordinance which prohibits leaflet distribution altogether is clearly unconstitutional. So is one of the type which requires a permit. Similarly, any ordinance on leaflet distribution which requires fees or imposes conditions like finger-printing or the putting up of bond for the right to distribute literature is unconstitutional.

Municipal ordinances which deal with advertising matter cannot apply to union literature at all, because leaflets giving notice of union meetings or other union affairs are not commercial in nature. Any attempt to apply such ordinances to union literature is unconstitutional.

Suggested Practices

Of course the distribution must be peaceful and orderly. Care should be taken to see that the streets are not littered and every effort made to prevent disorder of any kind. The police officials cannot use charges of disorderly conduct or the littering of streets as an excuse for preventing the freedom of press.

It is also important to make use of the fact that under the Federal Civil Rights laws any official who interferes with a constitutional right is subjected to Federal prosecution, and a fine of $1000 or imprisonment up to a year, or both.

Moreover, under this Federal Civil Rights law such officials can be used in the Federal courts for damages or for an injunction to prevent their unlawful interference with freedom of the press.

Such cases should be reported to the Federal District Attorney and, if possible, civil suits should be begun in the Federal courts against all the officials involved.

Maritime Union Named By NLRB

Washington. — The National Maritime Union, CIO, has been certified by the National Labor Relations Board as the sole bargaining agent for unlicensed personnel on boats of two New York City lines: the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey and the Malston Company, Inc.

The NMU won recent elections held by the board, by a vote of 1703 to 46 on Standard Oil vessels, and by 153 to 3 on the Malston line.

The International Seamen's Union, AFL, was the defeated union in both cases.

Mardi Gras

Residents of Mobile, Ala., got a real surprise when they saw this float of the CIO in the annual Mardi Gras parade. The exhibit was entered by members of the maritime unions, who are strong along the city's waterfront.

ACA Marks First Year in CIO

New York—The American Communications Association, formerly known as the American Radio Telegraphists Association, this week is celebrating the first anniversary of its entry into CIO.

The union is publishing a special edition of its organ which will contain histories of many of the locals a complete report on the state of the union by President Mervyn Rathborne and greetings from Chairman John L. Lewis, Director John Brophy and Lee Pressman of the CIO, and from Harry Bridges, Michael J. Qill, Heywood Broun, Joseph Curran and many other prominent in the progressive labor movement.

In his report to the union, President Rathborne will point out that the membership of the union has multiplied by six since its entry into CIO, and that the union has brought more than $1,000,000 in cash benefits to its members during the year.

Many other benefits such as shorter working hours and better working conditions were obtained.

Council Forms

Columbus, Ohio.—Formal opening of the new headquarters of the Franklin County CIO Industrial Union Council will be celebrated June 4. The council, which has 17 affiliated locals, is forced to move into larger quarters due to increased membership.

2,000 Technical Men Vote to Join CIO Union

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Two thousand organized engineers and technical workers, members of the Society of Designing Engineers, will join the CIO as a result of a referendum just completed. They will affiliate with the CIO Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians, where they will form the Auto Division.

The vote was taken after a letter from John L. Lewis to the Society, in which the CIO chairman said: "I want to urge you strongly to join forces with the FAECT. I feel that considerable advantage in bettering the economic position of the technical worker will accrue from this consolidation."

Marcel Scherer, organizational director of the FAECT, said in commenting on the results of the vote:

"This vote is an important victory for the CIO. It is another warning to the auto manufacturers that their policy of wage cuts and mass dismissals among the technical staffs is arousing oppoition and will have to stop.

"This decision has great importance for all engineering employes throughout the country, since the Society of Designing Engineers has been the largest independent union in the engineering field and organized in one of the most important basic industries."

A national organizing drive will be set under way immediately, Scherer said, designed to bring into the CIO all employes in the designing and engineering end of the auto industry. A conference will be held at an early date in Detroit and organizers sent into the field.

One of the first demands of the new CIO affiliated group will be the restoration of the recent 10 per cent. wage cut put in effect by General Motors, Chrysler and other big auto corporations.

CIO Fights Maritime Gag Law

Washington.—Pointing out that the National Labor Relations Act and the orderly processes of collective bargaining, if adhered to by the ship owners, were enough to stabilize labor relations in the maritime industry, Lee Pressman, CIO counsel, wrote to Senator Elbert D. Thomas, of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor, urging that compulsory arbitration features be dropped from the proposed amendments to the present Merchant Marine Act.

Act Not Applicable

Pressman pointed out that the principles of the Railway Act, on which the new legislation is modeled, do not apply to the maritime industry. At previous hearings, he said, such government officials as Secretary Perkins, Chairman Madden of the Labor Board, and the chairman of the National Mediation Board, opposed the new measure as "unworkable and inappropriate."

He also reminded Senator Thomas that the House Committee on Marine and Fisheries, in considering the House version of the bill, strongly recommended that the compulsory arbitration features be dropped.

NLRB Orders Inland Steel Sign Agreement With SWOC

Washington—True collective bargaining requires an employer to reach a signed, written agreement with a bona fide union, the National Labor Relations Board ruled in its order that the Inland Steel Co. must sign a contract with the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, CIO.

The order upheld a contention of the union during the Little Steel strike last summer that the companies were violating the provisions of the Wagner Act.

The company, in addition to being required to enter into an agreement with the SWOC, must also cease and desist from supporting a company union in its Chicago Heights, Ill., and Indiana Harbor, Ind., plants, the NLRB decreed.

Similar orders, it is believed, will be issued in the Republic Steel case, on which action is expected soon.

The Inland Co. was given 10 days in which to comply with the board's action. Refusal to do so would bring the case into the federal courts.

The NLRB has not yet lost a case before the U. S. Supreme Court.

The board's decision, signed by all three of its members, establishes the SWOC as exclusive bargaining agency for all production workers at the two company plants.

Philip Murray, SWOC chairman, commenting on the decision, described it as "a complete vindication of the SWOC." He pointed out the Little Steel strike would have been avoided if Inland and other companies had signed with SWOC when asked by the workers.

"I hope," Murray said, "that Inland Steel will promptly do the honorable thing and sign a contract with us."

Contracts Held Basic

The decision made clear the fact that signed contracts are basic to orderly collective bargaining processes. "The main objective of organized labor long has been the collective agreement," the Board declared, "and the history of the organization and collective bargaining may be written in terms of the constant striving for union recognition through agreement."

The board scored the company for persistent refusal to sign with SWOC, stating: "The respondent (the company) can advance no reasons for refusing to conform to such practice except those solely anti-union in character."

Company Stalling Scored

The company was severely criticised in the decision for its attempt to stall the SWOC workers with an oral "agreement."

"Coming to the question of a signed, written agreement as distinguished from an oral agreement is lawful," the Board declared.

"Employes realize that ordinary business dealings are conducted through written agreements. They rightly fear that an oral agreement paves the way for prolonged haggling over what was actually agreed to.

"Employes, in insisting on a written agreement, are merely asking what any prudent businessman would expect as a matter of course from those with whom he deals."

"Independent" Exposed

The decision, in ordering the company to cease supporting the "Steel Workers Independent Union, Inc.," branded the outfit as

Swing to CIO

Olympia, Wash.—Longshoremen in this city have swung into the ranks of the International Longshoremen and Warehousemen's Union, CIO. Only Tacoma, Anacortes and Port Angeles, Wash., longshoremen now remain in the AFL International Longshoremen's Association, and it is expected that the Tacoma workers will soon transfer affiliation to the CIO union.

Oakland, Calif.—The Shipyard Workers Organizing Committee of the CIO has filed labor board petitions calling for elections in 10 plants throughout the Bay District.

Power Strikers Win

Members of a local affiliated with the CIO Utility Workers Organizing Committee won their strike against the Consumers Power Company at Saginaw, Mich., when the old contract was renewed for four months, thereby preventing threatened wage cuts.

League Favors New Wage-Hour Measure

Washington.—A new wage-hour bill was launched in the House of Representatives this week.

Drafted after weeks of debate by a sub-committee of the House Labor Committee, the bill contains modifications aimed at securing passage in the House. The bill was defeated late last year.

Declaring that the new bill "seems to contain all of the essentials for effective regulation of this question," Eli Oliver, executive Vice-President of Labor's Non-Partisan League wrote to Rep. Mary Norton, declaring that "nothing can justify further delay."

Oliver stated in his letter that his opinion was based on newspaper reports of the new measure, which he had not yet had opportunity to study in detail.

The House Labor Committee, of which Miss Norton is chairman, is scheduled to take the bill under consideration early next week. If the Labor Committee gives its approval, it will then be sent to the Rules Committee, which last year held up the bill for months, and then to the House for debate and vote.

The new measure, as reported out by the Labor sub-committee, calls for a five-man Labor Standards Board, to be appointed by the President, which would fix wages in the lower-paid industries. Highest minimum wage to be set would be 40c an hour, while hours might be set at no more than 48 a week at the outset, with provisions for scaling down at a later date. Maximum hours would eventually be capable of being scaled down to 40 a week.

The board, under the new bill, would calculate the average wage for an industrial occupation, and then could set the minimum at not more than five cents an hour over the average. After a year it could be raised another five cents, but 40c would be the maximum.

No Time For Delay

Oliver's letter pointed out that there many difference of opinion "even among those who favor the legislation in principle.

"In view of the urgent need for rapid consideration and passage of legislation on this subject, I am writing to urge that members of the Committee subordinate minor objections and attempts at perfection, which may be in themselves desirable, but which can only operate to delay and possibly to defeat this legislation."

97% For CIO

Newberry, S. C.—Anti-CIO sentiment at the Mollohon Mills here bulked just a bit stronger than the impurities in Ivory soap, a Natl. Labor Relations Board election revealed.

The Textile Workers' Organizing Committee won 97% of the votes, the final tallying showing 447 for the TWOC and only 13 against it. The union is already planning to ask for a contract.

On Organized Protests

Labor must learn how to send telegrams, or at any rate letters and postcards. These weapons are being used advantageously by the reactionaries.

It does not seem to me that the reorganization bill is one concerning which trade unionists should necessarily get passionate on one side or another, although I think the merits of the measure outweigh its defects.

But the campaign against the measure is worthy of study as an object lesson as to what a few high power propagandists can do.

Senators, Congressmen, newspaper editors, radio broadcasters and radio sponsors are very susceptible to communication from the folks back home.

I am all against the form protest, such as that being used by the regimented clamorists in the reorganization fight. Sheep are shown the dotted line and then instructed to jump over it. But even this sort of flood has its effect.

A much better and more useful kind of mass protest is for workers to declare themselves individually on issues which are important to them. If the daily paper which you read carries a news story which is inaccurate, you have every honest right to tell the editor just that. Nor need those who are mangled keep mum on editorial opinion.

Everybody will grant that an editor has a right to express whatever opinion he pleases. The reader also has an inalienable right.

He is under no moral, constitutional or ethical pressure to buy a paper which expresses sentiments which seem to him biased and unfair; and it is his privilege to sit down and say just that on the back of a postcard.

Newspapers live by circulation. They must listen to their readers. Make them know your own opinion.

CIO Stand Vindicated

The ruling of the National Labor Relations Board in the Inland Steel Company case is a complete if tardy vindication of the stand taken by the CIO in last year's strike against the independent steel companies.

There would have been no strike at all, if these companies had obeyed the law, as it is now interpreted by the Labor Board.

The issue in the strike was the refusal of "Little Steel" to engage in genuine collective bargaining with the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

The officials of these companies professed to be willing to meet with their employes' union for collective bargaining purposes, but stated in advance that they would enter into no signed agreement with the SWOC.

Now the Labor Board has ruled that "willingness to embody understandings in a signed agreement is an integral part of the process of bona fide collective bargaining."

It has ordered the Inland Steel Company to bargain with the SWOC and to reduce to a written signed agreement any understandings that may be reached as a result of such negotiations.

The responsibility for the long and bitter steel strike, it is now clearly evident, rests with the companies which refused to grant their employes their collective bargaining rights.

* * * *

The attitude of the U. S. Steel Corporation, on the other hand, offers an instructive contrast. This corporation took the course of recognizing the union freely chosen by its employes, of engaging in collective bargaining with the union and of carrying this bargaining to its proper conclusion, a signed agreement.

The results of this law-abiding policy have redounded to the benefit, not only of the employes, but of the corporation and the public at large, as is pointed out by Myron C. Taylor, retiring chairman of the board of U. S. Steel, in his recent report to the stockholders annual meeting.

Describing the results of the signing of a contract with the SWOC, Taylor said:

"The union has scrupulously followed the terms of its agreement and, insofar as I know, has made no unfair effort to bring other employes into its ranks, while the corporation subsidiaries, during a very difficult period, have been entirely free of labor disturbances of any kind. The cost of a strike—to the corporation, to the public and to the men—would have been incalculable."

U. S. Steel chose the course of wisdom, legality and good business. "Little Steel" preferred to break the law, to hurt its own business and to subject the country to all the losses of a bitter strike, rather than to accord to its employes their collecive bargaining rights.

* * * *

The independent steel companies fought a losing fight, with all the savagery of reaction at bay, against progress and enlightened industrial relations.

All they succeeded in doing thereby, at great cost to the industry and to the country, was to postpone for a brief while the coming of collective bargaining an industrial democracy to their plants.

They put on an expensive campaign of propaganda to turn public opinion against the steel workers' fight for their legal rights. But they cannot continue indefinitely to deny these rights which real public opinion, by democratic action of Congress, has voted to accord to American working people.

The Labor Board ruling is another milepost along the road to complete recognition of the democratic right of American working people to bargain collectively without coerion or interference from their employers.

TWOC Named

Washington. — Following an election won by the Textile Workers' Organizing Committee at the Edna Cotton Mills, Reidsville, North Carolina, by a vote of 177 to 83, the National Labor Relations Board has certified the CIO union as sole bargaining agent for the company's production workers.

Poll Ordered

Nashville, Tenn. — Workers at the Ingram Manufacturing Company of Nashville will vote not later than April 16 on whether or not they wish the Textile Workers' Organizing Committee to represent them.

Cause and Effect With Apologies to Rube Goldberg

Looking Ahead By LEN DE CAUX

On Economic and Political Freedom

REAL political freedom is not possible without economic freedom.

That was one of the ideas expressed repeatedly by John L. Lewis and other CIO leaders when the drive to organize the steel workers was launched.

Since then these workers have had repeated occasion to realize this was no mere rhetoric but a plain statement of fact.

Before union organization came to the steel towns, they were company-owned both economically and politically.

The companies were Republican, and so perforce were the workers. At least they had to register Republican to avoid company displeasure, and in the elections they had little choice.

The wave of union organization that came with the New Deal brought with it a new sense of independence and some shift in political control.

But the strangling craft policies of the AFL prevented union organization reaching its full and natural growth. Workers still felt they must register as their bosses desired, even while they took courage to vote the other way.

As late as the elections of 1936, steel workers were still registering Republican and even wearing Landon buttons as a badge of their industrial serfdom, though their political sympathies were in the other camp.

Union Success Brings Political Independence

But in the meanwhile the great union drive of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee had gotten under way, and the elections of 1936 resulted, in every steel town, in a landslide vote for the New Deal and against the companies' candidates.

Since then, the great majority of the steel workers have won their union independence through the SWOC, and collective bargaining has become the rule rather than the exception throughout the industry.

The result has been increasing political freedom and independence.

Steel workers, who have won the freedom to be union men without fear of discrimination or discharge, now feel free to organize politically and vote as they please, unworried by company threats.

They are not only voting more independently, but they are also putting forward labor candidates of their own—and electing them.

In the last elections steel unionists were elected as mayors in the steel towns of Duquesne and Clairton, and altogether 172 labor men were elected public officials in Pennsylvania, mayors, justices of the peace and other local officials.

Many Unionists Run for Office

But this is just the beginning of the exercise of political freedom that has come with union organization.

This spring finds SWOC headquarters and every local office a beehive of political activity. The number of union men running for offices of all kind is so great, that the union finds difficulty in listing all their names.

And an outstanding union leader, Thomas Kennedy, is the leading candidate for the governorship of Pennsylvania.

Candidates for public office generally find the labor vote no longer something which can be "delivered" to them by political bosses.

In Pittsburgh, for instance, the CIO Lndustrial Union Council is putting every candidate through a rigorous test before it will consider endorsement.

First its legislative committee examines all candidates. They are required to give definite answers, for the record, about their stand on unemployment relief, wage-hour legislation, security legislation and all other matters of concern to labor.

Then the council's executive committee passes on the legislative committee's findings, and finally the general body of the CIO Council votes on whether to grant or withhold endorsement.

The steel workers have been singled out to illustrate this trend of the times, because of the strikingly rapid transition in steel company towns from industrial and political serfdom to industrial and political democracy.

But their experience can be multiplied a hundred times over in every major industry and in every state of the nation.

The years 1936 and 1937, thanks to the CIO, have marked the winning of union independence and freedom for millions of previously unorganized workers.

The year 1938, it seems, as an inevitable result, is going to mark the beginning of real political freedom and independence for millions of American working people who never realized their full democratic rights before.

Lewis Lauds "Labor On The March"

"Labor on the March," a dramatic account of the work of the CIO and its affiliates, will be published on April 14, by Harper and Bros., New York. Its author is Edward Levinson, who wrote "I Break Strikes!" the sensational expose of the strike breaking and labor spy profession which preceded by a year the revelations of the LaFollette Committee.

John L. Lewis, chairman of the CIO, has expressed high praise for "Labor on the March" as a chronicle of the recent years of American labor history. In a letter to Levinson, Lewis wrote:

"I think your book is an admirable analysis of the background, sources and growth of the CIO. In addition, it contains some magnificent reporting. It is an authoritative, dispassionate and exact review of the work of the CIO. I believe that the book will be valuable not only to the public of today, but to the historians who will eventually chronicle this period of American history."

Five Reinstated

Charlotte, N. C. — Five members of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, CIO union, discharged for union activity by the Nebel Knitting Company, Inc., of Charlotte, N. C., were ordered reinstated with back pay by the National Labor Relations Board.

The Board found that the Nebel firm threatened to discharge any employe who joined the union, posted anti-union letters and statements, and interfered in other ways with the right of the workers to join the CIO union.

Labor's League Presents---

A Program of Action For American Workers

By ROBERT DALE
(CIO News Staff Writer)

"We WANT WORK!"

This is the battle cry today behind which the millions of organized labor are rallying their political strength.

It is this basic demand for work that is at the core of the legislative program being pushed at Washington and at State capitols by the forces of progressive labor affiliated with Labor's Non-Partisan League.

On the Washington front, the League's legislative program is topped by two measures which, if adopted, would do more to put the nation back on the road to recovery than any or all of the many proposals now being debated.

Labor's "Musts"

These two "must" items on labor's program are:

1. The wages and hours bill.

2. A $3,000,000,000 appropriation for WPA to provide 3,500,000 jobs for the 1939 fiscal year.

Prospects for enactment of a workable and fair wages and hours bill are brighter now than in recent months, but labor's drive for this legislation cannot falter for a day or the enemies of progressive legislation on Capitol Hill will again knife this crucial measure.

President Roosevelt's Gainesville, Ga., speech in which he excoriated foes of wages and hours legislation and predicted their defeat at the polls, LNPL's increasing pressure on wavering Congressmen who must face the voters this fall, and the urgent need of doing something to halt the depression, are the main factors that are now turning the tide toward favorable action on this No. 1 item in labor's program.

The League Campaigns

The League's campaign for the wages and hours bill has taken new vigor in recent weeks. Delegations of labor representatives have been brought to Washington under League auspices from several eastern and midwestern states to relate first-hand accounts to their Congressmen of what is happening "back home" as a result of Congress' failure to act promptly.

Pressure Re-Doubled

Labor's Non-Partisan League has just renewed its request to all elements of organized labor to continue and redouble the pressure on this issue. The barrage of letters, postcards, petitions, wires and personal calls is now more needed than ever as Congress prepared for the final vote.

The wages and hours bill would go far, by shortening hours and raising low wages, to create new employment, but until it is enacted and can become effective, something more is needed. The WPA offers the only immediate solution to the crisis of unemployment.

13,000,000 Jobless

With 13,000,000 Americans unable to find work, according to the government's own Census of Unemployment, it is imperative that Congress approve as a minimum the sum of $3,000,000,000 for the 1939 fiscal year, starting next July 1, to provide 3,500,000 jobs.

Opening its fight for the $3,000,000,000 sum, Labor's Non-Partisan League has just issued thousands of copies of a leaflet captioned: "WE WANT WORK!" The leaflet is addressed to Congress, to Business, and to All America. (Extracts from it are reproduced elsewhere in these columns.)

In this ninth year of the Great Depression, the LNPL warns, the nation is at war with hunger, misery and unemployment. It declares, "In this war, JOBS ARE BULLETS." The people ask for jobs, the League says, but Congress gives them battleships.

Extend NLRA

Second in importance only to the wages and hours and $3,000,000,000 for WPA issues, is the League's demand for passage at this session of the new Wagner act extending the provisions of the National Labor Relations Act to all those industries who fatten on government contracts or loans and yet violate the law of the land. Included in this group are such companies as the notorious little steel clique led by Tom Girdler, Remington-Rand and similar anti-union outfits that sell millions of dollars of supplies to Uncle Sam.

Extent of the field to be covered by this important bill is indicated by the fact that 6,716 contracts valued at $387,715,339 have been awarded under the Walsh-Healey wage and hour law on government contracts.

No Maritime Gags

Another important phase of labor's program in Congress is to be zealous in protecting the maritime workers from compulsory arbitration such as would be imposed by Senator Copeland and his shipowner allies. Labor's Non-Partisan League has presented testimony to the Senate Commerce Committee, headed by Copeland, against these proposals and is rallying its forces to repel efforts to shackle labor in this way.

The vicious May-Shepherd bill which would clamp down a dictatorship on America on the day war is declared is also being fought vigorously by the League and its progressive friends on Capitol Hill. The League is mobilizing support on behalf of the Congressional resolution to ask California to free Tom Mooney. The immediate action on this is being concentrated on the Senate and House Judiciary Committees where the resolution is pending. Neither has acted finally.

Map Election Drive

Much of the League activity is now being directed away from Washington toward Congressional and local campaigns. This fall, 34 senators, 34 governors, the entire House of Representatives, and many scores of local officials must face the voters.

What happens at the polls this fall will have a powerful influence on 1940 when the nation names a President. Drives to register the voters are now in progress by every State unit of Labor's Non-Partisan League.

Voting records of congressmen are being circulated and education in campaign technics is being carried on. Thousands of copies of the League's booklet, "How to Organize and Conduct a Local Political Campaign" have been ordered by League affiliates.

Demand Jobs For All!

The House Appropriations Committee will next week take up the question of the Federal appropriation for unemployment relief for 1939.

The CIO, Labor's Non-Partisan League and progressive organizations generally are demanding that an adequate appropriation be made to provide useful jobs for all to whom private industry has failed to give employment.

The CIO program has been outlined by Chairman John L. Lewis as follows:

"The CIO asks Congress to provide an appropriation of three billion dollars for the coming fiscal year to provide an average of three-and-a-half million useful jobs for unemployed.

To accomplish these purposes, such an appropriation should be expended upon the following principles:

1. All workers should be employed on work suited to their needs and skills.

2. Projects should be socially necessary and productive. For example, housing, slum clearance, flood control, building of schools and hospitals, health measures, cultural and white collar projects, and vocational training.

3. Jobs should be given to those who need jobs, without requiring honest, decent, unemployed workers to degrade themselves as paupers. Those working short time in industry should be given at least enough supplemental work to bring their income up to an American standard.

4. The funds for this program should be so appropriated to make possible the meeting of current needs wherever and whenever they arise."

All labor organizations should act at once, to see that this program is adopted. THE NEED IS URGENT. Write or wire to the members of the House Appropriations Committee from your district. Urge on them the necessity for the passage of Labor's program for 3,500,000 jobs.

Following are the members of the Appropriations Committee who can be addresed at the House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

E. T. Taylor, Col. Chairman; C. Cannon, Mo.; C. A. Woodrum, Va.; J. J. Boylan, N. Y.; L Ludlow, Ind.; T. S. McMillan, S. C.; M. C. Tarver, Ga.; J. Johnson, Okla.; J. B. Snyder, Pa.; W. B. Umstead, N. C.; Wm. R. Thom, O.; J F. Dockweiler, Cal.; J. McAndrews, Ill.; E. O'Neal, Ky.; G. W. Johnson, W. Va.; J. G. Scrugham, Nev.; J. M. Fitzpatrick, N. Y.; L. C. Rabaut, Mich.; J. O. Fernandez, La.; M. F. Caldwell, Fla.; D. D. Terry, Ark.; J. M. Houston, Kan.; J. B. Daly, Pa.; J. Starnes, Ala.; R. A. Collins, Miss.; C. H. Leavy, Wash.; W. D. McFarlane, Texas; J. E. Casey, Mass.; J. Taber, New York; R. L. Bacon, New York; R. B. Wigglesworth, Mass.; W. P. Lambertson, Kan.; D. L. Powers, N. J.; J. W. Ditter, Pa.; A. E. Carter, Calif.; R. F. Rich, Pa.; C. A. Plumley, Vt.; E. M. Dirksen, Ill.; A. J. Engel, Mich.

SWOC Wins

Chicago.—Lodge No. 1029, Steel Workers' Organizing Committee, has been certified by the National Labor Relations Board as the sole bargaining agent for more than 200 production workers employed by the Valley Mould and Iron Works, Chicago, Illinois.

The CIO union won a recent election over an independent plant union by a vote of 103 to 97.

CIO Outlines Plan For Relief Machinery

Washington.—Methods whereby CIO unions can establish effective machinery to serve the interests of unemployed workers are outlined in a letter addressed by Ralph Hetzel, CIO unemployment director, to all CIO unions and councils.

The procedure advocated has been worked out on the basis of actual experience of CIO unions in aiding the unemployed, in line with the general policy set forth by Chairman John L. Lewis on behalf of the national movement.

The outline of procedure follows:

"1. CIO international unions and local industrial unions are urged to keep on their membership rolls all their members who are on relief or WPA projects, subject to the provisions of their constitutions. The interests of such members can be served by representing them before relief and WPA authorities.

"Some unions already make special provision for accepting as members workers on relief or WPA who are normally employed in the industry covered by each union. The purpose of this is to introduce to the service and activities of the union those who when they return to industry will be within its regular jurisdiction.

Councils Active

"2. Representation of unemployed in each locality has been best worked out through the industrial union councils. The councils have established special unemployment committees as a most effective means of carrying out this service.

"In localities where there are no councils CIO unions have cooperated in setting up such central unemployment committees. These committees secure the cooperation of CIO unions, Labor's Non-Partisan League, other labor unions and organizations of the unemployed who are not eligible for unions.

"3. It is suggested that these unemployment committees move to set up sub-committees on WPA projects. The purpose of such sub-committees would be to promote the co-operation of all CIO and other union members on the projects and members of organizations of the unemployed who are not eligible to join CIO unions. The sub-committees would act as agencies of the central unemployment committees for representing the workers on the projects."

Hearings Come Soon

At the same time Unemployment Director Hetzel points out that the question of the Federal appropriation for unemployment relief for 1939 will arise in Congress with hearings before the house appropriations committee about April 15.

He urges that the CIO demand for an appropriation of $3,000,000,000 to provide an average of 3,500,000 useful jobs for unemployed be called to the attention of the members of the committee in every possible way.

"We urge that all CIO unions and industrial union councils in the districts of these members write and wire urging upon them the necessity for the passage of labor's program for 3,500,000 jobs," he says.

A list of the members of the house appropriations committee will be found elsewhere on this page.

Unions Pile Up Victories in NLRB Tests

WASHINGTON,—Evidence of the manner in which the CIO is gaining new strength throughout the nation can be seen in announcements flowing out of headquarters of the National Labor Relations Board here.

In scores of elections in every part of the country, CIO unions are decisively whipping company unions and independent unions. They are winning back pay for workers thrown out of jobs by bosses who still think that union organization can be stopped.

Listed below are a few CIO victories announced by the labor board this week

Radio Men Vote CIO 251 to 38

NEW YORK.—The American Communications Association, formerly known as the American Radio Telegraphists Association, this week announced another victory in a National Labor Relations Board election.

In an election covering the 340 employes of Mackay Radio Corporation of Delaware and of California, 251 voted to support the CIO, 38 voted against and 51 failed to register their choice.

This election brings to ACA the last major point-to-point radio company. The Radio Corporation of America Communications Corp., Globe Wireless and French Cables are already under contract with the union.

Three More Victories For NMU

Washington—Elections won by the National Maritime Union, on three New York ship lines, brought about the certification by the National Labor Relations Board of the CIO organization as the sole collective bargaining agency for the unlicensed personnel on all vessels operated by the companies.

The NMU defeated the International Seamen's Union, AFL, in an election on boats of the International Freighting Corporation, Inc., by a vote of 26 to two. On the Ardmore Steampship Co., Inc., vessels, the vote was 65 to one in favor of the NMU and in the C. C. Mallory Corporation election, it was 118 for the NMU to 12 for the ISU.

LaFollette Committee Exposes Cleveland Associated Industries

WASHINGTON. — Close relationships between the union-fighting Cleveland Associated Industries and the National Association of manufacturers were brought to light by the Senate Civil Liberties Committee here as it continued its probe of the Cleveland industrial group's long standing fight against organization of labor unions.

While William Frew Long, general manager of the CAI, stuttered through a monotonous series of "I don't recall" answers to questions by committee members these facts were established:

1. That the CAI used newspaper ads furnished by the NAM.

2. That it used the "American Family Robinson," a radio transcription program prepared by the NAM designed to glorify the open shop.

3. That it distributed "employment relations" literature of the NAM to its affiliated corporations.

4. That it was in frequent contact with the NAM legal department.

5. That it joined with the NAM in the sponsorship of a "labor relations clinic," held in semi-secret fashion after the Supreme Court had upheld the Wagner Act.

Long Confused

Long, whose conduct on the witness stand gained him a reputation as one of the most brazen individuals among the scores of anti-labor Tories who have preceded him in other hearings held by the committee, took an argument that American workers are not "union-minded."

He blinked uncomfortably when Senator Thomas, of Utah, a member of the Senate committee, introduced a survey made by the NAM itself which showed unmistakably that the most frequent reason advanced by workers for staying out of unions was the fear of reprisal actions by their employers.

Further links between the NAM and the Cleveland group became apparent when it was shown that 21 men, representing 20 companies, control the local Associated Industries organization, and that 12 of the 20 companies are affiliated with the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers.

Proposed NIC

Long himself had proposed the formation of a Natl. Industrial Conference, an inner group of the NAM which took upon itself the task of formulating the lines of the employers' battle against bona fide unions.

One of Long's letters to the NAM relative to the conference declared, "I have been careful to emphasize the fact that we should not have a large meeting. The men I have named above [leaders of NAM activity], with perhaps very few others, can very largely control the general thought and action of employers' associations of the country."

Employer groups, Long explained to the committee hearing, "are the best friends the unions ever had," while the audience snickered. But, he continued, "of course there was opposition on the part of the unions, Communists and radicals."

Open-Shopper

William Frew Long, general manager of the Cleveland Associated Industries, from whom the LaFollette committee last week heard a recital of open shop philosophy and a story of long-time attacks against unionism in the Great Lakes city.

a company union, pure and simple.

Testimony on this stooge organization showed the intentions of the company in setting it up and its manner of controlling it after it was set up.

The company made valiant but futile efforts to prove that the SWOC did not represent the workers in its plants, bringing a total of 700 witnesses to the three-and-a-half-month hearings before the Board. These men swore that they had left SWOC to join the "Independent," and that as a result SWOC had lost its majority.

Actual count of membership and comparison with pay rolls showed the SWOC to have a large majority of the workers in the plants, even conceding that those who joined the "Independent" were genuinely out of the SWOC. This count excluded all supervisory employees, clerks and a number of other

Labor Aid To Schools Described

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Describing labor's role in the evolution of free public education in this country John Brophy, CIO director, told 3,000 organized teachers at the annual Education Conference of American Federation of Teachers, Local No. 5, that education, next to labor, is the favorite target of reactionaries and enemies of progress.

Labor's role in the history of education was a long and honorable one, Brophy stated, pointing out that from earliest times workers struggled for education as they struggled for higher wages and decent living conditions.

Education a Prime Objective

"One of the prime objectives of every labor organization founded in this country was education," Brophy said. "Workers wanted to know things, wanted cultural development, just as they wanted higher wages and shorter hours."

Vindicates SWOC--Murray

By HOWARD McCARTNEY

Pittsburgh — "We have always maintained that a refusal to reduce to writing what has been agreed upon in conference is evidence of bad faith," declared Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

"Collective bargaining means more than the mere physical meeting of representatives of unions and industry.

In drawing a contrast between Inland Steel's labor policy and that of the union producers in the industry, Murray said that the signing of a contract by the more than 500 steel firms in the past two years has "meant more than security to their employes."

"It has meant a guarantee of continued peaceful operations of steel mills. Those companies which refuse to sign will have hanging over them at all times the threat of labor troubles.

"We are hopeful that Inland Steel will now do the honorable thing and sign a contract with us."

Six Workers Ordered Rehired

Washington. — Following hearings on charges of unfair labor practices brought by the United Rubber Workers, CIO union, against the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company plant at Cumberland, Md., the National Labor Relations Board has ordered the company to reinstate with back pay, six URW members discharged for union activity.

The Board also ordered the company to withdraw recognition from the Kelly-Springfield Employes Protective Association.

All six workers involved in the decision had been with the company from 11 to 12 years.

Shoe Workers Win Strike, Lift Wages

New York—An epoch-making labor victory in the shoe industry of New York was won by the United Shoe Workers of America, CIO union, following a brief strike which shut down production completely for two days.

All of the twelve firms belonging to the New York Stitch Down Shoe Manufacturers Association signed an agreement with the USWA, which, by the inclusion of a minimum wage clause, will mean that shoe workers earning at present as low as $6 to $7 a week, will be paid $12 under the new contract.

Hours have been reduced from 45 to 40 weekly, with no reduction in pay, after July 15, and all hiring is to be done through the union.

A closed shop and check-off of union dues were also granted. About 3500 workers employed by the twelve companies are covered by the agreement.

Ratify Terms

The terms were presented to the membership at a mass meeting in Brooklyn attended by some 4000 workers and were ratified with much enthusiasm.

The USWA local which is only eight months old, declared the strike following the break-down of several weeks' negotiations with the Association.

Powers Hapgood, national president of the union said that the extent of the victory could be understood when it was known that about 25 per cent. of the workers covered by the new agreement has been making as low as $6 to $7 a week.

Aluminum Union Plans New Drives

By KEITH SWARD

New Kensington, Pa. — The Aluminum Workers of American, CIO, held its first annual convention in this city of aluminum during the week of April 4.

To 25 delegates and fellow-officers from 12 plants in the industry, Pres. N. A. Zonarich of the AWA was able to report a one-year growth from six original local unions to 17 at the present time.

Eight local bodies represented at the convention were from plants within the Aluminum Co. of America, located at Massena, N. Y.; Edgewater, N. J.; Cleveland; Detroit; Logan's Ferry and New Kensington, Pa.; Badin, N. C. and Alcoa, Tenn.

The rest of the delegates came from "independent" fabricating mills in the industry at Fairmount, W. Va.; Eau Claire, Wis.; Pittsburgh, and Cincinnati.

Supports Kennedy

Endorsement of Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America for the governorship of Pennsylvania was unanimously voted by the delegates.

Active affiliation with Labor's Non-Partisan League was recommended to all local unions throughout the country.

If any reduction of wages or shortening of hours is resorted to at organized points in the industry, the AWA voted to "combat such attempts with every means at our command."

Plans For Drive

Organizational plans for the coming year call for a concentration on the Aluminum Co. of America and intensive drives at independent fabricating plants where "the competitive situation is threatening present wage scales."

Over the past year the AWA has signed four new agreements and unified the organization of aluminum workers who prior to April, 1937, when the AWA was formed had barely scratched the industry with Federal Local Unions under the AFL.

At their opening session, the Convention delegates were greeted by John Brophy, director of the CIO, who reviewed the present legislative program of the CIO and urged the Pennsylvania delegation to press the Kennedy campaign for governor.

The Rev. Charles Owen Rice, prominent Pittsburgh priest, told the delegates that reactionaries are anxious to "get back to pre-Hoover days."

"This recession is due to too little unionism, not too much. It is due to not enough progressive legislation rather than too much."

Philip Murray, chairman of the SWOC; Congressman Robert G. Allen and William J. Carney, CIO regional director in New Jersey, were the principal speakers at a mass meeting which the AWA sponsored, in the New Kensington High School Auditorium.

Never before in local history had the high school building been used by a labor group. The auditorium with a seating capacity of nearly a thouand was filled.

"The reason you occupy the high school tonight is that you have an organization," Murray remarked to the audience.

CIO political activity could expect opposition, Murray stated.

"Subtle attacks will be made against Kennedy for governor by usages of the name of labor. These are the same sculking interests bent on the destruction of labor,' he said.

On unemployment "in a land of plenty," Allen said: "I mean to collect as many Congressmen as I can and form a union.

We should have a sit-down strike and refuse to go home until we solve this unemployment matter."

Anti-Unionism in South Bared by TWOC

ATLANTA, Ga.—Problems faced by the Textile Workers Organizing Committee in the South were outlined this week in a letter written by Lucy Randolph Mason, TWOC public relations representative, and published in several southern papers.

Quoting President Roosevelt's Gainesville, Ga., speech, in which he said that "there is little difference between the feudal system and the Fascist system," Miss Mason declared that TWOC representatives are "only too well aware how often the Bill of Rights is a mockery when labor unions disturb the feudal system of a cotton mill town."

"I was unusually diiscouraged by recent events in a mill operated by one of the best textile companies in the deep South, from which I had hoped better things," Miss Mason continued.

"Some time ago I went with the union representative to talk with the superintendent of this mill, at the latter's request. He told us that union activities should be abandoned until the president of the company felt the time had come for unionization and then he would tell the workers to organize.

Boss Threatened

"Unless this advice was accepted, he said, there 'would be trouble.' We assured him there was no reason for trouble as the union would carry on its work peaceably through education and persuasion. We left convinced that he would see to it that trouble came.

"The meeting we were to have had next evening had to be called off because the hall was suddenly withdrawn and no other could be secured. We met union members in a home and I heard how some had already lost their jobs and others expected to do so because they refused to sign company loyalty pledges. Trivial excuses were given by foremen for discharging union members, with slim disguise for the real offense.

Thugs Invaded Hall

"But the union grew and a meeting hall was found. Then, early in March, the 'feudal system leaned on the Fascist system' to curse this challenge to its supremacy. The union hall was invaded by a group including the company village officials and mill foremen, union members were ejected and the key to the hall confiscated.

"Later similar groups three times took union members from the mill and told them not to return. The union leader was taken from his work, severely beaten in front of the mill, and warned that worse would follow unless he left town. These are only the highlights of the outbreak of terrorism.

"An arm of the Federal Government must intervene to secure justice. TWOC has applied to the Natl. Labor Relations Board for reinstatement of the union members who were driven out of the mill, and for guarantees against future efforts to destroy the union."

Picket Maritime Commission

NMU Fights Maritime Union-Baiting

NEW YORK.—Charges that the Maritime Commission is guilty of unfair labor practises and the unwarranted, wholesale discharge of union members of the crew of the S. S. Pipestone County were filed with the Natl. Labor Relations Board here this week by the Natl. Maritime Union, CIO.

The Pipestone County is one of the many ships owned by the commission. The firings were due to the Maritime Commission's hostility to the NMU, leaders of the union charged.

Resist Wagner Act

The commission has taken a position that its ships are exempt from provisions of the Wagner Act, and has refused to allow labor board elections aboard the boats.

The maritime commission operates 42 ships on the Atlantic and Gulf coasts.

National Guard Under Fire in Minnesota

A. I. Harris, writer of this article, is editor of the Minnesota Leader, Farmer-Labor party organ published at St. Paul. His article first appeared in ADVANCE, organ of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, CIO.

By A. I. HARRIS

ST. PAUL, Minn.—Minnesota has just witnessed one of the most unusual and, from the standpoint of labor, unquestionably the most significant military court trials ever held in this country—and is about to witness another one even more important.

The trial grew out of the activities of certain officers of the National Guard in soliciting Guard members for jobs as "watchmen" during a strike in the J. R. Clark, woodenware manufacturing plant in Minneapolis. The owner of the plant is Major John R. Clark of the Minnesota 151st Field Artillery.

When Minnesota's Governor Benson, Farmer-Laborite, was informed of the activities of these National Guard officers he immediately had summoned a Military Court of Inquiry to determine the facts and to lay the basis for a court martial trial "with a view to expulsion from the Guard of those found guilty."

Unquestionably it is the first time in the history of this country that a governor proceeded along these lines.

The difficulties involved in procedure of this kind is the fact that officers in the National Guard must be tried by other officers of the National Guard and not by civilians. Even in a state like Minnesota, the sympathies of most of the National Guard officers in a dispute between employer and worker naturally lies with the former.

However, the Military Court has made its findings and they are very enlightening. They indict the conduct of Major Clark and that of his Regiment Captain, George W. Sylvester, "to the prejudice of good order and of a nature to bring discredit to the National Guard of the State of Minnesota." The Court also found the conduct of First Lieutenant James F. Callahan as open to severe censure in that he paid off a group of approximately 25 National Guardsmen employed for strike duty in the plant in the bar room of one of the Minneapolis hotels with the knoweldge that more than half of these Guardsmen were minors.

A certain Sergeant Houle, who contacted and solicited the men for strike duty was demoted to the rank of private before the trial began.

Face Dismissal

Upon receipt of the findings of the Military Court of Inquiry, Governor Benson ordered the Adjutant-General to proceed forthwith with a Court Martial of Major Clark and Captain Sylvester. These men face dishonorable dismissal from the Guard. Whether such dismissal also involves the loss of citizenship is a debatable matter.

The Military Court of Inquiry found: That the armory in Minneapolis was used as a place of solicitation and assembly of Guardsmen to be used in connection with the operation of the Clark plant while involved in labor difficulties; that a number of blankets belonging to the National Guard were transported to the plant in violation of "existing laws and regulations;" that National Guard officers used their military position and commission in the National Guard as a means of soliciting and assembling the members of the Guard for strike duty in the plant; that the Guardsmen were used "for private purposes to be used for watchmen, guards and workers in the manufacturing plant during the labor strike;" that the attendance records for the scheduled drill of the Guard were altered and that Guardsmen who were on duty at the plant at the time and did not attend drill were listed as having attended.

Although several—perhaps the majority of the court martial officers—will sympathize with the defendants, it is certain that they cannot overlook some of the severe indictments against the officers contained in the findings of the Court of Inquiry.

Governor Benson, in handling labor policy matters, is making history in America, following as he himself admits the "pattern" laid down by his predecessor, the late Governor Olson. It should be recalled that Governor Olson startled the country during the 1934 truck drivers strike when he called out the National Guard and the employers discovered that the Guard was not being used as an agency to win the strike for them, but rather to protect the legitimate rights of the workers.

Since then the employers of Minnesota have never suggested calling out the National Guard during a labor dispute while a Farmer-Labor governor was in office.

Benson has frequently told them that the Minnesota Guard will never be used to break strikes, either directly or indirectly.

Labor in America would do well to look to Minnesota and study the labor records of the late Governor Olson and Governor Benson.

It would be very illuminating to them and serve as a lesson of what it means to labor to have its own representative as governor.

CIO, AFL Exchange Delegates

Columbus, Ohio.—Several Columbus unions of the American Federation of Labor sent fraternal delegates to the CIO Industrial Union Council as part of an agreed action for an exchange of such representatives between AFL and CIO local groups. The Typographical Union and the Printing Pressmen's Union are two of the AFL locals to send representatives recently.

Economic Freedom Association Proposes Government Control of Industrial Activity

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON.—Fundamental permanent reforms must be secured through federal legislation if economic freedom and well-being are to be enjoyed in America, the American Association for Economic Freedom declared this week.

Public spending or "pump priming" are temporary relief measures which should be continued as long as the emergency warrants their use, the Association declared, but the establishment of a "regulator commission" governing planning, production levels, price and profit controls for the basic industries, is necessary as a more permanent measure, the report said.

The recommendations were contained in a pamphlet entitled "The Challenge To American Democracy" issued by the Association. Men and women prominent in public life, in the universities and the churches comprise the association. Its acting chairman is W. Jett Lauck, Washington economist.

Outlining the steps it sees necessary to revive American industrial activity, the Association declared that the proposed regulatory commission would require the basic industries, "through a constantly expanding policy of production based on lower profits and prices, shorter hours of work, higher wages and salaries and reasonable profits, to operate so as to insure the re-employment of all willing and able to work and to generate a mass-purchasing power sufficient to absorb the constantly increasing industrial output."

Federal credit might be necessary to help finance the program at the beginning, the Association statement declared.

While the small group of people who control the policies of American industry, the report declares, may be able to co-ordinate certain large corporations or industries, "they are unable to stabilize specific industries themselves, or to correlate the policies and objectives of American industry as a whole."

It quotes from the National Survey of Potential Product Capacity, conducted by Harold Loeb, a prominent economist, and 63 experts and technical associates. This group, financed by the Civil Works Administration of the government in 1934, came to the conclusion that:

"If the existing plant and power in the United States were fully employed in the production of honest goods and services for the consumer, the total output of 1929 dollars would not be less than 135 billion dollars, or an average per family of approximately $4400."

In 1929 the national income was only 92 billions, while in the crisis years that followed it fell to about half that sum.

"Our experience during the 15 years beginning in 1923 and culminating in the depression of the present year clearly demonstrates that the voluntary co-operation of industry with government cannot longer be relied upon to restore economic freedom and well being in America. As a consequence, fundamental permanent reforms must now be secured through federal legislation," the report said.

Guild Strike Threatens

With the possibility of a strike looming that would tie up all San Francisco's newspapers, on account of the publishers' refusal to meet Newspaper Guild demands, leaders of the newspaper unions talk over plans. Left to right: Exec. Sec. Irvine, of the Guild; Charles Solari, pressmen; Vice-Pres. Bailey of the Guild; Charles H. Bowers, news vendors; and F. E. Holderby, typographers.

Unions Support Fur Strike

Industry Shut Down; 20,000 Walk Out

NEW YORK.—Support for the general strike of the Fur Workers International Union in New York which practically shut down the entire fur manufacturing industry when 20,000 workers walked out, is being pledged by both CIO and AFL unions.

Telegrams backing the strike are pouring in from numerous organizations, the General Strike Committee stated, including the Pennsylvania Industrial Union Council which represents more than 50,000 workers.

The League of Women Shoppers also voted to support the strikers and issued a statement declaring that it had "found the union demands to be full justified."

The strike was called March 31, following a seven weeks' lockout of about 2,500 workers by the Associated Fur Coat and Trimming Manufacturers, Inc. The employers' group had refused the unions demands for a new agreement, and had turned down efforts of Mayor LaGuardia and the State Mediation Board to settle the dispute.

Union Demands

Provisions for job security and equalization of work are the chief demands of the union. In its strike call, the Committee said: "The general strike is our reply to the conspiracy of the employers who locked out thousands of fur workers in an attempt to starve them into submission and to force conditions upon them which deprive the workers and their families of all human rights and decent living standards."

Ben Gold, national president and chairman of the strike committee declared that he was confident "the furriers will register the greatest victory in the history of the union."

The message from the Pennsylvania Industrial Union, signed by John A. Phillips, president, Council, expressed admiration for the union's "militancy in the interest of the workers" in the fur industry and promised "every possible support that can be given to such action as may be necessary' to bring about better conditions.

Filed Charges

The union has filed charges of unfair labor practices against the association with the State Labor Relations Board and demanded that the locked-out workers be paid sum amounting to more than $1,000,000 in payment for back wages. A hearing on the petition was granted.

The Board is reported to have made a proposal to the employers that a two-year agreement be signed with the union to include equal division of work for the first year at least, and suggesting that an impartial chairman be chosen to decide if this should be continued for the second year.

West Coast CIO Plans Radio Station

San Francisco — The CIO may soon have its own radio voice on the West Coast.

This prospect became brighter last week when the San Francisco Industrial Union Council of the CIO authorized Secretary Herman Stuylevaar to apply for a Federal license and appropriate wave length.

While considerable time will elapse before the Federal Communications Commission acts on the application, CIO leaders here believe it has an excellent chance of receiving favorable treatment. Cost of setting up the station is estimated at around $10,000.

The International Longshoremen & Warehousemen's Union, CIO, is at the present time conducting a popular 15-minute program five times a week over station KGGC.

NMU Holds First Election

New York.—Fifty-one thousand unlicensed seamen on Atlantic, Gulf and Great Lakes vessels started balloting this week to elect national, district and division officials of the Natl. Maritime Union, CIO, as well as to express their opinions on nine proposed amendments to the union's constitution.

The elections will continue through the end of May. It will be the first "all-union" election since the NMU was established 11 months ago.

Joseph Curran, general organizer, is running unopposed for the presidency of the union.

AFL Members Rap Anti-CIO "Boycott"

OAKLAND, Calif.—The widely-touted "boycott" of CIO products by AFL officials received a solar plexus blow here when members of the Oakland Carpenters Union, AFL, voted six to one against a $1-a-month assessment for the anti-CIO war.

Union members also took the floor to denounce the AFL boycott on CIO lumber and emphatically stated the demand of the rank and file for labor unity.

Apparently unconcerned by the feeling of their members, AFL leaders told the National Labor Relations Board that they will order a boycott products of the Simmons Bed Company after the NLRB had ordered an election among the company's workers.

The vote will determine whether the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, CIO, or the AFL furniture workers union will be sole bargaining agency.

Meanwhile CIO lumber workers at Portland, Ore., turned down in mass an AFL proposal that they leave the International Woodworkers of America to join the carpenters' union.

AFL officials have maintained that the lumber workers in the northwest were coerced into joining the CIO, but have had little luck in winning members away from the IWA, despite an intensive, but ineffectual, "war" on the CIO union.

ATTEND CONFAB

Detroit. — Two hundred delegates, representing more than 190,000 labor union members, attended the first Free Tom Mooney Conference held in this city under the auspices of the Free Tom Mooney Committee.

TWOC Strikes Against 20% Wage Cut

North Wilkesboro, N. C.—Determined that the South will not live up to its doubtful reputation as a haven for wage cutters and sweatshop bosses, 150 workers at the Grier Cotton Mills walked out on strike here to protest a 20 per cent. pay slash proposed by the management.

Previously unorganized, the strikers sent a delegation to Textile Workers Organizing Committee headquarters at Granite Falls to seek aid. The TWOC sent two organizers to aid the striking workers, and many are joining the CIO union.

Meanwhile, from other points throughout the south came word of increasingly strong resistance to any policy of wage-cutting. At Fayetteville, N. C., rumors of cuts has steadily increased the number of TWOC members, while at Dalton, Ga., TWOC unionists held a protest meeting following a report that pay reductions were imminent.

DISPUTE OVER

Indianapolis, Ind. — A dispute between the Beverage Paper Company and CIO Local 529, United Paper Makers, has been settled with provisions that four workers be returned to their jobs, three of them with back pay, it was announced by James Robb, CIO regional director in the city.

Aluminum Union Certified

WASHINGTON.—All production workers at five Pennsylvania plants of the Aluminum Company of America are to be represented by the Aluminum Workers of America, CIO union, according to an announcement of certification made by the National Labor Relations Board.

Action of the Board came as the result of a public hearing on the question of certification held in Pittsburgh in January. At the hearing the union presented evidence to show that it represented a majority of the workers in the company's plants.

Union representatives testified that 5,920 workers had signed applications for membership in the union.

Plants of the Aluminum Company covered by the Board's certification are located in New Kensington, Arnold and Logan's Ferry, Pa.

SWOC Wins Contract

UTICA, N. Y.—The Steel Workers Organizing Committee gained sole bargaining rights for the 500 employes of the Hart and Crouse Corp. here in a contract signed with the management.

A. J. Marsh, sub-regional director for the SWOC, pointed to the agreement as a "reflection of the good built up between management and our union in this area and all over the country."

Contracts with the Crucible Steel Co. plant in Syracuse and several steel fabricating plants in Utica are coming up for renewal in the near future.

FAKE UNION DIES

CHICAGO.—The Foote Bros., Gear Corp. here has been ordered by the National Labor Relations Board to disband an "independent union" and cease discriminating against members of the United Office and Professional Workers and the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, CIO.

Furriers Turn Pickets

Twenty thousand New York fur workers took to the picket line this week in a strike for improved working conditions and higher wages, which effectively closed down the industry in the city. Members of the union are shown lining up for picket duty at the office of the joint council.

U. S. Bores Serfdom In Missouri

Washington. — (FP) — Serfdom exists in rural areas in the Middle West as well as in the South, according to a bulletin entitled "Rich Land—Poor People," published by the Farm Security Administration.

Discussing the level of living in the Missouri lowlands, the bulletin declares, "The lower income groups are at a distinct disadvantage in such things as rights in contract, the facilities in health service, in housing, in education, and in their rights before the law. The system appears to have consigned certain groups to a level of existence almost as low as that of serfs of other days.

Crude Shacks

"The houses in which the white sharecroppers and farm laborers and the Negroes live are crude shacks," the bulletin continues. "The typical house in the area is a 'box house' boarded up and down with narrow stripping over the cracks to keep out the weather.

"Single floors of rough lumber with many cracks are the rule. The roof is frequently of the 'dry weather' type. Inside walls are covered with building paper, cardboard or newspapers or are bare. The exterior is unpainted. Such is the one environment of some 20,000 cropper and laborer families.

"The diets of the white sharecroppers and farm laborers and the Negroes are meager and ill-balanced with malnutrition and disease, especially in children, everywhere in evidence. Hot breads, dried beans, macaroni, salt pork and molasses are the standard foods.

"The mortality rates for preventable diseases are exceedingly high. The rate for maleria is higher in every county in the low lands than for the state as a whole, and in some years has been as much as 20 times the state rate."

CIO DECIDES TO CALL NATIONAL CONVENTION

Labor Board Condemns Republic Steel

See Other Stories About NLRB Decision on Pages 2 and 3.

Washington — Branded as responsible for violence, killings, union-busting and flouting of the Wagner Act, the Republic Steel Corp. was this week brought sharply to account by the National Labor Aelations Board in the most sharply worded decision in the Federal agency's history.

The long-awaited decision, a 125-page, 60,000-word document, indicted Tom Girdler's company on a dozen counts, ordered it to disband its company union, rehire some 5,000 workers thrown out of employment by the strike, give back pay to workers at two of the company's plants who were locked out for two weeks and cease interfering with bona fide organizing activity among the company's employes.

The ruling, coming on the heels of the precedent-breaking Inland Steel Co. decision, showed conclusively that the Steel Workers Organizing Committee had been justified in calling its strikes against Little Steel last year.

Condemned Company

It condemned the Republic management for wanton violence, the taking of three lives, the use of force, the provision of tear gas and armaments for local police officers, and the subsidizing of a Back-To-Work movement.

It described the independent union at Republic as a fraud and a violation of the Wagner Act.

The board took particular note of the attack on CIO headquarters in Massillon, Ohio, last July, in which three people were killed and scores injured, and blamed the corporation as responsible for the incident.

The Steel Workers Organizing Committee, it ruled, was forced to strike against Republic to escape being crushed by the company rule of intimidation and coercion.

The ruling covered the five Ohio plants of the company, but was not concerned with its activities in Illinois, where almost a score of strikers were killed by Chicago police.

Pittsburgh League Set Up

Pittsburgh—Labor's Non-Partisan League in Allegheny County was officially launched recently at the first county-wide convention of that organization.

With 168 delegates, representing 100,000 members of 142 CIO locals, attended the Convention, which unanimously went on record as endorsing the candidacy of Lieutenant-Governor Thomas Kennedy for Governor of Pennsylvania. Mr. Kennedy is also secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers.

CIO Backs FAECT Drive

Washington—CIO backing for the automobile industry organizing drive of the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians, was voted at the meeting of the Committee for Industrial Organization here.

The FAECT recently gained 2000 members when the Society of Designing Engineers, hitherto an independent group, voted affiliation.

The Federation is launching a campaign to organize all the technical employes in the automobile industry, estimated to number about 15,000 in all. The CIO pledge "support and assistance" in this drive.

Iowa CIO To Meet

Des Moines, Ia.—The first Iowa state convention of the CIO, to be held in Des Moines April 23 and 24, will work out definite plans for the formation of a permanent Iowa State Industrial Union Council.

Delegates from scores of CIO unions throughout the state will attend the meeting at the Hotel Fort Des Moines. John Brophy, director of the CIO, will be the chief speaker at a mass meeting to be held in the Shrine Auditorium on the night of April 23.

Several thousand people are expected to attend the affair.

Delegates to the convention will come from the United Mine Workers, the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers and the Packinghouse Workers, as well as from locals of other international unions and from numerous CIO local industrial unions throughout the state, it was announced by Charles W. McCollough, temporary secretary-treasurer of the convention, and Don Harris, CIO regional director.

4,000,000 Words

Nineteen thousand pages of testimony, containing 4,000,000 words were collected by the National Labor Relations Board as they got the story of Henry Ford's use of violence and intimidation in his fight against the United Automobile Workers, CIO.

Steady Growth Reported; Demand Passage of Wage-Hour Bill

(For full details, see stories on pages 3, 5, 6, and 7)

Washington, — The following action was taken by the Committee for Industrial Organization at its meeting here this week:

1. Made plans for a permanent organization, voting for a convention some time this year.

2. Elected Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, and Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, as vice-chairmen of the CIO.

3. Named four standing committees to study and report on the problems of unemployment, housing, social security and legislation.

4. Passed resolutions demanding passage of the Wagner Bill and the wage-hour bill; urged Congress not to adjourn until it had passed necessary social legislation; attacked the U. S. Maritime Commission for anti-union practices; and drew up a 10-point relief program.

5. Heard reports of continuing, substantial gains by CIO affiliates, now 39 in number.

6. Appointed Hillman and Murray a committee of two to handle details of the CIO convention.

Depression Fails To Curb CIO, Lewis Says

Washington — The CIO has met its test during the depression and has passed it with flying colors, Chairman John L. Lewis told the CIO meeting here.

"Since this Committee last met, CIO has continued to grow in strength and prestige in the nation. It has continued its position of leadership in a nation that has felt increasingly the need for principles and organizations realistically directed to the welfare of the people as a whole," Lewis said.

"In the early days of this new depression the CIO was a lone voice. But as the depression deepened and the threat of economic chaos grew more imminent, more and more the people of the nation have turned to the stand of the CIO.

Need Purchasing Power

"We have said that the basis of economic stability of the nation lies in the purchasing power of the people. That purchasing power must increase in ratio with the increasing productive capacity of the nation. We have translated this principle into action.

"It is time that the government faced the facts of unemployment. Hand to mouth measures are not enough. A well-planned long-time program needs to be envisioned—a program by which our nation will be enriched in times of depression when the government must provide jobs. The CIO and the unemployed do not want leaf-raking jobs. They want houses, slum clearance, schools, hospitals, flood control, education and sound recreation.

"In the political field labor's voice is now heard with respect. Labor knows that its economic activity alone is not enough. Political activity is a natural adjunct."

Michigan CIO Plans Council

Lansing, Mich.—Michigan CIO unions, with a record of having converted an open shop state into a stronghold of unionism, will meet here April 23 to form a permanent State Industrial Union Council.

The convention, which will attract many delegates from the automobile and other industries, will help defeat anti-union Toryism in the state, and will build even stronger the power of the CIO, Adolph Germer, CIO regional director, declared.

The state meeting will follow by only two weeks the formation of the Greater Detroit and Wayne County Industrial Union Council, which took place at a meeting of 304 delegates representing 79 CIO unions in the motor capital.

To Fight Wage Cuts

Tracy M. Doll, member of the international executive board of the United Automobile Workers was elected president of the city council.

The delegates voiced opposition to wage cuts in any form and went on record to establish a city-wide strike committee and minute-man picket squads for use against wage slashing employers.

Republic Steel's Use of Violence Bared by Labor Board

BY HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON—Republic Steel's gory brand of company unionism received a thorough lacing from the National Labor Relations Board in its decision charging the company with unfair labor practices.

"From start to finish," the board declared, the Massillon Plan (the company union setup) was the company's own creature.

The company "prepared it, inaugurated it and continued it in effect for almost four years, without ever submitting it, for acceptance, alteration or rejection to a vote of its employes," the decision stated.

"Further, the respondent lost no opportunity, through statements of its officials and otherwise, to impress upon its employes the virtues of the 'Plan' and to exhibit its opposition to 'outside unions.'"

"Thus the respondent dictated the type of representation and 'collective bargaining' it was willing to allow its employes to have.'"

Tried New Name

When the Supreme Court upheld the Wagner Act, the corporation tried to get around the law—but it didn't get to first base.

"Like its predecessors," the board declared, "the Independent was merely the creature" of the company.

"It was formed on the respondent's property, received the respondent's favors, grew through the respondent's coercion."

Espionage was the order of the day when the Steel Workers Organizing Committee started its campaign at Massillon, the board revealed.

Referring to two company guards, who became detectives by dint of wearing old clothes and forgetting to shave, an SWOC organizer testified at the board's hearing:

"At times when we would leave the hotel and go out to breakfast, lunch or dinner, if we were walking or making a contact, they would always follow us there, walking, because they always parked across from the hotel. I have had them follow me into the restaurant, back to the hotel, on the elevator, upstairs and back down again.

"They would follow me around in Massillon in making contacts. In other words, they would watch me, so that I would not get to see any steel workers because I did not want to get any steel worker in trouble."

Anti-Union Lockouts

On May 3, 1937 Clinton Golden, regional director of the SWOC wired the company requesting a date be set for the opening of negotiations between the union and the management.

Two days later the company shut down its Canton Tin Plate Mill, throwing 650 of its employes out of jobs "until we get rid of that union." On May 20, it closed down the Massillon works.

In the long history of the company's "campaign to crush the union, this was the final blow," the NLRB commented.

"Under these circumstances, the union could not hope to preserve itself without immediate resort to action."

Tracing the corporation's anti-union activity once the strike was under way, the board declared.

"From beginning to end, the 'big move' of the Back-to-Work Committee was in reality conducted from behind the scenes by the respondent and the Law and Order League.

Committee a Fake

"Like the discredited Employe Representative Association, of which it was merely a continuation, the Back-to-Work Committee was the creature of the company."

Girdler and other associates in the management of the Republic Steel Corporation were declared "responsible for the attack upon the strikers" on the night of July 11. Three innocent people were killed during the fracas.

It was on that night that the Canton police force, egged on by the corporation and supplied with extra deputies attacked CIO headquarters.

"For at least three-quarters of an unarmed peaceful group which an unarmed peaceful group of strikers and strike sympathizers were gathered at CIO headquarters, engaging in their usual Sunday night pursuits of talking, changing pickets, playing music and dancing, 70 regular and special police, armed with revolvers, rifles, gas equipment and a submachine gun, were lined up on Cleveland avenue under instructions from Major Curley to expect trouble."

Unprovoked Attack

Curley, described as a former army officer, had been recommended to Chief of Police Switter as an assistant.

On the night of the attack the night off. "Curley countermanded chief of police was enjoying a Switter's orders raised and armed the guard at CIO headquarters. . . ."

"The attack," the labor board charged,, "was led by Curley, the respondent's agent, and by Henderson, its foreman; at least eight of the respondent's employes as special police officers participated in the attack; all the gas and gas equipment for the attack was supplied by the respondent."

"The respondent had publicly approved the use of violence against strikers by the police of Chicago and Massilon, and had urged the chief of police of Massilon to follow the example of the police of those cities."

"When Switter left Massilon, Henderson was overheard to say, 'We are going to clean them up tonight.'"

"From the whole record we find that the respondent is responsible for the attack upon the strikers."

Under Fire

Tom Girdler (left), president of the Republic Steel Corp. and two of his friends, seemed very happy when this picture was snapped in Cleveland. Now Girdler rages against the National Labor Relations Board, which found the company of which Girdler is boss, responsible for law-breaking, killings, violence and disregard for the rights of workers.

Republic's Record

WASHINGTON—Here's how Republic Steel lives up to the law of the land, as described by the report of the National Labor Relations Board.

With seven exceptions, all strikers must be rehired by the company, the NLRB said, even though they pleaded guilty to minor charges.

The company "has committed or has been responsible for acts of violence far more serious than those offenses to which the strikers have pleaded guilty," the NLRB ruled.

"We have found that the respondent is responsible for the incident at CIO headquarters in Massillon, as a result of which three persons received fatal injuries, an undetermined number were injured by gun fire and gas fumes, 165 were arrested without warrants, and 164 held in jail without charges against them for periods ranging from one to four days.

"We have also found that the respondent's police at Cleveland brutally assaulted Alex Balint, an organizer for the union, and on another occasion, beat Paul Castman, an active member of the union, so severely that he spent 16 days in the hospital.

"In addition, uncontradicted testimony in the record indicates that a company guard at the Union Drawn Steel Co., at Massillon attacked and burned Joe Morton, president of New Deal Lodge, No. 1124 with a gas club, and left town after a warrant had been sworn out for his arrest, and that the respondent's chief of police, foremen and a superintendent at the Canton works held Moesses Rafailedes, a member of the union, against his will in the plant during the strike from May 25 to May 29, and despite the pleas of his family, refused to release him until two priests effected his rescue."

Pay Last Tributes to A. Steve Nance

Atlanta, Ga. — From all parts of the South this week came messages paying high tribute to A. Steve Nance, regional director of the Textile Workers Organizing Committee, who died suddenly at his home here.

Men of all walks of life — from the labor movement from the business world and from the professional fields —mourned his death as a blow to sound progressivism in the South.

"His contribution to the cause of labor in our country was a great one," Chairman John L. Lewis of the CIO telegraphed to Mrs. Nance.

"His outstanding ability and his fine traits of character made possible great constructive service and endeared him to all who were privileged to know him."

"Steve Nance has fallen in the forefront of the greatest battle for human rights that has been waged in this country since we proclaimed our political independence in 1776," declare Sidney Hillman, chairman of the TWOC.

"The only tribute we can pay to the memory of such a man as Steve Nance is to fight on and bring to a triumphant end the work or organizing the toilers in the mill, store, mine and factory. The spirit of Steve Nance calls upon us all to carry on."

Rep. Robert Ramspeck, a close friend of Nance, described him as "one of the most unselfish men I have ever known, devoted to the workers, every ready to give himself to any humanitarian movement, active always for civic progress."

Governor's Statement

Gov. E. D. Rivers of Georgie declared that the people of the State will miss him.

Frank Neely, chairman of the Federal Reserve Bank board district, described Nance as one of "Atlanta's most useful citizens."

"The South has lost one of its greatest contributors to progress," said C. F. Palmer, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce.

Atlanta newspapers spoke editorially of Nance's constructive accomplishments in aiding the under-privileged of the State.

"He was instrumental in the achievement of many worthy reforms, and his wife was well filled with unselfish service to his fellow men," commented the Atlanta Constitution.

Tarleton Collier, columnist for the Atlanta Georgian, spoke of Nance as "one of the most potent philosophers in the South."

"Unlike most philosophers, he did not keep himself remote in the cloisters of thought and calculation, but tried to do something about the human situation—and trying, actually worked himself to death at it."

"It is very difficult to give an adequate idea of what Steve meant to the South," declared Lucy Randolph Mason, of the TWOC. "His influence not only in the labor movement but in civic and social work activities was beyond measure. He was undoubtedly the best-loved man in Atlanta."

TWOC Picks Lawrence To Succeed Nance

Atlanta, Ga.—Roy R. Lawrence, TWOC regional director for the Carolinas, has been appointed director of the Textile Workers Organizing Committee for the Deep South to succeed A. Steve Nance, who died of a stroke April 3.

The appointment was made by Emil Rieve, acting head of the nation-wide TWOC campaign. At a conference attended by nearly 100 CIO and TWOC leaders in the south, meeting in honor of Nance, Rieve outlined the successes won during the year under the directorship of Nance, and asked that his death be memorialized by a re-dedication of organizing efforts.

"Steve was an institution in himself," Rieve said. "Nothing could please him more than organization of the down-trodden whom he so unselfishly sought to help."

FRATERNAL GREETINGS

Seattle, Wash.—Warmest solidarity between the West Coast Longshoremen and lumber workers is typified in the telegram of greetings sent by Intl. Woodworkers President Harold Pritchett, to the convention of the Intl. Longshoremen and Warehousemen's Union, now taking place in Aberdeen, Wash.

"To you, our sister CIO affiliate and closes ally . . . we pledge unity in the struggle against the employer, who acts in collusion with the reactionary AFL officials,' the telegram states.

UAW, Victor in Strike, Plans Campaign

Detroit.—Successful defense of its wage scales at the Federal Screw Works by a vigorous strike which ended last week is the signal for an active campaign to organize non-union screw, bolt and nut plants and to lift wage standards in plants outside Detroit, according to Pres. Walter Reuther of the West Side Local of the United Automobile Workers.

The settlement, unanimously accepted by the union strikers April 9, not only restores the pre-strike wage scales, at least until September 1, barring major economic dislocations, but it provides time and a half for Saturday work, and double time for Sundays and holidays. It also grants a 5 per cent. bonus to workers on the midnight shift.

Police Attacks

Negotiations began April 2 after Detroit police had staged the bloodiest exhibition of strike-breaking in recent labor history in the city, according to union officials. They attacked women and children, as well as men. One of the victims is still in a local hospital.

The police are controlled by Mayor Reading, who had the support of the AFL officialdom in the last city election. Rather than support a labor candidate backed by the CIO, the AFL officials threw their votes to the open shop candidate.

"The Federal Screw strike settlement is an important victory in what became a national test case in the employer drive on wage standards in the auto industry," Reuther said.

"We have stopped that drive by persuading the 'guinea pig' selected by the manufacturers to continue collective bargaining relations with our union and to reinstate the old wage scale."

Little Steel Shaken by Republic Ruling

Washington—The score stood two for the United States to zero for Little Steel this week, as the National Relations Boards, in a 125-page decision, issued a sweeping condemnation of the anti-union policies of Tom Girdler's Republic Steel Corp.

The ruling, coming less than a week after the history-making Inland Steel case decision, left Little Steel reeling and squaling. In Cleveland, Girdler spluttered out a statement that the decision was "wrong" and hinted he would take the case to the U. S. Supreme Court, where the labor board has yet to lose a case.

The NLRB held that Republic Steel, spearhead of the nation's anti-union corporate interests, had violated the Wagner Act through:

1. Domination of company unions in its Massillon, Canton, Youngstown, Warren and Cleveland plants.
2. Discharge of 27 employes at these plants.
3. The shutdown of the Canton Tin Plate Mill and the Massillon Works, in order to discourage union organization.
4. Incitement of violence to terrorize union adherents.
5. Attempts to turn civil authorities and business men against the union by donating tear and vomit gas to the city of Massillon, support of law and order leagues and back to work movements, and activities in connection with a fatal shooting incident at Massillon CIO headquarters.

Supports SWOC Claims

The decision fully supported claims made by the Steel Workers Organizing Committee and independent observers at the time of Republic Steel's fight against legitimate unionism.

The corporation was ordered to kill all company unions in its plants, to stop interfering with the organization of a bona fide union in Republic's plants.

Reinstatement of 27 employes with back pay from last spring was ordered by the board. All workers at the Canton Tin Plate Mill and the Massillon Works must be reimbursed for pay losses sustained during the two weeks in which the mills closed last May.

Most far-reaching of all the rulings, however, was the order that all employes displaced after the strike must be reinstated with back pay from April 8—the date of the board's decision—to their jobs, or if no job is available, to places on the preferential rehiring list.

The company must dismiss employes hired after the strike if necessary to carry out the order, the board's decree stated.

"Illegal Conduct"

"The company," the board declared, "served final notice in unmistakable terms that it was prepared to go to extreme lengths to destroy the union and to deny to its employes the rights guaranteed in the (Wagner) Act.

"Faced with this illegal and provocative conduct, the union called the strike, not as the company alleged, without cause or justification, but because in fact no other course remained open to it. The whole history of the company's unfair labor practices, culminating in its lockout on May 20, had placed the union in a position where it had to fight for its life or be destroyed..

"The company, not the union, had chosen the way of industrial strife."

Pass Labor Bills, CIO Tells Congress

Washington—Don't quit before you've passed legislation demanded by union members throughout the nation, the CIO told Congress in a resolution during the union leaders' meeting here.

Failure to pass labor bills would be deemed a "dereliction of duty and a betrayal of labor," the CIO said. It urged quick action on adequate relief appropriations, the wage-hour bill, the Wagner Bill and a large-scale housing bill.

Colorado CIO Forms Council

Denver, Col.—A strong, fighting Colorado Industrial Union Council was formed here by a convention of 150 delegates from CIO unions.

Frank Hefferly, president of District 15 of the United Mine Workers, and head of the State Federation of Labor until he was ousted in accordance with William Green's splitting orders, was elected president of the new council.

Other officers represented the mine, mill and smelter workers; the newspaper guild; the packinghouse workers; the agricultural workers and the federal workers.

Pres. Reid Robinson of the Intl. Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, told of the need for strength to offset reactionary attacks by a few AFL leaders and the open shop interests on the CIO industrial unions.

CIO Plans 1938 Convention; Demands Congress Pass Social Legislation

Washington — A constitutional convention of all unions of the Committee for Industrial Organization is to be held this year, it was decided at the conference of CIO union presidents which met in Washington April and 12 and 13.

An emphatic stand was taken by the conference on immediate passage of wage and hour legislation, and the Wagner bill requiring the government to give contracts and loans only to concerns which observe the Labor Relations Act.

Congress was asked not to adjourn until this and other Legislation of vital importance to labor and the country is enacted.

The conference also set up standing committees on Legislation, unemployment, housing and social security. It elected Philip Murray and Sidney Hillman to the new offices of vice-chairmen of the National CIO.

"The CIO has more than held its own in the current depression", said Chairman John L. Lewis in opening the conference. He reported that the number of CIO national and international unions had increased from 32 to 39 since the last meeting, revealing rapid progress in the packinghouse, furniture, quarry, utilities and maritime industries.

Resists Wage Cuts

The CIO has also "stood adamant against wage cuts", Lewis said, and its unions have maintained or renewed their agreements without reduction of wages, despite concerted attacks on wage levels.

"New national agreements of far-reaching scope have also been effectuaged in the recent past with General Electric Co., Postal Telegraph and many other large corporations", he said.

"The CIO's vigorous activities on behalf of unemployed workers are another indication of the CIO position in the vanguard of progressive forces in America".

Director Brophy's report emphasized the progress made in setting up state and city industrial union councils. It listed 15 states in which these have already been established and noted that new councils were to be formed in the near future in Colorado, California, Indiana, Iowa and Michigan as well.

Reports from presidents of the CIO unions to the conference revealed remarkable organizing progress in every case, despite the depression, and a consistent record of maintaining and improving conditions against all attacks.

Maritime Body Called No. 1 Union-Baiter

Washington — Sharp protest against anti-union policies of the U. S. Maritime Commission was voiced by CIO leaders at the CIO conference, including Joseph Curran, of the National Maritime Union, which has been the target of labor baiting attacks in recent weeks.

"The Maritime Commission is becoming the No. 1 union-breaking agency in the U. S.," Curran declared. "It is refusing to ship men with union books. The seamen are being denied their rights under the Wagner Act. The National Maritime Union is now under the strongest attack of any CIO organization."

Probe Demanded

In a unanimous resolution passed at the conference the delegates urged passage of the Sirovich measure in Congress to investigate the Commission in its anti-union drive.

It condemned the Commission for its fight against union hiring halls, against the Wagner Act, and for arbitrarily fixing wages and hours without consulting the needs of the workers.

CIO Wins Insurance Voting

New York—The CIO went over the top at the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. when the United Office and Professional Workers won a state labor relations board election, there by gaining sole bargaining agency status for 2,500 industrial insurance agents.

"The election was marked by bitter management intimidation up to the moment of balloting," UOPWA officials charged. The CIO union polled 1,278 votes.

They announced that negotiations for collective bargaining and the ending of unfair labor practises will start immediately.

The victory in New York is expected to be the forerunner of a string of similar victories in other parts of the country.

Heywood Broun On Facing Reality

It seems to me that trade union members have an important job to do in pointing out to politicians that problems of security and unemployment are not merely matters of temporary concern.

Governmental agencies are fond of taking action which will, in their words, "tide us over the crisis." That isn't good enough.

The worker who is "tided over" a tough spot is hardly on the crest of the wave. Or at any rate he rides precariously and remains in doubt as to whether the uneasy waters beneath mean to pitch him on a reef or beach, or simply to engulf him.

Economists, again, are fond of dismissing questions of maladjustment with the explanation, "All this will work itself out in the long run."

People eat and sleep in short runs. They should not be content to accept remedies which give no more than a promise of prosperity around the corner.

Even less comforting is the familiar phrase "seasonal unemployment." As a matter of fact these dislocations of industry often occur in the bitterest weather and even the most perfect summer's day is not enough to make a hungry man forget his necessities.

It was a shoe manufacturer in Maine who remarked during a strike that employes in that state did not need high wages because they could fish as soon as the ice melted.

The solutions for unemployment, seasonal or otherwise, cannot be built upon spring thaws and summer skies. No program will be adequate unless it takes into consideration not only the whole year but many years to come.

We must get down to reality. We face a condition and not a passing emergency.

Wagner Bill Passage Urged

Washington—Immediate enactment by Congress of the Wagner Bill, requiring concerns with government contracts to abide by the provisions of the present Wagner Act was demanded by the CIO here.

The resolution called upon members of CIO unions to communicate immediately with their senators and representatives and urge passage of the bill at this session of Congress.

The procurement division of the Treasury Dept., the RFC and the War and Navy Departments were critizcized by Chairman John L. Lewis of the CIO as particularly guilty of handing contracts to firms which flout the Wagner Act. Eighty percent of the material purchased by WPA, he charged, is non-union.

Corporations like Bethlehem Steel, New York Shipbuilding, Electric Boat and Douglas Aircraft, Lewis said, get contracts from the government but refused to accord allegiance to its laws.

"The government puts a premium on non-observance of its laws," Lewis declared, citing the non-observance of the Wagner Act.

"The anti-labor attitude of many government departments is exemplified by the attitude of Admiral Land of the Maritime Commission," who is fighting the Natl. Maritime Union, CIO.

The CIO Moves Forward

The conference of the Committee for Industrial Organization, held in Washington April 12 and 13, revealed and summarized the remarkable record made by the new labor movement in organizing the unorganized, in maintaining its strength and the conditions won in a period of depression; and in furnishing national leadership on issues affecting not only labor but the whole country.

At the same time, after reviewing the progress made in little more than two years since the CIO was formed, the conference decided to take the momentous next step forward of calling a constitutional convention this year to establish on a regular basis a permanent central organization for all its unions.

* * *

The conference presented a devastating contrast between the wishful thinking of labor's enemies and the actual facts. The many propagandists against the CIO has hoped that the present depression would weaken, if not destroy it. But instead the reports from every union represented revealed that they have only maintained their ranks, resisted wage cuts and offered some measure of protection to their unemployed members, but have also made extraordinary strides forward in organizing tens of thousands of new members, winning countless labor board elections and gaining new agreements with the biggest corporations in the land.

Chairman Lewis pointed out that as a result of CIO organization, "labor has withstood the shock of this depression better than in any previous period."

The CIO unions, he said, "have maintained their cohesion, prevented deflation of the wage structure and to that degree have cushioned this depression for American working people". In addition, he said, "many of them have gone forward and made brillant gains."

* * *

The CIO conference showed that organized labor is capable of giving a lead to the whole country, at a time when public-spirited leadership is so urgently necessary.

An aggressive stand was adopted for adequate appropriations to provide useful work for all unemployed; for immediate passage of wage and hour Legislation; and for action to prevent the Government sabotaging the Labor Relations Act by giving business to law-breaking companies.

These are among the most important measures yet proposed to restore the purchasing power of millions of people, to protect labor's rights in the present crisis and to set the country again on the road to recovery.

* * *

At the same time, the conference showed that the CIO has consolidated its internal organization to the point where it has balanced its budget, despite its maintenance of a large organizing staff and its expenditures for organizing work. A healthy condition is in evidence throughout the whole movement, making possible an expansion of organizing activity in many directions.

Two steps were seen as clearly necessary to consolidate the gains already made and to promote further progress toward the goal of 100 per cent. union organization and collective bargaining in every industry, as well as eventual unification of all organized labor in a single movement.

The first of these steps is the establishment of industrial union councils in those states and cities where they have not yet been formed. These councils unite all of the CIO unions in a given state or locality, giving strength and direction to the whole movement. At the same time, they provide a center to which unaffiliated unions will tend to rally for the protection of the general labor interest, which AFL splitting tactics have so severely damaged.

The second essential step is the calling of a constitutional convention of all CIO unions at which the Committee for Industrial Organization will be transformed into a permanent central body representative of the whole movement.

The CIO has for now established itself as the main body of American labor, and through the permanent organization which is now in process of formation, it will become the center for the eventual unification of the whole American labor movement.

He Shall Not Pass

Looking Ahead By LEN DE CAUX

The One And Two-Year Olds Of The CIO

LABOR history in America's mass - production industries dates from the founding of the CIO.

The years BC (before the CIO) were years of company unionism unchallenged and the open shop.

For most of the unions represented at the recent meeting of the CIO in Washington, life began with the CIO. There were only the years 1, 2 and 3 AC (after CIO).

Two-year old and one-year old unions vied with each other in reporting their rapid growth and proving their maturity.

Their presidents too represent a new crop of labor leaders, as different from the beefy and ageing stalwarts of an AFL convention as spring is from winter.

Jim Carey, Mervyn Rathborne, Nick Zonarich, Mike Quill, Homer Martin, Jim Nelson, Lewis Merrill, Abram Flaxer, Joe Curran, Harold Pritchett — to mention but a few — are all men in their thirties or younger.

The oldest of their unions is less than three years of age. Yet all of them have grown to maturity in this brief space.

For the years 1, 2 and 3 AC have been years of rapid change, covering almost an entire industrial cycle.

These new unions have passed through, first, the agitational and recruiting stage; then, the fight for recognition and signed agreements; and finally through the stage of consolidating their strength, renewing their agreements and warding off wage cuts in a period of acute depression.

Unons That Have Come to Stay

The reports to the CIO conference showed that all of the new unions have proved their manhood and their lasting power.

They came into existence on the wave of the great forward drive of the CIO. But they have not receded with the industrial recession. They have become permanent and increasingly powerful institutions, at a time when the wea kare driven to the wall.

The Steel Workers Organizing Committee hasn't celebrated its second anniversary yet. But it has organized more than half a million workers and won contracts with 500 companies.

Ninety-five per cent. of these contracts have recently been renewed without wage reductions in the midst of a first-class industrial crisis.

Chairman Murray reported that the SWOC is now on a completely self-sustaining basis. Twenty thousand steel workers lead in the conduct of this union's affairs, as officers and committeemen of its 1200 local lodges.

The young United Automobile Workers has not only learned to recruit, to fight and to win, but has maintained itself with contract renewals as spokesman of all but a minority of the nation's auto workers.

The Textile Workers Organizing Committee, in one year, has won and is now renewing contracts covering 280,000 workers. It has won labor board elections covering another 200,000.

The United Wholesale & Retail Employes in an even shorter period has been signing up the big department stores one after another, and has established 25 locals in New York City alone.

Union Growth Unchecked By Depression

The United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers will celebrate its second anniversary in April. In line with what President Carey calls its policy of "taking the largest companies first and then mopping up," it has just won the first contract ever signed by General Electric, covering 30,000 workers.

It has become the fifth largest per capita paying union in the CIO and has renewed every one of its existing contracts without wage cuts, according to Carey.

The recently re - christened American Communications Assn. has increased its membership seven times in the years After CIO. A nationwide agreement with Postal Telegraph bringing more than $600,000 in wage increases marks its scorn for the idea that labor can't advance even in the midst of the depression.

The State, County & Municipal Workers, less than one year old, has recruited 12,000 members in New York City alone, and 10,000 in Pennsylvania. It has set up 171 locals in 22 states.

The United Office & Professional Workers, about to celebrate its first anniversary, has grown in the year from 8600 to 50,000 members and is now ready to line up the biggest insurance companies.

The Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers, since becoming District 50 of the United Mine Workers, have made 13 locals grow into 110 and have won more than 90 agreements. President Nelson expects to double the membership in the union's present organizing drive.

And these are but a few samples of the one and two-year old unions which have brought a new labor movement into existence, since labor history began in their industries with the CIO.

To Form Indiana Council

Indianapolis, Ind. — A State convention to establish an Indiana Industrial Union Council of the CIO will be held in Indianapolis May 21, it has been announced by James Robb, CIO regional director.

Close to 1,000 delegates are expected to attend the meeting, which will take place in Tomlinson Hall.

Large CIO unions are spotted throughout the State. The steel union has a large membership in Indiana Harbor and Gary, while the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers have several large locals. Two districts of the United Mine Workers are located in the State.

John Brophy, CIO director, is scheduled to speak.

Win Pact

Evansville, Ind.—A short strike at the Ekert Packing Company, in Henderson, Kenutcky, just across the river from Evansville, Ind., won a contract granting almost all of the demands of the local CIO Packinghouse Workers Industrial Union.

CIO Appoints Four Standing Committees

Washington — Four standing committees to deal with social and economic problems of national scope were elected by union presidents attending the CIO conference held in this city.

The committees, which will function permanently, will deal with legislation, unemployment, social security and housing. They will formulate CIO policy on these questions, report to the CIO, and recommend action along lines essential to the welfare of American workers.

Chairmen Elected

Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, was elected chairman of the legislative committee, which will have as one of its chief interests the pending wages and hours bill now in Congress.

David Dubinsky, president of the Intl. Ladies Garment Workers, will head the housing committee, which will push the program outlined by the CIO conference in Atlantic City last autumn and reaffirmed in other meetings and conventions since.

James B. Carey, president of the Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, was chosen to lead the unemployment committee, which will be charged with one of the most improtant aspects of the CIO program for American workers.

Howard Named

Charles P. Howard, CIO secretary, will head up the social security committee, whose function will be to carry out the CIO program of expansion increase of the present inadequate Federal program.

Each of the committees will have the assistance of an official of the CIO national office, these being Lee Pressman, general counsel; Ralph Hetzel, unemployment director; and Anthony Wayne Smith and Joseph Kovner, asistant counsel.

CIO Backs Pritchett

Washington — Reactionary employer attack on labor unions through campaigns directed against their elected leaders was condemned in a resolution unanimously passed by the delegates to the CIO conference. The resolution called attention to and protested the conspiracy to keep Harold J. Pritchett, president of the CIO Intl. Woodworkers out of the United States.

The collaboration of certain AFL officials on the west coast with labor-hating employers in this drive was condemned, and President Roosevelt and the Secretaries of State and Labor were urged to action to prevent the defiance of the will of 100,000 members of Pritchett's union, expressed in their recent re-election of him as president.

Leaders Report CIO Growth

Washington — Continued CIO progress in organizing and winning improved living and working conditions for American workers, in spite of the business depression, was evidenced in the reports of presidents of CIO affiliates at the CIO conference this week in Washington.

The note throughout was one of steady advance, both in renewing old contracts at wage rates won in more prosperous times and in signing up companies that had never dealt with unions before.

The CIO Holds

The reports confirmed the observation of John L. Lewis, CIO chairman, when he said: "The CIO has more than held its own in the current depression. It has met the test of wholesale unemployment. Its unions have maintained their ranks and prevented the lowering of the conditions of their members."

SWOC Reports

Philip Murray, chairman of SWOC, reported 525,000 members under contract with more than 500 firms. Each of the contracts made last year, Murray said, had been renewed without wage cuts —many of them with wage raises.

Close to 300,000 workers were reported under contract in the TWOC by Chairman Sidney Hillman, where again wage cuts have been successfully resisted and new contracts won.

New Contracts Won

President Carey of the electrical and radio workers reported 30,000 workers covered in the new General Electric contract, the first ever signed by the firm. Samuel Wolchok of the Retail and Wholesale Employes cited contracts with leading department stores throughout the eat.

Lewis Merrill of the Office and Professional Workers reported progress in the banking and insurance fields where the union is at present concentrating. The American Communications Assn. Mervyn Rathborne, president, reported a gain of 700 per cent. in membership since CIO affiliation last year.

Harvey Fremming, head of the oil workers, cited accomplishments for production and refinery workers in his industry.

Donald Henderson of the Cannery and Agricultural Workers listed wage increases won for 100,000 beet workers, for 30,000 fish cannery workers, and the recent successful strike of 12,000 pecan shellers in San Antonio.

New Unions Progress

Similar progress was reported by President Morris Muster for the furniture workers, state and county by Abram Flaxer, president of the government workers, by Jacob Baker, head federal workers, and Albert Stonkus utility workers unions, all of them chartered comparatively recently by the CIO.

President Nelson of District 50 of the UMWA, organizing in gas and chemical plants, reported an increase from 13 to 110 locals after 18 months of CIO affiliation.

CIO Standing Committees

Washington — Members of CIO standing committees named by the conference of the CIO in Washington are as follows:

Legislative

Chairman, Sidney Hillman, president, Amalgamated Clothing Workers.
Homer Martin, president, United Automobile Workers.
Philip Murray, chairman, Steel Workers Organizing Committee.
Michael Quill, president, Transport Workers Union.

Lewis A. Berne, president, Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians.
Van Bittner, regional director, SWOC.
Jacob Potofsky, assistant general president, ACW.
Harold Pritchett, president, International Woodworkers of America.
Anthony Wayne Smith, CIO legal staff, executive secretary.

Unemployment

Chairman, James B. Carey, president, United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers.
Harry Bridges, president, International Longshoremen and Warehousemen's Union.
John Brophy, director, CIO.
Joseph Curran, president, National Maritime Union.
Richard Frankensteen, assistant president, UAW.
Clinton Golden, regional director, SWOC.
Ralph Hetzel, unemployment director, CIO.

Social Security

Chairman, Charles P. Howard, president, International Typographical Union.
Jacob Baker, president, United Federal Workers.
Sherman H. Dalrymple, president, United Rubber Workers.
Harvey C. Fremming president, Oil Workers International Union.
Paul Fuller, president, Federation of Flat Glass Workers.
Emil Rieve, executive director, Textile Workers Organizing Committee.
Joseph Kovner, CIO legal staff, executive secretary.

Lewis, Hillman Urge Wage-Hour Bill

Washington — Immediate passage of wage-hour legislation was demanded by the delegates to the CIO conference held this week in Washington.

"Congress has been in session for many months, without taking any action of direct effect on the economic problems of the nation," Chairman John L. Lewis said in commenting on the need for passage of the bill.

Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and vice-chairman of the CIO, urged passage of the measure as an essential step toward protection of living and working standards in this country.

Essential Protection

"We are facing 15 cents an hour wages in many of our sweatshop industries," Hillman said. "These wages force reductions on the rest of industry. If it had not been for the CIO, conditions would be much worse. But we must not fool ourselves. Some reductions are taking place. Unless we have a wages and hours bill more will come."

Hillman vigorously attacked those who have helped to stall wages and hours action by proposing standards they knew were impossible to achieve.

"We have seen in the last session of Congress that one of the ways of opposing wage and hour legislation has been by bringing out an endorsement for a bill that everyone knew could not possibly be passed," he declared.

"When the President of the AFL came out for a 40 cent minimum for all industries, he knew very well that bill did not have a ghost of a chance, and it was merely a coalition with the National Manufacturers Association to defeat a wage and hour bill.

"This bill means a beginning of wage and hour legislation," he added. "I believe that when we endorse it, we must take the next step. The CIO has now an opportunity to make itself effective in the political field. We must make our political power felt, because we cannot protect ourselves only through our union organization."

The resolution passed by the delegates termed the wages and hours measure one of the fundamentals on which the present Administration was re-elected by the people in 1936, and termed its blocking to date as the action of "a small group of reactionaries in the House who are determined to defeat the express will and desire of the people of this country."

CIO Delegates Meet For Conference

Representatives of the 39 international unions affiliated with the Committee for Industrial Organization shown in session at the United Mine Workers Building in Washington, this week.

The CIO Forges Ahead

CIO Progress Told To Union Heads

Washington. — A story of continued, steady growth in the face of depression conditions was told to leaders of the CIO in the report of John Brophy, director of the organization.

The number of international unions affiliated with the CIO has grown from 32 to 39 since the last meeting of the CIO after the collapse of unity discussions with the AFL, Brophy reported.

"Not only has the CIO proved an effective bulwark against wage reductions, but it has also commenced to build an effective movement for serving unemployed members, and has advanced as a political force to the point where its constructive legislative program for unemployment relief, wage and hour legislation and other measures of benefit to labor have become a leading order of business at the present Congress," he pointed out.

Because top AFL officials have insisted upon driving CIO unions out of stated federations of labor, the CIO has had to form state industrial union councils, Brophy said, adding that there are now 15 such councils in existence and others are to be established in five other states in the near future.

Councils are functioning in Minnesota, Maryland, Wisconsin, Alabama, Texas, Pennsylvania, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Ohio, Utah, Wyoming, West Virginia, Massachusetts, Kentucky and Montana. They will soon be set up in Colorado, California, Indiana, Iowa and Michigan.

International unions added to the CIO in the last six months are: The United Furniture Workers, the Packinghouse Workers' Organizing Committee, the Quarry Workers' International Union, the Utility Workers' Organizing Committee, the National Maritime Union, the Inland Boatmen's Union of the Pacific and the Marine Cooks and Stewards of the Pacific.

Request has been made, Brophy reported, for the formation of a Farm Equipment Workers' Organizing Committee. The matter is still being considered.

The CIO director cited the renewal of the U. S. Steel contract; the first national wage agreement in the glass industry, and the winning of a National Labor Relations Board election by the United Rubber Workers at the Firestone plant in Akron as evidence of CIO ability to advance during depression time. The agreements with the Postal Telegraph Co. and the General Electric Co. were shown as examples of the fact that the march of labor is still moving.

"The CIO program for dealing with unemployment has been a leading factor in the success of the CIO in holding its ranks solid in the present depression," Brophy declared.

10-Point Relief Program Adopted

Washington — A 10-point program calling for relief and work for the jobless was adopted by the CIO here. The recommendations were made by the CIO's standing committee on unemployment, headed by President James Carey of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers.

The committee reported:

(1) Unemployment Committee will prepare testimony at congressional hearings on unemployment appropriations, WPA, NYA, CCC.

(2) Full approval of declaration of policy in regard to unemployment, as outlined in the Unemployment Director's report.

(3) Widespread distribution of literature outlining CIO policy in regard to securing work opportunities for unemployed.

(4) Make an immediate survey in regard to the provisions for unemployed members by national and international unions.

(5) The executive officers of the CIO shall be authorized to organize and charter unemployed workers normally members of local industrial unions.

(6) Secure radio time and every other available means to present the program and policies of the CIO on this important problem.

(7) Where local funds are not adequate to provide the present sponsorship contribution, the Federal Government should be prepared to provide the total costs.

(8) Every effort should be made to bring up the monthly earnings of WPA workers to an adequate standard for the purposes of restoring purchasing power, rather than to maintain bare subsistence wages.

(9) It is a continued objective of the Unemployment Committee that wages paid on work projects shall not tend to lower existing wage standards in private industry.

(10) Workers' Education carried on under WPA should be continued and increased.

Publicity Functions Described

Washington — The CIO NEWS and the CIO publicity department stand ready to co-operate in any way possible with all affiliates of the Committee for Industrial Organization, Len De Caux, publicity director and CIO NEWS editor, told the CIO meeting here.

"Unions which have no official organ of their own may well consider the advantages of using a special edition of THE CIO NEWS for their publication, this arrangement may also prove advantageous to some which already have smaller organs of their own," De Caux said.

"Another matter on which the CIO solicits the co-operation of all CIO unions is in the collection of news for the paper," he declared. "Every organization should make a point of seeing that its editor or publicity representative sends news of national interest about the organization to THE CIO NEWS.

"We can render considerable publicity service to all CIO unions by spreading their news throughout the movement and to the general public, both through THE CIO NEWS and through our Union News Service clip sheet which goes to the editors of all labor papers, as well as to representatives of daily papers, news magazines, etc."

CIO Plans Convention

mendation of the new committee on unemployment, headed by James B. Carey.

The conference adopted a strong resolution condemning the anti-labor activities of the U. S. Maritime Commission after Joseph Curran of the National Maritime Union had cited its interference with collective bargaining on federally-owned ships operated by private contractors, its attempts to eliminate union hiring halls and other arbitrary actions.

A high point of the conference was the discussion revolving around the decision to call a constitutional convention to establish the CIO as a permanent organization.

Chairman Lewis, Philip Murray, Sidney Hillman and a number of other union presidents all emphasized the historical importance of this step to consolidate the national strength of the movement in a single body based on full acceptance of the principles of industrial organization.

The decision to call the convention this year, probably in September or October was taken with a unanimous standing vote. Vice-Chairmen Murray and Hillman were appointed to a committee to determine the exact time and place of the convention and other arrangements.

Standing Committees

The standing committees, which are expected to play an important part in formulating and promoting the policies of the CIO on national issues are headed by the following: Legislative, Sidney Hillman; housing, David Dubinsky; unemployment, James B. Carey; and social security, Chas. P. Howard.

The solidarity of the CIO unions with all labor struggles for better conditions was expressed in the unanimous adoption of a motion in support of the railroad labor organizations in their opposition to wage reductions.

Other actions taken by the conference called for support of the American Communications Association in its drive to organize the Western Union Co.; called for immediate action to set up an industrial union council in New York City; endorsed the organizing drive of the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians; petitioned President Roosevelt and the federal authorities on behalf of the right of Harold J. Pritchett, president of the International Woodworkers of America, to remain in the country; and denounced the efforts to deport Harry Bridges, president of the International Longshoremen and Warehousemen's Union.

(More detailed information on the actions taken and reports submitted at the CIO conference will be found elsewhere in this issue of The CIO News).

Jobless Program Sets Precedents For Unions

Washington — To meet the serious unemployment situation throughout the country, the CIO "has established precedents consistent with its leadership in the field of organized labor," Ralph Hetzel, Jr., CIO unemployment director, told the CIO meeting here.

It was early in September that the CIO advised its affiliates of the need for acting in behalf of the unemployed, Hetzel recalled.

CIO unions kept jobless members on the union rolls, and helped represent them in getting more adequate relief or WPA work. Unemployment committees have been established by local industrial union councils as the most effective means of carrying out this work.

Suggests Plan

Hetzel suggested that "these unemployment committees move to set up sub-committees on WPA projects. The purpose of such sub-committees would be to promote the co-operation of all CIO and other union members on the projects and members of organizations of the unemployed who are not eligible to join CIO unions.

"The sub-committees would act as agencies of the central unemployment committees for representing the workers on the projects."

The CIO and its affiliates have been most active in carrying out legislative activities, Hetzel pointed out.

"In the states the unemployment committees of the state industrial union councils and of local councils have been exceedingly important factors in securing the passage of increased appropriations for the relief of the unemployed. In locality after locality, unemployed workers have found that real leadership for them has come from the CIO."

The CIO is asking for a three-billion dollar relief appropriation for the next fiscal year, to provide 3,500,000 useful jobs, Hetzel declared.

Relief Program

"It is asking these jobs be provided upon the following sound principles:

1. All workers should be employed on work suited to their needs and skills.

2. Projects should be socially necessary and productive. For example, housing, slum clearance, flood control, building of schools and hospitals, health measures, cultural and white collar projects, and vocational training.

3. Jobs should be given to those who need jobs, without requiring honest, decent, unemployed workers to degrade themselves as paupers. Those working short time in industry should be given at least enough supplemental work to bring their income up to an American standard.

4. The funds for this program should be so appropriated to make possible the meeting of current needs wherever and whenever they arise.

This program has already been presented to the Appropriations Committee of the House of Representatives in a letter sent by the Chairman. A widespread campaign is now under way to bring to the attention of the members of Congress the need which demands this remedy.

Legal Division Tells of Work

Washington—The legal division of the CIO has been of great service in aiding affiliated unions to forge ahead, Lee Pressman, general counsel, reported to the CIO meeting here.

Pressman's report showed the legal department active in a four principal fields of work.

It has assisted in the internal affairs of the CIO, handling tax questions, leases for offices, interpretation of by-laws, arrangements for bonding of officials, and the questions raised by the affiliation with the CIO of AFL unions.

In the courts and before administrative agencies of the government, the legal department has been especially busy, Pressman said. It defended the union during the steel strike last summer, has advised local attorneys on the handling of injunction suits and criminal prosecutions which have been frequently met during organization campaigns.

Laws Need Change

The "meager protection given" to the rights to hold meetings and distribute leaflets is "due chiefly to the inadequacy of present laws and the lack of labor-minded public officials," Pressman told the meeting. "These conditions must be remedied by political action."

Pointing out that work before the Natl. Labor Relations Board has been a major activity of the department, Pressman said that "assistance has been rendered to affiliated organizations in approximately 300 cases involving nearly 200 employers."

"Continuous contact is maintained by correspondence with regional directors and affiliated organizations in which current advice is given in the handling of labor board cases," he continued.

"The CIO legal department," Pressman concluded, "is preparing studies of operation of housing and social security laws. All of these matters require constant watch and labor must keep itself informed and prepared to act to promote its interests and defend itself against attacks."

Leaders in Conference

In a discussion of wage-hour bill legislation at the CIO conference were John Brophy, CIO director; Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, who was elected a vice-chairman of the CIO; and Charles Howard, CIO secretary.

CIO Aids Rail Unions in Wage Cut Fight

Washington—Support of the railroad unions in their opposition to wage cuts was voted in a resolution passed at the conference of CIO executives in Washington.

The resolution which was introduced by Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee and seconed by Michael Quill, president of the Transport Workers Union was passed unanimously.

Texts of Resolutions

Wage-Hour Bill

WHEREAS, one of the most important legislative bills now pending in Congress is the Wage and Hour Bill which, if enacted, would give added strength to the position of organized labor in preventing wholesale wage slashes, sweat shop conditions and threatened decentralization of industry to cheaper labor markets, and

WHEREAS, the wage and hour legislation was one of the fundamental portions of President Roosevelt's program and platform during the presidential election of 1936 and as such received the overwhelming approval of the people of this country, yet this legislation has been blocked by a small group of reactionaries in the House of Representatives who are determined thus to defeat the express desire and will of the people of this country, and

WHEREAS, the Committee for Industrial Organization believes that the present wage and hour bill pending before the House Labor Committee contains the essential elements for effective minimum wage and hour regulation and therefore, it is determined that for the benefit and protection of its members and to increase the national purchasing power there must be such legislation enacted at the present session.

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED that this conference very earnestly urges and calls upon Congress immediately to enact the wage and hour bill now reported out by the Subcommittee to the House Labor Committee in order to protect and defend the economic position of the workers in this country, and

FURTHER RESOLVED that it will be considered by the four million members of the CIO as an unfriendly act to the workers of this country on the part of any Congressman to strive to prevent the enactment of such wage and hour legislation and to vote in opposition to the same.

AND FURTHER RESOLVED that all the international unions of the CIO call upon all of its members immediately to communicate with their respective Congressmen to urge and demand of them that such legislation be enacted into law at the present session of Congress, and mass meetings be arranged throughout the country to demonstrate to the representatives in Congress the prevailing sentiment in the country.

Wagner Bill

WHEREAS, there has been introduced in Congress a bill, S-3390, requiring all corporations receiving contracts, loans or grant from the Federal Government to comply with the provisions of the National Labor Relations Act and any such employer not complying with orders or decisions of the Labor Board shall automatically lose any outstanding contracts, loans or grants, and

WHEREAS, such legislation would afford an extremely effective enforcement machinery for the Wagner Act.

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED that this conference endorses this legislation and urges its immediate enactment at the present session of Congress because of its vital importance to organized labor, and

FURTHER RESOLVED that the international unions call upon their members to communicate with their Senators and Congressmen to express the importance of such legislation to all the workers in this country.

Aluminum Union Maps Drive

New Kensington, Pa.—Twenty-eight-year-old N. A. Zonarich was re-nominated wtihout opposition for the presidency of the Aluminum Workers of America at the union's first international convention held here April 4-8.

Under the CIO, Zonarch in 12 months time had helped build an international mass-production union with 17 local unions.

Prior to affiliation with the CIO, the aluminum workers of the nation had remained unorganized or in the isolated position of scattered federal locals of the AFL.

In his report to the Convention, Zonarich declared:

"I appeal for unity. There are forces in the country who would seize on this let-down of business in order to destroy the trade union movement. The employers and their associations are still hostile to the labor movement. We have AFL disrupters and a certain number of traitors in our ranks. Any division among us at this time would be fatal."

For its organizational target, the AWA will concentrate in the coming year on the Aluminum Co. of America, sole producer of virgin aluminum and fabricator of 50 per cent. of the metal in the United States.

Several key plants will also be among the independent manufacturers.

Eight A. C. of A. plants and four independent plants were represented in the sessions of the Convention.

Appointment of an organization director was sanctioned by the delegates. Subject to check by an elected president and International Executive Board, this director will have the job of "blue printing" organizational strategy and guiding the field staff of the union.

Endorsing the CIO platform on relief and unemployment, the AWA called upon Congress to raise WPA appropriations and to guarantee a useful job for every unemployed able-bodied worker.

Zonarich

N. A. Zonarich, president of the Aluminum Workers of America, CIO, who was renominated without opposition at the first convention of the union in New Kensington, Pa.

Maritime

WHEREAS, there is pending before Congress to be enacted into law recommendations of the United States Maritime Commission which threaten the existence of the maritime unions through compulsory mediation and limitation of the right to strike, and

WHEREAS, all representatives of organized labor that have appeared at public hearings in regard to such proposed legislation have vigorously opposed this pending legislation and the views of organized labor have been supported by the Secretary of Labor and the Chairman of the National Labor Relations Board, and

WHEREAS, the United States Maritime Commission is constantly adopting policies and practices which are deliberately aimed at destroying the maritime unions by:

(1) Refusing to permit collective bargaining or elections among the employes as guaranteed under the Wagner Act, on ships owned by the United States Maritime Commission but operated by private contractors.

(2) Arbitrarily fixing wages, hours and other working conditions not only on ships owned by the Maritime Commission, and attempting to extend such plans to all ships owned by corporations receiving subsidies from the United States Government, thereby seriously interfering with the activities of the maritime unions, and

(3) Attempting to eliminate the hiring halls which are the sole protection of the maritime unions against the constant attack from the maritime employers to destroy their existence.

NOW THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED that this conference wholeheartedly supports and endorses the opposition of the maritime unions to the pending mediation and arbitration legislation for the maritime industry and urges upon Congress that the maritime unions be afforded an opportunity to effectuate collective bargaining agreements with the maritime employers before any further legislation for industrial relations in this industry be enacted, and

FURTHER RESOLVED that the activities and practices of the United States Maritime Commission are hereby severely condemned as constituting an unwarranted and dangerous attack by this United States agency upon bona fide labor organizations and should not be permitted to continue.

FURTHER RESOLVED that this conference calls upon the House of Representatives to enact the resolution introduced by Congressman Sirovich which calls for a thorough investigation into the activities and practices of the maritime employers and the United States Maritime Commission in attempting to deprive the workers of the maritime industry of their guaranteed rights under the National Labor Relations Act to organize into independent unions for the purpose of collective bargaining.

Congress

WHEREAS, reports have been received that Congress contemplates adjournment by May 15th, regardless of the legislation that may be pending at that time, and

WHEREAS, there are extremely important measures still pending covering adequate work relief appropriation, housing, minimum wage and hour regulations, and the Wagner Bill, (S 3390), extending collective bargaining to government contracts, which must be enacted if the workers are to obtain protection from the severe ravages of the present depression.

NOW, THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED that this conference earnestly calls upon the Senators and the Representatives, who rely upon the support of labor, not to adjourn this session until such important legislation is finally enacted.

FURTHER RESOLVED that our 4,000,000 members will necessarily have to consider it a dereliction of duty and a betrayal of labor for Congress to agree to adjourn prior to the enactment of a complete legislative recovery program.

Hearing For Mooney Asked by CIO

Washington — Members of the House Judiciary Committee this week received letters from John Brophy, director of the CIO, urging immediate hearings on the proposal to have President Roosevelt intervene in the Mooney case.

The bill, H. R. 297, was introduced by Cong. J. O'Connell of Montana.

Pointing out that Mooney was convicted by "false and perjured testimony, and that he is entirely innocent of the crime for which he was convicted," the resolution calls upon Gov. Frank Merriam of California to "right the wrong" done to Mooney. Pres. Roosevelt is asked in the resolution to intervent in the case and request Merriam to grant Mooney a full and complete pardon.

Brophy's letter, addressed to Subcommittee One of the Judiciary Committee, declared that "Tom Mooney stands as a symbol for all of the injustices which have been inflicted upon labor, and it's high time that injustice in his case be righted."

Brophy said it would be "appropriate" to have Mooney appear before the committee in Washington.

CIO Hits Hounding of Bridges

Washington — Calling attention to the stool piegon source of the charges fabricated against Harry Bridges, president of the International Longshoremen and Warehousemens Union, and CIO west coast director, the CIO conference went on record vigorously protesting the frame-up deportation now being attempted against him by reactionary shipowners.

These and similar charges against other CIO leaders, it was pointed out, are part of the anti-union drive by labor-hating employers against progressive labor organizations and their leaders throughout the country.

A special committee was appointed by the conference to visit the Secretary of Labor in order to present the demand for a fair hearing for Bridges.

Reject Wage Cuts

Seattle, Wash. — Absolute rejection of wage cut was decided on by the meeting of the International Woodworkers of America Policy Committee meeting held here. Operators have insisted that wage cuts must be accepted, but the IWA has consistently rejected the slashes.

Win in Chicago

Chicago—Among the victories won recently by the Packing House Workers Organizing Committee in the middlewest is a Labor Board election conducted at the Illinois Meat Co., Chicago. United Packing House Workers Industrial Union 762 won out by a vote of 762 to 71, according to Don Harris, PWOC director.

The Illinois Meat local was chartered by the CIO in January.

Charter Issued

South St. Paul, Minn—A CIO charter has been issued to workers in Swift & Co.'s South St. Paul plant in the name of the United Packinghouse Workers Industrial Union No. 814.

Organizing squads who have been at work systematically visiting prospective members except to have the plant practically 100 per cent. union in a short time. A weekly prize of $5 is being offered to the person who brings in the largest number of applications.

Longshoremen Cheer Wire From Lewis

Aberdeen, Wash.—Delegates to the district convention of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union meeting in Aberdeen, Wash., cheered a telegram of greetings from CIO Chairman John L. Lewis to President Harry Bridges in which he said he looked forward "to seeing all longshoremen on both coasts organized in the near future in a unified, democratic and progressive international affiliated with the CIO."

Lewis promised 100 per cent. support from the national CIO in the struggle for "unity, industrial organization and better conditions for all longshoremen and maritime workers."

Congratulates Bridges

"Congratulations on your militant and successful fight to win better conditions for maritime labor and to resist the boycotts and violence directed against you by the forces of reaction," Lewis wired Bridges.

"In the face of all persecution, misrepresentation and lawless violence, you personally and your organization have waged a valiant fight."

40 Resolutions

More than 40 resolutions were submitted for the action of the convention by the numerous locals affiliated with the district body, which has a representation of approximately 30,000 members on the west coast, and in Hawaii and Alaska.

The largest official delegation came from the San Francisco warehousemen's union, an ILWU affiliate with 9,000 members.

One woman was present among the 100 delegates. Mrs. Edith Morency, secretary of the Stockton CIO industrial union council, was sent by the Maritime Office Workers Union of Stockton, Cal.

John Finney, one of two Negro delegates, represented Warehousemen's Local 1-60, San Pedro, Calif., which has a total membership of 152, 140 of whom are Negroes. Finney is president of the local.

8 LOCALS CERTIFIED

Sultan, Wash.—Certification by the NLRB of the International Woodworkers of America, Local No. 93, has been made in the cases of eight logging companies in the area, the Edlund, Zach and Olson, Green, Foss, Twedt and Anderson, Sultan Basin, Usitello and Neth logging companies have agreed to recognize and deal with the IWA as a result of the certification.

NLRB Raps Western Union

Complaint Charges Theft of $500,000 In Dues

Washington — Charges of spying on workers, company unionism, and theft of $500,000 in company union dues were made by the National Labor Relations Board in its complaint field here against the Western Union Co. The complaint was filed on the initiative of the American Communications Assn., CIO international union in the telegraph and radio industry.

The company union, known as the Assn. of Western Union Employes, in the oldest in the nation, having been established 20 years ago. The Board charged that it was set up with company backing, that delegates to its first "convention" in 1918 were financed by the company, and that since that time supervisors and petty bosses were regularly "elected" to leading positions in the dummy union.

A Cool $500,000

One of the most serious charges concerns the $500,000 in dues collected by the company union. This amount, according to the Board, was collected by coercion and "forced levies," and no accounting was made of its expenditure.

"Respondent (the company)," the complaint said, "has appropriated the said $500,000 to its own use and is and has been thus unjustly enriched in the sum of $500,000, representing said dues."

In addition, Western Union, according to the complaint, allowed company union meetings on company time, gave free use of company office space for meetings, which were advertised in the company bulletin, donated free stationery and supplies, and gave free telegraph service for the purpose of calling meetings.

Discrimination Charged

Western Union workers who joined ACA were spied upon, the Board charged, and were fired for CIO membership or sympathies. A large army of undercover men was maintained to watch for CIO symptoms among the workers, spying on them at work and even following them to their homes during off hours.

Mervyn Rathborne, president of ACA, announced in New York that suit would be begun immediately for the return of the $500,000 forced out of the workers. He also stated that 5,000 Western Union workers had been fired during the company's anti-union drive.

Hearings on the complaint were set for May 2, in New York.

CIO Supports ACA Campaign

Washington — All organizations affiliated with the CIO were urged to do everything possible to assist the American Communications Association, CIO, in its drive to organize two Western Union Telegraph Co., in a resolution passed unanimously at the Washington conference.

Cedar Rapids Firm Signs With CIO

Cedar Rapids, Ia.—The United Production Workers, CIO Local Industrial Union 453, has signed a new contract with the P. M. Lattner Manufacturing Co. in this city.

The union is granted sole bargaining powers as long as its membership is more than 50 per cent. of the working force. The eight-hour day, 40-hour week, seniority rights and extra pay for overtime work were also included in the pact.

The union is preparing to negotiate agreements with several other machine shops in the city, according to Wayne W. Elliott, union organizer.

NMU Signs On Lakes

By HAYS JONES

Cleveland—First victory of the new season, the National Maritime Union signed new agreements, April 6th, with the two package freighters it had under contract last year, according to M. Hedley Stone, CIO organizer on the Great Lakes.

Stone reports that the new agreement has several distinct improvements over last year's, chief of them being the guarantee that all men who laid up vessels at the close of the navigating season last year shall take their old jobs back.

A change in the expiration date of the agreement, placing it in midseason, June 30, 1939, guarantees that these terms shall be observed next year, as well as this. It eliminates the greatest worry of Lakes seamen — will they get back the job they left when ice closed navigation.

It has been the custom of steamship companies to victimize the unlicensed seamen, by making them stay on the beach and filling their jobs with licensed officers whose boats were not yet ready to sail. This practice is eliminated by the new agreement.

In addition to this job security, the new agreement makes the NMU the sole collective bargaining agency, with the sole right to board the boats and transact union business with the men. That safeguards the men from the false statements of A. F. of L. "reorganizers" who are trying to break the NMU on the Lakes.

Lawyers to Aid Lamb

Washington — Formation of a committee of lawyers prominent throughout the Nation to fight the effort to disbar Edward Lamb, attorney for the CIO in Toledo, Ohio.

Efforts to prevent Lamb from practicing followed his fight for Portsmouth, Ohio, shoe workers, who were on strike at the William Manufacturing Co. Lamb had opposed an injunction sought by the company.

Robert H. Jackson, U. S. Solicitor-General; Thurman Arnold, assistant U. S. attorney-general; and Jerome Frank, a member of the Securities and Exchange Commission, are on the committee formed by the Natl. Lawyers Guild to help Lamb.

Prominent Members

Others are Judge William Holly of the Federal District Court in Chicago; Judge Robert W. Kenny of the California Superior Court at Los Angeles; Judge Justine Polier, Domestic Relations Court of New York City; Dean Lloyd K. Garrison of the Wisconsin University Law School; Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel; Gov. Elmer Benson of Minnesota; Joseph Padway, AFL attorney; John P. Devaney, past president of the Natl. Lawyers' Guild; Morris Ernst, New York attorney; and Paul Hays, Richard Powell and Walter Gellhorn of the Columbia University Law School.

Committee members termed the case a "menace to the right of members of the bar to represent unpopular causes."

Poll Ordered At Reeves Chain

New York — A CIO and an AFL union will oppose each other on the ballot at the Labor Board election to be conducted April 26 among nearly 2000 employes in the 545 grocery stores and markets of Daniel Reeves, Inc.

The United Retail and Wholesale Employes of America, CIO union, and the Grocers Store Employes Union of the AFL are the contesting groups.

CIO Leaders Hail Fur Strike

New York—Strike greetings from John L. Lewis, CIO chairman, were sent to the 20,000 New York fur workers who turned a lockout of 3500 employes into a general walkout.

The strike was called April 1 against the Associated Fur Coat & Trimming Manufacturers, Inc., after the demands of the Fur Workers International Union were turned down.

Lewis' telegram, expressing "best wishes for the successful conclusion of the strike," was sent on behalf of the United Mine Workers, the CIO union of which Lewis is president.

The furriers' union also received a message of support from John Brophy, director of the Committee for Industrial Organization, assuring the strikers of fullest cooperation.

"The strike of 20,000 fur workers against the conspiracy of the employers is a struggle for job security and better conditions of labor, Brophy said. "The CIO pledges its fullest co-operation that victory may be achieved for the fur workers and their international union."

Union Active

With mass rallies, demonstrations, and picketing of all shops, the strike machinery is functioning so effectively, union spokesmen say, that the city's fur industry is at a standstill.

At the present time, negotiations for individual settlements with separate manufacturers are being conducted, following approval of this procedure by the general strike committee. Letters are to go out to some 1500 fur manufacturers outlining the union's terms on the basis of which it will settle.

Advances Made

Both independent employers and members of the Associated have made approaches to the union to discuss the question of settling individually, officials say.

An agreement was reached recently between the New York Fur Auction Co. and the Fur Merchants Employes Union, affiliated with the International Fur Workers, providing for a reduction in working hours from 60 to 40 a week, and for wage increases ranging from 7½ to 25 per cent.

Meanwhile several hearings on the union's claim for the payment of more than $1,000,000 in back wages for the 3500 locked out workers have been held before the State Labor Board.

Hit Vigilante Raids In California

Sacramento, Cal. — Scores of union gold miners, their wives and children are in refuge here after the worst case of vigilanteism in recent California history.

Armed, illegal mobs have taken possession of the mining camps of Grass Valley in Nevada county.

The Union Hall at Nevada City was bombed with tear gas, raided by deputies and the 16 men found there were arrested and later deported. Reporters and cameramen have been driven out of the vicinity. Camera films were seized.

Men and women who had lived in the vicinity for 15 years were ordered out of the country and warned not to return. Stores of merchants friendly to union men have been wrecked.

The attack came while members of the Intl. Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers were conducting a peaceful picket line at the Mruchie mine, where a strike has been in progress for some time.

Scene of Strike

The county, in which numerous gold mines are located, has been the scene of a union organizing campaign for some time. At the present time a labor board decision against the Idaho-Maryland Co. is now in the courts.

Reid Robinson, international president of the union, charged that the mobs were supported by the companies, which fear the union.

Union organizers were pelted with stones, and beaten by the vigilantes before they were forced to leave the town.

Gov. Merriam of California is reported to have said that those who were forced from their homes will be given police protection to get them back, but he has given no guarantee that they will be protected once they arrived.

The governor said that preservation of law and order in the county is the job of Sheriff Tobiason, but the sheriff has proved to be a tool of the mining interests and took no action against the vigilantes.

The San Joaquin County Industrial Labor Council, CIO, appealed to Atty-Gen. U. S. Webb for "immediate action to re-establish law and order." The council also scored the use of the state highway patrol in supporting the vigilante violence."

CIO to Aid

Washington—The Committee for Industrial Organization and Non-partisan League are seeking federal aid for the Nevada County strikers, it was announced here.

Jobless Meet in Detroit

Thousands of unemployed workers in Detroit, members of CIO and AFL unions, joined for a giant mass meeting in Detroit last week. From a balcony on City Hall, Gov. Frank Murphy of Michigan addressed the crowd, declared, "I am glad to be here because it is an indication of a united labor movement."

PASS RECOVERY BILL, CIO URGES CONGRESS

"Capital Close-Ups"

With this issue The CIO NEWS begins publication of A NEW FEATURE.

"Capital Close-Ups" will give intimate pictures of what is happening behind the scenes on Washington's Capitol Hill.

It is written by a well known newspaper man, who has for many years covered Congress for leading metropolitan dailies and who is in constant and direct contact with developments there.

His aim will be to probe into the insides of the big political news, and to bring out labor angles and significant sidelights which are neglected in the daily press.

The United States Congress, by its votes, determines the Nation's destiny. Its decisions affect the lives and fortunes of every one of us. But the finagling and wire-pulling of special interests that affect its decisions are not on the record. It takes enterprising newspapermen to bring them to the surface.

"Capital Close-Ups" will do this job for readers of The CIO NEWS. You will find it on page 5 of this issue.

UAW Wins At Budd

Detroit, Mich.—A labor dispute at the Budd Wheel plant caused by refusal of a department foreman to follow procedure set up for handling grievances provided for in the agreement between the company and the United Automobile Workers, was settled after a six-hour conference between union and company officials.

The union denies that the workers staged a sit-down, charging that a foreman pulled the switches during an argument with a shop steward and two committeemen and that a company official then closed the entire plant. Within 15 minutes from the beginning of the dispute, ten carloads of police were at the plant.

Need For Quick Action Told by Lewis

Washington—Labor moved this week to snap the Nation out of the depression.

Chairman John L. Lewis of the Committee For Industrial Organization expressed his wholehearted approval of the Administration's relief and recovery program aimed at providing America with jobs, boosting purchasing power and restoring economic normalcy to the country.

President Roosevelt's message to Congress, Chairman Lewis said, "recognizing the position which has been advocated by the CIO for many months.

"I urge that every international and local union and individual members of local unions express to their representatives in Congress the need for the immediate passage of the President's program", Lewis said.

Immediately following publication of Lewis' message to the CIO's thirty-nine affiliated unions, Congressmen began to receive the first of a flood of resolutions urging quick adoption of the relief and recovery program.

"Labor must come to the defense of its own relief and recovery measure," Labor's Non-Partisan League declared.

"The voice of American workers must be heard in Washington before the vote is taken."

Prosecute Vigilantes, CIO Asks

Sacramento, Calif. — Prosecution of all vigilantes and the removal of the sheriff and district attorney of Nevada County, is being demanded by the Sacramento CIO Industrial Union Council.

Charging that 200 men and women and 75 children have been driven from their homes and forced to flee to Sacramento following a wave of terrorism sponsored by the mine owners of Nevada County, the Council asks for "the united support and cooperation of all unions" to end the increasing number of flagrant violations of the constitutional rights of workers.

Strikers Were Peaceful

The vigilante attack, the council stated, was led by some 300 deputy sheriffs and scabs who raided a peaceful picket line of Murchie Mine strikers, using ax handles, clubs and pipes. Later they wrecked the union hall and drove the miners out of town. The miners, members of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers Union, CIO, have been on strike for about three months.

Many of the victims are lifetime residents of Nevada County and own homes there.

When the vigilante refugees arrived in Sacramento, they were ordered off state property. They refused, pointing out that "the tear gas and clubs in Sacramento can't be any worse than those in Grass Valley and Nevada City."

"The situation in Nevada County closely parallels that of Harlan County, Kentucky," attorneys for the strikers told U. S. Atty. Frank Hennessy.

"If we cannot obtain the intervention of the federal government, there will be further bloodshed and violence on the part of the vigilantes, aided and abetted by public officers of Nevada County."

TWOC Signs With Coats

Pawtucket, R. I. — Negotiations between the Textile Workers Organizing Committee and J. & P. Coats, Inc. resulted in the signing of a year's contract with Local 5, renewing the principal terms included in a previous agreement. The firm was one of the first large companies in the country to recognize the TWOC when it was first organized.

The new contract continues the standard 40-hour week, time and a half for overtime, and vacations with pay, and provides for "maintaining wages upon a comparable competitive basis to that generally paid in the industry."

CIO Salmon Canners Win Seattle Poll

Seattle — A two-to-one election victory, with certification of the CIO Cannery Workers and Farm Laborers Union, Local 7, affiliated to the United Cannery Agricultural Packing and Allied Workers of America was won here.

Covers 5000 in Alaska

The election was won by a vote of 2101 to 1189. Local 7 of the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers of America has been fighting a 10 per cent wage cut that the $65,000,000 Alaska Salmon Industry is attempting to put over on fish cannery workers.

Employers have been making the issue between themselves and Local 7 harder by attempting to deal with and recognize Local 18257 of the AFL. This paper organization, set up as a company union, offered salmon cannery employers a complete sell-out contract.

In refusing to accept a wage cut Local 7 has the support of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific to which the Local is affiliated.

They Escaped From a Vigilante Gang

In the shadow of the California State Capitol at Sacramento, members of the CIO Intl. Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers pitch tents after being routed from their homes, with their women and children, by Nevada City anti-union vigilantes. The men, employed at gold mines in Grass Valley, demanded Gov. Merriam pledge them "absolute guarantees of protection" in their homes.

UAW Strike Stops Ford Plant

Long Beach, Cal. — Production at the Ford assembly plant halted here when the United Automobile Workers went on strike against refusal of the company to recognize the union or meet its bargaining committee.

One thousand UAW members, joined by CIO longshoremen and oil workers, joined the picket line.

"Briefly, the company refused to obey in any way the law of the nation on collective bargaining," declared Irvan Casey, UAW west coast regional director.

He said the company has repeatedly discriminated against union men and has spurned efforts of the union to discuss grievances.

Success Story

Typical American success stories are usually concerned with a "from rags to riches" theme.

The CIO NEWS this week presents a new type of American success story—the tale of the growth of mighty Steel Workers Organizing Committee, which brought new hopes and added security to hundreds of thousands of workers.

News Guild Wins Two Pacts

New York, 'Frisco Publishers Grant Union's Demands

San Francisco, Cal. — Seven hundred editorial and commercial workers have won a contract with San Francisco's five newspapers.

The contract, secured by the Northern California Newspaper Guild, CIO, was gained after three weeks of negotiations, in which the publishers attempted unsuccessfully to split workers in the editorial and business departments of the papers.

An Industrial Pact

The contract, first in the nation to include both groups of workers, guarantees job security, preferential rehiring in the event of lay-offs, high dismissal pay, a cut in working hours, overtime compensation, and other gains. A clause specifically forbids wage cuts during the life of the contract. The five day, 40-hour week, previously only enjoyed by certain groups of editorial workers, is extended to all employes.

In addition, the contract carries standard Guild vacation and sick leave clauses.

Publisher opposition to signing the contract was finally broken when Guild members in the San Francisco area voted late in March to strike the five papers unless favorable action was taken.

An oral agreement with the publishers permits Guild members to refrain from walking through picket lines if other crafts should strike.

New York—Pay raises of more than $150,000 a year for 75% of the commercial employes of the New York Daily News were gained by the New York Newspaper Guild, CIO.

The pact was the first signed by the New York newspapermen in which commercial employes were covered. Minimum wage scales, improved working conditions and the Guild shop were provided in the agreement.

The contract contains a specific guarantee against wage cuts. The agreement expires June 30, 1939, at which time separate contracts covering editorial and commercial employes will be unified into one general agreement.

Negotiations started January 26, following labor board certification of the Guild as exclusive bargaining agency for the commercial workers.

Time Marches On, Too

The Bronx Home News signed an agreement, it was announced by the New York Guild, providing for increased minimum wage rates which will bring pay raises to 55 workers.

Meanwhile employes of Time, Inc., are expected to ratify a contract covering workers on Life, Time, Fortune, Architectural Forum, and the March of Time. The pact guarantees the five-day, 40-hour week, and a $75-a-week minimum pay rate for writers and photographers.

CIO Victor In Armour Poll

Washington — Sole bargaining rights for the production employes and truck drivers at the Armour and Co. plant in Indianapolis, Ind., were granted to Local 566, United Packing House Workers Industrial Union, CIO affiliate, by the Labor Board.

The union was certified by the board on the basis of a comparison made between the union membership list and the company payroll, which showed that of the 287 employes eligible to belong, 149 were members of Local 566.

ANG Strike Closes Paper at Duluth

Duluth, Minn. — Guild strikers are holding firm in the third week of their walk-out against the Duluth Herald and News-Tribune.

The strike was called when the management refused to continue negotiations on a pending contract, and was continued when management attempted a splitting move by offering the Guild shop to commercial employes but refusing it to editorial workers.

Support from local AFL unions has come from the Duluth Typographical chapel and from the Teamsters. A. C. Schaefer of the Typographicals strongly condemned the publisher last week for his adamant attitude on the contract. Fred Smith of the Teamsters pledged that his organization would refuse to haul through the Guild picket line.

State AFL Tries Split

At the same time, both AFL leaders strongly condemned splitting efforts of E. L. Slaughter, State Federation of Labor representative, who suddenly appeared after the strike had started with a demand for "recognition" of an AFL office workers union. The union had not existed before the strike began, had no members, and had never made any attempt to organize on the two papers.

As a result of his open attempt to aid the publishers, Slaughter was roundly condemned by the Teamsters; was suspended by his own union, a local of the International Longshoremen Association, for a period of three years; and was ordered to withdraw his "protest" by the Duluth Trades and Labor Assembly.

Strike Paper Published

During the strike, Duluth newspaper readers have been receiving their full ration of local and national news through the "Guild Daily," which has reached a circulation of 15,000 and is supplying complete wire service.

The strike paper has broken an attempted boycott of Duluth newspaper readers by Twin Cities and other out of town publishers, who are attempting to help their brother employer by a news-starvation campaign against the citizens of Duluth.

CIO Opens Campaign For New York Workers

New York, N. Y.—New York's organized city workers are undertaking a campaign for union recognition and collective bargaining rights. Opening gun was fired this week with a mass meeting called by the New York District Council of the State, County and Municipal Workers, CIO, which has more than 12,000 New York employes in its ranks.

New York—New York's organized city workers are undertaking a campaign for union recognition and collective bargaining rights.

President Abram Flaxer of the SCMWA and Michael Quill, head of the CIO Transport Workers Union, Allan Haywood, CIO regional director in New York, B. Charney Vladeck, American Labor Party majority leader in the New York City Council, and the Reverend William J. Moran of Brooklyn were the principal speakers at the meeting.

Endorsed by Unions

The SCMWA program for city wide recognition has already been endorsed by nearly every union in New York, including both CIO and AFL bodies. Other points in the union program for city employes include the five-day week, a $1200 minimum annual salary, and a case load of 50 for investigators in the Dept. of Welfare.

Grievance machinery already exists in the Welfare, Health and Public Works Depts., which the union is seeking to extend to all city departments and bureaus.

Considerable progress has been made by the SCMWA, which now has organizations in 22 States comprising more than 50,000 members. Contracts have been won in the Highway and Liquor Depts. of Pennsylvania, and with more than two dozen municipalities.

CIO Strong In Ports Of South

Washington—Rising CIO sentiment is reported among longshoremen in South Atlantic and Gulf ports, according to Ben Jones, International Longshoremens and Warehousemens Union officer recently returned from an extended trip in that region.

"Thorough disgust with the tactics of Joe Ryan's ILA stooges was evident among the rank and file," Jones declared. "In most ports the men realizing that Ryan's outfit is simply a stall for the shipowners, are refusing to pay dues any longer."

As an example of ILA treatment of the membership, Jones cited a recent conference with stevedores in Tampa, Fla., where members of the local were refused admission to the conference room by ILA officials, who did all the talking and told the rank and file nothing.

Police Violence Fails

Police and company terror was reported in several of the ports Jones visited. In Savannah, the favorite trick is an old one—arresting active union workers for "vagrancy"—which doesn't mean much legally but adds up to a long stretch in the local hoosegow.

If the worker is found with CIO literature, the judge tries to intimidate him further with a long tirade on "insurrection" and increases the sentence.

Fisk Acts Too Frisky --TWOC

Boston, Mass. — Complaints charging the Fisk Rubber Corporation's textile division in New Bedford, Mass., with violating the National Labor Relations Act have been filed by the Textile Workers Organizing Committee.

The CIO union claims that the Fisk Corp. has violated its contract with TWOC, has interfered with the collective bargaining rights of its employes and has formed a company union known as the New Bedford Tire Fabrics Protective Association.

The company tried also to force through a 12½% cut in wages, TWOC officials charge, by promising more work if it were accepted. The local rejected the proposal four-to-one in a secret ballot.

Girdler, Sore, To Fight NLRB

Philadelphia — Tom Girdler's Republic Steel Corp. this week filed an appeal in federal circuit court here against the National Labor Relations Board decision ordering the company to end anti-union practices.

The company also asked the court to restrain the board from enforcing its order, but the court took no action on issuing a restraining order and set no definite date for a hearing.

HEADS, CIO WINS

Detroit—United Cigar Workers Local Industrial Union 24 emerged the winner in a Natl. Labor Relations Board election at the Bernard Schwartz Co., makers of R. G. Dun cigars. The union polled 168 votes, to 145 for the opposition, thereby disappointing a manager of the company who was reported to have offered four-to-three odds that the union would lose the vote.

Texas League Meets April 30

San Antonio, Tex. — This city, scene of a recent strike victory by CIO pecan workers, has been picked by Labor's Non-Partisan League for its state convention.

The meeting, to be held April 30, will bring together representatives from a large number of unions throughout the state. The call to the convention was signed by nine leaders of AFL and CIO unions.

Ask City Recognize Employes

In the first city-wide mass meeting of 5,000 civil service employes in New York City held by the State, County and Municipal Workers, CIO, the union requested the city administration to grant recognition and establish grievance machinery. Shown at the meeting are: (left to right) Allen Haywood, CIO regional director; Pres. Michael Quill of the Transport Workers Union; and Pres. Abram Flaxer of the SCMWA.

Ohio CIO Ok's Relief Program

Columbus, Ohio — Support of President Roosevelt's work relief and recovery program was urged in letters sent to every member of the Ohio delegation in Congress by Ted F. Silvey, secretary-treasurer of the Ohio CIO Industrial Union Council.

Citing "two groups of unemployed — those on relief and those on dividends" — Silvey said that "the reason why business is bad, and the reason why work relief is necessary, is because there is too much profit going to dividends for re-investment and not enough profit being paid out as wages and salaries for consumer purchasing power."

The letter claimed that there were 100,000 members of CIO unions in Ohio out of work. "Our members are hungry and suffering, and not disposed to listen to intricate expositions of high finance, invented by bankers and promulgated by newspaper publishers. We want work, and we want it now," the letter concluded.

RAP CHICAGO AFL

Chicago, Ill.—Locals of the Intl. Fur Workers and the National Maritime Union, CIO, have gone on record condemning the Chicago Federation of Labor, AFL, for anti-union acts. The unions accused the federation of seeking to split the ranks of Local 45 of the fur workers in order to establish a dual organization.

Pass Wagner Bill, Halt Law-Breaking, CIO Tells Congress

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON—Describing the new Wagner bill to enforce collective bargaining by government contractors as "the most effective enforcement machinery for the National Labor Relations Act that we know of," Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, testified this week before a House Judiciary sub-committee urging immediate passage of the measure.

At the same time E. L. Oliver, executive vice-president of Labor's Non-Partisan League, added League backing to the CIO demand for the bill, terming it a potential "guardian of the civil and constitutional rights of American workers to collective bargaining."

President Harvey C. Fremming of the Oil Workers International Union told the committee that "all that this law says is that a person who violates the Wagner Act is not entitled to any business from the government."

Subsidized Law Breakers

Under present conditions, in which anti-labor corporations that openly violate the Labor Relations Act continue to enjoy profitable contracts from the U. S. government, the government is in effect subsidizing the violation of its own laws, Pressman pointed out.

The proposed measure, which would remove federal contracts from such law-breaking companies, would end this situation, he declared.

"Among the most notorious violators of the Labor Act are corporations which receive substantial sums from the U. S. through contracts or loans," Pressman said.

"Evidence disclosed by the La Follette Civil Liberties Committee has shown that there are powerful groups of employers and reactionary interests who are determined to defeat the purposes of the Act, and who are using every means at their disposal, however corrupt, to flaunt its provisions."

An Intolerable Situation

"This bill, if enacted into law at this session, will put an end to this intolerable situation. Under its provisions, upon a finding of the Labor Board that an employer has violated the act, any contract with a government agency may be cancelled, and he is disqualified from bidding for any contracts in the future, until he has compiled with the Board's decision," the CIO counsel added.

Action On Wage Bill Asked

Washington—Force the wage-hour bill out of the Tory hands of the House Rules Committee, Labor's Non-Partisan League asked this week.

Members of unions affiliated with the organization were requested to write or wire to the rules committee and demand that the measure be given a place on the House calendar immediately.

The rules committee, it is recalled, held up a wage-hour bill for several months at the special session of Congress late last year, and unless pressure is exerted, is expected to try a similar stunt with the new bill adopted last week by the House Labor Committee.

"The reporting of wages and hours legislation is a definite victory for labor," the League declared.

Urge Pressure

"It is now imperative that the House Rules Committee, which stifled this legislation earlier, grant a rule at once so that the legislation can come before the House membership for action."

Committee Members

Members of the Rules Committee, to whom union members should send their letters or wires are:

J. J. O'Connor, N. Y., chairman; A. J. Sabath, Ill.; A. H. Greenwood, Ind.; E. E. Cox, Ga.; W. J. Driver, Ark.; H. W. Smith, Va.; J. B. Clark, N. C.; M. Dies, Tex.; B. B. Halan, Ohio; L. Lewis, Col.; J. W. Martin, Jr., Mass.; C. E. Mapes, Mich.; J. W. Taylor, Tenn.; and D. H. McLean, N. J.

CIO Backs New Deal's Program For Relief And Recovery

WASHINGTON—CIO approval of President Roosevelts' recovery and relief plan was expressed by Chairman John L. Lewis in a letter to all CIO affiliates demanding enactment of the plan and urging CIO members to let their Congressmen know how they stand on the program.

The program, Lewis pointed out, recognizes the demands that the CIO has repeatedly made for relief measures to provide a minimum of 3,500,000 jobs for unemployed workers in socially useful work through WPA, PWA, housing, public roads and the like.

Wage-Hour Law Also Needed

Lewis' letter further pointed out the immediate need for wages and hours legislation as an essential step to stop the present drift of our national economy toward chaos.

"Enactment of the program for relief and recovery in addition to an adequate wages and hours bill are the first steps necessary to stem the depression and begin a return to recovery," the letter stated.

Text of the Letter

The full text of Chairman Lewis' letter follows:

"The CIO wholeheartedly approves President Roosevelt's plan for relief and recovery. This plan, which recommends that the Congress appropriate one and a quarter billion dollars for the WPA and one billion dollars for the PWA, as well as varying amounts for public roads, housing, flood control, federal buildings, National Youth Administration and Civilian Conservation Corps, recognizes the position which has been advocated by the CIO for many months.

"I urge that every international and local union and individual members of local unions express to their representatives in Congress the need for the immediate passage of the President's program.

Follows CIO Program

"It is expected that this plan will, when fully under way, provide three-and-a-half million jobs for which the CIO has been asking since February.

"We will request from the Congress that the money for the President's program be so appropriated that it will be possible to guarantee beginning immediately an average of 3½ million jobs for unemployed on the WPA and PWA programs for the first seven months of the new fiscal year.

"Passage of these appropriations is one of the most important matters now before the nation. Our economy must not be allowed to drift farther towards chaos.

"Enactment of the program for relief and recovery in addition to an adequate wages and hours bill are the first steps necessary to stem the depression and begin a return to recovery. No efforts should be spared in seeking enactment of these measures."

Broun On Vacation

Heywood Broun is on vacation this week. His weekly column will appear again in the next issue of THE CIO NEWS.

Decisions Bar Fake Unions

Pittsburgh. — Organization of company unions in Western Pennsylvania has been given a virtual death-blow through decisions issued by Judge Ralph H. Smith, in the Common Pleas Court of Allegheny County.

Judge Smith, long an advocate of true collective bargaining, who is running for the Democratic nomination for lieutenant-governor of Pennsylvania on the ticket headed by Thomas Kennedy, refused to issue a charter to a so-called independent union, until the Labor Relations Board issued its decision.

A protest against the so-called independent union had been filed by a CIO affiliate, alleging the "Independent Association of Employes of Duquesne Light Company and Associated Companies" was a company union.

Bill Must Be Passed, Says LNPL

Washington.—Describing President Roosevelt's relief and recovery program as "directly in line with the pledges he made in his 1936 campaign," Labor's Non-Partisan League urged all members to get in touch with their Congressmen to demand passage of the full program.

"President Roosevelt has announced a program which will combine relief for the unemployed with a direct and powerful stimulus to industrial recovery. His proposal is directly in line with the pledges that he made in his 1936 campaign and which led to his overwhelming victory. His unemployment and recovery program is in every respect labor's program," the League statement said.

Reactionaries Attack

The League pointed out that reactionary interests have already begun to attack the President's program, and urged labor to rally in the defense of the plan.

"Reactionaries are already attacking the President in an attempt to whittle down and defeat his program," the League said. "Labor must come to the defense of its own relief recovery measure."

Kennedy Slate Backs New Deal Program

Pittsburgh—President Roosevelt's program to curb the present business depression was endorsed from top to bottom by the "Kennedy-for-Governor" slate in Pennsylvania.

The slate includes Secretary-Treasurer Thomas Kennedy, of the United Mine Workers, candidate for governor; Ralph H. Smith candidate for lieutenant-governor; S. Davis Wilson, candidate for United States Senator, and Edit.. B. DeWitt, candidate for secretary of internal affairs.

In a prepared statement, signed by all four candidates on the slate, it was declared that "we will keep the great industrial Commonwealth of Pennsylvania solidly behind that program and the ideals of Franklin Roosevelt."

"Others may compromise with the President's ideals," the statement said. "We have only just begun to fight."

Support New Deal

"President Roosevelt, in his message to Congress and in his "fireside chat" with the American people has explained his plan to continue the New Deal, meet the problems of the present temporary emergency and further consolidate the gains toward economic security for the average man that have already been made," it was pointed out.

"To this program, its practical application and the ideals it so forcibly presents, we who are united in a fight to stop the retreat from the New Deal, give our unqualified support," the candidates declared.

"When elected we will keep the great industrial Commonwealth of Pennsylvania solidly behind that program and the ideals of Franklin Roosevelt."

"There can be no side-stepping, straddling or dodging," the Kennedy Committee pointed out.

Thomas Kennedy

"Those who are not for the President's program are against it. Those who oppose President Roosevelt's program should support the Republican candidates or join hands with the hand-picked and organization-dominated 'stop Roosevelt' candidate for Governor."

Coincident with the pledge for support of the New Deal, the Allegheny county branch of Labor's Non-Partisan League, announced that some 98 unions and fraternal organizations in the county had endorsed Kennedy, as did the Pittsburgh CIO Council — representing another 100,000.

SWOC Moves Offices

Pittsburgh—The Steel Workers Organizing Committee will move its headquarters to 1,500 Commonwealth Building, Pittsburgh, effective May 1, it has been announced by David J. McDonald, SWOC secretary-treasurer.

The new offices will be larger than the old quarters in the Grant Building, and will provide more space for the business of the union, as well as for meetings.

The Commonwealth Building also houses regional offices of the CIO and the district headquarters of the United Mine Workers.

CAPITAL CLOSE-UPS

By MARTIN STRONG

Among the big business interests of this country and their spokesmen it has become an almost completely sanctified custom, whenever laws are proposed to give some aid or relief to the average citizens, to scream frantically: "A raid on the Treasury!"

Yet at this writing one of the grossest raids contemplated since the holy days of Andy Mellon is still in the making in the pending tax bill, with the chances about fifty-fifty that it will finally be put over just as the raiders want it.

Of course, according to its chief advocates, the most vocal of whom are the big newspaper proprietors, this is no raid at all. It is merely an attempt to give the enterprising business men of the country some of that "confidence" which is supposed to take the place of customers in keeping the business system running.

There is no doubt that the boys who are whooping up the confidence game are an enterprising lot, particularly those highly indignant publishers. And when you get enterprise and indignation of this high power working together, the oratorical and journalistic fireworks are bound to frizzle almost any legislator's hair.

Here's what it's all about. Up to passage of he present tax law in 1936 the government figured to get a part of its taxes from a moderate flat levy of 12 to 14 per cent. on corporation profits, and another part through the personal tax on the incomes of corporation owners which came to them in dividend payments.

For the widely owned corporations, which must pass out their earnings in dividends to keep their stockholders happy, this worked all right. But for the owners of closely-held or family-owned corporations it was honey in the horn.

What they paid in personal income taxes on the profits made for them by their corporations could have been spread thin on a nail head. Stockholders Randolph, Henry, Edsel and Bertie just let the profits pile up to their credit in their tight, big corporations, waiting for the return of another Andy Mellon to make things jake and paying personal taxes in the meantime only on the comparatively small part of their real profits they took out to live on.

The 1936 law changed all this by putting higher corporation taxes on the firms whose owners let their profits lay. In other words, the fellow with a $1,000,000 actual income from a family firm, even though he didn't draw it out in dividends, had to give up just as much as his poor pal who got his million from a lot of scattered investments.

Well, the howls were simply

Adopt the Relief-Recovery Program

When a ship is endangered in heavy seas, all aboard have a common interest in seeing that the necessary steps are taken to keep it afloat.

None but a crazy man would allow his petty selfish interests to stand in the way of the measure needed to preserve the lives of all, including his own.

But in the body politic, it seems, there are a lot of crazy men. That at least is the most charitable explanation that can be given for the many signs of reactionary opposition to President Roosevelt's relief and recovery program.

* * *

Millions of unemployed Americans face misery and starvation. The wheels of industry are ceasing to turn because too many people have no wages, or insufficient wages, to purchase its products. Our whole economy is drifting to chaos and collapse.

The common interest of all Americans demands immediate government action to provide wages and useful work for the millions of unemployed, and to jack up sweatshop wages which are undermining our living and industrial standards.

This is necessary not only to save the unemployed and exploited, but to set the wheels of industry turning once more through restored purchasing power.

* * *

The President's program calls for the minimum appropriations needed to begin to meet the crisis in the interests of all. The wage-hour legislation under discussion is similarly no more than the barest necessity.

Yet the voice of selfish and shortsighted special interest has actually been raised in opposition to this program. It is as if some first-class passengers on an endangered ship were to object to the crew manning the pumps because it interfered with their luxury service.

For labor there is no hesitation whatever in rallying wholehearted support for the President's relief and recovery program. For this program recognizes the demands which the CIO and Labor's Non-Partisan League have long been making to establish the right to work and promote recovery.

An increasing volume of demand is urgent from labor and all public-spirited citizens to see that there is no whittling down or sabotage of the President's program. Too much is at stake to permit any selfish reactionaries to scuttle the ship.

Liberty Needs This Defense

The LaFollette committee has proved itself a vigilant defender of American liberties.

It has probed into the darkest recesses of industrial terrorism. It has uncovered the slimy habits of the labor spy. It has plumbed the cesspools of professional thuggery, gangsterism and strikebreaking.

More than this, the LaFollette committee has followed the trail of anti-labor intimidation from the disreputable hirelings to the "respectable" agencies and employers who hire them.

Without fear or favor, it has held up to public scrutiny all who participate in the sordid business of terrorizing and preying upon the poor.

In its brief existence, this Senate committee has rendered a public service which is beyond estimation. The meager funds placed at its disposal have already brought returns which are too great to reckon in dollars and cents. The committee has helped to dispel the fog of fear from millions of working people.

Now the LaFollette committee is in the midst of investigating new techniques of strikebreaking and terrorism, through alleged "Citizens' committees," "law and order leagues" and the employers' associations that sponsor them.

It finds in these a real menace to our democratic institutions, and it is requesting an appropriation of $60,000 to continue its activities.

This request is now before the Senate audit and control committee, headed by Senator James F. Byrnes (S. C.), and including Senators Tydings (Md.), Dietrich (Ill.) and Townsend (Del... All who cherish American liberties should communicate with this committee and with their Senators on the great need for the LaFollette committee to continue its work unhampered by lack of funds.

Break th e Rope!

Looking Ahead By LEN DE CAUX

Queer People

THE spring silly season has opened. While the fancies of the young are supposedly turning to thoughts of love, some of the older codgers seem bent on making themselves ridiculous without benefit of the tender emotion. Consider the following samples:

* * *

If you think of him as a player on the labor team, William Green is like "cross-eyed Kelly from Pennsylvan-eye-ay, who always grabs the football and runs the other way."

He has scored so many touchdowns for capital when it's in a tussle with labor, that it has ceased to be a habit and become an obsession.

Cross-eyed Kelly Green recently went back to Pennsylvania to score another touch down for the other team.

Having ordered the State labor movement split, he set up a rump outfit of craft officials and bade them make the defeat of labor's political candidates their main objective.

Yet this same Green, but a few years ago, addressed the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor as follows:

"You honored yourselves when you elected our friend, our colleague, our fellow trade-unionist, Thomas Kennedy, as lieutenant-governor of this State. And I hope that he will go further.

"I hope that the people of this State, the great mass of the people and all of their friends, will honor him by electing him to a still higher position, and it would be a wonderful thing if some time we go into the Chief Executive's office in the Capitol and say, 'How do you do, Governor Kennedy'."

But now that the labor and liberal team is well on the way to achieve this result, Cross-eyed Kelly Green is grabbing for the ball with his eye on the opposite goal!

A Mayflower Agitator

Messmore (as if there wasn't mess enough already) Kendall is next on the list. Speaking as president-general of the Sons of the American Revolution to the Daughters of the same, in convention assembled, he let it be known that half the American population just doesn't "belong"—being immigrants with but a generation or so of the ancestry that counts.

Kendall was valiant in defending people with incomes of $100,000 or more against publication of their income tax returns.

But he was bitter against the Labor Relations Board, the CIO, the New Deal and other institutions concerned with the welfare of people with less than $100,000 a year—and their right to representation.

Perhaps Revolutionist Kendall should have been reminded that the revolution he espouses was fought over the issue of taxation without representation, not taxation without publication.

Or was his revolutionary ardor such that he was trying to stir up another revolution by advocating restoration of such a regime as caused the American revolution?

Detectives to Protect Against Detection

William Frew Long, Cleveland's professional labor - baiter, celebrated the coming of spring by defending labor spying before the LaFollette civil liberties committee. He blamed the committee for making "legitimate" stoolpigeonry a bootleg business.

"Hardly a week passes that some new so-called detective agency does not send out circulars announcing the discovery of new and more secret methods of spying," Long said.

"One of these circulars is in the hands of your investigators, and this goes so far as to guarantee that its methods are so effective and so secret that there is no chance of their being detected, and one of them which I turned over to your investigators says that they are so efficient that they can guarantee no undue publicity due to the LaFollette investigation."

Long is no booster for the LaFollette committee. But he has provided another good argument why the Senate should grant it more funds to carry on until it has smoked out ALL the rats, both "bootleg" and "legitimate."

CIO Pushes Insurance Drive

New York—Encouraged by its state labor board victory at the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, the United Office and Professional Workers is moving ahead to speed its organization drive among industrial insurance agents employed by other major companies.

The Metropolitan Life Company, the union charged, tried every form of intimidation possible to prevent a CIO victory in the election. An "Employes Fidelity Organization" was organized at the end of March in an effort to weaken the UOPWA, while managers of local offices harangued their men to vote for the company union.

Just before the election Leroy Abraham Lincoln, president of the company, issueed a letter to all affected employes urging that they vote anti-CIO.

The company is estimated to have spent close to $100,000 in its anti-CIO efforts, Lewis Merrill, president of the union, declared.

Collective bargaining discussions with the Metropolitan management will be initiated as soon as the state labor board issues its certification order, he said. Meanwhile, other elections will be held throughout the country in the near future, and it is expected that the polls will show overwhelming CIO preference.

Employes of the John Hancock, Mutual Life and New York Life firms are coming into the union in increasing numbers, union officials said. They predicted that successful organization of the insurance companies will soon be followed by large union gains among the employes of Wall Street financial houses.

Stop Wage Cut

Ludlow, Vt. — Attempts made by the Verd Mont Mills, Ludlow, Vt., to cut wages 12¼ per cent. were stopped by a strike called by the Textile Workers Organizing Committee. It was the sixth successful strike in northern New England against wage cuts in the woolen industry.

A Story of Union Progress

SWOC Growth Typical Of CIO Progress In Basic Industry

(This is the first of a series of articles about the unions affiliated with the Committee For Industrial Organization—what they have done for their members, how they have grown, the obstacles they have met. The next will appear in an early issue of The CIO NEWS.)

By VIN SWEENEY

In a little meeting room in the offices of a downtown Pittsburgh building on June 16, 1936, twelve men sat down at a table. At the head sat a pleasant-faced Irishman. He was Philip Murray. The others were men from various unions affiliated with the Committee for Industrial Organization.

"Gentlemen, you know why we are here," said Mr. Murray, a slight Scottish tinge in his words—acquired through the fact that he was born in Scotland, where his parents had gone from Ireland.

Thus was opened the now famous campaign of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee—a committee assigned to do the "impossible" task of organizing the gigantic steel industry. Mr. Murray is the chairman of SWOC.

Nine months later Mr. Murray sat down at a table, with associates, in the offices of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation, the largest steel company in the world. Across the table were Benjamin F. Fairless, then president of Carnegie-Illinois, and more recently elevated to the presidencey of all United States Steel Corporation.

Mr. Murray wrote a scribbling signature to a legal-looking document. So did Mr. Fairless, but in a small, flowing signature. Others also signed—associates of Mr. Fairless and Mr. Murray. That was on March 2, 1937.

The legal-looking document was a union contract!

And the news of that history-making meeting was flashed around the world: Big Steel was dealing with a union. Big Steel had signed a union contract.

A few weeks ago when he was retiring as chairman of the board of United States Steel Corporation, Myron C. Taylor told the story of meetings with John L. Lewis and Mr. Murray that led up to opening negotiations and the eventual signing of a contract. And for those who wonder about union responsibility, Mr. Taylor had this to say:

"The union has scrupulously followed the terms of its agreement and, in so far as I know, has made no unfair effort to bring other employes into its ranks, while the corporation subsidiaries during a very difficult period, have been entirely free of labor disturbance of any kind. The cost of a strike—to the corporation, to the public and to the men—would have been incalculable."

And what has the union meant to the steel workers?

Upon the signing of that contract on March 2, 1938 wages went up to an all-time high—$5-a-minimum. The 40-hour week was established. Seniority rights were more clearly set forth. Vacations with-pay were written into a contract for the first time. And machinery was devised to handle grievances which arose in the mills.

But of equal importance, the union brought economic and political liberty. The signing of union contracts with the SWOC brought a virtual end to so-called company towns. Workmen were free to live their lives, without the ever-present shadow of mill officials and mill spies.

And men were free to exercise their political rights!

As an example: In last November's election the CIO unions elected to office some 17 mayors and burgesses, the majority actually members of the SWOC and other CIO unions.

Upwards of 130 others were elected to minor municipal positions, such as councilmen, constables and justices of the peace.

Today labor, both organized and unorganized, is throwing its support to elect one of its own members—Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Works and lieutenant-governor of Pennsylvania—to the governor's chair in Pennsylvania.

In the period between those two historic dates, June 16, 1937 and March 2, 1938, the campaign of the SWOC was spread throughout the nation. Company unions, those insidious devices organized by management to defeat legitimate unions, were the first line of attack. Within six months the SWOC had taken into its camp the great majority of the employe representatives under the company union plan.

The all-but-dead company unions finally died when the U. S. Supreme Court upheld the validity of the so-called Wagner act, which outlawed them.

When Big Steel—U. S. Steel—signed, the job facing the SWOC was to handle the demands by management for conferences to sign with the union. A year after U. S. Steel had signed there were 508 steel manufacturing, processing and fabricating firms under union contract, employing upwards of 600,000 men and women.

Last February, in the midst of the present depression, contracts expired. And again U. S. Steel led the way by renewing contracts with the same wage rates, in the face of a concerted drive to cut wages.

Just look back at the depression which began in 1930 to see what the union had meant in terms of holding wage rates.

Wages in the "prosperous 20's" had not changed for steel workers from a base rate of 44 cents an hour. Not one cent increase from 1923 to 1929, although profits were climbing to the skies.

In 1931 steel corporations instituted a 10 per cent wage cut and in 1932 another 15 per cent cut. There was no union to prevent it.

How do we know there would have been wage cuts now?

Well, look at the fate of the unorganized "white-collar" workers.

Heretofore the man-in-the-mill felt hard times first. His wages were arbitrarily slashed. If the stress of times continued severe enough the "white-collar" worker might then be cut.

This year the 'white-collar" worker, without a union to protect him, carried the burden. Wages cuts have been announced in steel companies running from 10 percent to as high as 25 per cent.

Is the "white-collar" worker cognizant of this situation? Just read this from one of hundreds of letters Mr. Murray has received. It came from a "white-collar" worker in the Youngstown, Ohio, mills of Republic Steel Corporation.

"We were looking for some mention of the salary men in your agreement with U. S. Steel, but we were disappointed. We received a cut in salary but neither your organization or the President seems to care about it. Take the Youngstown Sheet & Tube and Republic Steel, you know what they have done. Cut the men and laid others off and make the remaining men work overtime to get the work out. . . ."

But the cause of the "white-collar" worker is not altogether hopeless. The CIO is offering them a chance to unionize through the "United Office and Professional Workers." Negotiations with one of the larger steel companies are already under way.

Even a brief story of the SWOC and what it has meant to the steel worker would not be complete without reference to the "little steel" strikes of the summer of 1937.

The sole issue in those strikes was the signing of contracts.

Tom Girdler of Republic Steel; Frank Purnell of Youngstown Sheet & Tube; the Block brothers of Inland Steel, and Eugene Grace of Bethlehem Steel refused to sign.

Their reactionary attitude brought on the strikes; and its great toll in men and money. Some 17 steel workers lost their lives in the strike. Hundreds of others were injured by city police and mill officers.

The financial statement of Republic Steel shows an expenditure of approximately $13,000,000 for "strike expenses." Youngstown Sheet & Tube admits an expenditure of some $2,000,000 for "strike expenses." The LaFollette Civil Liberties Committee proved that Bethlehem Steel gave Mayor Daniel Shields, of Johnstown, some $36,000 to "preserve law and order."

Nevertheless, the SWOC has lifted wages, in Little Steel as well as in Big Steel. Mr. Grace admits:

"It is interesting to note that wage rates now prevailing are the HIGHEST of all time, with the average hourly earnings 31 percent above 1929 and with MORE ACTUAL MONEY in the PAY ENVELOPE in 1937, when the men averaged 37 hours per week, than in 1929, when they averaged 48 hours per week."

But the SWOC is not content to be a medium for higher wages and better working conditions. It is now campaigning for humane legislation in Washington and in virtually every state capital of the nation. It is pushing for a five-billion dollar housing program, to be financed by the government, for one million new homes. It has a broad and comprehensive social program. Its facilities in the present depression are being used to aid its members obtain relief, while they are out of work.

The job of unionizing steel is not complete. But about 85 percent of the industry has been unionized. The fight will continue until every steel mill in the nation is under contract with SWOC for as Chairman Murray repeatedly reminds his staff:

"Gentlemen, you know why we are here!"

Workers vote CIO in the National Labor Relations Board's election at Jones and Laughlin Steel Co. in Aliquippa, Pa. The SWOC polled 70% of the 25,000 votes, won exclusive bargaining rights.

stupendous. Where was enterprise, what would become of confidence, if Big Businessman Jim couldn't sneer about his advantage over Big Businessman Joe, who was dumb enough to have his eggs in different baskets? What would become of the country if Brother Hearst and Brother Gannett were forced to pay the taxes the law contemplated?

Almost bowled over by the gales these wind-machines generated, the House of Representatives voted to give back these pampered confidence men most of what they were howling for. On the ground that even though their arguments were phony they must be kept happy, it decided to restore about three-fourths of the special advantages they had before 1936.

But that was not enough. The Senate—that "greatest deliberative body in the world"—deliberated still longer and decided to give it all back. And again the reason was the same: they are not entitled to it, but they've got the gun on us.

At this writing, a reconciling of the difference between the two bills is in conference between the Houses, but even the President's plea that Congress retreat no further than the rear trenches where the Representatives dug in is not sure to be effective.

"Equal justice under the law," says the carven motto over the United States Supreme Court Building.

Another important matter hanging in a balance that seems to have plenty of lead weights stuck under it, is the latest wages-and-hours bill. About it and its fate the most widely different conclusions are heard.

Some Southern members, who have been at least openly eager to get legislation, say the bill finally approved by the House Labor Committee was chosen mainly with the idea that it couldn't possibly get a clearance from the Rules Committee for consideration at this session.

On the other hand, other Southerners report with excruciating twinges that the measure is almost certain to go through. All that is needed, they say, is one more vote in the Rules Committee to let it out to the House, and they think that one vote is almost in the bag.

And there is no doubt that their apprehensions are sincere. Describing the measure as only a Republican and Northern plot to keep industry from migrating to the sunny Southland, one ardent Southerner characterized it as "almost as bad as the Mann Act."

Well, there are immoral purposes AND immoral purposes.

The "Citizens' Committee---"

A Menace to the Nation, Threat to Liberty, Says LaFollette Group

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

Washington.—The "industrial association" has taken over in large measure the functions of the detective and strikebreaking agency as an ally of capital's fight against labor unions, Senators Robert La Follette and Elbert Thomas reported to the United States Senate last week.

The two Senators, members of the Civil Liberties Committee, are seeking an additional appropriation to enable the probe of civil liberties violations to reach into new fields.

With more funds, the Senators declared, the work can be finished by Jan. 15, 1939. The committee, they said, contemplates drafting legislation dealing with the "problems of industrial espionage and industrial munitioning.

"It has reports in preparation which are essential as a means of making its voluminious record available for the use of the Senate."

The "Third Party"

In addition, the report stated, investigation is necessary of the new "third party" anti-union device, which since the validation of the Wagner Act has become more frequently used than ever before.

"Developments during the year and a half of its work have clearly indicated to the committee a new alignment of forces in the field of civil liberties," the Senators pointed out.

"These events turn largely on the evolution of the newly-enacted national labor policy. The Natl. Labor Relations Act is a codification of fundamental rights of the American working man. It imposes one duty on the employer in matters of association or organization, and that is to grant to his employes the same rights and freedom to self-organization which he exercises himself.

"The act seeks to give the employe redress if he is discharged or discriminated against for freely exercising his fundamental rights, and to free him altogether from the fear of punishment or retaliation if he joins or is active in a union.

"Yet these simple edicts, with respect to industrialists and labor, started a great hunt by the first party, the industrialist, for a third party to do to labor on industry's behalf what the individual employer himself could no longer do legally.

"One third party at hand was the detective and strikebreaking agency, the old standby of anti-union industrial interests, whose patronage had created a national business of labor spying.

"Industrial espionage, driven further underground, will persist, but it has seemed a much less desirable instrumentality to some employers since its exposure by this committee, its condemnation by the Senate, and its denunciation generally.

"A substitute third party has appeared in the shape of certain employers' associations. The extent to which industrial associations have become active to accomplish collectively what the employer-member is forbidden to do to labor individually is under current examination by the committee.

The "Citizens' Committee"

"Still further removed, in appearance, is another third party which discloses itself in movements to have the community or 'the public' do the same job in behalf of the employer. The extent to which 'citizens' committees' or 'law and order leagues' are being enlisted for this purpose is now under scrutiny by the committee.

"Instances have been noted of 'citizens' committees' sponsoring 'back to work' movements which are, to use the words of an employer association witness, 'the new technique in strikebreaking, almost the exclusive method.'

"Appendages of a 'citizens' committee' may include a large fund for publicity and 'law and order.' Industrialists, great and small, quite remote from the locality, may be contributors. Publicizing of their activities by an employes' national association, assistance from a high-powered money-raising and advertising corporation with its 'sucker' lists accumulated over years of activity in causes which generally are worthy, are part and parcel of this new technique to break strikers.

"Money flows through the 'citizens' committee' out to deputies and to tear-gas companies, and to local governmental authorities.

"Money for advertisings may go to newspapers in scores of cities far away. A sample 'citizens' committee' had in it so little of the 'public' that its own publicity committee never saw its press releases before publication, its treasurer was unknown to its own members, and its major activities, behind a front widely advertised as a manifestation of 'the public's' initiative, were known only to a hidden few.

"Its public statements represented it as a community in revolt against 'a noisy minority'; yet before the Senate Committee it stood revealed, almost confessedly, as the noisiest, most minor of minorities, though by no means the most powerless. It was very successful in the job it was set to do; then 'records were destroyed because the job was finished.'"

Describing a "bootleg" pamphlet issued by a national manufacturers' association, which carried no identification as to its publisher, but suggested methods for the establishment of vigilante "citizens' committees" in communities, the committee report said:

"Should nationally known and well financed organizations take to propagating such methods, civil rights will hardly prosper.

"Out of such conditions there can arise in many communities an invisible super-government, arrogating to itself judgment (in the shape of manufactured public opinion) and execution of its will (in the name of 'law and order').

"Add to this complaisant or corrupted local officials and privately paid deputies and it is clear civil and other rights are placed in jeopardy.

"The committee believes it important that all the facts concerning these new techniques should be fully investigated to the end that the Senate and the people shall know who control, who pay and to whose profit they are being utilized."

ACA Wins at Mackay

NEW YORK, N. Y. — The American Communications Assn., CIO, has won an almost 10-to-1 victory in a Labor Board election held among employes of the Mackay Radio and Telegraph Co. The election covered the "live traffic" workers of the entire Mackay system in the United States and Hawaii.

Of the total 289 votes cast, 251 were for the ACA and only 38 against it.

Predict Pact With Boat Builders

Boston, Mass.—A signed agreement with the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Co., Ltd., for its Fore River and Simpson plants is expected to follow Labor Board hearings being held in Boston, according to the Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers.

The CIO union brought charges against the firm for refusing to bargain collectively with Locals 5 and 25, with which more than a majority of the employes in both yards are signed up.

IUMSW officials say that the Board hearings are likely to continue for some time as the Bethlehem attorneys have followed the tactics of "wrangling over every point" and are using the proceedings "as a sounding board to air anti-CIO propaganda, rather than building up any defense against the charges."

Marine Union Installs Charter

New Orleans, La. — Some 400 shipyard workers in the port of New Orleans, attended a meeting to install a charter for Local 29, Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, the second to be granted on the Gulf coast. The Local has close to 600 members.

In the last few weeks more than 500 men, mostly employes of the Tood-Johnson Drydock & Shipbuilding Corp., have joined the CIO shipbuilding union, according to an announcement made by the IUMSW.

Keep an Eye on "Hard Glass"

Auto Makers Consider Use of Product Barred by ICC

By HENRY BAUM

(Organizational Director, Glass Workers Organizing Committee, CIO)

The recent report of Examiner Snow of the Interstate Commerce Commission, in which he recommended to the Commission that "hard glass" be forbidden on Interstate buses and trucks, brings to light some interesting facts about this newly-developed product.

Our plate glass manufacturers marketed this particular glass for use in articles subject to great abuse. Doors in public buildings and elevators, port holes and other openings in sea-going ships, shelving displaying heavy merchandise, show case tops and sides where subject to crowded aisles, and hundreds of similiar uses afford a market for hard glass and at the same time present no great human hazard.

Some of our automobile manufacturers in their endeavor to increase dividends have hit upon the idea this glass would make good glass for automobiles because it costs less to produce than laminated saftey glass.

Observation of the accompanying photo demonstrates the toughness of hard glass. This occurred at the Toledo, Ohio, zoo and shows the largest elephant in captivity, weighing over five tons, on a piece of case-hardened glass.

Lowers Costs, But—

This is the product automobile manufacturers are trying to introduce as safety glass.

Safety glass, the glass trade has told us in past years, must be of a type having flexibility and possibility of breakage in cases of accident, yet without danger of cuts from flying glass.

Now, because the product costs less to produce and increases unemployment in the glass industry from 20 to 80 per cent., automotive engineers would have us believe that glass with as much resiliency as a two foot thick concrete wall should be classed as "safety glass."

Recommendations of the Examiner for the Interstate Commerce Commission were that its use should be prohibited on public interstate carriers. If it's not good enough for common carriers, it is not good enough for private conveyances.

Incidentally, a witness for one public interstate carrier in the hearing testified his company would not accept buses with hard glass, even if the Commission approved its use.

Like Steel

The American public's conception of safety glass for autos is one with some resiliency and flexibility, so that when occupants come in sudden contact, in cases of accident, head and body injuries are less liable—because body contact does break safety glass.

Hardened glass has as much flexibility as armor plate or railroad rails, and any sudden body contact will result in serious injuries.

Many automobile accidents occur where imprisonment of occupants is a factor, cars overturn and doors become jammed, leaving windows the only means of escape. If hardened glass is used, escape is impossible.

The driving public should demand glass in cars that is really safety glass. The only article answering this requirement, according to the recommendation of the Examiner of the Interstate Commerce Commission after about three weeks of testimony and demonstrations, is safety-laminated glass.

The Federation of Flat Glass Workers of America is interested in seeing that the American driving public has the maximum safety in glass equipment. It urges you to refuse to purchase a car unless it has laminated glass. Examine your glass closely and if not positive consult someone familiar with glass.

Auto glass replacement dealers will advise you. Your family's safety requires that you insist upon purchasing only those cars which use laminated glass.

Cuts Out Jobs

The unemployment phase also concerns glass replacement men. Present practise is to buy stock sizes and cut patterns for required openings. Being able to cut laminated safety glass, their capital necessary to stay in business is small. Hard glass cannot be cut and only dealers financially able to carry about 2500 different patterns and sizes could stay in the replacement business. Therefore all the smaller dealers would have to shut up shop.

Help the workers in the glass industry regain employment by demanding laminated safety glass in your old or new car. In purchasing a new car examine the back and side lights and insist upon laminated safety glass for your safety's sake.

Too Tough!

This elephant at the Toledo zoo is standing on a slab of hard glass, which is bearing up nobly under the strain. But—automobiles with hard glass windows would make escape impossible for passengers trapped in an accident. Hence, CIO glass workers suggest auto buyers demand safety glass.

Citrus Pickers Strike, Stop Wage Cuts

Winterhaven, Fla. — Fifty orange and grapefruit pickers won a strike at the Polk Packing Association here last week against a wage cut of 1c a box.

An agreement was signed and pickers returned to work when one-half of the wage cut was restored for full picking oranges and grapefruit when all are in bloom.

For spot picking the United Cannery Agricultural Packing and Allied Workers of America, Local 10, won an increase of 1c a box.

Many other demands besides the restoration of the wage cut were made by the union. Most of these are provided for in the agreement.

Seniority Granted

All striking pickers were reinstated. Seniority is a recognized principle. New pickers, the company agrees, will not be hired when regular pickers are on hand for work.

The employer recognizes the right of one or more pickers, selected democratically by the majority of the pickers, to represent employes in dealing with all questions arising between management and labor.

Another demand made by pickers was limitation of crews. The Polk Packing Association agreed to limit the size of crews to 12 men excepting on rare occasions when they will not exceed 15.

Typos End Open Shop In Raleigh, N. C.

Raleigh, N. C.—A six-year fight between the International Typographical Union and the Raleigh Times ended when the paper signed a union contract. The Times the only afternoon paper in the state capital.

About six years ago the Times locked out members of the Raleigh Typographical Union and since that time the union has kept a steady fight to regain its position on the paper. The contract negotiations were handled by ITU Representative Dowell E. Patterson and President L. A. Bilisoly and M. G. Bogasse for the local union.

LABOR and the LAW

By LEE PRESSMAN
CIO General Counsel

(LABOR and the LAW is a feature prepared by the CIO legal department. It will appear from time to time in The CIO NEWS and will discuss important points of law for union members.)

Newspapers all over the country carried as headline news the fact that Robert F. Jackson, Solicitor-General of the United States; Thurman W. Arnold, first assistant Attorney General of the United States; Jerome Frank, S. E. C. Commissioner; Lee Pressman, CIO General Counsel, together with a number of nationally distinguished judges and lawyers had formed a committee to aid in the defense of a leading CIO attorney against disbarment proceedings.

Edward Lamb, the Ohio CIO attorney, who is also executive vice-president of the National Lawyers Guild, defended the local of the United Shoe Workers of America against injunction proceedings brought by the Williams Manufacturing at Portsmouth, Ohio, in August, 1937. Mr. Lamb vigoriously attacked the company's yellow dog contracts, on the basis of which it was seeking the injunction. After the judge had issued a sweeping injunction against the union, he then appointed a committee of reactionary local lawyers who are pressing the disbarment charges against Lamb.

The formation of this committee will not only aid Lamb but it may help to put a stop to the growing attempts to deprive labor unions of their constitutional rights to legal defense, by attacks upon their lawyers. At Lewiston, Maine, during a bitter shoeworkers strike in the spring of 1937, the CIO attorney, Sidney Grant, served 50 days in jail for contempt of court because he advised the union of its legal rights at a mass meeting. Later on, Judge Coleman of the Federal District Court at Baltimore severely reprimanded union lawyers because they defended seamen who were charged with conducting an unlawful sit down strike. Recently, at Los Angeles, State Judge Ruben Schmidt fined Charles J. Katz the lawyer for Harry Bridges, $250 because Mr. Katz filed an affidavit for Bridges objecting to the appointment of Will Hays as the receiver of the Longshoremen's Union at the Los Angeles port. The judge, however, withdrew his order appointing Will Hays as receiver.

It is worth remembering that judges are as responsible to the people for their conduct as any other public official.

Bridges Deportation Proceedings Postponed

The Department of Labor has announced that it will postpone indefinitely the hearing which was scheduled for April 25th on deportation charges against Harry Bridges, president of the International Longshoremen and Warehousemen's Union, and West Coast Regional Director of the CIO. These charges were based upon a claim that Bridges was a member of the Communist Party, which claim has been flatly denied by Bridges.

The action of the Labor Department is due to a recent decision of the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals at New Orleans. In this decision the court in the case of a man named Strecker held that membership in the Communist Party does not justify deportation. Judge Hutchison of the Court said:

"It seems to me to be a kind of Pecksniffian righteousness, savoring strongly of hypocrisy and party bigotry, to assume and find that merely because Striecker joined the Communist Party of America, he is an advocate of, or belongs to a party, which advocates the overthrow by force and violence of the government of the United States."

The Labor Department will appeal the case to the Supreme Court, and pending the outcome of this appeal, it will not press the Bridges case.

This ruling of the Federal Court will also affect the case of Harold Pritchett, president of the International Woodworkers Association whose right to stay in this country has been questioned because of similar charges. Pritchett should undoubtedly be allowed to remain in this country at least until the Supreme Court decides the Strecker case.

The decision of the court is to be welcomed because it will put an end to the persecution of labor leaders on false charges that they are members of radical organizations.

Buffalo Shuffles Off To Classes

Buffalo—For union officers who don't want to leave it to the school of hard knocks to teach them how to conduct a meeting well, the education committee of the Erie County Industrial Union Council has opened a series of bi-weekly classes.

Class members will be taught parliamentary procedure and public speaking in classes conducted like union meetings, with Isidore Setel, Buffalo attorney for the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, as guide and instructor.

Two From Each Union

Each union in the council has been permitted to delegate two officers or members to the classes. Already officers of some unions which have already named their two choices are seeking appointment by some local which may not have exercised its option to appoint two members.

The advanced classes are only part of a program announced by the committee. In addition there will be parliamentary procedure classes open to all CIO union members and, next fall, classes in other subjects, as well as a play producing group. Weekly Wednesday night forums have been started, with Hugh Thompson, regional CIO director, as first speaker, on the subject "Unemployment Relief."

Gertrude Haessler, chairman of the CIO educational committee, reports that the response has been enthusiastic, and although late in the season, the forum and other classes are well launched.

CIO Gains In Pontiac Elections

By SWANSON C. SHIELDS

Pontiac, Mich. — Organized labor, through the CIO, has made great strides in Pontiac the past year—both industrially and politically.

Successful in its drive to unionize the three General Motors plants here, the United Auto Workers recently scored one of the major surprises in Pontiac's political history.

Despite thousands of dollars dished out by the Pontiac Board of Commerce and other reactionary agents for GM interests here to sabotage the labor vote, three CIO members narrowly missed being elected to high public offices in recent voting.

Polling close to 5,000 votes, Arthur Law, Charles Barker and Walter Hardin—the latter a Negro—trailed their opponents by only a few hundred ballots. Three businessmen were elected but they were pledged for co-operation with organized workers' associations.

Not Discouraged

Although defeated, the labor candidates and their supporters were not disheartened. For over a score of years General Motors has bossed Pontiac. GM has spent a huge sum of money to control the city government. It has financed candidates for office who were hostile to unions. There has been a mushroom growth of "civic associations" fostered by the manufacturers to keep labor unions out of Pontiac.

The 5,000 votes cast for the labor ticket stunned the reactionaries.

Another striking example of the progress made by Pontiac auto workers on the political front is the fact that the last labor candidate to seek public office in Pontiac mustered only 182 votes. That was two years ago when Pontiac was an open-shop town and the CIO was a year away.

The powerful strength shown by the CIO in the past election was met with reports of revived Black Legion activity in Pontiac. Pontiac is notorious as the hotbed of the Black Legion, anti-labor organization which had the blessing of manufacturers seeking to terrorize workers. The hooded cult, which still has several members on the city payroll, used underhand tricks in the election to smear the CIO candidates.

Report "Progress" In Fur Strike Talks

New York — Progress in negotiating individual settlements with New York fur manufacturers is being made by the Fur Workers International Union, according to President Ben Gold. Several hundred firms are expected to be signed up shortly.

Meanwhile hearings are going on before the National Labor Relations Board on the union's charges of conspiracy on the part of the Associated Fur Coat and Trimming Manufacturers, Inc., in locking out some 3,500 workers.

The Furriers' Joint Council of the union accused the Bergdorf-Goodman Fur Corp. of bad faith n reversing an agreement to negotiate an individual settlement in the Labor Board's offices.

After acceding to the request of Mrs. Elinore Herrick, regional director of the NLRB, to discuss such a settlement, the Furriers' Council charges that Murray M. Singer, vice-president of the Corporation, reversed his stand and said he would not discuss an individual agreement, but would merely discuss the union's charges that the firm had locked out its workers.

The General Strike Committee announced that over $35,000 had been raised recently for the relief of 5,000 needy strikers which "showed not only the responsibility of the union for its needy members, but should serve as a warning to irresponsible manufacturers who are counting on the supposed financial weakness of the union."

A demonstration by 2,000 floor boys was held in the heart of the fur market during which they carried banners demanding recognition of their union, Local 125, and asking for decent wages.

"War" Falters

Indianapolis, Ind. — The American Federation of Labor executive council's "war" on the CIO suffered another rear-guard defeat when the Intl. Typographical Union refused to pay the cent-a-member monthly assessment levied by the council for its attacks.

The members voted 35,730 to 12,115 against the proposed war levy, ITU Secretary-Treasurer Woodruff Randolph announced.

AFL Bosses Busy at Strikebreaking

Chattanooga, Tenn.—The American Federation of Labor entered a strike of CIO steel workers at the Chattanooga Stamping and Enameling Co. here and has aided management efforts to smash the walkout, leaders of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee charged.

The SWOC called a strike April 1 when the company refused to renew its old agreement. The management established a "League of Democratic Unions," which labor board representatives branded as a company union. The company then persuaded the AFL to take over the League, and has since solicited membership and paid initiation fees for the AFL stooge union.

CLOSED SHOP PACT

Irvington, N. J.—Local 405 of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, CIO, has signed a closed shop contract with the Best Loudspeaker Manufacturing Company of this city.

CIO Starts Oklahoma Highway Campaign

Muskogee, Okla. — First steps in a drive to organize Oklahoma state highway workers were taken by the Arkansas-Oklahoma CIO Industrial Union Council this week with the chartering of a local in the northern part of the state.

The area selected by the Council for the early part of the drive comprises 17 counties where about 3,000 highway workers are steadily employed.

The drive, announced at a mass meeting in Tulsa by David Fowler, CIO regional director, has been approved by Governor Marland of Oklahoma, who stated that he saw no reason why State employees should not enjoy the right of collective bargaining.

Aims of the Union

The highway workers union, which has been chartered by the CIO State, County and Municipal Workers, will have as its principal aims the raising of wages, the establishment of a cooperative relationship between the workers and the highway supervisors, and a greater understanding of the State workers' problems by the general public, according to a statement by Fowler.

An invitation to unions of Fort Smith, Ark., expelled by the local AFL for CIO sympathies to join the CIO was also extended by Regional Director Fowler, speaking at a mass meeting in that city. The charter of the local AFL delegate body was suspended about two weeks ago on orders from AFL headquarters.

"There are 4,000,000 CIO workers that the AFL will never touch," Fowler said in laying the split at President Green's door. "The AFL wasn't interested in the unskilled or semi-skilled laborer. They wanted a union for the few—a job trust."

URW Accepts Industry Confab Invitation

Cleveland.—The United Rubber Workers, CIO, has accepted a proposal to participate in a joint conference with all major rubber companies to "devise ways and means of bringing uniformity and stability into the labor relationships of the industry."

In a letter to James Miller, National Labor Relations Board director at Cleveland, who proposed the confab, President Sherman Dalrymple, of the URW, declared that such a conference "would be of value in that, if successful, it would tend to eliminate the competitive feature insofar as labor is concerned, and so equalize the competition between the various companies on a fairer and higher level."

Meat Cutters Push Drive

Buffalo, N. Y.—Local 105 of the United Butchers, Meat Cutters and Packers, CIO, is going to organize the five per cent. of the employes in 29 union companies who have not yet joined the union.

The local is also planning to ask for vacations with pay in renewal of the 1937 contract, on which the company has stalled for some time.

"We feel that in order to have co-ordination, there must be 100% co-operation with 100% membership," union leaders say.

BACK PROBE

New York.—The New York Maritime Council of the CIO has announced its support of the resolution offered in Congress by Representative William Sirovich calling for an investigation of the American Merchant Marine.

SWOC SIGNS NEW CONTRACTS

158 Renewals Completed; Important Polls Loom

By HOWARD J. McCARTNEY

Pittsburgh, Pa.—During the six weeks following the new contract signed with the Steel Workers Organizing Committee by United States Steel Corporation some 158 steel manufacturing, processing or fabricating firms have either signed or agreed to extend their contracts.

In addition, eight new firms have signed union contracts. They never were under agreement before. These new and renewed agreements, together with 261 agreements that expire on miscellaneous dates through the year, bring the signed contracts up to 427. This leaves but 89 contracts yet to be negotiated.

The 158 second-year contracts cover over 223,000 steel workers, while upwards of 300,000 are still protected by the first-year contracts.

Scores of the new contracts embody sole bargaining rights for the SWOC. During the past week alone, six of the newly-signed agreements carry such provisions. They include: Northwestern Barb Wire Company, Sterling, Ill.; Barlow and Seelig Manufacturing Company, Ripon, Wis.; Phillips Pump and Tank Company, Cincinnati, O.; American Car and Foundry Company, St. Louis, Mo.; Gleaner Harvester Company, Independence, Mo.; Black, Sivalls and Bryson, Inc., Kansas City, Mo., and Standard Steel Works, North Kansas City, Mo. Some 10,000 men are covered by these sole bargaining contracts.

In most of the agreements granting SWOC sole bargaining rights smashing victories were won in government-supervised elections, such as soon will be held at the Butler, Pa., plant of American Rolling Mill Company.

Profits Up

The SWOC filed a petition for such an election with the regional office of the Labor Board in Pittsburgh, but a decision setting the date for election has not been handed down. There are approximately 2600 production employes in the Butler plant. The inevitable victory for SWOC in this election will lead the way in cracking the solid wall of opposition thrown up by Armco at its several plants scattered throughout the East.

Meanwhile, keeping pace with new union contracts, profits for the steel industry in 1937 — the first year SWOC contracts dominated the major portion of the industry—soared to high levels.

"The profit made by steel is a direct answer to the old charges that legitimate unions made for inefficiency," declared Philip Murray, chairman of the SWOC.

"The profits show beyond a doubt that unions bring better operations and more efficient operations to a mill."

Despite the present depression which has hit industry, the SWOC has been able to write wage boosts into several new contracts. Three firms, signing union agreements in the past week, have yielded increases.

All these developments, together with the recent sweeping decisions in favor of the SWOC handed down by the National Labor Relations Board involving Republic Steel Corporation and Inland Steel Company, present a bright picture for the future of the CIO steel union.

In addition to aiming the death-blow to company unionism in steel, the decisions open the way for 100 percent unionism of the industry. With both companies ordered to meet and sign contracts with the SWOC, the breakdown of CIO-opposition in Steel is seen. The decisions are interpreted here as being of the most important developments in the two-year campaign of the steel union.

Utility Signs With CIO

Pittsburgh.—A contract which will probably lead the way to a company-wide agreement was signed recently by the West Penn Power Company, for its Springdale Power Station. The Utility Workers Organizing Committee, Local 102, negotiated the contract.

Spiking rumors of a possible wage reduction, the contract guarantees that wage slashes are outlawed during the life of the agreement. In addition, the check-off is provided, improved grievance machinery, more explicit seniority provisions and an extra four-hours pay for operating employes during vacation periods.

A remarkable spirit of cooperation on the part of company officials during the negotiations was noted by the union committee. Representing the Union were Reginald Brown, local president, Edmund Casey, E. H. Johnson and Carl Owcar. A. N. Cartwright, company vice-president, represented the company.

New York. — Wage increases and shorter working hours were won by Local 76-B, United Furniture Workers, in a contract signed with the Sterling Woodcraft Corporation after a week's strike. The firm manufactures radio cabinets.

Official

Anne Berenholz has been appointed executive secretary of the newly-formed New York Joint Council of the United Office and Professional Workers, CIO. Miss Berenholz is said to be the first woman in the country to hold a position of this sort.

Certify Shipbuilders

New York—Certification of Local 13, the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers, CIO affiliate, as the sole collective bargaining agency for employes of Stephen Ransch, Inc., New York, has been announced by the National Labor Relations Board.

The CIO union defeated a local of the International Longshoremen's Association, AFL union, by a vote of 68 to 6 at a Labor Board election held March 14.

NMUCertified

Washington—The National Maritime Union has been certified by the Labor Board as sole bargaining agency for the unlicensed personnel on vessels of the American West African Line, Inc., and the Pocahantas Steamship co., both of New York City.

The Board's action was based on recent elections won overwhelmingly by the NMU over the AFL International Seamen's Union. The vote in the Pocahantas election was 198 to 21, and on the American West African Line, it was 183 to three.

170 Workers Reinstated

Seattle, Wash.—Some 170 members of Local 102, International Plywood and Veneer Workers, returned to work following an order for their reinstatement issued by the National Labor Relations Board, according to a statement of the International Woodworkers of America.

They were locked out last September by the Plylock Corp., after their local switched affiliation from the AFL Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners to the International Woodworkers, CIO. The men were reinstated on a seniority basis.

The NLRB decision held that change of affiliation from an AFL union to a CIO one during the life of a closed shop contract does not justify dismissal of employes by the firm.

Susanville, Calif.—Lifting of the embargo on the sale of war material to the Loyalist government of Spain was asked by Local 83, International Woodworkers of America, in a resolution passed at a recent meeting.

Fishermen in West Ballot on CIO

Los Angeles, Calif. — Three west coast fishermen's unions which merged recently to form the United Fishermen's Union of the Pacific, are to conduct a referendum on the question of affiliating with the Committee for Industrial Organization. They represent a total membership of about 12,000.

The Deep Sea and Purse Seine Fishermen's Union of California, one of the component groups, with some 5,000 members, will start the referendum April 20. Indications are that the result will be an overwhelming vote for affiliation, according to Pacific coast union leaders.

The other two unions, the Herring Fishermen and the Salmon Purse Seiners of the Pacific, with a combined membership of about 7,000, will vote on the question later.

Merged Last Year

The three fishermen's unions, now merged into one group, belong to the Federated Fishermen's Council of the Pacific coast which decided at its annual convention held Dec. 13-18 in Astoria, Wash., to recommend to member unions that they vote on joining the CIO.

Formerly affiliated with the AFL through the International Seamen's Union, the charters of the fishermen's unions were revoked March 24 at the order of Edward L. Vandeleur, president of the California Federation of Labor, following their refusal to pay per capita tax to the ISU.

Unions Push Kennedy Campaign

Harrisburg, Pa.—Formation of a "Labor Co-ordinating Committee for the Progressive Democratic Candidates" in the Pennsylvania primary was announced here.

The committee will act to secure the naming of the ticket headed by Secretary Treasurer Thomas Kennedy of the United Mine Worker as governor of the Keystone State. Kennedy is fighting the reactionary Democratic machine in the State.

Philip Murray, SWOC chairman, is head of the committee. David McDonald of the SWOC is its secretary and Vin Sweeney, SWOC publicity director, will serve in a similar position for the committee.

Local Groups Active

The committee announced that it will "work through all the CIO unions in Pennsylvania" in support of the labor-backed candidates. Each CIO union will set up county and local committees to further the work already being done by the section of the Democratic party support Kennedy, and by Labor's Non-Partisan League.

The group was established following conferences with a number of CIO leaders, as well as with SWOC sub-regional directors and representatives of scores of local CIO unions.

In a radio speech from Pittsburgh this week, Murray pointed out that the primary issue in the campaign is whether "this nation is to continue the progressive and liberal policies of the New Deal, or is it to revert to the conservative, selfish government which nearly wrecked this great nation only a few short years ago."

TWOC Wins

Chattanooga, Tenn.—Settlement of a strike called by the Textile Workers Organizing Committee at the Standard Coosa Thatcher Company's plant won full reinstatement of the workers and arbitration of all issues responsible for the dispute.

CIO Engineers Charge Law Violations

New York — The Marine Engineers Beneficial Association has filed charges against the Moore and McCormick Co., Inc., and the Sword Steamship Co. with the National Labor Relations Board, claiming that the firms have refused to bargaining collective with union. The MEBA was certified by the Board as the collective bargaining agent chosen by some 90 licensed engineers employed on 21 vessels operated by the two companies, following elections won by the CIO union.

E. P. Trainer, MEBA business agent, said that several unsuccessful attempts had been made to open negotiations with the steamship lines since the election.

The union won polls on the two lines owned by Moore and McCormick—American Scantic and Moore-Mac Gulf — defeating the United Licensed Officers by a combined vote of 68 to 3. On the Sword line, the vote was 21 for MEBA to 1 for ULO.

Inland Boatmen Talk Merger With NMU

New York — A special conference to take up the question of merging the Inland Boatmen's Union with the National Maritime Union was called to meet this week.

Delegates from 20 locals on the Atlantic and Gulf coasts and the Mississippi river have been invited to attend.

Inland boatmen, consisting mainly of river and harbor workers, were originally organized into the NMU in the New York area. Later, during the CIO organization drive on the East Coast, the Inland Boatmen's Union was granted a provisional CIO charter to set up their own separate organization.

"It is the opinion of the IBU district committee," Felix Siren, secretary, said, "that it will be to the best interests of both the NMU and the IBU to amalgamate. A few months ago, it was organizationally necessary for river and harbor workers to form their own union.

"Now, however, their separate problems have been largely solved and the interests of the off-shore men and the inland men are becoming increasingly close.'

Between 9,000 and 10,000 river and harbor workers have been organized to date on the east coast and the Mississippi River, the IBU announced. Affiliation with the National Maritime Union would bring the total membership of the NMU to about 60,000.

A Boost For Unions

Washington.—Harry Hopkins, WPA Administrator, addressing the Senate Committee to Investigate Unemployment and Relief:

"Raising the national income to full employment levels is not enough. To attain more than a fleeting prosperity, income must be distributed among the mass of people so that consumption can parallel output.

"I do not mean redistribution, although we can stand some of it, but rather seeing that the greatest proportion of income increases will go to the people who are most likely to spend.

"That is why I feel that some standards of wages and hours and wide extension of unionization is to be desired.

"I don't see why it isn't possible to contemplate a situation in which practically all industrial workers are able to bargain collectively.

"I look on the labor troubles of recent months as nothing more than growing pains in a movement towards almost complete unionization and I feel that one of the real contributions which industrial leaders can make to recovery is a recognition that stability would be greatly furthered by acceptance of unions."

UNIONS RALLY TO PUSH RECOVERY LEGISLATION

Changing the 'Formula'

The "Mohawk Valley Formula," strike-breaking device invented by Typewriter Magnate James Rand, has been the delight of economic royalists, a threat to unions.

This week the formula, which had been successful on past occasions, bumped into two serious reverses.

In Huntsville, Ala. (See Page Two) a 750-person motor cavalcade organized by the management of the struck Dallas Mills, returned from the state capital—defeated in its effort to get aid from the state. Petitions circulated by members of the Textile Workers Organizing Committee had convinced Gov. Bibbs Graves that one important factor had been omitted from the "formula"—the workers themselves.

Meanwhile in Akron, Ohio, depression-torn capital of the rubber world, the United Rubber Workers are moving to enlist the sympathies of small businessmen and professional people in their fight against wage cuts. "Playing both ends against the middle" was the way a URW spokesman characterized the moves of the corporations, which appear to be a variation of the usual formula. (See Page Six).

Another Indie Bites the Dust

Sioux City, Ia. — Almost to a man, members of an "independent" union of stockyards employes Wednesday night at a regular meeting of their own union filled out application cards seeking membership in the United Packinghouse Workers.

The action was taken on the recommendation of Joe Hagy, president of the "independent" union, who said the union was entirely at the mercy of the Stock Yards Company and could not bargain effectively. The independent was formed last summer.

It is expected the stockyard workers will "charter out" into a local of their own soon.

Demands Pour In From All Parts Of The Nation

Washington. — In one of the greatest labor-political drives in recent years, the CIO and other unions were this week flooding Congress with demands for quick action on the relief-recovery bill.

Congressmen were receiving communications from international unions, locals, city and state bodies, demanding that the representatives permit no adjournment without passage of the bill to provide America with 3,500,000 jobs.

Prospect for passage of the bill seemed favorable as public opinion showed itself behind the President's program to pull America out of the depression.

On Other Fronts

At the same time, labor was being heard on three other important measures now before Congress.

The Tory-ruled House Rules Committee was being confronted with a growing mass of demands that it give speedy clearance to the wage-hour bill. Failing to get action from the committee, House progressives are giving consideration to circulating petitions to bring the measure to the House members over the heads of the Rules Committee.

Similar requests that Congress act on the Wagner Bill and vote additional funds to the LaFollette committee were pouring into Washington.

CIO leaders asked that the pressure continue until the legislators take heed of labor's demands.

UOPWA Signs In Los Angeles

Los Angeles. — The Fischer Corp. of Glendale, largest manufacturers of electro-therapy equipment west of Chicago, signed an agreement with the United Office and Professional Workers of America, Local No. 9, covering all office workers employed by the company, Roger M. Strobel, organizer for the union, announced.

The contract provides for closed shop, time and one-half for overtime, a 40-hour five-day work week, the establishment of basic minimum wages for all classifications, substantial wage increases and vacations with pay.

CIO Wins Jersey Silk Contract

Newark, N. J.—Seven weeks of negotiations have culminated in an industry wide contract in northern New Jersey's silk jacquard mills, Carl Holderman, TWOC representative and Labor's Non-Partisan League leader, announced here.

The contract, signed by the Master Weavers Institute, covers 38 Institute shops and 16 independents, employing over 3,500 workers. It includes the closed shop, check-off, an arbitration system, the 40-hour week and the eight hour day, and three full holidays per year.

CIO Councils Formed In Two More States

(See Stories on Pages 4 and 7)

Washington — Two more state Industrial Union Councils of the CIO were established this week.

In Michigan close to 1000 delegates met in Lansing, the state capital, and set up a council which will play an important part in the auto state's public affairs.

The delegates named Adolph Germer as president, and heard John Brophy, CIO director, warn of the dangers of factionalism, which he said would give comfort to the enemies of labor.

Iowa Council

Meanwhile the Iowa Industrial Union Council was set up at Des Moines, with delegates from 66 locals in 20 industries present. They selected Don Harris, director of the Packing House Workers' Organizing Committee as their president, and formulated plans to organize the unorganized workers in the state.

ANG Signs NEA

Cleveland — The American Newspaper Guild has signed a contract with the NEA, feature syndicate service. The contract calls for the five-day, 40-hour week.

Bargain, NLRB Tells Leather Firm

Philadelphia — A point was scored by the National Leather Workers Association, CIO union, over the McNeely and Price Co., Philadelphia, in an order issued by the labor board, directing the firm to bargain collective with the NLWA upon request.

The board found that a company official told his men the plant would shut down if a union was formed and that he tried to induce them to form an inside union.

The official himself, testified at the hearings that although the CIO probably represented the majority of the employes, the company would not permit an election or a count of membership cards by the board to determine representation.

Aid Guild Strike

The plant of the Duluth, Minn., Herald and News-Tribune was closed tight as CIO timber jacks and Great Lakes sailors, as well as members of AFL unions, aided the American Newspaper Guild strike for a union contract.

Lewis Flays Gag On Wage-Hour Bill

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON.—The Tory-controlled House Rules Committee took no action on the Wage-Hour Bill Friday. A petition to bring it to the floor of the House will probably be circulated by progressive Congressmen.

WASHINGTON.—Failure of the rules committee to allow wage-hour legislation to be taken up by the House of Representatives "will be regarded by the workers of the country as an outrageous and indefensible gagging of the people's representatives," John L. Lewis, CIO Chairman, warned the committee April 29.

In a wire addressed to all members of the House Rules Committee, the CIO leader asserted the right of the people's elected representatives to vote on legislation of such importance to the American people.

His wire follows in full:

"The members of the House of Representatives are elected by the people and have an inherent right and obligation publicly to express themselves and to vote on legislation affecting the interest of the people.

"It is an essentially democratic suggestion that the Committee on Rules permit the members of the House of Representatives to express themselves on the question of the adoption of an adequate wage and hours bill.

"Failure of the Committee to grant a rule for this measure will be regarded by the workers of the country as an outrageous and indefensible gagging of the people's representatives and a travesty on the principles of our form of government."

Southern Strikebreaking

"Mohawk Valley Formula" Fails In Alabama As TWOC Rallies Workers

HUNTSVILLE, Ala.—It's a long way from Huntsville to the Mohawk Valley in upstate New York.

But it's not far enough to prevent southern mill owners from using the same "Mohawk Valley formula" for strike-breaking invented by James Rand, the typewriter tycoon, for use in his New York and New England factories.

Southern, textile workers found that the formula could cross the Mason and Dixon Line when the management of the Dallas Mill here sent a "back-to-work" movement right into the state house at Montgomery.

In a hectic session Gov. Bibbs Graves turned down the request for troops to reopen the struck mills, charged the company with using "onesided propaganda" and urged the management to arbitrate the dispute with the Textile workers Organizing Committee of the CIO.

The governor's refusal to send state troops into a peaceful strike situation on the pretext of preserving law and order came as a rule anti-climax for the anti-union forces, who had thoped to see the state of Alamaba end the strike by armed coercion.

Told Off By Graves

Not only did the management and its assorted group of union-baiters meet with cold refusal; they were given a sound lecture by the governor.

"I have seen this propaganda that is being spread about the mill being closed on account of labor difficulties," Graves said.

"It is the same sort that is being spread all over America. Let's be fair to the fellow who is not here; tell all and don't ruin Alabama's good name by saying that I have refused to help."

The crowd assembled by the company—some 750 had made the trip from this Tennessee valley town—booed and heckled the governor when he pointed out that he had petitions from some 2,500 people in Huntsville who were satisfied that no troops were needed in the town.

Furthermore, Gov. Graves had received telegrams from a group of churchmen meeting in Chattanooga, urging him to do nothing which would violate the spirit of collective bargaining laws.

These, together with scores of other messages from labor and civic groups, showed that the back-to-work movement, puffed up by the company's influence, were doomed to failure.

Company Tried Hard

But the company had tried its best to make the "Mohawk Valley formula" successful.

As 100 cars sped to the state capital bearking the back-to-work delegation, Huntsville gave the appearance of a closed town. Every place of business, except the hotels, drug stores and restaurants was shut tight.

But the desire to close shop was far from unanimous. Many businessmen, according to reliable sources, had been visited by police officers and advised in no uncertain terms that it would be "wise" to fall in line with mill's demonstration.

"Save Huntsville" was the slogan of the back to work movement.

But to the mill's plans there were "two obvious reactions," declared Yelverton Cowhered, CIO regional director at Birmingham.

Mill Outside tCity

"One was the bitter resentment on the part of the union people against the city officials, engenendered by the fact that the mills involved are strategically placed just outside the city limits, thereby prohibiting the mill villagers from voting in the city elections.

"Had the mill operators procured county officials' help in their program, the villagers could register their condemnation at the polls, but by procuring the assistance of municipal officials there could be no union retaliation" in the elections.

"The other reaction was a keen awakening of union interest in the Huntsville area. It is my candid opinion that in this particular case the actions of the city officials revived union interest to a point beyond that which it might otherwise have gone."

When the news came that the governor had refused to send troops, and had insisted that representatives of the company and the union meet to settle their differences, "one could walk down the street and easily tell which side each citizen was on," Cowherd said.

The unionists were "gleeful"; the anti-unionists "hang-head, downcast and dejected."

A Long Fight

Behind the facade erected by the "back-to-work" partisans lies a story of a typical fight to smash the TWOC and to lower wages, increase the "stretch-out"—long the bane of textile workers—and take advantages of the exploitation possible only under the open shop.

The Dallas Mills closed late last fall, supposedly on account of a lack of orders. An engineering concern was brought in to conduct a survey of the compnay's operations; it recommended the discontinuation of some 130 jobs, and stepped up operations beyond the point which the union's committee could consider endurable.

When the recommendations of the engineering firm were submitted, the company applied to the state employment service for 382 workers, preferably with textile experience, and made plans to reopen the plant.

The company took the position that since its former workers had accepted separation notices in order to be eligible for unemployment compensation, and since the contract with TWOC had expired, it would not be necessary to rehire its old employes.

Although there was no visible union activity, the management requested Gov. Graves to send in troops. He refused, pointing out that their presence was not needed, since there was no threat to law and order. A week later the company repeated its request. This time the governor suggested that the management postpone reopening until an agreement had been reached with the TWOC.

From that time on representatives of the management kept out of sight. Some claim it was to avoid charges from the Natl. Labor Relations Board, which has been requested by the union to keep a field examiner in Huntsville.

Meanwhile, union leaders see an attempt to use the unemployment compensation law as a weapon against organized labor.

An Anti-Union Scheme

The Dallas mills management saw nothing wrong in its employes receiving compensation payments—until the move to re-open the mill was taken. Then it protested that there was a labor dispute in progress, and succeeded in effecting a cancellation of the payments.

WPA, on the other hand, refuses to certify the workers for jobs, contending that a strike is not being conducted. As a result, the workers are having difficulty in getting money for the necessities of life.

But the union members are far from discouraged.

At a TWOC mass meeting they cheered Cowherd; William Mitch, head of the Alabama CIO Council; and Franz Daniel of the TWOC staff.

"Union responsibility has been proven in the Dallas local," Daniel said.

"These people have felt that if the unions could be crushed at Dallas, they could be crushed elsewhere. Dallas was to be a guinea pig.

"But the south is no longer the happy hunting ground it once was for the industrial carpet-bagger.'

NLRB Bats Out Fake Union At Douglas

Washington.—Another company union was knocked into the bleachers this week.

Declaring that the Aircraft Workers Union, Inc., allegedly an "independent" organization, was owned and controlled by the Douglas Aircraft Co. of Santa Monica, Cal., the National Labor Relations Board ordered the company to kill the fake union and reinstate with back pay 45 workers who had been fired for union activity.

The decision, ranking among the most important of the labor board, followed charges of unfair labor practices followed by the United Automobile Workers, CIO.

Failed to Fool NLRB

The board found that the incorporated "independent" union came into existence following a strike conducted by the UAW early in 1937, and that it was little more than a revamped model of the company-dominated Douglas Employes Association, which had been functioning since 1933.

The UAW charges, fully substantiated at the NLRB hearings, disclosed that the company had discriminated against its members and had fired workers without just cause.

The "independent," furthermore, was permitted to conduct its activities during working hours. On one occasion the president of the company was revealed to have stepped into the front firing line and delivered an anti-CIO speech to his employes under the pretext of explaining the Wagner Act.

No Holes In Doughnut Union

New York.—About to seek renewal of contracts with employers on May 15, the Hamburger and Doughnut Workers Local Industrial Union 170 is looking back on a successful year.

In 12 months the union's membership has grown from 260 to more than 1,200, while it has succeeded in lifting weekly minimum pay rates as much as $6 a week. At the same time the number of hours in the work week has been cut from 72 to 54.

The union will insist upon a 100% closed shop, eight-hour shift and two weeks' vacation with pay in its negotiations with the employers, President Irving Newberg declared.

The union has moved into new, larger headquarters, established an education system and provided for a medical department to provide free care to sick members, Newberg pointed out.

HOME OWNERS ORGANIZE

South Bend, Ind.—An organization of home owners and small businessmen—some 3000 in number—is receiving active help from South Bend unions in its drive to help protect small homeowners from the big business interests.

Start Housing Program

Nathan Straus, (right) U. S. housing administrator, signs loan contracts that provide $36,657,000 for housing projects in four cities, while Sen. Wagner of New York, long an exponent of public housing, looks on. The projects will provide homes for 26,000 people—just a drop in the bucket. CIO unions seek a five-billion dollar housing program, to aid at least a million people.

Wagner Act Violations Described

Norristown, Pa. — Evidence of flagrant violations of the Wagner Labor Relations Act is being presented by witnesses for the American Federation of Hosiery Workers at Labor Board hearings against the Arcadia Hosiery Co. of Lansdale, Pa.

The firm is charged with firing AFHW members for union activity and with maintaining a company union, known as the "shop committee of five."

It was brought out at the hearings that a meeting to form an independent union was arranged by agents of the mill, and that an attorney drew up a set of by-laws and a constitution for the organization.

Workers' Schools End Season In Pittsburgh

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Forums, classes, educational movies and dramatic skits were included in the program of the Workers' Schools in Western Pennsylvania during its 1937-38 term recently concluded.

With an average attendance of twenty-three persons a class, between 400 and 500 workers attended the various discussion groups each week to study labor problems, current events, public speaking, labor economics and other subjects of special interest to union members.

Speakers were also furnished for seventy-seven forums and union meetings as part of the program, reaching an audience of more than 10,000. Labor dramatic skits were presented before the steel convention and the convention of the Aluminum Workers in New Kensington.

Funds for the program of the Workers' Schools were contributed by labor unions and individuals, according to Rose Stein, director.

New York.—A committee from the International Ladies' Garment Workers, headed by President David Dubinsky, won the endorsement of Mayor LaGuardia for a project to open 5000 additional sewing jobs in New York City on the WPA program.

Hosiery Union Fights Shifts To South

Reading, Pa.—Ways of preventing hosiery plants from migrating to the South were discussed by Seamless Branch 148, American Federation of Hosiery Workers, at a meeting of seamless hosiery workers in Berks county.

"Each time a seamless mill moves from this area it tends to build up the relief rolls and make more people the object of charity and a burden on the taxpayers," said Thomas Franco, president of the local.

Franco called upon all hosiery workers in the district to cooperate on a plan to halt the moving of plants south.

Unions Fight Tory Scheme To Kill Wage Hour Bill

Washington.—New evidence of a Tory scheme to bury the wagehour bill in the House Rules Committee brought once again to the fore this week the need of a deluge of demands that the committee bring the bill to the floor of the House of Representatives.

From local unions in every section of the country communications are pouring into the Rules Committee members, urging that they take action immediately.

Delay is being sought by opponents of the bill, in order that adjournment of Congress will save them the need of openly declaring war on the legislation, which has the support of labor and progressive groups in every state of the union.

"It is understood," the New York Times declared, "that the opponents of the bill in the committee will seek to kill it through delaying action rather than a frank vote against a rule to release it.

"Meetings will be held at the request of Chairman O'Connor and decision will be postponed from day to day and week to week until adjournment of Congress.

To Take No Stand

"These Fabian tactics, opponents of the measure believe, will serve their purpose without making it necessary for them to take a positive stand to which a section of labor would object in this election year."

Wage-hour legislation at the last special session of Congress was killed by the same House Rules Committee, whose function is supposed to be only that of assigning a place on the House calendar for debate on proposed bills.

The committee, however, has taken on the job of "chief censor" for the House, and through its refusal to bring a bill to the House members, can operate directly against the interest of the people.

Delegations Report

Labor groups from several states have been brought to Washington in recent weeks by Labor's Non-Partisan League to explain the need of wage-hour legislation to their Congressional delegations.

A group representing unions in New York state conferred with their representatives this week, while in the past delegations from Ohio, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and New Jersey—all seriously demanding immediate passage of the bill—have visited the Capitol.

In every case they have told of living wage rates in their localities being threatened by the exodus of employers to sections of the country where they can pay starvation wages.

Members of the Rules Committee, to whom union people should send their letters or wires, are:

J. J. O'Connor, N. Y., chairman; A. J. Sabath, Ill.; A. H. Greenwood, Ind.; E. E. Cox, Ga.; W. J. Driver, Ark.; H. W. Smith, Va.; J. B. Clark, N. C.; M. Dies, Tex.; B. B. Halan, Ohio; L. Lewis, Col.; J. W. Martin, Jr., Mass.; C. E. Mapes, Mich.; J. W. Taylor, Tenn.; and D. H. McLean, N. J.

Indiana CIO To Hear Townsend

Indianapolis — More than 1,000 delegates will attend the first annual convention of the Indiana State Industrial Union Council of the CIO, to be held here May 21, according to James Robb, CIO regional director.

Delegates will come from every CIO local in the state, Robb announced.

Representatives of the clothing workers; hosiery workers; auto workers; mine workers; steel workers; and rubber workers will greet Governor Townsend of Indiana and lead him to the convention hall, where he will make the opening speech.

Plans under way call for a delegation composed of representatives of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers; Hosiery Workers; SWOC; UMWA; Furniture Workers; Electrical and Radio Workers; International Ladies Garment Workers; State, County and Municipal Workers; and the Newspaper Guild to greet John Brophy, CIO national director, who will address the convention.

CIO Unions Push Drive For Speedy Passage Of Recovery Bill

WASHINGTON — Support for the New Deal's relief-recovery program was pouring into Washington from all parts of the Nation this week, as the affiliates of the Committee for Industrial Organization bombarded Congress with demands for passage of the legislation.

Why a Recovery Plan?

William Avidon of New York, unemployed chauffeur, paced Manhattan streets offering himself for sale to "the highest bidder." Jobless, he had been unable to find work to support his family. Widspread suffering throughout the nation is causing a quick response to the CIO's call for strong support of the New Deal's relief-recovery program.

Less than a week after Chairman John L. Lewis had urged the CIO organizations to support the measure, which carries out the demand for 3,500,000 jobs asked by the CIO last February, union locals and international organizations were letting their representatives at the Capitol know of the need for passage of the bill.

With requests for action on the wage-hour bill, passage of the Wagner Bill bringing government contractors under the provisions of the labor relations act and additional funds for the LaFollette committee piling up, Congress was hearing from one of the strongest labor campaigns in recent years.

It was becoming apparent that the support for President Roosevelt's program would find little opposition in the House and Senate, although Tories are reported to be seeking to ear-mark funds for PWA projects, in order to hamper the Administration.

Unions Active

The American Newspaper Guild and the Natl. Maritime Union are preparing statements to be filed with the House Appropriations Committee, signifying the desire of their members for passage of the legislation.

From Van A. Bittner, in Chicago, came word that the various locals of Packing House Workers' Organizing Committee had been asked to communicate with their Congressmen.

"We are pushing the post card shower on the bill in every possible way here," Gunnar Mickelsen, CIO regional director in Wisconsin, reported.

The United Shoe Workers, District 50 of the United Mine Workers, the Transport Workers' Union, the United Office & Professional Workers, the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee, the Natl. Marine Engineers' Beneficial Assn., and the United Automobile Workers are among the other CIO affiliates which reported to Unemployment Director Ralph Hetzel, on action taken to push the bill.

New York Plans Drive

In New York City half a million CIO members will be mobilized to support the measure, it was indicated by Allen Haywood, regional director there.

At a meeting attended by leaders of CIO affiliates, plans were made for the setting up of the week of May 9 as "recovery week."

Progressives in the New York City Council, supported by the American Labor Party contingent, passed a resolution expressed support of the program.

The pressure to pass the bill was not confined to CIO groups, other unions swinging behind the measure. The Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, as well as numerous AFL unions, have come into line to get the relief bill acted upon at the earliest possible moment.

Sweatshoppers Lobby Against Funds For Probe

Washington—Anti-union bosses are ganging up on the La Follette Civil Liberties Committee again.

Unable to endure the exposure of their rat and stool-pigeon friends in the "detective" agencies the committee has been investigating for the past two years, they are lobbying quietly but effectively against a new appropriation of $60,000 for the committee.

Warning of this and of the danger to the labor movement involved was given in a letter sent to all Labor's Non-Partisan League branches by E. L. Oliver, executive vice-president.

Funds Exhausted

"The meager funds voted to the Committee by the Senate are now exhausted, and powerful employer groups are determined to prevent the voting of further funds," the letter said.

"Up to this date the Committee has had only $90,000. This compares with $260,000 for the Senate banking investigation under Ferdinand Pecora; $250,000 voted for the Wheeler railroad investigation and $198,000 for the Nye munitions investigation.

"Senator La Follette and his staff point out that, at best, the justifiable calls for their type of investigations and hearings have been only partially answered. New situations threatening our democratic rights arise almost daily.

"The La Follette Committee is

REFUSE WAGE CUT

Camden, N. J.—Rejection of a proposed wage cut at the Clifton Yarn Mill, Clifton Heights, was voted 266 to 37 at a meeting of Local 178, Textile Workers Organizing Committee.

WIN PACTS

New York — Local 76-B of the United Furniture Workers, CIO, has signed agreements with three New York City reed furniture manufacturers. The contracts give the union the 40-hour week, wage increases and the union shop.

Heywood Broun

On "Outside Agitators"

One way in which trade-unionists in America can fight Fascism is to root out of our own ranks all trace of racial and religious prejudice. We must furnish an example not only for America but for the world of the manner in which peoples of every strain can work together for a common goal.

Many employers have played upon human weakness and individual foibles by seeking to stir up animosity between varying racial groups. They have felt, and quite correctly, that by driving a wedge between workers they could weaken the tide of unionism.

And today in several known instances the drive of the reactionaries is centered upon able labor leaders on the ground that "these men were born abroad." Indeed if an organizer comes into a city from a spot not more than twenty miles away there will be a cry from some of the industrialists that he is "an outside agitator."

The CIO need not play second fiddle to any group in its devotion to Americanism.

In fact it supports the old fashioned brand of American patriotism which was proud of the fact that the United States offered a refuge to the oppressed of all nations. And likewise the union is a citadel for all fellow workers whatever the place of their nativity.

A scab might possibly be able to trace his ancestry all the way back to the American Revolution or even to the Pilgrim fathers but he would remain the outsider. In unionism we are one.

Isn't It Awful How The CIO Wins Votes?

Washington.—"The CIO is going to seed."

"It will soon lose all its members."

"Workers want no CIO dictatorship."

So says the Tory press.

But labor board elections, in which the workers themselves speak out, tell a different story.

In 11 recent elections in which CIO unions participated, the CIO batted a 1000, winning all the polls.

In six of the elections, the CIO defeated AFL affiliates.

In still another, it defeated a company union. The CIO won four victories where there was no opposition.

The balloting took place in many parts of the country, and involved CIO cigar workers, communications workers, the steel union, the united and electrical union, textile workers, shoe workers, book and magazine workers and coal yard workers.

A total of 1,346 votes was given the CIO unions in the 11 contests. The opposition received only 538.

SWOC Wins Over AFL Carpenters

Washington, — An election won by a CIO union at the San Francisco plant of Simmons Bed Co., over an AFL group, has brought about certification by the Labor Board of Lodge 2062, Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, as the sole bargaining agent.

The vote was 263 for the CIO union and 193 for Local 1541, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners.

Giving the Game Away

How much would it take to restore the "confidence" of the monied interests that are carrying on such a vigorous campaign for less taxation of profits and against the President's relief-recovery program and wage-hour legislation?

Their confidence game was recently revived, it will be remembered, to secure modification of the capital gains and undistributed profits taxes.

Now a great modification of these taxes has been agreed to by the Senate and House conference committee. But we still fail to hear happy cries of confidence arising from the downtrodden rich.

It appears that their confidence is now shattered by the proposal to put some of the unemployed to work on useful projects, and by pending legislation against starvation wages and long hours of work.

Well, suppose we let them have their way by leaving the jobless to starve and giving the sweatshoppers all the leeway they could desire. Would this at last restore confidence to the comfortable?

Apparently not. For already we hear preparatory grumbles that it is labor organization and the labor relations act that are really undermining business confidence.

* * *

Mark Sullivan, a favorite columnist of the unconfident conservatives, gives the game away. Noting that modification of the taxation that was supposed to cause lack of confidence has failed to revive confidence in the business breast, he says that the CIO is the real reason why bosses have no confidence.

In other words, it would appear that this famous confidence game can be carried on indefinitely until the rich and reactionary are given the whole world with a pink ribbon tied round it. And then doubtless they would still wail that they had no confidence until the pink ribbon was removed.

* * *

If you go on the assumption that the "confidence" of a wealthy minority should be the goal of all our endeavors, you will have to let them enjoy their wealth untaxed, cut off relief from the starving unemployed, slash wages right and left, deprive workers of their present legal rights—and of course you will have to destroy all the labor organization which the CIO has brought into being, since this has been the major cause of raising wages and of most of the relief and protection which working people have been able to win.

But if you believe that the welfare of the great majority of the population—and restoring THEIR security and confidence—should be the nation's goal, you will treat the no-confidence cries of the spokesmen of reaction with the contempt they deserve.

If you proceed on this assumption, you will join with the CIO and all other progressive and liberal forces in demanding immediate enactment of the relief-recovery program, of wage-hour legislation, of the Wagner bill to make the Labor Relations Act more generally effective—and of every other step that is needed to strengthen the hand of labor organization in its fight to maintain and raise American living standards.

Fact Versus Fiction

The American Federation of Labor's own count of Labor Board election releases from January 15 to February 14, 1938, as published in the American Federationist, shows CIO unions winning 11,722 votes out of a total of 14,119, with AFL unions receiving 1301 and independent and company unions together getting 710 votes.

Read this, and then read the wind that is shot out of the propaganda machines to the effect that the CIO is losing ground!—The Brewery Worker.

Getting to Work

Iowa CIO Sets Up Council

Des Moines, Ia.—Rapid organization of the unorganized workers in the state of Iowa loomed ahead this week following the successful convention of CIO unions here, during which the Iowa Industrial Union Council was established.

Delegates from 66 union locals in 20 locals attended the meeting here and reported on the success of CIO unionization campaigns throughout the state.

Don Harris, director of the Packing House Workers Organizing Committee, which has made swift progress in this state in recent months, was elected president of the new council. Ben Henry of the United Mine Workers was named its secretary-treasurer.

Oliver Speaks

E. L. Oliver, executive vice-president of Labor's Non-Partisan League, was chief speaker at the council convention.

Urging the delegates to become active in building labor's political strength, Oliver said, "Labor in the past has neglected to take its part in politics because labor has always regarded politics as a dirty business. But labor intends to clean up politics."

Support of the League and affiliation with it was voted by the Council. Backing of the New Deal relief-recovery program, the wage-hour bill and other progressive legislation also received favorable action at the meeting.

Eleven vice presidents were elected: Don Pinkston, American Newspaper Guild; Edgar Schultheis, Amalgamated Clothing Workers; Alf Hjait, United Mine Workers; Robert Kirkwood, United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers; Harold Freed, ACW; Clarence McNary, Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers; Ray Davitt, American Federation of Hosiery Workers; Chase Bullington, UERMW; Frank Alsup, Packing House Workers; Elmer Warren, Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

Looking Ahead By LEN DE CAUX

Business Cart Before Labor Horse

HAVE we moved so far from the horse-and-buggy age that most people can be made to believe the buggy comes before the horse?

The opponents of the President's relief-recovery program apparently think so.

Get the business buggy to moving, they say, by greasing its wheels and pampering its passengers, even if it means letting the laboring horse starve.

Then if you get the buggy moving, the horse will follow along.

Who Are the Downtrodden?

"What helps business helps labor," is the slogan of a nationwide billboard campaign.

("What helps labor helps business," would be putting the horse before the cart).

Relief for business before relief for the unemployed, shout hundreds of editorials in the business-controlled press.

Cartoons without number depict downtrodden business in various stages of prostration, while a hard-hearted administration increases its oppression through a "spending program."

Such success does this cart-before-horse propaganda claim that a recent "poll of opinion" would have us believe most Americans think the business cart-wheels make the laboring horse move.

The vote was supposed to show a prevailing opinion that a reduction of taxation (meaning less money for relief) would do more to aid recovery than putting more money into the hands of those who have none.

Robbing Peter to Pay Paul

Labor's demand for useful jobs for the unemployed, for putting purchasing power into the hands of millions who cannot now buy the products of industry—a demand which finds some recognition in the President's program—is no magic recipe for immediate prosperity.

But it is at least the first logical step to take, both to still the pangs of mass hunger and misery and to get business moving again.

It is certainly more logical than the fantastic propaganda that a further robbing and starving of poor Peter Populace to pay well-to-do Paul will somehow bring about recovery.

The idea that the relief-recovery program is over-generous to the needy millions finds no support in the actual facts.

On the contrary, a survey by the research department of Labor's Non-Partisan League shows that it is niggardly in the extreme in relation to the dire need of millions of Americans. The survey shows that:

(1) The number of jobs it is proposed to provide will still leave millions of unemployed without any income whatever.

(2) Though the number of jobless and relief needs are far greater now than last year or the year before, the amount of federal relief available is considerably less.

(3) Wage levels are so low that actual starvation threatens most industrial workers shortly after they lose their jobs. Few workers have sufficient savings to tide them over awhile, as has sometimes happened in the past after periods of relative prosperity.

(4) Available relief has not been sufficient to provide assistance for many who are completely destitute, and large numbers of unemployed have been denied aid of any kind. Others who have been placed on relief jobs or direct relief have not been getting enough to purchase the minimum of things necessary to maintain life and health.

(5) Present indications point to a worsening rather than an improvement in the conditions of the unemployed; their relief needs will increase during coming months even if their number does not increase.

Where Confidence Is Needed

Even in 1936, a year of relative prosperity, one-third of the families in the United States had an annual income from all sources of less than $750, while the lowest 10% had incomes of less than $325, according to recent testimony of Relief Administrator Hopkins.

The lot of these millions has worsened considerably since 1936.

These are the people whose confidence must be restored. When their relief needs have been met and their feet placed on the road to recovery through useful employment, business confidence and business recovery will follow — not vice versa.

CAPITAL CLOSE-UPS

By MARTIN STRONG

The dagger of death hovers so closely between the shoulder blades of the wages and hours bill at this writing that it seems almost to be pricking the skin.

Fourteen men hold the weapon —the 14 potent members of the House Rules Committee. Eight can drive it home or eight can hold it back and let the measure get out to the House, where everyone agrees that it will go through a-whooping.

Thus the next two or three weeks will tell whether the Congress of the United States is going to end the offering — and the bitter acceptance — of starvation wages in these rich United States.

The acid irony of it all is that a majority of this all-powerful 14 can prevent action on a measure which the committee created to study such proposals has approved, a measure which passed the Senate a year ago, a measure which the President has publicly appealed for, and a measure which certainly would meet House acceptance.

It is particularly ironic because the chartered job of the Rules Committee is not to pass on the merits of legislation at all, but merely to decide which of the many bills pressing for action should have preference to House consideration.

Voters' Threat

The answer to the prospective blockade, of course, is the same answer that has broken many a log jam in this committee before —the threat to defeat the blockaders when they come up for reelection. This is the job which labor must do in the next two weeks if action is to be had — and here are the men under whom the political dynamite of popular demand must be set and fused.

John O'Connor of New York City; Adolph Sabath of Chicago; Arthur Greenwood of Washington, Indiana; Byron Harlan of Dayton Ohio; Lawrence Lewis of Denver, Colorado; Joseph Martin of North Attleboro, Massachusetts; Carl Mapes of Grand Rapids, Michigan; Eugene Cox of Camilla, Georgia; William Driver of Osceola, Arkansas; Howard Smith of Alexandria, Virginia; Bayard Clark of Fayetteville, North Carolina; J. Will Taylor of Knoxville, Tennessee; Donald McLean of Elizabeth, New Jersey; and Martin Dies of Orange, Texas.

The smart workers would start at the bottom on this group and work up, for the general belief is that it is the last three men, or any one of them, who hold the fate of the measure in their hands. But every laborite must go after his own Congressman, for no letter will be wasted effort.

And don't doubt that the enemies of half-way human wages will be busy with their letter writing and telegraph sending, too. For defeat of the wages and hours bill is this week's sure-fire panacea for bringing "confidence" back to America.

* * * * *

No week passes in Washington nowadays, as you may have gathered, without a new exclusive recipe of this fragrant aroma. The trouble for the starry-eyed believers in the confidence men is to keep their lists in order. Last week it was the tax bill — just give us the kind of tax laws we want, the fat boys were whooping, and confidence will come roaring around that corner — you know, the corner of Hoover and Depression streets — like a streamlined twenty-ton truck.

Of course, these tax matters are complicated, but it can be said for a certainty that the pursy pleaders have already got at least nine-tenths of what they yelled for. If the provisions agreed on by House and Senate conferees finally become law, as they undoubtedly will, they assure you of a boom like the explosion of the Hindenburg.

Tories on Warpath

But wait! Prosperity doesn't come so easily. The tax revision boys seem to have forgotten something, for the latest prescription to reach Washington calls not only for this reassurance but also for sixteen others including repeal or "drastic revision" of the Wagner Act and even a similar modification of the Interstate Commerce Commission act which goes clear back to 1887.

This same enlightened appeal for the good old days argued that it is "the inalienable right of all men to work at any job they can get for as many hours as they choose at such wages as they may elect to accept."

The letter which revealed plans for broadcasting this new prescription to the country and seeking innocent signers for it was sent to President Roosevelt by someone who admitted he did not dare sign his name for fear of losing his job. Such an admission ordinarily discredits any letter. But the writer might have done almost as well just by clipping items from the newspapers.

For here is the United States Chamber of Commerce announcing that in planning its annual convention here in May it proposes to seek the same submarining of the Wagner act, and nearly as many more "reforms" of the same stripe as were uncovered by Mr. Roosevelt's correspondent.

Chamber Plots

In fact, it may be given out now that the week of May 2 to 5 is going to see the greatest newspaper publication of the griefs of business that has been witnessed in a long time. The Chamber — the fancy name that simple-souled Washington correspondents do not usually use for this organization— is already getting its publicity men and statistical experts in trim for the job.

One example came from this "chamber" a few days ago — a flat assertion that "tax collectors" took sixty cents out of every dollar of corporation earnings during the ten years between 1926 and 1935. And possibly in hope of filling the pot again it proceeded to the tear-jerking claim that during this ten-year period all active corporations paid out in taxes 44 per cent. more than their net earnings, or a total of some $29,000,000,000.

But if you have been weeping over the newspaper broadcasting of this ingenious semi-fabrication, a single page torn from the annual report of the secretary of the treasury may serve as an eyewiper. For this single page shows that of the $2,450,000,000 in Federal taxes theoretically paid by business in 1935, a total of $1,825,000,000 consisted of taxes which business always has and always will pass on to the consumer.

Sure, business "pays" the $500,000,000 tobacco tax and the $500,000,000 liquor tax, the $161,000,000 gasoline tax and the $340,000,000 of tariff taxes. It also "pays" the $100,000,000 a year in gasoline taxes, the $100,000,000 of automobile and accessory taxes and half a dozen more of the same nature.

But it takes a metropolitan editor to fall for the Chamber's claim that all this money comes out of the pockets of business alone and is not passed on — every red cent of it and margin to boot for the job of collecting it — to the rank and file of consumers.

This choice tureen of overripe tripe is the kind of stuff that is pouring out of Washington nowadays in ever-increasing volume. The Chamber has a big publicity staff that does little but concoct such unsavory stews. The National Association of Manufacturers also has recently stepped into the picture with an expert staff of its own to do the same kind of job.

It is known as "selling business to the public" and you can see why the fat boys need "confidence" when they are pushing a line like that.

Butte League Supports Cong. O'Connell

Butte, Mont. — The Labor's Non-Partisan League unit in Butte and Silver bow County has gone on record to support the reelection of Cong. Jerry J. O'Connell, outstanding progressive Democratic Congressman.

Representatives of 72 unions—a majority of the labor movement in this copper mining center—attended the meeting.

Three More Victories For NMU

Washington — Certification by the Labor Board of the National Maritime Union as the sole bargaining agency for seamen on boats operated by three lines was ordered here following elections won by the CIO union.

Seamen on vessels operated by Lykes Brothers Ripley Steamship Co., Inc., New Orleans, voted 1,049 to 10, for the NMU in preference to the International Seamen's Union, AFL.

On boats of the United States Tank Ship Corp., New York City, the NMU defeated the ISU by a vote of 48 to 19, and on vessels of the Texas Co., New York City, the vote was 431 to 54 in favor of the NMU.

Help AFL Strike

Fort Francis, Ont. — Members of the Intl. Woodworkers of America, CIO, are cooperating with Local 2558 of the AFL Lumber and Sawmill Workers in their strike against a proposed 10c-an-hour wage cut at the Shevlin-Clarke Lumber Co., here.

Means of Building Ward Clubs Told By Labor's League

Washington.—Methods of setting up permanent ward clubs as part of Labor's Non-Partisan League's national political organization are outlined in a new League handbook just off the press.

It is the latest in a series of LNPL publications intended to provide practical information for the use of League affiliates.

The handbook, "How to Organize Ward Clubs," is based on first-hand experience of League organizers and sets forth a step-by-step account of the process of establishing ward clubs. It is intended especially for use in cities, but the principles it states may be adapted to other communities.

Introducing the subject, the handbook says:

"Labor's Non-Partisan League proposes to create honest, active ward and precinct organizations that will bring together all progressive forces in a community for new kinds of political action. Our purposes require a large and permanent membership to provide genuine leadership in overcoming the evils of past political practises."

Each political subdivision within a city, down to its smallest unit, must be carefully organized by Labor's Non-Partisan League in order to win our objectives in elections campaigns," the handbook says. It adds: "The ward club is an all-important part of this job."

Active trade unionists are the base of the provisional committee which is the first step in setting up a ward club, but the handbook advises that invitations to attend the first meeting should go also to all League members in the ward. The League membership represents a cross-section of progressive sentiment.

Duties of ward club officers and a program of activities for established clubs are described in detail. The handbook also analyzes several methods of financing the clubs. Reproduced is a chart of the ward club organization and a sample membership card and application blank for membership.

Within the ward it is the duty of ward club officials to organize precinct committees. Lists of membership of unions and other progressive groups are to be compiled by the precinct committees. One of the first duties of these precinct committees is to make a drive to register all voters in their area.

The smallest political unit within the LNPL setup are the block committees which function directly under the precinct committees. It is their duty to make canvasses at election time, distribute literature, hold household and street meetings, and to keep the organization functioning between elections.

Educational and social activities of ward clubs are stressed in the handbook, which points out these programs are a method of raising funds and of keeping members interested at times when no campaign is actually going on. Suggestions are given for some of these activities.

The ward club is depicted as the most vital educational center in the community.

Some of the services which ward clubs can supply their members are listed in the handbook. These include assistance to the unemployed, supplying information on social security laws, immigration law data, notary public service, etc. Entertainment in the form of games and occasional social affairs is also proposed.

Each ward club should have a headquarters of its own, the handbook directs.

Texas Labor League Meets This Week

SAN ANTONIO, Tex.—Delegates to the first State convention of the Texas Labor's Non-Partisan League will meet here this weekend, determined to write finis to a chapter of the State's political history in which "labor has been shamefully betrayed."

A message issued by the convention arrangements committee —on which leaders of both AFL and CIO unions are represented— pointed to the need of making democracy work in the Lone Star State.

"Under the domination of employer groups, particularly oil and utility interests, the Texas Senate has blocked nearly every piece of important legislation vital to the interests of labor and of the people of Texas, such as taxation upon the oil interests needed to produce revenue sufficient for adequate old age pensions; the Federal child labor amendment; effective rate control of privately-owned public utilities, etc.," the letter said.

Trend to Fascism

It charged a majority of Texas Congressmen with opposing new deal legislation. Further, it said, the denial of civil rights to labor in Dallas and San Antonio during the past year "is evidence of a strong tendency toward fascism on the part of a section of the public officialdom of the State."

The league program calls for co-operation with the national League, active support for farmers in their struggle to better conditions, help in putting the unemployed to work and the election of men and women pledged to support labor and progressive measures.

Funds For Spy Probe, LNPL Asks

the only agency of government at the present time empowered to make efective exposure of such threats."

Methods used by labor-hating employers to defeat the probe of their spying and union-wrecking attempts are stressed in Oliver's letter as typified by "stripped files, doctored books, witnesses schooled in forgetting on the witness stand."

An interim report filed by the Committee in the Senate referred to anti-union, vigilante alignments now in preparation by reactionary bosses and corporations. Chief of these is the device of the "Citizens Committee" which was cultivated so carefully in the Little Steel strike.

Evidence dug up by the La Follette group shows these outfits to be invariably phoney, designed for the one purpose of stampeding public opinion against the legitimate demands of union members.

The League's letter concluded by urging all members and branches to write and wire to Senator James F. Byrnes of the Senate Audit and Control Committee demanding the full appropriation of $60,000 asked by the La Follette group to continue its work.

The Union Fights Back

United Rubber Workers Rap Tory Attempts To Check Wage Advances

Akron, Ohio.—Attempts of big business to frighten the people of Akron into fighting attempts of the United Rubber Workers, CIO, to maintain the existing wage structure met with sharp opposition this week.

In statements issued by President Sherman H. Dalrymple and N. H. Eagle, District One representative of the union, the motives behind the hysterical union-baiting which has been common in this capital of the rubber industry were clearly exposed.

They revealed the major rubber companies involved in that age-old game of playing both ends against the middle.

Further, they pointed clearly to the fact that the managements of the rubber companies, which have been loudest in their protestations of loyalty to Akron's community interests, have been working only for themselves—allowing Akron to take the hindmost.

Taking steps to bind the working and middle class groups of the city into a common front against Tory attacks, the union suggested a meeting of small business and professional groups, together with union members to remedy the "current tension" in our community.

"There are certain proposals on which we can all unite," the union's statement said, "—securing Federal aid for housing, getting more federal projects for Akron, backing legislation to curb decentralization, working for more honest and efficient government, as business men and labor did in New York."

The story of anti-union opposition in Akron has been a series of efforts to place the United Rubber Workers in a position of seeming indifference to the city's welfare. Since the union rose to power some three years ago, opponents of industrial unionism have cried that decent working conditions and increased wages for the workers who toil in the city's great rubber factories, would spell ruination for the entire community.

JOINT STATEMENT

In a joint statement this week, Pres. Dalrymple and Pres. L. L. Callahan of the Goodrich local warned that "a serious situation is developing" as the union leaders negotiate with the management of the Goodrich Rubber Co.

"A group of belligerent business men congregated outside the Goodrich conference room while negotiations were in progress and demanded the right to intervene. In our opinion this was an outright attempt to bully the negotiators into a premature agreement with the company before the points at issue had been settled."

The negotiations center in the companies' demand for a sharp reduction in the wage scales.

THE "THIRD PARTY"

Pointing out that while the international union is anxious to secure speedy settlement of disputes, it does not intend to forfeit its rights under the laws of the nation, the joint statement referred to a recent description by the labor board of employer association propaganda designed to turn the public—"the third party"—against the union.

"We think the mayor owes it to the people of Akron to explain just what agencies and organizations conferred with him before he took his open stand for wage reductions and against organized labor," the two union officials declared.

"We in labor are vitally interested in keeping rubber factories in Akron . . . We are not trying to crucify Akron on the cross of labor disputes.

"We wish we could say as much for industry and the public officials of our city."

In a letter to business, professional and civic organizations, URW District Director Eagle told the union's side of the story, and held to the light the companies' anti-labor endeavors.

TORIES BEHIND THE SCENES

"Small business men and labor are being pitted against each other," Eagle said. "I am of the opinion that should this develop, no one in Akron would benefit, except certain groups which are more interested in destroying labor organizations than they are in building Akron."

"Many of us were alarmed to see evidences of the emergence of what appeared to be a 'citizen's committee" in the present controversy" with Goodrich, Eagle explained.

"Taken in connection with the anti-labor campaign waged by the Greater Akron Assn., and joined lately by the Akron Chamber of Commerce, we were of the opinion that it was not a spontaneous organization of Akron businessmen, but rather an inspired move from sources outside the city.

"You may pardon our suspicion if you realize that one of the leading 'civic' organizations has, or had, connections with a public relations firm which handled the Republic Steel account during the Little Steel strike last summer.

"You may recall that one of the strike-breaking devices employed by that company was to organize small businessmen into so-called 'citizen's committees' which led the fight against the workers. We were fearful that something of the same kind was being developed here.

"We were also suspicious of the leading role taken by the Akron Chamber of Commerce. Many members of that organization are, as you are aware, really bona fide independent business and professional people, but it is my opinion that the Chamber's policies are largely set and determined by the rubber companies, many representatives of which sit on the chamber's board of directors."

ORGANIZERS AT WORK

Eagle took particular note of the criticism that the union has not made any efforts to organize shops outside of Akron.

The URW "has stripped every expense to the bone," he said, in order to maintain its organizing stall, it has fought a dozen strikes in the last five months to prevent wage cuts, and it has recently won wage increases in five plants.

"It is true that we have not yet succeeded in organizing some of the branch plants of the big rubber companies, but it cannot be said that this has been because of laxity upon our part.

"You wil recall the frequent hoodlum attacks upon our organizers in Gadsden, Alabama—in spite of which we still maintain a local there.

"We are making constant efforts to organize workers in Jackson, Miss.; Memphis, Tenn.; and elsewhere—but we are faced with the bitter anti-labor policies of the corporations—policies which are set in their headquarters in Akron and New York.

"They have succeeded in making local law-enforcement agencies subservient to their will, and I regret to say, they have succeeded in organizing small business and professional people to thwart the organization of the workers.

"These Akron companies, who complain that we have not been able yet to equalize costs between their Akron plants and those outside, know very well that their obdurate and unlawful resistance to the organization of their workers is the explanation.

"I might say in passing that when workers in these outside plants ask for wage increases, they are re-told they should be glad to get what they do because they are not as efficient as Akron workers.

"Indeed, in some instances they have been told that if they were not satisfied with what they were getting, production would be moved to Akron!

"It looks to us like playing both ends against the middle."

Attempts to smash the rubber union have failed in the past. Picture shows C. Nelson Sparks who organized a "law and order league" during a strike last year, retiring to private life as union emerged victorious.

Farmers, CIO Form Permanent Body

Washington.—Farm and labor groups have united to form a permanent committee to deal with economic problems arising from wasteful marketing and distribution, Labor's Non-Partisan League announces.

At a special meeting in Omaha, Nebraska, attended by representatives of the Farmers Educational and Cooperative Union and the League, a "Joint Farmer-Labor Committee on Cooperative Enterprise" was established to promote consumer cooperatives especially.

CIO speakers at the meeting included Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers, and Jacob Baker, president of the United Federal Workers. Eli Oliver, executive vice-president of the League, also addressed the meeting.

Back Cooperatives

Farmers were represented by H. G. Keaney, president of the Nebraska Farmers Union; M. R. Miller, secretary, Missouri Farmers Union; and Emil Loriks, president, South Dakota Farmers Union.

The conference was called by Oliver in pursuance of a program of action agreed upon by the Farmers' Union, the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers, and the League.

A statement of principle drawn up by the Committee declares that "the extension of the principle of cooperative ownership and management" is necessary "under a system in which democratic control has not been adequately developed."

Rubber Union Signs With Waterman

Newark, N. J.—New Jersey rubber workers have chalked up another victory in the CIO fight against attempts of anti-labor employers to shove the costs of the present industrial depression on to the backs of the wage earners.

Three hundred and fifty workers of the L. E. Waterman Co., members of Local 134 of the United Rubber Workers, CIO, ended a six weeks strike here with a contract covering the preferential shop, equal pay for equal work, and the 40 hour week, plus wage increases.

Other gains include an hourly minimum wage of 45 cents, a weekly raise from $15 to $18, and time and a half for overtime.

Repress NAM Gas Attack

Washington, (FP)—The carrying on an intensive propaganda campaign to impress the views of industry on the public by the National Assn. of Manufacturers was revealed in an unsolicited letter sent to the National Negro Congress here.

The letters, signed by President Charles Hook of the NAM, noted that the Congress was meeting here and stated that the industrialists would be happy to supply a speaker on a "popular theme — business, how it's run, whom it benefits, the part it plays in American life."

John P. Davis, National Negro Congress secretary, wrote Hook in reply, saying the Congress would like very much to have a speaker who would tell "why it is that public utility companies deny well-trained Negro boys and girls the opportunities of employment in any while-collar jobs; why members of your association hire stool-pigeons and spies, some of whom deliberately sought to foment ill-feeling and race riots among Negro and white workers; why your organization is conducting such a bitter campaign against the wages-and-hours bill while profits and prizes are soaring higher and higher.

"If you have such a speaker on your list, by all means submit his name to us," Davis concluded.

Strike Ends At Brass Firm

Waterbury, Conn.—Following a six-day strike, employes at the American Brass Co., Waterbury, Conn., returned to work pending further negotiations between spokesmen for the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, company officials and representatives of the National Labor Relations Board.

The strike was called by Waterbury Brass Workers' Union, Local 251, in protest against a 10 to 15 per cent. wage cut. American Brass is a subsidiary of the Anaconda Copper Co.

Form Michigan CIO Council

Ford Brotherhood Simonizes Fake Union Set-Up

Detroit—There's a new trick in double bookkeeping for company unions that enables them to get a raise out of the boss and at the same time give it all back to him with interest.

Here's the idea. The Ford Brotherhood of America, Inc., Henry's current stooge outfit, has asked its lord and master for a $1500 minimum annual wage. In return, the officials of the Brotherhood pledge each brother to buy a new Ford car immediately, and another one every two years. Just to make sure, the price of the car will be deducted from the worker's pay-check.

At latest quotations, the price of a Ford car was around $700, which is close to half the proposed annual minimum. The workers will presumably be allowed to spend the balance for food and rent and clothing and other things that Henry doesn't make.

The Brotherhood, Inc., wants Henry to put this proposition in writing, in the form of a signed contract, and everybody will be satisfied. The workers will get their annual wage. Henry will get his money back.

And if everything works out right, the Brotherhood is sure it will help to keep the CIO on the outside of Ford's, where every good Brotherhood official knows it belongs.

"The UAW would not accept so low an annual wage," commented Richard Frankensteen, UAW assistant president and head of the Ford Organizing Committee.

"How could a man with a family buy a new car every other year on less than $30 a week?

"This is merely a deal between Ford officials and this phony union to try to kid someone into believing the brotherhood has something on the ball after all. It's just a new wrinkle in the old company union racket."

USW Certified

Washington—Following an election among employes at the Atlantic Footwear Co., Passaic, N. J., the Labor Board has certified the United Shoe Workers, CIO, as the sole bargaining agency. The CIO union defeated the Boot and Shoe Workers Union, AFL, by a vote of 19 to 13.

UAW Wins Gar Wood Strike

Detroit—Settlement of the Gar Wood strike was announced by the United Automobile Workers this week.

The company guaranteed that there will be no wage cuts, that the Bedeaux speed-up system will be abolished, that workers will receive 20 per cent. of the company's declared annual dividends, and that a new contract will be negotiated by May 6.

Detroit. — Strikes closed two plants of the Gar Wood Industries in this city as the United Automobile Workers marched to the picket lines to forestall a proposed 20% wage cut.

The company had refused to negotiate a new contract or abide by the established grievance procedure unless the union accepted the drastic wage slash, abolition of the shop steward system and the loss of two per cent. of the bonus.

Negotiations with the management are in progress, according to Tracy Doll, UAW executive board member. He said the union would seek abolition or modification of the Bedaux speedup system instituted last year."

NLRB Hearing

Quincy, Mass. — Labor board hearings against the Boston and Fore River plants of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation which have been going on for nearly two months, have built up a mass of evidence showing the company's anti-labor activity.

WAGE CUT BARRED

Camden, N. J. — Penn Steel Lodge 1335 of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee voted unanimously not to accept any wage cut in a new contract now being negotiated with the company.

Hundreds Of Delegates Present; Name Germer State CIO Head

Lansing, Mich.—The CIO gave another demonstration of its power in this heavily-industrialized state as several hundred delegates from local unions established the Michigan Industrial Union Council.

From the automobile industry, which dominates the state's industrial life, as well as from a score of other industries, the delegates trooped into Lansing, drew up a constitution, elected officers and passed a group of progressive resolutions.

Adolph Germer, CIO regional director of the state, was unanimously elected president of the new council.

Germer, whose sending to Michigan to aid the struggling young United Automobile Workers two and a half years ago was one of the first steps taken by the CIO, is a veteran of trade union affairs. His election followed the voluntary withdrawal from the contest for office of Walter Reuther and R. J. Thomas, both of the United Automobile Workers.

Leonard Secretary

Richard T. Leonard, relief director for the UAW, was elected secretary-treasurer of the new organization. He polled a sizeable majority. Thirteen members of the executive board were also elected at the convention.

"The CIO has no apologies to offer for the work it has done," Germer declared.

"It is proud of its achievements. In the short span of two and one-half years it has done what the AFL said was impossible.

"If our critics don't like relief expenditures, let them open the factories, shops and mines and give our people work," he continued.

Praises Murphy

The state CIO council leader praised Gov. Frank Murphy, mention of whose name brought cheers from the delegates. He pointed out that though Tories charge the CIO with being responsible for the depression, "in Ohio, where the governor sold himself, body and soul, to 'little steel' and left nothing undone to serve its interests, in Cleveland alone there are 54,000 families on direct relief—and you can't blame that on Murphy."

Germer blasted the economic philosophy of Michigan's Sen. Vandenberg and Rep. Claire Hoffman. He termed the ardent reactionary Congressman "that gas tank from southwestern Michigan" and suggested that Vandenberg might well try living on the meager relief standards which he is proposing in Congress.

Brophy Speaks

Enthusiastic applause greeted every mention of the CIO by John Brophy, its director.

Brophy pointed out that he had been sent by the CIO into Michigan in November, 1935, and that he had later spent two months there during the crucial automobile strikes of last year.

"In a special sense, Michigan is the testing ground for CIO principles and policies," Brophy said.

The CIO director sharply criticized factionalism in the union movement.

"An officer, either national or local, who lends himself to factionalism is misusing his position and doing a disservice to the auto workers," Brophy asserted.

"The rank and file of all CIO affiliates are loyal to the principles of the CIO, in spite of the fact that some who are here conducted themselves in an obstructive manner. If we don't get cooperation here for a strong CIO in Michigan, we will get it from the rank and file. I know the rank and file of the auto workers want unity and progress, not bickering and confusion.

"This exhibition of factionalism only lends comfort to Ford and all the enemies of organized labor.

"End this petty, miserable factionalism which is sapping the strength of your union. I am today voicing the wishes of John L. Lewis when I call upon you to consolidate your forces and learn to work together. Lewis wants a united auto workers union."

Quill Raps Red-Baiting

Pres. Michael Quill of the Transport Workers Union, CIO, spoke along similar lines.

"One section of the people who raise red-scares can't see farther than their noses, and are fools," he said. "The other section are stool-pigeons who try to break unions."

Continued loyalty to the CIO was pledged by Pres. Homer Martin of the UAW, another convention speaker. He predicted that Ford would soon be organized, and that Henry would be forced to "learn that he is living in America, and not under the swastika."

The convention went on record to support the wage-hour bill and urged all local groups to seek quick action by the House Rules Committee on the measure now pending before it. Pointing to the fact that "a serious curtailment in industrial activity" has occurred due to a lack of purchasing power, the delegates voted strong backing for the New Deal relief-recovery program.

Other resolutions called for additional funds for the LaFollette committee; passage of a state anti-strikebreaking bill and a state "Wagner Act"; support of Labor's Non-Partisan League; and legislation to increase relief expenditures in the state, at the same time providing for a moratorium on debt payments.

The convention pointed to the growth of consumer cooperatives as a means of ending the food distributors' squeeze of the market, and pledged itself to "giving all possible aid to the existing cooperatives in Michigan." The executive board was instructed to "give consideration to the question of advancing consumers cooperatives in the state."

The CIO NEWS was lauded for keeping union members informed about CIO activities. The delegates endorsed the paper, urged CIO members to subscribe and asked the CIO to "strive to build The CIO NEWS into a daily paper at the earliest possible date."

IWA Backs Wallgren Bill

Seattle — The International Woodworkers of America, CIO has gone on record to support the Wallgren Bill, creating Olympus National Park in Washington and setting it aside as a 940,000-acre timber reserve.

President Harold Pritchett wired the union's stand to the congressional committee conducting hearings on the bill. He explained that the bill is in line with President Roosevelt's conservation program.

Michigan CIO Council Formed at Lansing

From all sections of Michigan delegates gathered in Lansing last we ek to form the Michigan Industrial Union Council of the CIO. They named Adolph Germer, CIO regional director in the state, as their president, an d Richard T. Leonard, secretary-treasurer.

Intl. Harvester Signs With CIO

Pact With SWOC Ends Battle Against Unions

Chicago.—The International Harvester Company, for decades a foe of unionism, has signed a sole bargaining contract with the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, following a week of negotiations in Chicago. It affects 6,000 workers.

Union officials who took part in the conferences declared it to be "the best contract we have negotiated in Chicago."

Members of Lodge 1320 will vote on accepting the agreement, which is to go into effect as soon as ratified, and run for a year.

Wages, hours and working conditions are covered in the pact, and the shop steward system is recognized. Negotiations for changes in the wage scale may be taken up at any time during the year. Meantime present wage rates are maintained.

Forty Hour

The eight-hour day and 40-hour week now in effect is to be continued, as well as the payment of time and a half for overtime and double time for Sunday and holiday work.

A special clause provides for 30 days notice after the signing of the contract for discussion of changes proposed by either party.

The contract was signed for the union by Nicholas Fontecchio, SWOC district director, and field representatives Joe Weber and Gerald Fielde.

In a Labor Board election conducted some two months ago, the CIO union won a tremendous victory over the Employes Mutual Association, an independent union charged by the SWOC with being company dominated. The vote was 3,255 to 1,821.

The Victors Return

Republic Steel Corp. saw a back-to-work movement far different from any yet conceived by Tom Girdler as Republic employes registered at the Cleveland office of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee. Two thousand men registered and awaited instructions from the Natl. Labor Relations Board for ways and means of securing reinstatement to their jobs in accordance with the board's recent order.

Metropolitan Life Charged With Law-Breaking

New York.—Evidence that the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. is less adept at handling its labor relations policies than at betting on the death rate came to light this week as union officials revealed they had 200 cases of discrimination to present to the State Labor Relations Board.

In a letter to Father Boland of the SLRB, Lewis Berney, insurance organizing director of the United Office & Professional Workers, CIO, sent details of the campaign which he charged was being directed against union members by the management.

The union won a state labor relations board election early this month and has been certified as sole collective bargaining agency for 2557 industrial insurance agents hired by Metropolitan in New York City.

Asks Fast Action

Berney asked the state labor board to take speedy action on the 200 "outstanding acts of intimidation against CIO agents, ranging from browbeating to actual physical violence."

One affidavit secured by the union charges that a number of UOPWA members were locked in an office by a manager and told that the door would not be opened until the men had written out their resignations from the union.

In a number of speeches company officials have asserted that a vote for the union was an act of disloyalty to the company, Berney said, and pressure has been used to force resignations from the UOPWA.

Missouri League Set Up

Jefferson City, Mo.—Missouri farmer and labor groups from 61 organizations have set up a state branch of Labor's Non-Partisan League as their part in the growing farmer labor cooperation for common aims all over the nation.

One of the first acts of the 152 delegates in adopting a broad social program for action on the economic and political front was whole hearted endorsement of President Roosevelt's relief and recovery program.

The convention also urged passage of a state Labor Relations Act, laws preventing eviction of strikers or unemployed workers, limiting the use of injunctions in labor struggles, prevention of attacks on civil liberties through city by-laws and ordinances, and an adequate state relief program.

In addition to CIO unions three delegates came from the railroad brotherhoods, three from the AFL, and four from progressive farm groups. Logan H. Turner of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen was elected chairman of the state League.

NLRB Hears TWOC Case

Chattanooga, Tenn.—A National Labor Relations Board hearing on charges filed against the Peerless Woolen Mills of this city opened here this week.

The complaint, made by the Textile Workers Organizing Committee, CIO, charged that the company had coerced and intimidated the employes and fought the union. Four employes were fired shortly after the union started organizing the mill last year, the TWOC asserted.

Industrial Armaments Knocked By Cummings

Washington—Private munitions supplies accumulated by industrial firms to fight labor were roundly condemned this week by Atty. Gen. Homer S. Cummings.

Speaking on a radio broadcast, Cummings urged passage of legislation to end the practise, which he termed "barbaric."

"For years," Cummings declared, industrial conflicts have been marked by violence and bloodshed. Pistols, revolvers and gas guns have been weapons commonly used.

"Some of our large industrial concerns have built up arsenals for possible use in labor disputes. This is, of course, a barbaric practise.

Public Should Know

"I think the public is entitled to know where these guns are kept and just which corporations or individuals are in favor of the settlement of labor disputes by gunfire.

"Professional strike-breakers and pug-uglies have often carried such weapons.

"If they carry an unregistered gun under this act, they will be convicted and you can be sure that most of them won't register such guns—because to do so would reveal the kind of game they are playing."

UERMW Named

Washington, — Basing its decision on a comparison of the payroll with union cards, the Labor Board certified Local 707, United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, as the sole bargaining agent for employes at the Cleveland Equipment Works, Cleveland, Ohio.

Out of a total of 436 employes, 392 designated the UERW local as their chosen union representatives.

Ohio CIO Members Learn SSA Facts

Columbus, Ohio. — Members of the Franklin County CIO Industrial Union Council were addressed by officials of the Social Security Board on the operation of the Social Security Act at a recent meeting. A film illustrating the functioning of unemployment insurance was also shown.

The Ohio Industrial Union Council has called to the attention of all affiliated groups in the state that similar talks on the Social Security Act, aimed to explain to workers how they may obtain the full advantages of the Act, can be arranged through the Director of Information of the Social Security Board in Washington.

ORDER 14 REHIRED

Klamath Falls, Oreg. — The Crane Creek Lumber Co., located at Willow Ranch, Cal., has been ordered by the Natl. Labor Relations Board to reinstate 14 members of the Intl. Woodworkers of America who were fired for union activity. A similar decision has been rendered in the Grays Flat case, near Westwood, Cal.

Sweatshop Menace Described

Washington.—Only the threat of passage of the wage-hour bill is preventing wholesale attempts to cut wages in the garment and clothing industries, New York union leaders warned their Congressional representatives here.

The meeting was arranged by Labor's Non-Partisan League.

Members of the American Labor Party, the Intl. Ladies Garment Workers, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and other unions, told of a run-away movement from organized cities to open-shop areas.

They said the bill would help stop this trend and preserve the existing wage structure.

Weekly wages of $2, $3.65, $5 and $7 have been found in Maine, Georgia, Tennessee, Pennsylvania and New York, it was reported, and that only federal action could remedy the situation.

Negroes Mark Anniversary In Harlem

New York.—In celebration of the second anniversary of the Negro Labor Committee and the Negro Labor Assembly, an entertainment and dance will be held the night of May 21 at the Harlem Labor Center, 312 West 125th street, New York.

Several skits from "Pins and Needles," the hit produced by Labor Stage, will be presented along with leading figures from the stage and screen.

The two Negro organizations were formed in behalf of Negro workers and aim to promote solidarity between Negro and White trade unionists.

Brass Workers To Ballot

Waterbury, Conn. — Workers in four of the five branches of the American Brass Co., Waterbury, Conn., will choose between Local 251, Waterbury Brass Workers Union, CIO, and the Metal Workers Association of Waterbury, at a labor board election to be held in May.

TWOC Signs Contract With Rayon Firm

New York.—An agreement with the New Process Rayon Co., covering its Gloucester, N. J. plant has been obtained by the Textile Workers Organizing Committee, Emil Rieve, acting chairman of TWOC announced here.

The pact affirms present wages, provides for an eight-hour day, 40-hour week, a week's vacation with pay, and sets up machinery for handling grievances.

Another agreement has been signed between the TWOC and the Warrenton Woolen Co., Torrington, Conn., confirming the CIO union as the sole bargaining agent and providing for the continuance of the five per cent. increase won by the TWOC in November, 1937.

LABOR'S STRENGTH WINS WAGE-HOUR BILL ACTION

A Roll of Dishonor

These Congressmen, all members of the House Rules Comittee, voted against democracy, to gag the people's representatives. They aided Tories throughout the nation by trying to prevent the wage-hour bill from reaching the floor of the House of Representatives.

Organized labor will remember their names at the next elections.

CIO Leads In Fight For Progressive Legislation

BULLETIN

Washington—The demand of labor and progressive forces throughout the nation for action at this Congress on Federal wage-hour legislation won House consideration for the measure when 218 Congressmen on Friday signed the petition to bring it out of committee.

The signatures were affixed at the rate of four a minute, and the total number were obtained with a speed that broke all records in the history of Congress.

The measure will now be taken up on the floor of the House May 23.

"This is a great day for the people of America," commented E. L. Oliver, vice-president of Labor's Non-Partisan League. "The whole principle of 'government by rules committee' has been overwhelmingly repudiated. The House today served notice that there is no place for sweatshop industry in this country."

AFL Backs Vigilantes CIO Union Charges

Massena, N. Y. — Characterizing an AFL attack on two Aluminum Workers of America organizers as a "vigilante movement, inspired and led by the American Federation of Labor," Pres. N. A. Zonarich, said here that legal action may be instigated against the local AFL on charges of assault and battery.

Zonarich's charge was made following a raid on the CIO Aluminum Workers headquarters in this city, and the kidnapping and forcible deportation of Harold Diamond, and the molestation of Ray Pasnick, AWA organizers.

The raid followed by one day a Labor Board election at the Massena plant of the Aluminum Company of America in which the AFL local was unopposed. After the vote, AFL leaders warned AWA representatives to leave town. Otherwise, they threatened to "take things into their own hands."

"This outrageous attack on our representatives an dthe destruction of our union hall is nothing more nor less than a vigilante movement, inspired and led by the AFL," Zonarich said.

"The action in Massena is further proof that the AFL is not interested in building a great national union in the aluminum industry," he declared.

"In our Massena campaign over the past few months, we saw that th AFL had sunk to a company union level. It seldom took up grievances for the men. It lacked democratic control. Never once during our organizational campaign did the local AFL representatives consent to open debate on the issue of an isolated Federal union versus an independent international union.

Relief Program

Washington — A carefully-planned, long-range relief program, designed to give work to 13,000,000 jobless Americans and at the same time improve the nation's resources, was demanded by Chairman John L. Lewis of the CIO when he appeared before the House Appropriations Committee.

Preservation of the American forms of democracy rests upon the ability of the nation to provide work and purchasing power for its citizens, Lewis said.

Intelligent Employers Favor Wage-Hour Bill

Washington, — The wage-hour bill has the support not only of labor but of enlightened employers as well, it was shown here as Labor's Non-Partisan League made public a letter written by a prominent manufacturer.

Addressed to Rep. William Citron of Connecticut, the letter, written by Pres. C. R. Palmer of Cluett, Peabody and Co., shirt makers, warned that "low wages and long hours are again appearing in many sections." Palmer called for passage of the bill to prevent spread of the wage-cutting and the stretch-out.

Wage-Hour Bill

Washington. — Bring the wage-hour bill to the floor of the House for open debate.

That became the war-cry of labor and liberal forces in the nation's capital this week, following the action of the House Rules Committee in bottling the measure for the remainder of this session.

A "steering committee" of House progressives was preparing to circulate a petition to get the bill into the House over the heads of the Rules Committee.

Backing the petition move, CIO Chairman John L. Lewis sent the following wire to every member of the House:

"Every economic, moral and political consideration requires that the petition to discharge the Rules Committee and report the Wage and Hours Bill to the House should be signed on Friday.

"Enactment of wage and hours legislation by this Congress is imperatively necessary. Wage cuts are being threatened in the lower wage industries, and if Congress assumed the responsibility of adjournment without passing the Wage and Hours Bill, chiselling employers throughout the nation will cast restraint to the winds.

"Millions of Americans stand aghast at the spectacle of the House Rules Committee, created only to expedite the mechanical processes of legislation, undertaking to exercise a super-legislative function designed to prevent the House of Representatives from expressing its judgment on vital legislation recommended to the House by a legitimate legislative committee.

"Our nation is facing an economic crisis with grave social and political implications. Every American has a right to expect that the members of the House of Representatives elected by the people will not supinely permit its legislative functions to be challenged or strangled by a small group of eight willful die-hards."

Florida Voters Rap Tories

Washington, — The people still want a New Deal.

New proof of that fact, often forgotten by Tory legislators, became evident here as Florida voters re-nominated Senator Claude Pepper by an overwhelming majority.

Pepper had been a strong supporter of progressive legislation, while his opponents based their campaign on criticism of the New Deal.

The Florida vote, together with the election of Lister Hill, Alabama liberal, to the Senate several months ago, will bear a strong influence on other southern politicians who have been fighting such measures as the wage-hour bill, it is expected here.

FAVOR WAGE BILL

Charlotte, N. C. — The American Federation of Hosiery Workers, CIO, meeting in annual convention here, urged passage of the wage-hour bill at this session of Congress.

Unions Ask Mooney Freedom

Thousands of members of CIO and AFL unions joined forces in Detroit to demand freedom for Tom Mooney and Warren K. Billings.

Cannery Union Grows Fast

Executive Board Told of 276 New Locals; 120,000 Members Added

WASHINGTON—Steady and consistent growth of the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing & Allied Workers, CIO, was reported at the International Executive Board meeting of the union just concluded in Washington.

Donald Henderson, general president, reported growth in the nine months' existence of the union from 56 locals to 332 organized in 30 states and in Alaska and Hawaii, and a mebership of 118,000.

Of this membership, close to 30,000 are now under contract, Henderson reported. Nine months ago, less than 5,000 cannery and agricultural workers were under contract with their employers. Many contracts renewed in the past two months, Henderson said, showed marked advances over the old ones, with wage increases, better hours and other concessions won.

Contracts Won

Henderson's report divided the field of the union in 11 types of workers, listing the membership and achievements of the international in each. In fish canning, Henderson reported 11,450 of 12,000 members under contract. In fruit and vegetable packing, 3,800 of a membership of 10,000 have won signed contracts with the packers.

In the nut industry, 9,200 of 12,000 members have won agreements with their employers, and so on down the line.

Henderson pointed out that the international was now on a pay-as-you-go basis, after a period at the beginning when substantial sums were laid out in the necessary work of consolidation.

"Income that has come from the fields has gone back into the field," he said, pointing out that the international was now maintaining 15 full-time organizers.

Plans for Action

The Board meeting outlined plans for future organizing work in the industries in which the international is engaged. These included a committee to coordinate the work in sugar cane and beet sugar, and one to plan a campaign among fish cannery workers on the west coast, where the AFL has been setting up dual unions with the object of splitting workers away from the CIO.

A legislative committee was also set up, to watch legislation by federal, state and local governments of importance to cannery and agricultural workers.

Members Report Progress

Board members at the meeting submitted reports detailing progress in their regions. Richard Linsey, member from Alabama, reported growing cooperation with small farmers in his region. J. Austin Beasley, board member from the Rocky Mountain states, reported increases of $2.30 per acre for the 1938 sugar beet crop, boosting membership by 10,000 in that area.

Alfredo Fajardo, member from Washington state, described attempts of AFL officials to prevent CIO salmon packers from working this season. These attempts, Fajardo said, would fail this time as they had failed in the past.

Lief Dahl, president of District 7 (east coast) reported progress in the organization of nut, fruit and vegetable processing workers. Joseph Charles of Chicago listed recent gains in the large Libby, McNeil and Libby plant in that city.

Resolutions of greetings to John L. Lewis, CIO chairman, and to John Brophy, CIO national director, were passed at the Board session. President Roosevelt's relief and recovery program was supported, and a demand made for passage of the Wagner-Healey bill to enforce collective bargaining by government contractors.

NMU Signs Pact With Steamship Owners' Assn.

New York—After prolonged negotiations deadlocked for four months by a dispute over terms, the National Maritime Union, CIO, won its greatest victory in the maritime industry with the final successful conclusion of an agreement with the American Steamship Owners' Association.

The association represents 60 lines, including the major steamship companies.

The agreement provides for preferential hiring of union members, maintains the present wage scale, and sets up grievance and arbitration machinery. Recognizing the NMU as the sole bargaining agency, the company promises to do away with all company-sponsored clubs.

The agreement deals comprehensively with working rules in the deck, engine and stewards' departments of the ships and with the general safety and welfare of all unlicensed personnel.

Better Conditions

Vacations with pay, holidays, and adequate overtime wages are also included.

With the proviso that the wage question may be opened by either party on September 30, 1938, the agreement is to be effective until September 30, 1939, to coincide with the expiration date of agreements held by CIO West Coast maritime unions.

The company had sought persistently for December 1, as the date of expiration, but finally gave in to the union.

Before it goes into effect formally, the agreement will be submitted to the membership for ratification.

New York Council Backs Wage Bill

New York, — The New York City Council unanimously voted this week to ask speedy passage of the wage-hour bill by the present session of Congress.

The resolution was presented by Councilman Louis Hollander, a member of the American Labor Party and manager of the New York joint board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, CIO.

Notary Censured For Refusal To Notarize

New York.—Refusal of a Staten Island justice of the peace to notarize a union's complaint of unfair labor practises brought severe criticism from the Secretary of the State of New York.

The union involved, the Dental, Surgical & Allied Workers, Local 119, asked that no more serious action be taken against to the notary because his livelihood was dependent on his status.

Post, the notary, charged that the S. S. White Co., named in the union complaint, would have forced him to get out of town had he signed the paper.

Union officials pointed, however, to the Secretary of State's action in the case as a warning to other notaries who may refuse to act for labor organizations.

Thompson New President Of Erie Council

Buffalo, N. Y.—More than 114 delegates representing 40 CIO locals in Erie county and vicinity voted unanimously to make Hugh Thompson, CIO regional director, president of the Erie County Industrial Union Council, succeeding Lloyd Kinsey. Thompson is a delegate from the Ford 425 local, UAWA.

Other new officers are: Charles M. Rosen, manager joint board, Amalgamated Clothing Workers, vice-president; Lillian Brill, UOPWA, secretary; Frank Snyder, UAWA, financial secretary; Walter Shanaman, SWOC, treasurer; James Campbell, TOC, sergeant-at-arms; Alfred Larke, Newspaper Guild, Clarence LaMotte, United Butchers and Meat Cutters, and John Redmond, Industrial Insurance Agents, trustees; Leonard Kraska, Flat Glass Workers, and Isidor Backman, Fur Workers, executive committee members at large.

Hands Across the RIO

Chairman John L. Lewis of the CIO shown at headquarters of the United Mine Workers with Vicente Lombardo Toledano, secretary-general of the Confederation of Mexican Workers. Toledano invited the CIO leader to a world labor anti-war congress to be held in Mexico City this summer under the sponsorship of the Mexican labor body.

Senators Hear Of Mob Rule

Washington — Maryland's two Senators, U. S. Labor Department officials, and newspapermen heard a story this week of open and unchecked mob rule in a town less than 100 miles from Washington.

The story was told by a delegation of Negro workers representing 600 strikers in the crab-packing plants of Crisfield, Md., now in the sixth week of their walk-out. The strikers are members of the CIO United Cannery and Agricultural Workers.

At the same time, the delegates told a story of continued strike solidarity in spite of the terror used by the companies against them. The strike was caused by the sudden decision of the companies to cut wages by 10 cents a gallon on crab-meat picking, from 35 cents to 25 cents.

Starvation Wages

No notice was given of the cut; it was simply ordered without consultation or warning to the workers. At the old rate, a fast picker could average $10 per week at the height of the summer season. In the winter, earnings of $5 to $6 were reported by the speediest workers. Those less skilled averaged from a quarter to a third less.

Homes Threatened

Open threats have been made to burn the homes of Negro workers, many of whom have been forced to abandon their houses at night in fear of organized violence. A price of $500 "dead or alive" has been offered by J. C. W. Tawes, head of the Crab Packers Association, for Mrs. Martina Cooper, president of the UCAPAWA local's executive committee.

Bosses have also attempted to set up a company union, trying to coerce the workers away from the CIO with the familiar hokum about not wanting "outside organizations" in the peaceful town of Crisfield.

Lewis Receives Invitation To Appear At Mexican Labor Parley

Washington — John L. Lewis, CIO chairman, was invited to appear at the World Labor Anti-War Conference to be held in Mexico City later this year, by Vicente Lombardo Toledano, secretary-general of the Confederation of Mexican Workers (CTM) when he met with the CIO leader here.

Toledano, leader of 1,000,000 organized Mexican workers, drove to Washington from Mexico to confer with Lewis on his way to a meeting of the International Federation of Trades Unions in Oslo, Norway, where he will present plans for the Mexico City conference to the delegates.

To Stop War

"Our purpose in calling this conference," Toledano said, "is that the trade unions should take practical steps to stop war. So far the struggle against war has been conducted in a purely pacifist manner. Now the workers must take action."

Toledano added that the date of the conference would be fixed at the Oslo meeting of the IFTU, which he is attending as the leader of the Mexican delegation.

Relations Cordial

Toledano commented on the cordial relations existing between the CTM and the CIO, adding that he had known and admired Chairman Lewis for a number of years. The Mexican labor leader further pointed out that relations between the Mexican government, which has the support of the workers, and the U. S. government, were also on a friendly basis.

"The struggle with the oil trust is an episode in Mexico's struggle for independence," he said. "One hundred years ago the Mexican people conquered their political independence. Now we are fighting the same battle for economic independence.

"We are fighting the same forces in Mexico that oppose the progressive actions of the American government and people," he declared.

Progress of the CTM

The Confederation of Mexican Workers (CTM), now represents the overwhelming majority of Mexican wage earners, Toledano explained. The old Regional Confederation (CROM), which has fallen into the hand of reactionary leadership, has declined to less than 50,000 members, as compared to the CTM's 1,000,000, he stated.

"The leaders of the CROM thought the world had ceased to move," Toledano said. "As a result, they have lost their former following."

Latin American Parley Planned

Toledano also described plans for a forthcoming conference of Latin American trade unions, to be held in Mexico City with delegates present from each Latin American country where the trade union movement exists.

"There has been a new birth of the labor movement throughout Latin America," he declared. "With few exceptions, this new growth represents a united force in labor in those nations."

The Mexican leader added that countries under fascist dictatorship, while they could not be represented officially, will have representatives of the underground movement at the conference.

Demands Grow For Wage-Hour Measure At This Session

Washington—The House Rules Committee, which last week by an eight-to-six vote prevented the wage-hour bill from reaching the floor of the House of Representatives, was fast becoming the center of a flood of protests as progressive forces in all parts of the nation and in all walks of life, moved to blast the bill from the committee's censorship.

Following in rapid order came these developments, which lent strength to the belief that the measure would come to a vote at this session of Congress, despite the committee's Tory stand:

1. A statement by CIO Chairman John L. Lewis, made just before the Rules Committee vote was taken branding failure to give the bill a place on the House calendar "as an outrageous and indefensible gagging of the people's representatives and a travesty on the principles of our form of government."

2. E. L. Oliver, vice-president of Labor's Non-Partisan League, termed the committee's action "clear repudiation of party pledges" and a "direct threat to the whole process of government."

3. President Roosevelt, in a telegram to Rep. Mary Norton, chairman of the House Labor Committee, which drafted the bill, endorsed a plan to petition the bill on to the floor of the House.

Declaring his hope that the "democratic processes of legislation will continue," the President said, "I still hope that the House as a whole can vote on a wage and hour bill—either by reconsideration of this action by the Rules Committee itself or by the petition route."

Form Steering Group

A 29-man steering committee was formed by backers of the wage-hour proposal to speed the gathering of the 218 names necessary for the petition.

Rep. Arthur D. Healey, of Massachusetts, head of the steering committee, announced that plans will be made to canvass systematically the members of the House, with members of the steering body being assigned geographical groups.

Under the petition method, the House, by placing 218 signatures on the demand, can "discharge" the Rules Committee from further discussion of the bill, and thereby can bring the measure to the House for open debate.

The petition must gain its required number of signers by May 11 if the bill is to appear on the House calendar before June 1, a date favored by many members for adjournment.

Pennsy Statement

That their task will meet with no great stumbling blocks became more evident to the steering committee when 22 of the 25 Congressmen from Pennsylvania signed a statement demanding Congress give immediate attention to the wage-hour bill. Three of the Keystone State delegation were not available at the time the statement was prepared.

CIO Clothing Workers Meet For Convention

Atlantic City, N. J.—With a record of continued achievement for the last two years, 600 delegates will arrive here this weekend for the biennial convention of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America.

From President Sidney Hillman, who is also vice-chairman of the CIO and head of the Textile Workers Organizing Committee, the union members will hear a detailed report of the two years' progress, which has pushed the ACW'S membership to an all-time high and made it one of the most powerful unions in the nation.

The union reaches into every section of the country, and has union shop contracts with hundreds of plants in the clothing industry.

Union Aids TWOC

Through its aid to the Textile Workers Organizing Committee the ACW is helping in the unionization of one of the most exploited industries, and is bringing the message of organization into the deep South.

The Amalgamated was formed shortly after 1900, following a strike of clothing workers in New York and a split with the reactionary United Garment Workers. In recent years the AFL's executive council has attempted to revive the UGW, but has met with little success. The vast majority of men's garments manufactured in this country are made by members of the Amalgamated.

Quarter Million Members

The Amalgamated membership is now over a quarter of a million.

Its strength lies not only in the New York area, but in other metropolitan centers and the smaller cities where clothing factories are to be found.

A major feather in the ACW bonnet of the Amalgamated is its success in chasing "runaway" plants, which have sought to move from unionized centers.

In a message of congratulations to the Amalgamated Clothing Workers convention, John Brophy, CIO director, declared: "It gives me the greatest possible pleasure to send this message of congrat[illegible] to the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

"The success of the ACW, its militant and progressive outlook, its innumerable contributions to the cause of American unionism—all these have made your union one of the nation's outstanding labor organizations."

Hillman

Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, who will preside over the union's convention in Atlantic City this week. Hillman was recently elected vice-chairman of the CIO.

Recovery Bill Will Ease Suffering, Lewis Tells House Committee

(Text of Lewis' Statement On Page Five)

WASHINGTON—Describing as "modest indeed" the New Deal's relief-recovery program, Chairman John L. Lewis of the CIO this week recommended immediate passage of a relief appropriation sufficient to provide 3,500,000 jobs.

Lewis appeared before a sub-commitee of the House Appropriations committee.

Pointing out that there are now 13,000,000 jobless workers able and willing to work, Lewis said that the Federal Government had assumed the obligation of giving jobs to the needy unemployed, but that its actions since that time had failed to carry out this responsibility.

The President's relief and recovery program, Lewis added, "substantially meets the request we have made."

Lewis' statement to the committee came as the demand for passage of the bill continued to flood the Capitol. CIO union affiliates, local councils and progressive groups let their Congressional representatives know that government spending must be hastened while industrial activity remains at its present low levels.

Four-Point Program

Lewis advised the appropriations committee that the relief program should be based on a four-point program:

1. All workers should be employed on work suited to their needs and skills.

2. Projects should be socially necessary and productive.

3. Workers should not be required to degrade themselves as paupers in securing relief jobs.

4. Funds should be appropriated in such a way that emergencies can be met as they arise.

"One of the proudest boasts of our nation has always been the American standard of living," Lewis said.

"For those who are on WPA, that American standard of living means an average of less than $52 a month income. That is an average of approximately $620 a year.

$21 A Month

"In the southern wage regions workers on WPA receive as little as $21 a month and 15c an hour. Most of the men on these projects have families to support.

"Government has the obligation of operating decent standards. It now pays at levels below those of sweatshops, below those universally accepted as absolute minimums for American citizens.

"I cannot express in strong enough terms how inadequate these levels of income are to provide livelihood for American families. Such a condition can only bring a deep sense of shame to responsible citizens."

Fascism and anti-democracy "feed upon hunger," Lewis warned, and the American government must act immediately for its citizens if "we expect the traditional forms of American government and economy to survive.

"The progressive forces, labor and its friends, look upon this program as a test of their representatives at the nation's capitol," Lewis concluded.

'The passage of this program will be a vindication of their faith."

Leads Fight

Rep. Arthur D. Healey, Democrat, of Massachusetts, who led the fight to secure 218 names for a petition which will bring the wage-hour bill to the floor of the House of Representatives.

Shoe Board Meets, Lists Gains

Washington — Consistent progress in organizing the unorganized and in holding gains already won was reported at the General Executive Board conference of the United Shoe Workers, CIO, held this week in Washington.

In spite of mass lay-offs particularly prevalent in the shoe industry, the number of locals more than doubled during the past 12 months, the Board reported. In addition, many new contracts have been secured as well as old ones renewed on favorable terms.

Call on Lewis

The 11 Board members called on Chairman John L. Lewis, who pointed out that the CIO was the first instance of an American labor movement holding its own in times of severe industrial depression. In doing so, Lewis declared, the CIO was acting as a shock-absorber for the entire wage-earning class in the United States, standing off the ravages of unemployment and wage cuts that ordinarily come with economic crisis.

Smethurst Speaks

Walter Smethurst, executive assistant to Chairman Lewis, addressed the Board at its opening meeting, after installing the new members.

He compared the organizing record of the AFL in its 50 years of effort to that of the CIO in less three years of its existence. Citing the peak year of the AFL as an example, Smethurst pointed out that the AFL throughout the entire period had organized at the rate of 80,000 members per year.

Heywood Broun

On Henry Ford

Henry Ford made a very short speech at the advertising dinner of the Newspaper Publishers' convention.

He contributed just thirty words. His son Edsel added ten and W. J. Cameron, who is articulate over the radio, merely took a bow.

The speeches ran as follows:

Henry Ford—"Mr. Toastmaster and gentlemen, we are all on the spot. Stick to your guns, and I will help you with the assistance of my son, all I can. Thank you!"

Edsel Ford—"It is a pleasure to be here, I assure you."

W. J. Cameron ——

At first glance the oratorical contribution of the Ford trio to the banquet may seem a little meagre. Henry Ford himself was not only brief, but he spoke in so low a voice that he was hardly audible.

And yet the diners rose to their feet and cheered wildly. The New York Herald-Tribune hailed the effort on its editorial page as one of the greatest speeches of all time.

That might be mysterious unless one keeps in mind the fact that Henry Ford is an advertiser. He didn't have to raise his voice to hint that only papers which play his side of things will get his advertising.

Indeed Mr. Ford himself was almost a stooge. Money talks and it has the sweetest and most cajoling voice in all the world in the ears of men who own our press.

Metropolitan Life On New Rampage

New York.—Officials of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company in the New York area have declined to meet with union representatives to negotiate an agreement, in spite of the fact that the United Office and Professional Workers, CIO, has been certified by the Labor Board as the sole bargaining agency for insurance agents.

Their letter was "bristling with bitter attacks against the labor board and the labor act, itself," states Leon W. Berney, national insurance director of the CIO union.

The company has "even gone so far as to condemn the 'legislative license' of the union to demonstrate, display placards and circulate literature, a 'legislative license' that is guaranteed in the bill of rights of our constitution."

Reaction Rallies

Something seems to happen to a lot of employers when they get together for a Chamber of Commerce convention.

Whether it is the convention whoopee spirit, or the primitive herd instinct, or just plain orneriness, businessmen who are pretty hard-headed in running their own affairs are inclined to go off half-cocked when a convention gives them license to orate and resolute about the nation's affairs.

The meeting of the United States Chamber of Commerce in Washington illustrates this tendency.

A large number of the employers represented have for some time enjoyed satisfactory collective bargaining relations with organized labor. Their concerns have been kept from bankruptcy by government subsidies in various guises. Millions of unemployed have been given at least some purchasing power to buy their products through government relief and public works.

Yet after listening to some crackpot Tory politicians and professional labor-baiters, these ordinarily hard-headed businessmen adopted resolutions for repeal of the labor relations act, in opposition to federal wage-hour legislation and for reduction of government expenditures.

* * *

It is peculiar to note the Chamber's stand against legislation from which American business is a great beneficiary. But behind this stand is something more sinister than inconsistency.

The attack on the labor relations act is particularly significant. This act was passed to assure to American workers the right of free association which employers have long enjoyed themselves.

Under it, millions of workers have secured the right to bargain collectively with their employers. It has helped to establish orderly labor relations in place of intimidation, chaos and strife.

Through the union organization that has thus come into being labor has won higher wages and better conditions; and is now enabled to put up a stiff resistance to the flood of wage-cuts that usually threaten in a period of depression.

The attack on the labor relations act is a barely camouflaged attack on organized labor. The employers who have been pressured into taking this stand are lending themselves to a movement to make labor bear the full brunt of the depression.

The plot is first to cripple the act which assures the right of collective bargaining, and then to bear down on the unions which are upholding American living standards for the masses of the people.

* * *

The stand of the Chamber of Commerce is that of a selfish minority who think they can profit at the expense of labor and the country as a whole. Its slogans are the rallying cry of national reaction.

But against this reaction, the lines of labor and all progressive forces are increasingly solid and assertive. Their demand is for a strengthening of the labor relations act, through the Wagner-Healey bill which provides that the government may give business only to law-abiding firms; for immediate passage of federal wage-hour legislation; and for passage of the relief-recovery program, so that the government may assure the right to work to at least some millions of the unemployed.

The Chamber of Commerce convention will have served some useful purpose if it arouses more people to the dangerous character of the reaction which threatens the country, and mobilizes them on the industrial field and at the polls to support the cause of labor and progress.

Don Quixote Rides Again

The National Guard As Strikebreakers

New York.—How the National Guard has been used to break strikes is described at length in a pamphlet entitled "Call Out the Militia," just issued by the American Civil Liberties Union.

High-handed state officials can use the N. G. as virtual "storm troops" under the practically unlimited power given governors over state militias, it is charged.

Federal and state legislation to curb this misuse of troops either during strikes or in support of "arbitrary powers of governors" is urged in the 30-page booklet, prepared by Walter Wilson and Albert Deutsch.

Pointing out that efforts to end abuses of the National Guard through resort to the courts have proved futile, the pamphlet favors a Federal law to lay down the conditions under which troops can be ordered out.

Wanted: Definitions

Indiscriminate use of the terms "emergency," "riot," and "insurrection" by governors, makes it necessary to define these terms legally, to prevent their being interpreted to apply to strikes, says the A. C. L. U. pamphlet.

Direct or indirect private subsidies to the National Guard or to individual guardsmen should be prohibited, and guardsmen should be forbidden "from acting outside their duties in such capacities as strikebreakers, private detectives, privately paid deputy sheriffs or private guards," the pamphlet declares.

As an example of the procedure used in ordering out troops to police strikes, the case of the members of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers who went on strike, May 8, 1935, against the Eagle-Picher Smelter works at Galena, Kansas, is described.

When the companies attempted to resume operations with strikebreakers, Governor Landon sent 50 soldiers to the scene on the mere request of the undersheriff and county attorney of Cherokee county. No proof was sent back of the claim that the strikers were planning violence.

Looking Ahead By LEN DE CAUX

Of Historical Interest Only

APPROPRIATELY enough, one of the big dailies followed its story on the AFL council's expulsion of six more CIO unions with a piece about the Board of the American Museum. The train of thought is understandable.

For the council is quite a museum piece itself. Its actions have a certain historical interest for those who like to potter awhile among the relics of the musty past.

It is interesting to know that dinosaurs once stalked the earth and considered themselves no small potatoes. But they failed to adapt themselves to the changing times on account of their long, stiff necks, their big stomachs and small brains and their habit of sitting on their tails.

Some of the last surviving dinosaurs doubtless raised their voices from time to time in what were meant for terrifying roars. But the only reaction they got was probably, "Now, aren't they quaint!"

The latest ukase of the AFL council is similarly more quaint than terrifying. But phonograph records should be preserved of such utterances for some future Museum of Unnatural History.

An Old Story, Twice Told

Like Matthew Woll's wing collars and John P. Frey's social theories, this particular bellow of the AFL councils tail-sitting dinosaurs brings back memories of an almost forgotten past.

A long time ago, it will be remembered, the council threw the CIO unions out of the AFL because they would not discontinue industrial organization of the unorganized.

Since then these unions have flourished mightily and have built a great modern labor movement outside of and distinct from the AFL.

The AFL council got quite a lot of press headlines when they threw out the CIO unions. But since then no one has paid so much attention to them any more. So, to revive their sense of self-importance, they recently decided to repeat the performances.

Only this time, to prolong the sweet agony, they have re-enacted the ceremony of ousting the ousted unions in two separate spasms. First they picked out the coal and metal miners, and the glass workers; and now they have followed with the steel, textile, oil clothing, auto and rubber workers.

But by this time it is all an old story, twice told, and even the anti-labor press pays little attention.

A Distinction Without A Difference

Some historians discover a technical distinction between the present expulsions, or charter revocations, and the original "suspensions." The theory is that the council was not supposed to invade the jurisdiction of "suspended" unions but could do so with "expelled' unions.

For the CIO this is a distinction without a difference. The crafts began invading industrial union jurisdictions long before the CIO was formed. And since the suspensions, the council has used company unions, craft unions, dual unions and every other available weapon against the CIO unions.

Such activities have been limited only by its inability to make any dent in the loyality of CIO members to their unions.

What Happened In Mexico

The squatting dinosaurs of the AFL council might take a glance across the Rio Grande, if they want to know what happens to a labor movement that fails to adapt itself to new times.

Lombardo Toledano, the Mexican trade union leader, was recently asked by Washington reporters what had happened to the old Regional Confederation of Labor (CROM) of that country, which has been largely displaced by the Confederation of Mexican Workers (CTM). Once dominant, the CROM now has less than 50,000 members, as against 1,000,000 in the new CTM.

"The CROM people thought that the world was static," he replied. "They did not realize that it was moving and they failed to keep pace with the times. The result is that they have lost nearly all their membership [illegible] the CTM."

CAPITAL CLOSE-UPS

By MARTIN STRONG

"Leave us alone! Give us your money!"

This is the wolf-pack yodel which is arising in Washington this week. If it were directed only at the moon, which smiles eternally at such foolish fancies of earthly creatures, it would be merely a laugh.

But the howl of the pack cannot be dismissed so easily. For the voice comes baying from the potent lungs of the United States Chamber of Commerce, and the moon at which it yelps its menacing demand is the government—otherwise the people—of this United States.

Does the picture seem exaggerated? Unhappily, no. For look at it as you will, business is still the dominant force in this country, and on its health depends the prosperity of millions, if not the prosperity of the entire nation.

Yet in this good year 1938, when business is claiming that it alone has the only sure panacea for national prosperity, this is exactly the remedy it offers; this is its only idea of how to assure national health.

Of course we have simplified it, but in words only. And if you doubt it, turn to the veracious daily journals of the United States and find it all set down, just so, although perhaps in a little fancier language.

Convention Opens

It is a Saturday, April 30. The potent Chamber of Commerce of the United States is to meet in its twenty-sixth national convention the next Monday. So, in case anyone might miss the importance of this great event the "chamber" puts out a statement of what the big business leaders have already decided is wrong with the country, and what to do about it.

In the first place, they say, the government should give up the idea of any "further government control of business", such as the formation of government planning agencies, the extension of the Wagner Labor act, government regulation of wages and hours, and government "price fixing and price control".

These things, says the "chamber," are bad; oh, very bad.

"It should now be realized," says the potent vessel of big business distillations, (and these are the exact works) "that recovery cannot be produced by legislative fiat."

So what?

Well, says the "chamber," (maybe forgetting that it had its right hand in somebody else's left hand pocket) here is a nice little start on leaving us alone and getting away from those confounded "legislative fiats"—which, in case you don't understand this fancy language, means a few LAWS.

And again we quote, correctly if not directly, right out of the "chamber's" own flush-tank.

"We want a LAW requiring the government to lend more money to the busted railroads than it can lend under present laws.

"We want a LAW forcing the government to put up the money with which the busted railroads can buy new locomotives and freight cars and other equipment.

"We want a LAW that will make the government pay just as much in freight rates to railroads which got their right-of-way (and a few million more acres of land) FREE from the government as it pays to railroads which bought their own land."

So says the Chamber of Commerce of the United States—that powerful vessel which is able to stand on its own bottom just so long as the public will fill it up.

Dollar Idealism

But let us get out of the big-business sewer and flit among the creatures of sweetness and light.

These gilded-winged butterflies are getting so thick around Washington (and the rest of the country too) that a working newspaper man can hardly stop for a drink any place now without having some gold dust brushed off on his sweaty shoulders.

One of these has just sailed past the perspiring laborers of journalism here in the person of a vigorous young Democrat, trained in the school of old-time Maryland democracy only to land on the scintillating shores of the Republican National Committee as its press-agent-in-chief. The golden fleece, it is said, was $20,000 a year, guaranteed for three years. Republican Chairman John Hamilton said this proved how alluring G. O. P. principles are to vigorous young Democrats, and maybe he was right.

But these $20,000 workers in the vineyard are dull fowl compared with the birds of paradise who make up the American Newspaper Publishers Association. These ethereal creatures met in New York in annual convention a week ago to con the progress of the great press of the nation. And there, under the reflected glow of champagne bubbles and gilded brassieres, they discovered a great TRUTH.

Formally assembled in convention, these great publishers solemnly asserted by resolution that if ANYBODY—and they obviously meant the President—could say anything to the people of the country over the radio which the publishers didn't want them to hear, we were in imminent danger of a Hitler dictatorship.

Of course, any two-bit psychologist would undoubtedly assert that it is a sense of guilt which makes these press paladins so fidgety about the threat of censorship—a threat which everybody in Washington with a grain of wit would simply classify along with the fulminations of those great statesmen Senator "Throttlebottom" Burke of Nebraska and Congressman "No-pockets" Hoffman of Michigan.

But let the publishers keep on spouting such insane suggestions as this latest one, and keep on broadcasting them through their great journals, and somebody may begin to talk censorship in earnest.

Asks Recovery Bill Passage

John L. Lewis, chairman of the CIO, shown as he appeared before a sub-committee of the House Appropriations Committee and urged speedy passage of the President's relief and recovery program, to provide 3,500,000 jobs for the unemployed. Pictured with Lewis are Rep. Edward Taylor of Colorado, (left) and Rep. Clifton Woodrum of Virginia, author of the notorious Woodrum amendment.

Fascism Fed On Hunger, Lewis Warns House Finance Committee

STATEMENT BY JOHN L. LEWIS

Thirteen to fourteen million workers are now unemployed in this nation. That means unemployed who are able and willing to work. There are in addition countless millions who are employed only one, two, or three days a week.

Unemployment of thirteen million means that there are at least five million who can be considered to be without resources of any kind, facing all the ravages of destitution. It is modest indeed that labor asks only three-and-a-half million jobs to care for thirteen million unemployed.

In the spring of 1935 the Federal government assumed the obligation to give jobs to the needy unemployed who were able to work. Since that time the Administration has reiterated again and again the conviction that the Federal government must carry this responsibility. It has failed to do so.

In establishing this policy the Federal government threw back upon the states and counties total responsibility for those unemployed and destitute who could not work.

But it has done more than that. It has thrown back upon the state and local governments a burden that has now reached two million families. Probably at least sixty per cent. of the heads of these two million families are employable.

Face Bankruptcy

Thus state and local governments find themselves being driven to the point of bankruptcy by a burden which the Federal government has promised to assume. If it did assume such responsibility now more than a million workers would go on WPA payrolls. That would raise the required number of jobs beyond the modest three-and-a-half million which labor is asking. Even this statement does not picture the real need.

The difference between the number of persons indicated as needing employment by calculating from the general employment figures and the number of persons on the WPA plus persons awaiting assignment is explained by the inadequacy of the relief machinery in the states. States are not able or will not put upon their relief rolls all those who need WPA jobs. This is due to limited personnel in relief offices, to certain local regulations and exceedingly inadequate funds for local relief. There is in addition a natural resistance on the part of self-respecting workers to face the heartbreaking and degrading process of getting on the relief rolls even though they be in dire need.

Upon the basis of these facts labor has made its request to Congress for provision for at least three-and-a-half million jobs for the unemployed on WPA. This is a minimum program. Any program that is expected to meet the basic condition that every unemployed person who is out of work through no fault of his own should have a job, would have to be nearly twice as great as the one labor asks.

Nearly two months after labor had announced the need for three-and-a-half million jobs the President set forth to Congress his program. It is the belief of labor that this program substantially meets the request we have made. We are whole-heartedly in support of it.

We believe that in order to make this program effective the Executive should be given wide latitude in its expenditure. It is not possible at this time to forecast the nature of the emergencies which may arise in the next year. The people of our nation should not be made to suffer because someone may have guessed wrong.

3,500,000 Jobs

Labor believes that this program can be so operated, if proper authorization is given, that an average of three-and-a-half million jobs can be provided between the operations of the WPA and PWA for the next seven months which are covered by the WPA appropriation proposed in the President's message.

On two counts it is important that this three-and-a-half million jobs be provided immediately.

First, there is terrible need among our people, and on all grounds of humanity and decency these human beings must be provided for.

The second important purpose of the program is to provide and stimulate purchasing power and recovery. The longer that stimulus is delayed, so much longer do we drift not toward recovery but toward economic disaster. Therefore we cannot afford to wait for three or six months for the three-and-a-half million jobs to be provided. It may be too late then. Now is the time for action.

Four Principles

Labor is asking that this fund be so appropriated that it can be operated under four main principles.

1. The first principle is that all workers should be employed on work suited to their needs and skills. One of the fundamental purposes of the Works Program has been to maintain in our people their skills, their morale and their normal life. The program means conservation of human resources.

If projects are set up upon which skills are destroyed, which require that the workers' family life be broken up, this great purpose is not accomplished.

If a man has worked all his life as a clerk with his hand trained to pen and pencil, it may be a harmful thing that he should be put to digging ditches in the winter time. If a man is required to leave his family over long periods of time so that he may work on a project, that too is harmful.

A careful study is needed to assure that there shall be projects to fulfill the needs and to conserve the skills of the unemployed workers. This implies foresight and planning. Useful projects cannot be created overnight. They must be ready when the emergency arises.

Socially Necessary Plans

2. The second principle upon which labor makes its demand is that projects should be socially necessary and productive. This means housing and slum clearance, flood control, the building of schools and hospitals, health measures, cultural and white collar projects, and vocational training work.

The vast funds which our government spends upon the works program should not be wasted away on projects which fail to add to or conserve the material and human capital of our nation. That this purpose may be accomplished requires planning and foresight.

Too long now our works programs have been created at a moment's notice. It is high time that provision is made for a foresighted planning of projects which will be not only useful, socially necessary and productive, but will provide work suited to the skills of those who become unemployed. It is time that there was established within the government a planning agency to determine where projects are needed and have ready at the time of economic emergency full plans so that work might be started immediately.

No Degradation

3. The third principle that labor asks is that jobs should be given those who need jobs without requiring honest, decent unemployed workers to degrade themselves as paupers.

I can conceive of no bitterer experience for a man than that of being treated as a pauper when he wants work and is willing to work. That tragedy is being enacted daily in our nation.

If we wish to maintain that free American spirit of which we speak so proudly, then this brutal crushing of men's spirits must not be allowed to go on. Labor says, give jobs to those who need them without making men suffer the degradation of being pauperized.

Those who are most needy should be given first consideration. Those unemployed who are not on relief should not be forced to drag out their meager possessions to the last bitter end before they can receive help. As long as every unemployed person must be certified for relief before he can be sent to a WPA job this will happen.

The immediate way to prevent this evil is to have the WPA make certifications directly.

Another need arises in this connection. Millions of our working men and women now only have one, two or three days of work a week. This work in most cases provides incomes far below the standard necessary to maintain civilized life at a minimum standard of health and decency.

Yet these men and women, though their income is less week to week and month to month than they get on the meager payments of the WPA are denied the right to get supplementary work on WPA. Nor can they give up their jobs and go on WPA.

Labor asks that WPA provide supplementary work for part-time workers to bring their income up to an American standard.

Prepare For Emergencies

4. The fourth principle that labor asks is that funds be so appropriated that government will be able to meet current needs wherever and whenever such needs arise. The government should be equipped to meet emergencies.

When three million men and women are added to the long list of those unemployed, as was the case in the last four months of the past year, the government should be in a position to meet the emergency unhampered by legalisms and red tape.

At the present time also the financial affairs of many communities have reached such a pass that they are unable to provide the standard contribution for the establishment of WPA projects. The government cannot allow the workers in these communities to suffer. It must be prepared to enter such communities and establish its own projects even if adequate local contributions cannot be provided.

One of the proudest boasts of our nation has always been the American standard of living. For those who are on WPA that American standard of living means an average of less than $52 a month income. This is an average of approximately $620 a year.

In the southern wage region workers on WPA receive about half that amount. Unskilled workers receive as little as $21 a month and 15 cents an hour. Most of the

The Church And The CIO

Understanding And Tolerance Asked By Brophy

BY JOHN BROPHY
(Director of the CIO)

The fact that you are gathered here to discuss the "Christian Social Order" is an eloquent tribute to the seriousness and importance of the problem we are facing throughout this nation today. Not only here, but every place where thinking men collect you will find similar discussion and analysis going on.

You will find men talking, thinking, working out methods of approach, striving for a solution to the question that all men must solve—the problem of the social system in which they live.

How does this problem present itself to us? Principally in the form of the problem of labor, in the form of the problem of the worker and his relationship to the world in which he must toil and live. The presence on your conference agenda of so many labor leaders is a confirmation of this—the fact that you have gathered here to listen to me and to a dozen or more of us who are in the midst of labor struggles and labor aspirations in our society of today.

You have ample and very weighty precedent for this absorption in the problem of the social order.

Church leaders, from the Holy Father to the parish priest, have written, spoken, acted on the problem from earliest times. Our Church, throughout its history, has never failed to show its interest and its concern for the social and material as well as the spiritual welfare of those in its charge.

A Big Problem

Today, it must give even more thought than it has in the past—and that is what I hope to urge you, as representatives of the Church assembled here today—to do.

The problem is not easy. It never was, and it never will be easy.

With the advent of the organization I represent, the CIO, the social problems of this country have been forced on our attention more sharply than ever before. The workers themselves have forced it on our attention, through organizing in millions with their fellow workers for the achievement of their just and legitimate demands.

They have organized—4,000,000 of them in the CIO, many additional thousands in the AFL—and they have forced the Nation to think hard about their problems. I think I can say that at no previous period of our history have the problems of the workers in America commanded so much attention, from sociologists, from intellectuals, from statesmen, from religious leaders, from the public as a whole. Certainly labor news has never commanded so much space as it does today, even in our most socially backward newspapers and other publications.

So the problem is forced on us, whether we want to think about it or not.

The Church Speaks Out

The ivory tower in today's world has a vacant sign on it. Men who must live in the world of today, who must participate in everything that goes on around them, have been forced to think about the social problem as never before. And such men are by far in the overwhelming majority in our world. The philosopher, the meditative man who can remain aloof from his material and social world is becoming an increasing rarity.

What is this precedent for your interest in the social order that I referred to at the beginning of my talk with you? I think one of the best examples is to be found in the Encyclical of Leo XII, of 1891, "On the Condition of Labor," where it is explicitly stated the workers must be permitted and encouraged to form workers' associations, "that it were greatly to be desired that they should be multiplied and become more effective."

Pius XI, speaking of the absorbing nature of the social problem in his Encyclical of March, 1937, states clearly that the demand of the workers for "more equitable distribution of this world's goods, objects entirely and undoubtedly legitimate" has resulted in wide, new currents of thought that are absorbing the attention of the entire world—not alone the Christian world, as the Holy Father points out, but of every area and every sector where men are gathered together to work for their living.

This counsel is particularly apt to our Church. The Catholic Church is a working class Church. The basis of its following, the millions of its believers, in this country as in all others, are workers. It is their belief and their support that makes our Church exist.

What does this counsel mean? To me it means simply this—that all of us, priests and laymen and all interested in humanity, must go with the workers to help them to achieve their immediate and practical needs, their just and legitimate desires for a better and a more decent way of living. It means that we must struggle with them in their daily tasks of finding enough to eat, enough to shelter and clothe their families.

Aims of CIO

This is what the labor movement has to offer to the worker: Some measure of respite from the unending concern with material things. It brings him shorter hours, higher pay, safer and more decent conditions of work, a measure of economic and social security. It brings him the prerequisites (which our Church has so often recognized) for the good life.

In America today, the CIO is undertaking this task. We have 4,000,000 members organized in our ranks under the banner of the CIO. For these workers, the CIO has brought a message of hope and of achievement. By far the majority of our members are under contract with their employers, securing higher wages, shorter hours, better working and living conditions.

It is enough to speak briefly of one or two of our great modern mass production industries where the CIO has organized the workers. Let us take the steel industry, backbone of our whole industrial fabric.

Those of you who come from parishes in the steel industry will bear me out when I compare working and living conditions today with those of two years ago. The CIO has organized 525,000 steel workers. All of them are under contract specifying a minimum wage, maximum hours, and other essentials to decent working and living standards.

As a result of this, there is a new atmosphere in the steel towns. Workers, for the first time in the history of the industry, are free. Industrial feudalism has been banished.

Before CIO, steel workers were not citizens. They worked and lived as the boss ordered they should. They voted as the boss ordered they should. They lived in the boss's house and paid rent and food costs to the boss out of the inadequate wages that he chose to pay them.

Unions Free Men

Today they are free men. Why? Because they organized, because they took action collectively for the betterment of their own lives.

They didn't do it by remaining aloof from the struggle. They didn't do it by being individualists. They didn't do it by resolving that the only way to handle material problems was to ignore them, in the hope that if they wouldn't go away at least they might become a little less conspicuous.

The same story of progress is true throughout other industries.

In the American southwest, the CIO has brought a new message of hope to scores of thousands of Mexican and Spanish-American workers—Catholics all, incidentally—who have been forced to live on wages as low as $1.50 and $2 per week—when they work.

I could cite these gains to you for an hour or more, without exhausting them. It is more to the point to try to tell you briefly what struggles the workers in the CIO have had to go through to win them. Not all employers are as enlightened or as sensible, I should say, as U. S. Steel and the hundreds of others who have seen the value of settled labor relations and have written contracts with the CIO without forcing an open struggle.

A number have chosen the hard way, the way of conflict. And the CIO has been forced to fight them.

This, for some reason, is something that seems to trouble many of our friends who are not members themselves of the industrial working class. I cannot fathom why it should, frankly. It is granted that the gains are important and necessary, that the CIO can and must win better conditions of working and living for its members.

Can the CIO then surrender its chance and its duty to secure those gains because some anti-union employer chooses to fight rather than meet his workers half way?

In my opinion and in the opinion of our 4,000,000 members, the CIO or any other labor organization worthy of the name cannot surrender this duty in the face of unenlightened opposition.

Who Causes Strikes?

But when they do have to strike, they develop resources in themselves that often were not realized before. They learn discipline, self-control, organization, and above all, unity. They learn it in the hardest of all schools.

If you think that workers enjoy a strike as such, ask the men who were shot in the back in the infamous Memorial Day Massacre during the Little Steel strike. Ask the wives and children of the men who were murdered by corrupt police and company thugs for attempting to assert their American right to peaceful assembly and petition. They struck because they had to, because every other avenue of approach to their working and living problems had been closed by the employer.

The CIO has not stopped with the winning of collective bargaining for its employed members. It has also taken over the responsibility of looking after its members when they are unemployed.

John L. Lewis, our Chairman, has said, referring to the efforts of government to handle the problem: "The administration has taken upon itself this obligation and the workers of America expect it to fulfill its promise. The CIO has taken upon itself the duty of presenting the case of the unemployed."

Today, for the first time in the history of the labor movement, you can see in scores of our communities the presence and active work of unemployment committees under CIO leadership, which exist to see to it that jobless workers receive relief when they need it, that they get work if it is available, that the government carries out its promise to look after the unemployed.

Church Approves

These activities have been approved and praised by our Church—not only in general terms in Papal Encyclicals, but in actual terms in which the CIO is named.

I quote from a statement of the Most Reverend Robert E. Lucey, Bishop of Amarillo, Texas—where CIO struggles for great masses of Catholic workers have brought the results I have already mentioned:

"During the past half century only a small fraction of our working people were ever united in any worth while labor organization. This situation was agreeable to the majority of the owners of wealth and employers of labor. It was economic slavery for the workers.

"But now in the Providence of God a better day has dawned for the teeming masses of the people. By enormous effort the Committee for Industrial Organization is lifting labor from its lethargy. Literally millions of semi-skilled and unskilled wage earners are enrolling under the banner of organized labor.

"It is the duty of working people to join a bona fide labor union for mutual protection and progress. They must organize for their own sake and for the welfare of their families, their community and their nation. The CIO has taken a long step in that direction.

"Only a strongly organized and well directed labor movement has any hope of eliminating industrial conflict and economic immorality. Thus shall be established a regime of social justice."

Churchmen know the need for labor organization. They know the way it must be done—through strong, powerful bodies such as the CIO. They recognize the need and the legitimacy of CIO methods. I want to leave that message with you—that the labor movement is the crux of our present social problem, and that if we are to participate in its solution we must aid and support the labor movement.

John Brophy, director of the Committee for Industrial Organization, is a leading liberal Catholic layman.

In view of the interest in the CIO among religious bodies, the remarks of Mr. Brophy to the National Catholic Social Action Conference at Milwaukee, Wisconsin, are of extreme interest and importance.

Pointing out that only when material needs are provided for will men have time for cultural and spiritual activity, Mr. Brophy asked the 1500 priests and laymen present to appreciate the work of the CIO in aiding American citizens to gain material sufficiency, and to thwart dictatorship—which would be ruinous both for labor and the Church.

Lewis Speech Before House Committee

men on these projects have families to support. Government has the obligation of creating decent standards.

It now pays at levels below those of sweatshops, below those universally accepted as absolute minimums for American citizens.

Inadequate Income

I cannot express in strong enough terms how inadequate these levels of income are to provide livelihood for American families. Such a condition can only bring a deep sense of shame to responsible citizens.

Labor believes that Congress is now confronted with a decision of profound importance. We are a nation rapidly slipping toward economic chaos. Up and down the land the mills and factories of the greatest industrial nation of the world lie idle while millions of our people wait for the right to work and to consume the products of their work.

The President has enunciated a program of action to stir the nation from its economic doldrums. That program is closely in consonance with the measures which labor has been asking. I see no signs on the horizon of the nation which would indicate a natural course of recovery if Congress chooses to remain inert.

Serious Decision

I solemnly say to you that this is the most serious decision which Congress faces.

If Congress chooses to act in accordance with the President's program, our nation can be again turned toward economic vigor. If Congress fails to act we will continue to drift in the direction of economic chaos.

In that direction lies the greatest threat to democracy, the idleness and misery of our people. The life of any form of society depends upon its ability to provide security and happiness for its people.

Fascism and anti-democracy feed upon hunger, hopelessness and desperation. American government must be prepared to act immediately and effectively in the interests of its citizens if we expect the traditional forms of American government and economy to survive.

The progressive forces, labor and its friends, look upon this program as a test of their representatives at the nation's capitol. The passage of this program will be a vindication of their faith.

Preserve Democracy

"The church has as great a stake as labor in democracy. The totalitarian regimes now in existence in so much of Europe are as much a menace to the Church as they are to labor.

"Hitler has sought to destroy the labor movement in Germany and the Catholic church in Germany.

"You and I know he will not succeed. But he can cause and does cause a tremendous amount of suffering in the process of his attempt. And while Hitler and his like remain in power, democracy, economic security, peace, spiritual and intellectual freedom suffer."

Unionism "Fate Worse Than Death" To Boston Firm; Tries To Liquidate

BOSTON—It's an old Bean Town expression that the Saltonstalls speak only to the Cabots and the Cabots speak only to God

But a new version of the old adage came to light this week when it developed that the firm of Sampson & Murdock, publishers of the city directory, rather than speak to the CIO, would go out of business completely.

A statement made by the union and sworn to by a stockholder of the company, has been filed with the National Labor Relations Board, charging the company with violation of the Wagner Act.

The affidavit charges that, following an NLRB election in which the United Office and Professional Workers had gained sole collective bargaining rights for the sales and name-taking staffs, the company called a special meeting of stockholders, at which the officers were given authority to liquidate the firm.

G. D. Marcy, president of the 92-year-old company, was charged with stating that "the sole purpose of the liquidation proceedings was to avoid signing a contract with the CIO; that if they could escape signing a contract with the CIO, they would remain in business."

Blacklist In Use?

Judge Thomas Weston, a stockholder, present at the meeting, asked if the concern could not be sold to another directory publisher. The affidavit charged that he was informed this would not be "feasible since it would entail the carrying over of the present personnel of the business, including the union now formed." Such a move, would keep the union in existence, while liquidation would involve smashing of the employes organization.

It was also brought to light that the "North American Directory Publishers Assn. was vitally interested in the case and considered this a test case." Pres. Marcy was of the opinion that "they undoubtedly would" aid the firm in its anti-union moves, and would use a blacklist to prevent employes from getting employment with other directory publishers.

No question of finances is involved in the liquidation effort, since the firm made a profit last year of $18,000, over and above $27,000 paid out in dividends.

Guild Goes St. Bernard

Buffalo, N. Y. — In the spirit of the charitable monks who send out St. Bernard dogs bearing rum to succor travelers lost in the Alps, the Buffalo Newspaper Guild has arranged an oasis for delegates to the American Newspaper Guild convention in Toronto, Ont., opening June 13.

The Guild will have a keg of beer on tap for two days preceding the convention for all dusty and travelworn delegates who pass through the city en route to the convention city.

Ohio CIO Asks Funds For LaFollette Committee

Columbus, Ohio—"If manufacturers and business men can set up a super-government within our American system, designed to serve their own selfish and greedy interests, enforced by brutality and violence through private armed militia, they are trampling on the Constitution and the American flag in a more despicable manner than any 'foreign agitator.'"

So Sen. James F. Byrnes, chairman of the Senate Audit and Control Committee, was told in a letter from Ted Silvey, secretary-treasurer of the Ohio Industrial Union Council. Speaking for the council's scores of thousands of members, Silvey demanded that the Senate provide additional funds to permit the LaFollette civil liberties committee to continue its investigations.

"If you fail to support the LaFollette committee, you will not only alienate our people, but you will be feeding strong meat to our—and your—enemies," the letter continued.

Glass Union Wins Wage Cut Fight

Cincinnati — A seven-week strike against threatened wage cuts ended in victory this week for members of the Federation of Flat Glass Workers employed at the Cambridge Tile Plant.

The management of the company had insisted upon slicing the pay scale when negotiations started for a new contract between the company and the union.

The strike was conducted in militant but peaceful fashion. When a settlement was concluded, union negotiators, representatives of the management and conciliators of the U. S. Dept. of Labor celebrated with a beer "toast" to future amicable relations between the employer and the workers.

CIO Leather Workers Seek Industrial Unity

Boston.—The need for unity of labor forces in the leather industry was stressed by the delegates attending the fifth annual convention of the National Leather Workers Association, CIO.

Ninety-four delegates were present from the major leather and tannery centers in Massachusetts, as well as from New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Ohio. Three fraternal delegates from the Independent Leather Workers of Fulton County, in Gloversville, N. Y., also attended the meeting.

A number of independent unions exist throughout the industry, and they were invited by telegraph to send fraternal delegates to the Boston gathering.

"We look forward to the day when yours and other allied CIO unions in the tanning and leather goods industry will be united into a single powerful industrial organization," said John Brophy, director of the Committee for Industrial Organization, in a message of greetings to the convention.

The convention authorized its general executive board to confer with the International Fur Workers Union, CIO, on a proposal to merge with that union, which will then be submitted in a referendum to the NLWA members.

Irving Potash, manager of the joint board of the New York Fur Workers Union, addressed the convention, and discussed the merger propostion.

Reports of the union's progress in the last year were made by Secretary-Treasurer Daniel J. Boyle and other officers.

Baltimore, Md.—Auto salesmen have organized into a bona fide union for the first time in the history of Baltimore, according to Frank J. Bender, CIO director in Maryland. The first meeting, held at the headquarters of the United Office and Professional Workers, CIO union, was well attended, Bender said.

Support For Kennedy Gains In Penna.

Harrisburg, Pa.—With the Pennsylvania primary race nearing its climax the middle of this month, the growing strength of Lieutenant Governor Thomas Kennedy, labor-endorsed candidate for governor became steadily more apparent.

From all parts of the Keystone State came pledges of support to the United Mine Workers secretary-treasurer.

In Philadelphia four political leaders of the Earle-Jones slate, which has the backing of the machine bosses, swung over to the Kennedy ticket.

Farmers Unite With Labor

Kennedy strength among the farmers was indicated when leaders of the Farmers' Union pledged him their support. In York, Robert A. Warner, president of the AFL central labor union, announced his intention of backing the UMW leader.

In Pittsburgh, Judge M. A. Musmanno, nationally-known liberal, made his first speech in a year, and urged the people of Pennsylvania to vote for Kennedy. Musmanno, whose voice was insured last year, said, he had disregarded doctor's orders to refrain from public speaking, "because there are issues in life which cannot wait on doctors' certificates of approval."

An indication of the popular support for Kennedy was seen in an announcement that the American Institute of Popular Opinion had found Kennedy leading his two opponents in the Democratic primary by a large majority.

Judge OK's Transfer To CIO

Los Angeles, Calif. — San Pedro union longshoremen now have been legally recognized as having the right to give up their AFL charter and join the CIO.

Superior Judge Ruben S. Schmidt, who formerly declared officials of the International Longshoremen and Warehousemen's Union in contempt of court for protesting against his ruling preventing the stevedores from affiliating their local with the CIO, now has reversed his decision.

Staged Demonstration

After his first ruling in favor of AFL officials, the Judge had appointed a temporary receiver for the San Pedro union and its hiring hall. The pro-CIO longshoremen staged a stop work demonstration in protest, declaring they would never give up control of their hiring hall. The receivership was then held in abeyance.

In his recent ruling, Judge Schmidt held that amendments made in the articles of incorporation of the San Pedro Longshoremens Ass'n, enabled the union to change its affiliation from the AFL to the CIO.

Some 3000 longshoremen in San Pedro voted some time ago in favor of joining the CIO.

FOR RECOVERY PROGRAM

Worcester, Mass.—Pointing out that Pres. Roosevelt's relief-recovery program is in line with CIO efforts to aid the unemployed, the Worcester Industrial Union Council of the CIO has gone on record to support the program.

Maritime Commission Aims To Kill NMU, CIO Charges

Washington—The U. S. Maritime Commission was charged with an open attempt to break the CIO National Maritime Union through its campaign of setting up commission-controlled hiring halls.

The charge was made by Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, in testimony before a House Merchant Marine subcomittee on the Sirovich resolution which would prevent such a practice by the commission.

Pressman also charged that the Maritime Commission is preventing the National Labor Relations Board from acting on petitions for elections on more than 35 ships owned by the Commission. These petitions were more than four months ago, he pointed out, in urging the House Committee to ascertain the facts of the situation from the NLRB.

1872 Law Revived

Pressman declared that there was no reason for use of Commission-operated hiring halls other than as a weapon to kill the maritime unions.

"Invoking an archaic law passed by Congress in 1872 when unions on ships or on the waterfront did not exist," he said, "the Commission has caused to be opened at its New York City address the first of a series of hiring halls under government auspices which are planned.

"The 1872 law was designed to put out of business the racketeering crimp joints that preyed upon the sailors of those days, and now we see it used by the Commission competing with their unions rather than to protect them."

The Sirovich resolution aims to mission to harm the sailors by prevent the Commission from operating hiring halls as long as the certified collective bargaining agencies can furnish from their membership duly qualified seamen, Pressmen pointed out. It also would bring vessels owned or chartered by the Commission under the Labor Relations Act.

"The Maritime Commission's excuse for opening the hiring halls is to recruit seamen for the Commission's ships. Evidence is in the hands of the unions, however, that the Commission intends later to ship crews for subsidized ships and finally to hire crews for all ships," the CIO counsel pointed out.

"The inevitable result of such a policy, if allowed to continue, will be to hamstring the seamen in their own efforts to improve their working and living conditions aboard ship. Since forming their own organization, the unlicensed seamen have, in co-operation with the licensed craft, materially improved these conditions."

Mosele Subs For Thompson

Buffalo, N. Y.—Peter Mosele of the New York City regional CIO office is acting regional director in Western New York, during the absence of Hugh Thompson on a six-week's trip to Ireland.

Brother Mosele is acting for about three weeks while Rinaldo Cappellini, originally slated to fill in the interim, stumps Pennsylvania for Thomas Kennedy.

Washington. — Workers of the Alabama Drydock and Shipbuilding Company of Mobile will be represented by Local 18, Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers, as the result of an election won overwhelmingly by the CIO union.

The local was certified by the National Labor Relations Board following the poll, won by a vote of 794 to 454 over the Local Metal Trades Council of Mobile, AFL.

Quarrymen Joining CIO In Georgia

Lithonia, Ga. — Lithonia members of the Quarry Workers Intl. Union, CIO, are forging ahead to build a real trade union in this town.

Two mass meetings have already been held, according to reports from B. T. Garner, international organizer, and 100 members have already signed up.

Support of influential church groups was secured when Garner spoke to a meeting of the Southern Methodist Conference, a body of leading Negro ministers.

An organizing committee of 12 has been set up, led by their Negro churchmen, and in Garner's words "they are giving each other a run for their money" in friendly competition.

More than 50 new members were signed up at one metting led by these volunteers, and predictions are made that the local will grow to 400 members within the next two weeks.

NLRB Head Backs New Wagner Bill

Washington, — From the National Labor Relations Board itself, the House Judiciary Committee this week heard that passage of the Wagner-Healy bill, forcing government contractors to abide by the Natl. Labor Relations Act, would have a beneficial effect.

Chairman J. Warren Madden of the NLRB told the committee that it would make enforcement of the Wagner Act "more prompt and less expensive" if the new bill were to be passed.

Pointing out that at the present time NLRB orders are not fully effective until they have been upheld by the circuit court, Madden said "in the meantime, a union may have been destroyed."

The new bill, which would bar an employer who violates the law from receiving government contracts from the moment the NLRB finds him guilty of an unfair labor practise, would apply to some of the largest anti-union firms in the country.

Favor Relief Program

Cleveland—Support for Roosevelt's relief and recovery plan was voiced by the Cleveland CIO Industrial Union Council this week, in a resolution calling for immediate passage of the program.

The same meeting went on record in favor of the $60,000 appropriation asked by the La Follette Civil Liberties Committee to continue its work of investigating industrial espionage and fascist movements in the U. S.

CIO Hosiery Union Meets In South

Largest AFHW Convention Hears Praise For CIO Policies, Program

CHARLOTTE, N. C.—Mill-owners who seek to raise an artificial barrier between workers in the north and south were attacked by President Emil Rieve in his report to the 27th annual convention of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, CIO union, meeting here this week.

Anti-labor manufacturers in the south are engaged in a conspiracy to prevent individual mill-owners from signing agreements with the Federation even in those plants where the union has organized more than a majority of the workers, Rieve charged.

Some 300 delegates from 40 states are attending the convention, the largest and most important ever held by the Federation, according to union officials.

In his report, Rieve credited the majority of the recent gains made on the labor front to the CIO, calling particular attention to those won in steel and textiles.

While an honorable peace between the factions of the labor movement is needed, Rieve said, "it is my firm conviction that we should remain active members of the Committee for Industrial Organization."

Pacts Up 66%

In the past year, Rieve reported, the number of agreements between the AFHW and manufacturers has increased from 59 to 208, bringing 66.5% of the full fashioned industry under contract.

"It is primarily the south that remains to be brought under contract," he said.

Scouting the notion that it is the aim of the union to drive the hosiery industry from the south, Rieve declared:

"We have no quarrel with any geographic area for its ability to attract industry. Our quarrel is with sub-standard wages and hours, which endanger the standards of other workers in other areas, which they have been struggling to secure for 30 years. Our quarrel is with low wages, long hours and bad working conditions.

"The American Federation of Hosiery Workers has not been able to secure written agreements even in those mills in which we have won National Labor Relations Board elections, in some mills in which we have had strikes and won, and in some mills in which the majority of employes are now paying dues.

Sees Conspiracy

"We are faced throughout the south in both the seamless and full-fashioned branches of the industry with an apparent conspiracy against the signing of agreements with our Federation by and between the entire group of southern manufacturers of hosiery.

"Our representatives have conferred with any number of employers, with whom verbal collective bargaining arrangements are effective now. When asked to sign agreements, any number of them have the identical reply: "You wouldn't ask me to scab on my fellow manufacturers, would you?'"

In bringing out the need of intensification of the union's organization in the south, Rieve said that of the 82 new mills established in the United States during 1937, all but 10 were set up in the south.

Many Speakers

During the period from January 1 to April 30 of this year, 41 additional mills have been established, 32 of them in the south.

Among the outside speakers scheduled to address the convention are: Gov. Olin Johnson of South Carolina; Senator Robert M. LaFollette, of Wisconsin; David Dubinsky, president of the International Ladies Garment Workers; R. R. Lawrence, southern regional director of the Textile Workers Organizing Committee, and Senator Robert R. Reynolds, of North Carolina.

John Edelman. Philadelphia CIO regional director, represented the CIO at the convention.

Emil Rieve

President of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, which is meeting in Charlotte, N. C. this week.

CELEBRATES

Cincinnati, O. — Local 1988 of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee celebrated the signing of a new contract by holding a party at which music and dancing were enjoyed by the members. Mr. Majors, SWOC representative who assisted in the signing of the pact, was present at the affair.

UAW Keeps Up Fight at Kansas City Ford

Kansas City, Mo.—Nine months of bitter Ford warfare on the United Automobile Workers local at the struck Ford plant here last week culminated in the bombing of the union's headquarters, across the street from the factory.

The bomb, which shattered about 75 windows in the vicinity, endangered the lives of 15 members of the local who were sleeping in rooms on the second floor when the explosion occurred. The wife and 8-year-old daughter of one of the members were blown from their beds, and shattered glass was thrown into the small sleeping room.

Still another member was treated for concussions and temporary deafness.

The bombing, according to the strike committee of Local 249 of the UAW, "marked a final vicious step in a campaign of terrorism, intimidation and bitterness aimed at destroying the local."

A Long Battle

Local 249 has been waging a fight to unionize the plant, gain seniority rights and better working conditions since April, 1937. At that time a sitdown strike brought promises of relief from discrimination and oppression, but in the following months UAW members learned that Ford's promises were glibly given and freely forgotten.

Men were fired right and left for CIO membership.

Openly defying the Wagner Act, Ford has locked out CIO members, blacklisted them with other Kansas City employers, hired thugs to beat them on the streets while the police force has denied the UAW the right to peaceful picketing.

Police Aid Bosses

For weeks the cops have arrested CIO pickets, jammed them 40 or 50 into a 10-foot cell in local police stations and bluntly denied that a strike condition existed at the plant, now operating on half time with scabs as workmen.

A staunch 1400 of the original 2000 members still are defying Ford's oppression, his Kansas City police force and his hired thugs. But since the local called a lockout strike last December they have refused to surrender to Ford.

Since the labor board hearing started, these men have had many calls from factory service men, urging them to withdraw their names from affidavits filed with the board. Whisky, money and jobs have been offered them, but the answer has always been, "Not if it means ratting on my friends and union brothers."

Success for Ford in the Kansas City strike, according to the union committee, would be the starting signal for a mass drive against other CIO unions.

The strike committee is seeking funds to keep their members in food and clothing. The committee asks that funds, which are desperately needed, be sent to James Fry, financial secretary, Ford Strike Finance Committee, 928½ Winchester, Kansas City, Mo.

CIO Union Gains Point Over Ryan

New York — The Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers, CIO, has scored another point in the struggle against Joseph P. Ryan's AFL company union outfit, in winning an agreement with the Munson Lines on ship repair work that reinstates men fired for refusing to leave the CIO union for the Intl. Longshoremen's Assn., AFL.

Forty-seven members of the Marine and Shipbuilding Workers had been fired last January for refusing to abandon the CIO for the Ryan union on orders of the company. Claims for back pay by the 47 men will be adjudicated by the Labor Board.

In addition, the Munson Line has agreed to begin negotiations immediately for a contract with the CIO.

20% JOBLESS

New York, — One-fifth of the unlicensed seamen on the Atlantic and Gulf coasts are unemployed at the present time, according to a survey made by the National Maritime Union, CIO.

A New Tory Wrinkle: U. S. Builds "Co. Houses"

Washington. — A plan through which anti-union diehards of Gadsden, Ala. — tightest open shop center in the South — will use government funds to build "company houses" came to light this week.

The United States Housing Authority, it was learned, had earmarked a $900,000 appropriation for the city of 25,000 inhabitants, which is controlled lock, stock and barrel by the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. and other anti-labor corporations.

Under the Wagner-Steagall Act, which governs USHA procedure, local communities put up 10 per cent. of the amount necessary, with the government paying the other 90 per cent. U. S. Housing Authority oficials claimed that they have no grounds for refusing to grant an allocation if the application is satisfactory.

However, leaders of the United Rubber Workers, CIO, which has sought for two years to organize Gadsden, only to be met with outright terrorism by the company's "goons" and a company-controlled police force, charged that the appropriation will lead to wage-cutting and an increase of anti-union operations in the city.

The company has frequently threatened leaders of the local union of the URW in Akron, O., that it will move more of its business to Gadsden to avoid union conditions.

Protest Police Beatings

Four hundred members of the Intl. Longshoremen and Warehousemen's Union, CIO, picketed the San Francisco harbor police station after the cops had beaten up one of the union members.

YEAR'S GAINS REVIEWED AT ACWA CONVENTION

The Shoe Workers

The United Shoe Workers of America, CIO, brought unity to workers in an industry where previously there had been divided forces—and resulting exploitation.

In one year the USWA has done essential spade work in bringing the workers of one of America's great industry into one organization, has staged hard-fought strikes, won many contracts.

The story of this union's progress in the last year is told on Page Six of this week's issue of The CIO NEWS.

What's behind the widely-publicized change in the procedure of the National Labor Relations Board?

How will it affect the nions?

Turn to "Labor and the Law" on page five for a full discussion of the subject.

Delegates Hear Lewis, Hillman And Murray

(See Other Stories on Pages 2 and 3)

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.—"The Amalgamated Clothing Workers entered the CIO to help in the great task of organizing the unorganized workers in American industry," Sidney Hillman, general president of the ACWA and vice-chairman of the CIO, said in his opening address to the 6000 delegates and visitors to the 12th biennial convention of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, CIO held at Atlantic City.

"It is only a little over two years since the CIO was created, and it is difficult to realize, even at this time, the magnitude of the job that has been done" General President Hillman stated.

Promising the "greatest organizing campaign in history" as soon as industry recovers from the present slump, John L. Lewis, chairman of the CIO, told cheering delegates and visitors to the convention that this was the first depression in history in which organized labor has held its gains and even increased its strength.

"The CIO unions have maintained their substance, their solidarity and their numerical strength.

"Their opposition to wage-cutting has prevented this depression from becoming a wild panic and an economic debacle," the CIO leader said.

Seventy-five thousand new members have been added to the ranks of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, membership in the journeyman tailors branches doubled, cotton garment workers in the south and west organized, two large divisions added to the international among laundry and according to President Hillman's report to the delegates.

"The CIO has saved the wage structure of the country, it has saved the purchasing power of the people" stated Philip Murray, chairman of the SWOC and vice-chairman of the CIO, addressing the ACWA delegates.

Confidence in President Roosevelt, for his record in promoting laws of benefit to American Workers, was unanimously voted by the delegates during the convention.

URWA Ploughs Under Company Pay Cut Plan

Akron, Ohio—A wage cut proposal made by the B. F. Goodrich Company was rejected by members of the Goodrich Local, United Rubber Workers, by a final vote of 2251 to 239.

President L. L. Callahan of the Goodrich Local said that many more workers opposed to the cut did not vote due to the wide publicity given the early voting, showing that the wage cut proposal was snowed under.

The company asked the union to agree to a wage reduction ranging from 10 to 20 cents an hour. In addition the proposal contained provisions for a flexible work day extending the hours from the present six-hour day, to seven and a half.

The agreement, the first concrete proposal for a written contract made by the company, was submitted to a vote of the Local membership following weeks of negotiations, during which the tension in Akron came almost to a breaking point.

To Resume Negotiations

President Callahan in announcing the defeat of the wage cut, said that the union was ready to resume negotiations for a contract acceptable to the membership.

Goodrich workers gave their overwhelming answer to the proposed wage cut in spite of a high pressure campaign of business interests and politicians claiming that they would ruin Akron if they did not accept the cut.

Mayor Schroy of Akron, elected on an anti-labor program, was among those who demanded that the union agree to the wage reduction.

During the negotiations, the union asked guarantees against decentralization of the industry and wage cutting outside of Akron. The company refused to consider these proposals and said that 5000 jobs would be moved out of the city if the wage cut was not accepted.

A compromise proposal made by the union agreeing to a temporary six cents an hour cut pending the decision of a fact-finding board which was to investigate whether or not the cut was necessary, was also rejected by the company.

Recovery Bill Passed

Washington — President Roosevelt's relief and recovery plan has paused the House of Representatives by an overwhelming vote of 329 to 70.

The measure, strongly supported by CIO and Labor's Non-Partisan League, will provide WPA and other jobs for close to 3,000,000 unemployed workers.

Earlier, Chairman Lewis had described the bill as going a good part of the way to satisfying the demand of organized labor for government jobs for the unemployed.

Steel Plant Closes In Tribute To SWOC Head

Milwaukee — For a full day the great Heil Co. plant here was shut down by order of its president, in tribute to a man whose life had been devoted to the struggle for the rights of workers.

Jack Walters, who died here recently, was president of Heil Lodge 1344 of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee and one of the most popular men in the Milwaukee labor movement.

The action of J. P. Heil, president of the company, in closing the plant on the day of the funeral was believed to be the first time that any Wisconsin employer had so signified respect for a union leader. The flag at the plant is to hang at half mast for the next 30 days.

Fellow unionists formed a guard of honor at Walters' funeral and more than 200 cars followed the coffin to the cemetery.

As Wage Bill Petition Gained Signers

Leaders of the movement which brought the wage-hour bill to the floor of the House, despite efforts of the reactionary Rules Committee to keep it under wraps. Photo shows Rep. Mary Norton of New Jersey, chairman of the House Labor Committee, signing the petition while Congressmen R. J. Welch, J. B. Daly, A. E. Healey and E. W. Curley watch approvingly.

URW Wins Seventh Pay Boost

Akron, Ohio — The seventh wage boost to be won in three months outside of Akron was announced here by Pres. Sherman Dalrymple of the United Rubber Workers, CIO.

Dalrymple said he had just received word that the union had signed a contract with the Lake Shore Tire & Rubber Co. of Des Moines, Ia., under which wages were lifted from 10 to 20%.

The pact also provides for seniority rights, sole bargaining rights and settlement of grievances.

GAIN PACTS

Philadelphia — The CIO Broom and Whisk Makers Union, Local 632, has signed a contract with three manufacturers in this city and is conducting a strike against a fourth one.

Honors 1937 Massacre Victims

East Chicago, Ind. — In commemoration of the Memorial Day massacre last year in which ten workers lost their lives, during a police attack on a peaceful demonstration near the plant of Republic Steel, a mass meeting will be held in South Chicago, Sunday afternoon, May 29, at two o'clock.

Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee will be the main speaker.

"This is not only a Memorial Day remembrance for those who lost their lives in the fight for industrial freedom," said Nicholas Fontecchio, SWOC district director, "but it is also a protest meeting against the tyrannies of those who oppose the advancement of our great union."

FAECT Maps Drive In Auto Industry

DETROIT—Organization of the men who design the Nation's automobiles, as well as those who make them, moved a step nearer this week with the establishment of a unionization campaign aimed at technical employes of the Nation's biggest industry.

The international executive council of the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians, CIO, meeting in the Book-Cadillac Hotel here, authorized the establishment of a national automobile division. At the same time the board created an Automobile Engineers Organizing Committee, with Walter E. Johnson, FAECT vice-president, in charge.

The committee consists of representatives of the FAECT and the Society of Designing Engineers, which recently affiliated with the CIO body.

Look to Navy Yards

Organization of the entire technical personnel of the government's Navy yards is to be another objective of the federation, through formation of a Federal civil service department. Chapters have already been organized in the largest yards, council members declared.

Reporting to the board meeting, Pres. Lewis Alan Berne asserted that "the success of our drive during the past few months is proof that, despite the effects of the recession, the Nation's technical personnel are ready and anxious for organization."

Pay Cut-- Strike-- No Cut

Trenton, N. J. — Threat of a five cents an hour wage cut at the Sloane-Blabon Corporation plants in Trenton and Philadelphia was throttled by a strike of workers at both plants.

Warned by the United Rubber Workers local that employes would walk out if the cut was put through, the company insisted on posting notice of the reduction on the bulletin of the Trenton plant. The strike followed at once, and the next day, workers at the Philadelphia plant also walked out.

Whereupon the company agreed to withdraw the cuts and to enter into negotiations with the union. Pending the outcome of the conferences, terms of the present contract will be observed.

CIO Saved the U. S. Murray Declares

Atlantic Ctiy—The CIO has saved America by preventing a wholesale flood of wage cuts in the present industrial depression, Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee and vice-chairman of the CIO, told a cheering crowd of 6000 delegates and visitors to the biennial convention of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, CIO.

"Had it not been for these unions of the CIO, the wage earners of this country would have gone down in the mire of complete economic degradation," Murray declared. "They have saved the wage structures of the country, they have saved the purchasing power of the people.

"They have prevented poverty, misery and all of their accompanying ills from visiting the people of the United States during the past seven or eight months."

Describing the fight of the CIO pointed out that the organized labor movement was now called upon for further service in leading a way out of the industrial depression.

"The CIO, ever mindful of its responsibilities, believes that if our nation's ills are going to be solved, the best way to solve them is around the conference table," he declared.

"We believe in collective bargaining. We believe in the use of reason, we believe in the application of logic and common sense."

Chairman Murray suggested to the convention that a conference representing all national interests be called by the President of the United States to work out a program to save the nation from the ravages of recurrent industrial breakdown.

Such a conference, he said, would be gladly attended by the representatives of organized labor.

Analyzing briefly the breakdown in the unity negotiations between the CIO and the AFL last winter, Murray showed the failure of the AFL to surrender outworn craft distinctions even in the face of proven need for industrial organization.

Secretary Perkins of the U. S. Dept. of Labor also addressed the convention, as did E. L. Oliver, executive vice-president of Labor's Non-Partisan League, and other guest speakers.

Civil Rights Violations Hit Labor

By C. W. Fowler

"Civil rights, freedom, liberties, the 'precious blessings' which Jefferson believed 'no other people on earth enjoy,' have never been enjoyed by all the people of the United States and for almost a century by none of a whole stratum of the population.

"During the greater part of the first century of American industrialism the right of labor to voice its grievances, the right to unionize, to meet freely, were looked upon as economic treason. The right to strike for a long time was considered a criminal action—and many employers would like to see it so today."

The Attack on Labor

This is the foreword to George Seldes' new book, "You Can't Do That," on the status of civil liberties in the United States. It sets the tone of the book, which points out with detailed citing of documents and first-hand evidence just how the attack on civil liberties centers on organized labor.

Behind every patrioteer, back of every 100% super-Americanism organization in this country is the anti-union employer who seeks to break the labor movement, Seldes explains. No matter how high-sounding the motives or how eminently respectable the names on the letterhead, the super-patriotic groups in this country, from the American Liberty League to the Junior America Vigilant Intelligence Association, have the one basic purpose of fighting labor organization wherever it shows its head.

The European fascists used the same tactics of high-pressure patriotism, race prejudice, red-baiting and witch hunting that go on here today. They were successful there in direct ratio to the weakness of the labor movement in knowing and confronting its enemies.

Unity the Need

In the same way they will be successful here, Seldes argues, if the American people fail to present a united resistance to the constant offensive waged against freedom.

"Two facts emerge from any study of European turmoil and the new class alignments in our own land," he concludes. "The enemy is always the Right. Fascism and Reaction inevitably attack. They have won against disunion. They will fail if we unite."

New York — Charging that wages as low as $10 a week were being paid, the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers called a strike at the Sagamor Metal Products Co. here to lift the pay and gain a union contract.

Strikes Win Better UAW Contract At Allis Chalmers

Milwaukee — In a thrilling show of union solidarity, the more than 8,000 CIO members in the Allis-Chalmers plant — Wisconsin's largest factory — brought production to a standstill and induced the company to agree to union demands for a new contract.

Two work stoppages, each lasting about two hours, followed by the refusal of the night shift to work, put the finishing touches on the long drawn-out negotiations between the union, the United Automobile Workers and the management. The discussions had been carried on over a period of eight weeks.

The new agreement provides for full, unrestricted seniority rights, the company finally abandoning an "ability" clause loophole upon which it had previously insisted.

Longer Vacations

Vacation periods are almost doubled over those in the earlier agreements, with two weeks' being granted to workers of over 10 years' standing.

A battle over the union ship ended when the company, in a quick change of mind, to a compromise formula drawn up by Father Haas, noted mediator. The company declared "it will pursue the firm policy of not aiding or supporting in any manner whatsoever any employe or group of employes for the purpose of undermining the union."

The new contract will affect workers at the West Allis plant near here, together with other other employes of the company in Boston and Pittsburgh.

Labor Festival Draws Crowds

Philadelphia — Hundreds of workers will take part in an annual "Labor Festival" to be presented the evening of May 20 at the Fleisher Vocational School auditorium.

Aimed to show the benefits to be gained by belonging to the trade union movement, the festival will include a play in 11 scenes, and displays of various educational and cultural activities.

There will be performances by folk and tap dancing groups and a women's string orchestra, as well as an exhibit of children's paintings done at the Carl Mackley apartments, co-operative housing project of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers.

More than 500 Philadelphia workers representing 12,000 members of WPA classes will participate in the program.

UCAPWA Wins Crab-Pickers Strike

Cambridge, Md. — A strike of CIO crab meat pickers, which had brought forth attacks by anti-union vigilante mobs, ended in complete victory for the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing & Allied Workers.

Under the contract ending the walkout, packers agreed not only to restore wages to the pre-strike scale, but to recognize the union as sole bargaining agency as well.

The strikers, about 300 in number and most of them Negro women, joined the union shortly after the strike against wage cuts began. The packers at first refused to deal with the union representatives, and two were driven from the town.

Thousands Visit Amalgamated Convention

The Atlantic City Auditorium was crowded to the doors with delegates and visitors to the twelfth biennial convention of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, CIO. The crowd heard prominent speakers. The convention will map future organizing campaigns in the remaining days of the session.

Victory Predicted For Kennedy In Pennsylvania

Harrisburg, Pa. — The nationally-important Pennsylvania primary election race swung into the home stretch this week with mounting evidence that the progressive Democratic slate, headed by Sec.-Treas. Thomas Kennedy of the United Mine Workers, CIO, would far out-run its machine-controlled opposition.

A nearly-solid labor vote, plus the support of large groups of the population interested in giving the Keystone State a progressive administration, are expected to give Kennedy the nomination. The primaries are to be held Tuesday, May 17.

Despite the valiant efforts of AFL higher-ups to deliver their unions' vote to the reactionary and almost-unknown Charles A. Jones, workers throughout the State were demonstrating their faith in the Kennedy candidacy.

In the centers where CIO unions are strong—in the towns where the steel union brought economic and political freedom, in the densely populated areas of Pittsburgh, in mining districts and in other industrial cities throughout the State, Kennedy is expected to poll an extremely heavy vote.

Philadelphia For Kennedy

Philadelphia, largest city in the State, is also believed ready to swing into the Kennedy columns on election day. Mayor S. Davis Wilson of Philadelphia is running for United States Senator on the Kennedy ticket.

Nine AFL union leaders in Philadelphia pledged their support for Kennedy in a statement warning of the dangers of playing into the hands of reactionaries.

"We are for Kennedy because we believe that united labor is necessary for our advance and to prevent labor being driven backward," the statement said. "We are confident that the labor movement, regardless of other differences, will fully support Thomas Kennedy and elect him governor of Pennsylvania."

In Pittsburgh, Walter A. Jones, liberal businessman and head of the Pennsylvania Good Neighbor League, voiced confidence in Kennedy as the candidate best able to co-operate with businessmen while adhering to the principles of the New Deal.

Kennedy Draws Crowds

Speaking to record crowds in the heart of the anthracite district, Kennedy pointed to the fact that "the people on this ticket are not Wednesday-night progressives or Saturday-night New Dealers. We have worked continuously for the cause of economic justice and we are pledged to a continuance of that fight."

"The people of Pennsylvania who are members of the Democratic party are determined to save it from the leaders who have betrayed their trust," Kennedy said at

Indiana CIO To Meet

Indianapolis, Ind. — Delegates from CIO unions throughout Indiana will meet in Indianapolis May 21 to organize Industrial Union Council for the state.

The meeting, to be held in Tomlinson Hall, will bring together representatives of the steel, auto, oil, chemical, mining and hosiery workers of the state.

Leading figures in the CIO will address the convention.

Formation of the Indiana CIO body will create another link in the series of state councils being formed throughout the nation. Close to 20 such organizations have already been established.

Ask More Funds For Maternity And Child Care

WASHINGTON—Additional funds for federal grants to the states for maternity and child care are asked in bills introduced into the Senate and the House of Representatives (S. 3914 and H R. 10241).

At the present time less than $4,000,000 is appropriated for this important work. The new bills would authorize an additional $3,000,000 in 1939 and then increase at a rate to provide $20,000,000 additional by 1943.

The bill was proposed after a careful survey showed that present maternal and infant care in this country is inadequate and has resulted in terrible suffering and a high death rate.

CIO members are urged to write their Senators and Congressmen asking immediate passage of the bill.

STOP PAY CUT

New York — Local 76-B of the United Furniture Workers, CIO, prevented a 12½ per cent. pay cut when a strike against the Wycombe Meyer Co. ended in rescinding of the pay slash notice.

Reeling Tories Seek New Wage Bill Fight

Washington — The wage-hour bill, pushed out of the Tory House Rules Committee by the most spectacular action of this session of Congress, faced more battlefields this week as opponents of the measure sought new positions from which to attack the measure.

The bill is scheduled to reach the floor of the House on May 23, though the rules committee, alarmed by popular support for the measure and desirous of a speedy adjournment of Congress, may reconsider its previous action and give the bill an earlier place on the House calendar.

Administration leaders will seek quick action on the bill. In this, they will receive co-operation from Congressmen anxious to rebuild poltical fancies in their home pastures.

Tories Seek Delay

Southern Senators, led by Senator Harrison of Mississippi, however, hinted they may fight for the inclusion of southern differentials in the bill. Such attempts may lead to indefinite stalling, and would possibly prevent action at this session on the measure.

The walkaway election of Senator Pepper, Florida New Dealer, served as a warning to many Congressmen from below the Mason and Dixon line that workers in their states are no less eager for passage of the bill than are their brothers in the industrial centers of the north and west.

The Florida election was credited with playing an important

Amalgamated Clothing Workers Meet, Cheer Own Gains and Strength of CIO

Atlantic City—Speaking to 6000 delegates and visitors at the 12th biennial convention of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, Sidney Hillman, ACWA general president and vice-chairman of the CIO, called for unity of the workers on the political front and pledged "fullest support to the CIO."

Lewis Tells ACWA Of CIO Progress

ATLANTIC CITY—The greatest organizing campaign in history will be launched by the CIO when business picks up again, Chairman John L. Lewis told the convention of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America.

Devoting the greater part of his speech to the unemployment crisis, Lewis deplored the failure of employers and government to protect the right of American workers to a job and to security for their families.

He called for increased participation by labor in the political field and declared that "a rational arrangement must be worked out so that labor may live."

Asserting that plans must be made to meet the present crisis, the CIO leader said: "Labor offers to participate and sit on any council. It offers to participate in any rational program."

Hails Amalgamated

Greeted with a cheering and prolonged ovation, Lewis hailed the Amalgamated as "one of the great founder organizations of the CIO." He referred with feeling to Pres. Sidney Hillman's recovery from a serious illness and to his great services to the movement. "My compliments to an organization that has produced a Hillman," he said.

Lewis traced the achievements of the CIO in "helping to make the common people articulate in these days of crisis and emergency, and in helping to cushion this economic depression.

"This is the first depression in history," he said, "in which the organizations of labor have not been mowed down like chaff before the storm.

"The CIO unions have maintained their substance, their solidarity and their numerical strength.

"Their opposition to wage-cutting has prevented this depression from becoming a wild panic and an economic debacle."

CIO Ready to Advance

Pointing to the difficulties of new organization in a period of mass unemployment, Lewis declared that the CIO unions are now concentrating on perfecting their organizations and rendering service to the unemployed, while they prepare for a big forward drive when business picks up.

"Just the day that this economic tide turns," he said, "the CIO organizations will spring into action and we will see an organizing campaign in the ranks of labor that has never before been duplicated."

Lewis joked about the efforts of the AFL to boycott the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. He said that the great increase in strength of the Amalgamated, whose membership has risen by 30 per cent. despite these efforts, proved

"The Amalgamated Clothing Workers entered the CIO to help in the great task of organizing the unorganized workers in American industry," President Hillman said. "Its belief that the CIO could accomplish that purpose has been justified.

"It is only a little over two years since the CIO was created, and it is difficult to realize, even at this time, the magnitude of the job that has been done."

Labor Movement Doubled

"The American Federation of Labor counted little more than 3,000,000 men and women in its membership in 1935," Hillman continued. "Today the combined strength of the AFL and the CIO reaches 7,000,000. Never before has the strength of labor been more than doubled in so brief a space."

The 635 delegates in the huge Atlantic City Auditorium, swelled by the presence of thousands of visiting Amalgamated members from nearby states, applauded enthusiastically every mention of the growth of their international and of the progress of the CIO.

Progress Reported

President Hillman had considerable progress to report. More than 75,000 members have been added to the Amalgamated ranks since the last convention in 1936, he pointed out, stating that the union was stronger than ever before in its history.

Accounts of long standing with several important non-union clothing firms in New York, Rochester, and Cincinnati had been settled, he said, and these firms were now under union contract.

The journeymen tailors had more than doubled their membership during the same two year period, Hillman pointed out. The cotton garment branch of the union had pushed organization into the deep south and into the west, where it had been lacking before. Two large new divisions of the international had been created, in the laundry and cleaning and dyeing industries, where working conditions had long been among the lowest in the nation.

No Wage Cuts

A portion of President Hillman's opening speech was devoted to the problems of the present depression. Wage cuts, he pointed out, were the answer of reactionary industrialists to the problems of their own making. They could

Mexican Workers Don't Like Ford, Either

MEXICO CITY, Mexico — Three hundred and fifty workers in the Ford Motor Company's $1,500,000 assembly plant here hoisted their strike flags and demanded a union contract.

The workers claimed they had been laid off or had been working only half time, and demanded a collective bargaining agreement.

UAW Backs Mexican Ford Strike

Detroit — Support for striking workers in Henry Ford's Mexican assembly plant was wired to the Confederation of Mexican Workers this week by Pres. Homer Martin of the United Automobile Workers, CIO.

"Ours is a common struggle to insure higher wages and better working conditions in the industry and to bring industrial democracy and freedom to the machine-driven, boss-ridden unprotected Ford workers," Martin wired to Mexican labor leaders.

A Great Labor Union

The record presented by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America to its convention in Atlantic City is a notable one.

This union has long been a pioneer and leader among labor organizations. In the efficiency and thoroughness with which it has organized its industry; in the enterprise it has shown in adopting new methods and adapting itself to new conditions; and above all in its success in raising the wage and working standards of what was once a sweatshop industry, the Amalgamated is known throughout the world as a model union.

But the Amalgamated has not only pioneered in its own industry, it has also been a leader and a pioneer in the general labor movement.

It has led the way in the political organization of labor which is now bearing fruit in the successes of Labor's Non-Partisan League, and it has been one of the founders and staunchest supporters of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

The Amalgamated has done its full share in the great movement to organize all the mass-production industries; and in addition, it has made the organization of the textile industry its special task, by throwing its whole weight behind the Textile Workers Organizing Committee.

Future generations not only of clothing workers but of workers in nearly every other industry will rise and call the Amalgamated blessed for what it has done to advance the general labor interest in recent years.

The benefits derived by the union itself from these policies are shown in its greatly increased membership, its maintenance of wages and conditions in the present crisis, and in the unity, solidarity and enthusiasm that prevail in its ranks.

Pennsylvania's Opportunity

The voters of Pennsylvania have an opportunity this week to render an outstanding service to themselves and to the nation.

Old guard reaction has reared its head in the dominant party of the country's greatest industrial state. The Democratic party machine has flouted the wishes of labor and all progressive forces by opposing the nomination of the logical candidate for Governor, Lieutenant-Governor Thomas Kennedy.

The election of Kennedy is necessary to stop the retreat from the New Deal, and to insure a liberal and progressive administration dedicated to the service of all the common people.

More than this, the election of Kennedy will be a tremendous step forward for labor in its struggle for a fair share of representation in the councils of state and nation. It will knock on the head the outrageous idea that labor men should be barred from public office, to leave the way open for representatives of wealthy and reactionary minority groups.

Kennedy's record in public life is a guarantee that his election will prove that labor men are among the best suited to serve the whole people.

The nomination of Kennedy and the labor-endorsed slate that runs with him, and their final election this fall will be victory for the people of Pennsylvania. It will also be a victory for the cause of enlightened progress throughout the whole nation.

Work That Must Be Continued

The request of the LaFollette civil liberties committee for $60,000 to continue its work, has been referred to the Senate without recommendation by the audit and control committee.

It may be remembered that the Senate voted $260,000 for the banking investigation conducted by Ferdinand Pecora; $250,000 for the Wheeler railroad investigation; and $198,000 (of which $65,000 was a WPA grant) for the Nye munitions investigation.

Yet for all the two years of its outstanding service in protecting the civil rights of American workers, by exposing the forces of intimidation and terror used against them, the LaFollette committee has had only $90,000.

Its present request for funds is the barest minimum needed to continue functioning. Every labor unionist knows how much remains to be done, and the urgent need for continuing the committee's work. Yet reactionary employer interests are actively lobbying to put the committee out of business.

Write to your Senator at once urging him to vote for the full appropriation requested by the LaFollette civil liberties committee, and not to sanction any reduction in the modest amount proposed.

Looking Ahead By LEN DE CAUX

One Up For the People

EVERY once in awhile the people have their day. The day when the wage-hour bill was pried loose from the House rules committee was one of them.

The business of thwarting the popular will is an old-established one. It pays big dividends to the vested interests which are its stockholders. It operates chiefly by fooling and finagling.

When progressive and popular legislation is proposed, the business-controlled press gets to work. The measure is described as an imposition on business, government extravagance, socialism, dictatorship, or even a Communist plot.

If such fooling fails, the political finaglers follow up. They stage a fight on any issue that will distract attention from the real one. They introduce a substitute they know won't pass. They filibuster or they hold the bill in committee so that it can't even be discussed on the floor.

But when the people know what they want, they can be thwarted and baited only so far, before their resentment boils over.

The limit of popular patience was almost passed on the wage-hour issue. Millions of people knew the urgent need for such legislation to check starvation wages and sweatshop conditions.

They could not be fooled indefinitely, and two years of misrepresentation, sabotage, trickery and downright skullduggery was getting to be too much.

So when the old trick of bottling the measure in the rules committee was pulled, the pot boiled over.

Then there was such a scurrying in Congress as has seldom been seen before. The congressmen jostled and almost fought each other in their haste to sign the petition to release the bill.

* * *

Not Telepathy

When it came to an issue, most of the congressmen knew what the people wanted. They also knew that another election was coming around.

But they did not learn this by telepathy. It was brought very close home to them, by a new political force. The CIO and Labor's Non-Partisan League organized most of the storm of protest which let Congress know popular patience was strained to the limit.

For blind resentment is not enough. The practiced politician can dissipate it or divert it from its purpose by many demagogic tricks. It takes organization and conscious political purpose to give the people their day in court.

Labor is building its political organization through its struggles for progressive legislation in the present Congress; through its campains for candidates from its own ranks, as in the case of Thomas Kennedy in Pennsylvania; and through the state, city, ward and precinct organizations being set up by Labor's Non-Partisan League throughout the nation.

Labor's political advance is hindered by the lack of a press of its own which can compete with the business-controlled press.

In its union struggles and in promoting progressive legislation, labor confronts the outright hostility of most of the daily papers.

The outlook of millions is colored by the point of view of a few wealthy publishers. These millions have no opportunity to formulate their own opinions intelligently and promote their own purposes through an adequate press controlled by their own democratic organizations.

Yet labor possesses two of the essentials for successful newspaper publication — the great potential circulation of millions of union members; and a great market to attract advertisers of mass-consumption goods, when these are union-made, as is increasingly the case today.

One step in the direction of a really powerful labor press is combination and coordination of many existing labor papers, for the sake of economy, greater attractiveness and larger circulation.

Hardly a convention of a CIO union or council is held nowadays without some expression of the need for a greater labor press. And the rapidly rising circulation of the CIO's new paper, The CIO News, as it is adopted by one union after another, indicates that these expressions are passing from the stage of thought to the stage of action.

Hoffman 'That Way' Again, NMU Protests

Washington—The CIO Maritime Legislative Committee this week issued a sharp blast at red-baiting Rep. Clair Hoffman of Michigan and his latest brain child.

In a letter to Chairman O'Connor of the House Rules Committee, Ralph Emerson, the marine union representative, denounced House Joint Resolution 665 as an "insult to every maritime worker in this country."

The resolution called for a $10,000 probe of U. S. relations with the Soviet Union, and hinted strongly that the maritime unions were controlled by a foreign power.

LABOR and the LAW

(LABOR and the LAW is a feature prepared for The CIO NEWS by Lee Pressman, general counsel of the CIO.

Changes in NLRB Procedure

The action of the National Labor Relations Board in withdrawing certain of its orders before attempting to enforce them in the courts will naturally raise a number of questions in the minds of union members.

The Board has already taken steps to withdraw its order in the Ford case, and has announced its intention to withdraw its orders against the Republic Steel Corporation, the Heinz Company, and the Douglas Aircraft Company.

What has happened is this: A case is commenced by the union's filing of charges of unfair labor practices, whereupon the board issues its complaint, and then hearings are conducted by a trial examiner. After the hearings are finished, the record of the hearings which contains all the evidence, is sent to the Board. In addition, to the examiner submits to the Board an intermediate report in which he recommends the decision which he thinks should be made. A copy of this report is also given to the company, the union, and any other interested parties. They then have an opportunity to take exceptions to the report, file briefs, and argue before the three members of the Board at Washington, what decision it should make.

Will Reopen Cases

In the Ford, Republic, Heinz and Douglas cases this same procedure was followed, except that no intermediate report was made by the trial examiner. There have been other cases in which no intermediate report was made.

What the board intends to do now in these four cases is to give the companies an opportunity to argue about the orders against them as if there had been an intermediate report.

The Board will do this by issuing proposed findings of fact and giving the parties an opportunity to take exceptions to the findings, submit written briefs, and make oral arguments to the Board at Washington. After this has been done, the Board will consider the arguments which have been made and the record in the case. It can then enter its final order.

This action on the part of the Board is due to a recent decision of the Supreme Court involving the Secretray of Agriculture. This decision has been interpreted to mean that the Board must give the parties notice of the kind of order it intends to make, so that they can have a chance to argue and try to get the Board to change its order. This decision does not mean in any way that the order of the Board will be or has to be changed.

The action of the Labor Board is therefore based on purely technical grounds. The Board's procedure in these cases has undoubtedly been fair, even though there was no intermediate report. The company, in each of these cases, was given sufficient notice of what the issues were. It was served with a complaint and a copy of the charges at the very beginning of the cases and had full opportunity throughout the hearings before the trial examiner to cross-examine witnesses, present its own evidence and make whatever motions it desired.

The Board is being extremely careful in observing every possible requirement that the Supreme Court lays down. It is interesting to note how careful the Board is to observe every technicality of the law, compared with the companies which have consistently violated the orders of the Board, despite the fact that the Board has been upheld in twelve consecutive decisions by the Supreme Court.

Expect No Changes

Since the present order of the Board in these three cases is based upon the facts in each case, it is hard to see how any change can be expected in the final orders of the Board. The net result will probably only be to delay the Board's orders.

This action of the Board will not affect the rights of any of the men who have been ordered reinstated by the company, or who are entitled to receive back pay. In the Republic case, for example, the board has ordered some 5000 workers to be reinstated. Since the men are entitled to reinstatement upon application, if the Board's order is finally upheld in the courts, all the men who have made application for reinstatement now will be entitled to back pay from the date of their application for reinstatement, regardless of the temporary withdrawal of the board's order.

Kennedy Victory Predicted

one of a number of rallies arranged by Labor's Non-Partisan League.

The entire progressive slate will be swept to victory by the wave of feeling against the machine bosses, it is predicted. Running with Kennedy are S. Davis Wilson, seeking the Senatorship; Judge Ralph H. Smith, running for lieutenant-governor, and Mrs. Edith B. DeWitt, running for secretary of internal affairs.

How completely the party was slipping into the hands of Matthew McCloskey, Philadelphia contractor, was indicated by publication of the fact that he had lent Governor Earle—who is now seeking the Senatorship on the anti-Kennedy ticket — a large amount of money.

Wanted Puppet

McCloskey, it is authoritatively charged, planned to have a "board of directors" run the State if his candidate, Jones, won the election.

Freed only recently from political control of the State by contractors who fatten their own pockets on State jobs, the people of Pennsylvania are determined to prevent this new alliance within the Democratic party.

For that reason the Kennedy forces are certain that progressivism will triumph over bossism in Pennsylvania next week.

not answer the needs of the workers, who required greater purchasing power, not less, if the country was to emerge from its economic crisis.

"A definite plan must be worked out to get out of this depression," Hillman declared. "We must not allow the country to drift as it did from 1930 to 1933. Getting out of the depression depends on increasing purchasing power. Workers are the largest single group of purchasers. Anything that will reduce their income will of necessity aggravate the depression instead of alleviating it."

Wages and hours legislation was the first step in promoting an economic plan for the nation, Hillman stated in outlining a plan for action against the depression. Equally important was the recovery and relief program of President Roosevelt, to guarantee a job to every unemployed man or woman able and willing to work.

"Part of the responsibility for the unemployment today rests on Congress," he said. "Had a wage and hour bill been passed at the last session, millions who are today unemployed would be busy at their trades, not walking the streets facing the ravages of depression."

"If we are to hold our gains and make further progress," he said, "these socially constructive forces must be held together. Any division in their ranks will only once more give an opportunity to the unsocial forces to gain control of the government again for their own greed and for the oppression of the American people."

Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee and vice-chairman, with President Hillman, of the CIO, addressed the convention on the achievements of the CIO and on the question of labor unity.

Murray cited the record of the SWOC in organizing more than 500,000 steel workers in less than two years, placing them under contract with the largest corporations in the nation, and securing wage and living improvements throughout the industry.

Chairman Murray also analyzed the failure of the AFL Executive Council to join with the CIO in bringing about unity of organized labor, placing the blame squarely on the inability of the Council to see beyond the narrow craft distinctions of a method of unionism unsuited to modern conditions.

Lewis Speech To ACW

that the United Mine Workers had nothing to fear from the attempt of "the apostate Green" to promote a dual union.

Wage-Hour Legislation

The CIO chairman found evidence of labor's increasing political strength in the improved prospects for passage of wage-hour legislation in this Congress.

"But what a sad commentary it is on the intelligence and good faith of our Congressmen," he said, "that action on the wage-hour bill came only as a result of the most insistent pleadings and demands of the workers of this country.

"It was only because labor threatened to visit its displeasure at the next elections on Congressmen blocking consideration of the bill that it was forced out of the rules committee."

Describing labor political action as "a natural by-product of increased industrial organization," Lewis said:

"The time has gone by for labor merely to hope and to plead. The time has gone by for labor to occupy an inferior position. The time has come for labor to realize its own inherent strength."

CAPITAL CLOSE-UPS

By MARTIN STRONG

"Back to slavery!"

The 700 little dwarfs of the United States Chamber of Commerce tuned up on the new theme song of reaction here last week and the echoes are still ringing dulcently in the ears of Princess Coal Black, otherwise personified in the nation's antediluvian press.

"Heigh-ho, heigh-ho; repeal the awful Wagner act, and off to town we'll go!"

So sang the 700 little men who gathered in the Chamber's marble palace to decide what's wrong with the country and how to fix it all up. And outright destruction of Labor's Magna Charta, or 'structural modification" if they couldn't do any better, was the chief note on the Chamber's brass bugle.

But close observers of previous performances of the Chamber music Society felt there wasn't so much wind in the bugle as there was in former years. Somehow or other, the fat boys seemed to have been a bit deflated. They did a lot of twenty-foot blacksnake cursing in private but their formal resolutions poured out of the chamber pot like half-warm molasses.

Even the resolution on wages and hours marched boldly in both directions at once, advocating governmental regulation for "those special classes" who need it but proposing that the regulation should be applied by State governments only, to make sure that it would be wholly ineffective.

The Chamber used to speak with some authority, at least for those it purported to represent. But the best and only response it could get to its demand for a Congressional investigation of the Labor Relations Board was a proposal to that effect from Congressman Clare Hoffman of Michigan.

Mr. Hoffman—A Case

Different kinds of thermometers have different zero points on them, but it probably would be pretty tough for people out in the country to understand just what kind of an instrument political Washington uses to measure the Gentlemen from Michigan.

However, it isn't necessary to try to explain that matter. Old Pal Hoffman, who has his suits made with no pockets in them for reasons anyone might guess at, clearly indicated his own freezing point just a few days ago in a bill that Hitler probably would envy.

What curdles Brother Hoffman's warm-blooded heart is the fact that men on WPA jobs sometimes get together to seek better wages or working conditions than they are "enjoying." Therefore, the Old Pal proposes that if any group of people getting government aid in any form should collect a few dimes or dollars for use in appealing to Congress or the President for better treatment the person who takes in the pennies can be fined $5000 and jailed for five years!

Those Telegrams

A few weeks ago members of Congress were being flooded with bales of inspiring letters and telegrams demanding defeat of the bill governments reorganization bill. The bill was a pretty innocous thing at best, but the termite crew apparently had decided that beating the Administration on any proposition would pay dividends later.

A good many of the smarter members decided that blocks of 50 or 100 identical telegrams sent to them from the same telegraph office on the same day, each signed by half a dozen people who never put down any middle initials, sounded a little too phony to require answers.

However, some of the earnest lads got their stenographers busy sending out acknowledgments to all the messages received—at least until the job got too big to be mailed.

But now, according to many members, a large mass of these replies are coming back to them red-stamped by the Post Office Department: 'No such person at this address" and so on.

Organizing The Unorganized

United Shoe Workers Prove Value of Industrial Type of Union

By POWERS HAPGOOD

President, The United Shoe Workers of America.

(This is the second in a series of articles describing the growth of unions affiliated with the Committee for Industrial Organization. The next story in this series will appear in an early issue.)

Washington. — The United Shoe Workers of America, CIO, came into being as the result of the merger of two independent shoe workers' unions: the United Shoe and Leather Workers' and the Shoe Workers' Protective Union.

This combination, effected by referendum vote on March 16, 1937, gave our organization a nucleus of some 16,000 members. Prior to this action, however, the leaders of the two unions, aided by the advice and assistance of CIO leaders, had held many conferences and worked out many plans for the future of the new organization.

The name is an old one to shoe workers; it was the name adopted by the first progressive shoe workers' organization in 1901. But through the years its original members had restlessly sought to correct the ills of the industry by drifting into one organization or another, always with the same result—lack of progress. Sometimes, it was lack of leadership; sometimes, it was lack of foresight; sometimes it was because of the selfishness of some few who refused to cooperate, due to their desires for personal gain.

Undaunted, however, by their many failures to effect a real amalgamation, those who have the interests of the long-suffering shoe workers at heart carried on until their efforts bore fruit in the welding of two entirely different groups—each with the same hope for all shoe workers—into an organization which would have some real hopes for survival.

Thus, the United Shoe Workers of America, CIO, was born!

Early Problems

Organizing the unorganized — that was and is our battle cry.

Our initial attempt was made in the State of Maine, long noted for its resistance to organization and for its exploitation of workers in all of the industries within the confines of its borders. Our immediate concentration was focused on the cities of Lewiston and Auburn, where some 19 factories were located.

Many shoe workers in these twin cities had begged of us to come to their aid; their wages were pitifully low; their hours of labor bordered on slavery; their hopes for the future were futile insofar as they and their families were concerned.

Action was what they desired and demanded; we heeded their pleas and prepared to march on Lewiston and Auburn when we were assured of suitable conditions and the cooperation of the workers themselves.

On every side we were faced with an almost impenetrable wall of resistance.

The manufacturers banded together to defeat the "CIO"; the wealthy power company lent its every resource to the manufacturers involved; the newspapers were unscrupulous in the propaganda which they printed in the hope of poisoning the minds of the people who were seeking emancipation; banks, furniture companies, retail stores—everywhere resistance was fostered in the hope of breaking the spirit and morale of the shoe workers.

While all of these powerful interests were bent on destroying us, we were establishing a means of bringing about the hopes and aspirations of the 6400 shoe workers who looked to us for aid. Daily, they were being enrolled into the organization, signing pledge cards, attending meetings, openly advocating their affiliation with the United Shoe Workers.

We began to set up the machinery for negotiating with the manufacturers for these valiant workers. On every side we were balked; the manufacturers refused even to talk with us on many occasions and when it became evident that they would not negotiate in accordance with the Wagner Act—the law of the land—a general strike was voted upon and called on March 25, 1937.

Thus, in a very short time after we had become established as an organization, we were faced with the crisis of 6400 shoe workers on strike during a season when coal was needed to keep them warm; food was needed to keep them nurtured; clothes were needed to keep them protected from the icy blasts of winter.

CIO Unions Helped

We recognized all of their needs and with the help of shoe workers of our organization in organized centers, aid from other CIO affiliates and even non-affiliates, and personal donations from those interested in the workers from the standpoint of humanitarianism, we were able to establish the means for caring for these gallant shoe workers.

Many were evicted from their homes,—they were undaunted; many were injured when the governor of Maine called in the National Guard to enforce martial law—they were unafraid; many were threatened with jail sentences when they refused to recognize the sweeping injunction handed down by Judge Manser to prevent them from attending mass meetings—they carried on courageously.

Out of all the struggles and hardships of these militant shoe workers, the United Shoe Workers became a recognized and respected organization insofar as the state of Maine, the cities of Lewiston and Auburn, and the country as a whole, is concerned. They fought and won in their first major battle; they proved they had the stamina, the courage and the singleness of purpose to merit such recognition.

Hapgood

Powers Hapgood, president of the United Shoe Workers of America, CIO.

Other Activities

While the Maine strike was being conducted, the United Shoe Workers was steadily growing in other parts of the country.

New units came into being in Milwaukee; St. Louis; Philadelphia; Rochester, New York; Union, Missouri; Chicago; Portsmouth, Nelsonville, Cincinnati and Zanesville, Ohio; Los Angeles; Detroit; Binghamton, New York; Brooklyn and New York City. Within a period of a few months after its inception, the United Shoe Workers grew from 16,000 to nearly 50,000 members—all eager; alert, alive to the opportunities facing members of the union through shorter working hours, increased wages and a militant organization rapidly forging ahead.

Meanwhile, some 3000 previously unorganized workers in the stitchdown industry were enrolled; then, in quick succession, was brought about an election conducted by the National Labor Relations Board to determine whether some 10,000 workers affiliated with the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union should choose the Boot and Shoe or the CIO union. They chose our organization as their collective bargaining agency and in the face of this crushing defeat the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union withdrew from New York. This USWA group in New York demonstrated the wisdom and militancy of its members in its recent resistance to reductions of any sort and its demands for maintenance of the minimum wages and the lowering of hours from 45 to 40 hours per week. This, during a period of business recession, cutting of wages on all sides and threats of reprisals by recalcitrant employers.

CIO Affiliation

The shoe workers realized long ago that they could not hope to accomplish their aims and desires unassisted.

They were fully cognizant of the tremendous strides being made by the young Committee for Industrial Organization under the able leadership of John L. Lewis, John Brophy and all of the other far-sighted men who brought about the CIO. They watched closely — with the rest of the world—the battles fought and won by this organization; they noted the invincible determination of the workers in various industries had already affiliated with the CIO.

They recognized the hositlity which such militant leadership encountered on every hand. They cheered each victory won!

When they did become a part of the CIO they knew they were on the road to success at last; they had some hopes of organizing completely all of the shoe workers throughout the country, which heretofore had been a futile and almost hopeless task. Their first few months of affiliation have proved the wisdom of their choice.

Seasonal Industry

There are few industries which are confronted with the type of problems confronting the shoe workers.

First, they have slack seasons. Inevitably, shoe workers must accept lay-offs in the early summer months and at the beginning of the winter season. Why this should be in a country which needs footwear is a mystery. Everyone wears shoes; shoes are sold every day in the week throughout the country and yet, shoe workers always and inevitably face dull seasons.

One of the prime reasons is our faulty tariff system; shoes are shipped into this country duty-free. They are not assembled, of course, but all of the parts are finished and assembling does not require real skill. The labor for this is low paid. This situation is a grave one and is one which we must correct in time.

Another serious problem is migration.

In the shoe industry, manufacturers may operate on—to put it colloquially—a "shoe string," due to the fact that they do not purchase their machinery but rent it from the United Shoe Machinery Company.

Factories on wheels—that is the situation facing us in unorganized districts and until that evil is corrected by complete organization of all shoe workers, we will always have that evil.

Union's Program

The union seeks:

1. Union labels in all of the shoes manufactured by our members; publication of this fact to all affiliated unions throughout the country—thus we establish a common means of exchange.

2. Establishment of educational classes for those of our members who have not had full opportunities.

3. Legislation for the betterment of labor enacted.

The future of the employes of the shoe industry obviously rests with the continued progress of the United Shoe Workers of America.

Fighting the Union

Members of the National Guard were called out last year when the United Shoe Workers called their strike in Lewiston and Auburn, Maine. But even unprecedented terrorism failed to halt the union's forward march.

CIO Hosiery Union Re-Elects Rieve Again

Charlotte, N. C.—A tremendous burst of applause greeted the announcement of the re-election of Emil Rieve to his fourth term as president of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, as the 27th annual convention of the union drew toward a close.

Nearly 300 delegates representing about 90,000 hosiery workers in 36 states attended this convention, the largest and most important ever held by the AFHW.

Rieve who has been head of the Federation since 1928, is also acting head of the Textile Workers Organizing Committee at present. Silver-haired Alexander McKeown, former president of Branch 1 in Philadelphia, was re-elected first vice-president by acclamation, and Edward Callahan of Chattanooga, Tenn., was returned as second vice-president.

Some of the successes won by the Federation in the South were recounted by John A. Peel, TWOC director for the upper south, at one of the closing sessions. Commenting on the statement made by the U. S. Chamber of Commerce that half a million business men be organized, Peel said the fitting answer to this was the organization of three million more workers.

Greetings from the CIO national headquarters were given to the convention by John Edelman, CIO regional director in Philadelphia.

"The CIO has been held up very widely to the southern worker as a bogey or as a subversive and dangerous invader," he said.

"But these tactics will not seriously influence the southern worker who remembers very vividly how the same things that are now being said about the CIO were said only a few years ago about the AFL when it attempted to unionize in the area.

"The very people who are now deriding the CIO will climb on its band wagon as quickly as the workers begin flocking to our banner."

Dr. George W. Taylor, who has acted as arbitrator in the unionized branch of the hosiery industry, spoke at the convention, detailing some of the major problems to be met by the union. He said he looked upon the tendency of employers to extend the operations of a third shift as a decided evil.

During the first week of the convention, delegates were shown several films produced by the Farm Security Administration and WPA, run off on the union's own new portable projector, and introduced by Lawrence Rogin, educational director for the Federation.

Favor Wage Bill

Important action taken by the convention included the passing of a resolution in favor of immediate action on the Wage-Hour bill by Congress. A committee of delegates from southern states were dispatched to Washington from the convention to urge Congressmen to support the legislation.

Selected by a special committee appointed by President Rieve, the delegation was headed by Cole W. Danneberg of Charlotte, and included Helen Gregory, Knoxville, Tenn.; R. L. Calloway, Knoxville, Frank Walker, Union Point, Ga.; and Dan McCrorie, Charlotte, N. C.

Following the report of President Rieve at an early session of the convention, delegates discussed the need of complete union organization of the southern states. Employers in the south were reported to be greatly worried over the Federation's southern drive.

UFW Grows

New York — The United Furniture Workers, CIO, has chartered 12 locals, numbering 2300 workers, within recent weeks. The UFW now comprises 58 locals of 36,000 furniture workers throughout the country. The union was formed last November at a conference of furniture workers in Washington.

Winner

Sen. Claude Pepper of Florida, backed by Labor's Non-Partisan League, in the Florida Democratic primaries revealed strong popularity of New Deal measures, of which Pepper has been an ardent supporter. The size of Pepper's majority induced other Southern Democrats to support the wage-hour bill.

Rug Union Fights 10% Pay Cut

New York—Representatives from local unions in Thompsonville, Conn., whose members are employed in the Bigelow Sanford Carpet Co., at a meeting held in headquarters of the Textile workers Organizing Committee, resolved to resist the 10% wage reduction announced by the carpet firm.

Expressing the resentment of workers in both plants which employ about 6000 persons, the union delegates charged that the company's action was unjustified and unwarranted, and "will tend to undermine the standards not only of rug workers, but all other American employes."

Support to the Sanford workers was pledged by carpet workers from Philadelphia, New Jersey and New York, representatives of whom attended the conference.

The delegates declared that there is no economic justification for the action taken by the company since it is competitively in line with other carpet companies and is one of the most highly profitable ones.

CIO Backs Proposed Housing Law Changes

WASHINGTON—Moves to break up the financial log jam which has kept Federal housing activity at "pitiably" low levels were endorsed this week by the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Support for Senate bill 3911, was pledged in a letter issued by Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel.

The bill would enable the U. S. Housing Authority to lend up to 100% of the value of housing projects, instead of 90% as at present. With local authorities now forced to contribute 10%, the housing program is moving at snail's pace.

Benefits Forseen

The suggested change, Pressman said, "will speed up construction to an extent which will outweigh any supposed advantage to be gained by requiring local authorities to provide part of the funds."

The bill also calls for lifting the USHA's bonding limit to one billion dollars, instead of the half-billion now permitted. Such a change, Pressman asserted, would make possible the expenditure of $300,000,000 for housing this year, and would bring the Federal agency's program into line with Pres. Roosevelt's recovery program proposals.

The housing authority would also be permitted to contribute $50,000,000 a year to local government groups during the present year.

Changes Necessary

Unless these changes are made, Pressman said, "it will be impossible for the United States Housing Authority to expend more than about $125,000,000 this year.

"Such an amount would be pitiably small in view of the great need both for employment and for housing itself."

The letters explaining the CIO position were sent to Senator Elbert Thomas of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor; Representative Edward T. Taylor of the House Committee on Appropriations, and Representative Henry B. Steagall of the House Committee on Banking and Currency.

ANG Strikes Jersey Paper

Orange, N. J.—Firing of five American Newspaper Guild members on the staff of the Orange Courier brought a strike on the hands of the management this week.

A picket line of more than 50, composed of Guildmen, mailers and printers succeeded in keeping a major part of the mechanical crew out of the plant.

The firings, according to the Guild, was aimed at union men who had led the protests against "payless pay days," an institution which was meeting with growing favor by the management.

League Issues New Poster

Washington — A handsome colored poster to illustrate the essential unity of the political front of all progressives is being released by Labor's Non-Partisan League through its state affiliates.

Four figures are depicted on the poster. An overalled workman carrying a sledge-hammer, symbol of toil, stands beside a farmer who holds in his arms a sheaf of wheat. Next to them is a woman consumer, purse in hand, and the fourth figure is a white collar clerk.

All four are looking forward toward the same goal.

CIO Local Drops Two Who Scabbed On AFL

Bridgeport, Conn. — That unity of labor is not a thing of the past was demonstrated here during the strike of typographers on the Bridgeport Post.

The strike was called by the local chapel of the Intl. Typographical Union, AFL. When members of Local 237, United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, CIO, found that two of their members were acting as scabs in the struck newspaper plant, the pair were brought up on charges by the CIO union.

Found guilty, they were expelled from the organization, which has a closed shop contract at the American Record Co. here.

"We regret that they were ever members of the union," a UERMW statement declared.

"Calling All Union Members"-- UAW Radio Program Popular

Detroit.—"Good evening, fellow auto workers and friends. . . ."

This is the greeting grown familiar during the past year to thousands of listeners to the daily radio program of the United Automobile Workers of America, broadcast from WJBK, Detroit.

For all the sudden growth of the workers' union, which has made the past year a hectic one, the union's cultural activities have not been permitted to be neglected. Latest of these activities is a project for the formation of a trade union theater league with headquarters in Detroit.

Less than a year ago the UAW's educational department came into existence. At first this concerned itself mainly with athletics, and with classes in the locals.

Then in June, 1937, the UAW signed a contract with local radio station WJBK for a fifteen minute broadcast every evening at 7.15 and a half hour on Sunday mornings.

Used For Ford Drive

Although there were some objections from out-of-town locals, too far away to tune in these broadcasts, as a result of which the time has been turned over to the Ford Organizing Committee of the UAW, the radio has nevertheless proved the most important cultural step taken by the union. The radio has also been useful in directing organizational activities and in case of strikes in broadcasting appeals for pickets and summoning members to mass meetings.

The week's program includes dramatizations of labor history; workers' drama; workers' world news(dramatized labor news); speeches by local and out-of-town celebrities; and an amateur night in which members of the UAW locals participate. One night has been taken up by "Flivver King," a serial story of a Ford worker's family, based upon the novel of the same name by Upton Sinclair, 200,000 copies of which have been printed and distributed by the UAW.

Form Theater League

At the head of the UAW radio department is young and energetic George Ball. He is assisted by play director, Ralp Marlatt, and staff script writer, Julia Bristol.

The success thus far of the UAW's cultural program has led to the formation of the Trade Union Theater League. The League's first unit, the UAW Players of Detroit, will produce "The Lonely Man," Howard Koch's pro-labor drama based on the early life of Abraham Lincoln, on May 19, in the Deutsches Haus, Detroit.

Other dramatic groups are now being formed throughout the UAW locals and a play department established to publish plays suitable for use in union dramatic clubs. Information regarding plays will be sent upon request to any union or non-union group interested in the presentation of labor drama.

The talent used on the radio programs has been drawn from the ranks of the 250,000 auto workers in the Detroit area. Out of this large group, known as the UAW Radio Players, Marlatt has sifted the best talent to form the cast of "The Lonely Man." Following the Detroit presentation, this play will tour other cities where there are UAW locals.

AFL Charged With Union—Busting

"Organizing Drive" at Western Union Called Sabotage By ACA President

WASHINGTON — Details of an anti-union battle being carried out by leaders of the American Federation of Labor and the management of the Western Union Telegraph Co., came to light this week as the American Communications Assn., CIO, called upon the LaFollette committee to investigate violations of civil liberties for Western Union employes.

In another letter, addressed to Pres. William Green of the AFL, Pres. Mervyn Rathborne of the ACA charged that attempts by the AFL, working hand in glove with supervisors and foremen, to organize Western Union workers is "an attempt at union busting of the worst kind.

"It is deliberate sabotage of the American labor movement," Rathborne added. "The company appreciates this attempt to divide its employes so that they cannot act together to better their conditions."

Rathborne pointed out that ACA has been conducting a vigorous organization campaign among telegraph company employes for the past year. ACA, he said, had forced Western Union to take on thousands of employes it had sought to discharge, had exposed plans for the merger of Western Union and Postal Telegraph — which would have driven thousands more workers from their jobs — and had filed labor board charges against the company.

"Now, in the eleventh hour, you announce Mr. Green, that the AFL is undertaking a campaign to enroll Western Union employes in its ranks," Rathborne's letter declared.

"In Washington, D. C., where an AFL local has been set up, it has been set up under the leadership and with the aid and comfort of those very company union officials and company supervisors who have already amply demonstrated their vicious hatred of bona fide organized labor.

"Affidavits have been collected which prove that these individuals have put all the pressure of their own positions and that of the company backing them, into coercing employes to join the AFL affiliate."

The ACA was accused of interfering with Dan Cupid's romantic endeavors by the Association of Western Union Employes, the company union.

The document, full of similarly choice morsels of anti-unionism, was one of several sent to the LaFollette committee by the CIO union's legislative representative, Daniel Driesen.

Cupid is no longer active among the company's teletype machines, the company union claimed, since the "two-headed, argus-eyed, swish-tailed octopus" of the CIO started to organize.

The company union's diatribe, signed by one "Living Shadow," called for violence against members of ACA and charged it with causing chaos and discontent.

Union leaders point out that the company itself is causing the discontent through its use of a vicous speed-up system.

Sen. LaFollette was told by Driesen that the company's anti-union campaign "constitutes an open violation of the fundamental civil liberties of its employes as American citizens.

"Therefore it would seem imperative that the committee set up to investigate violations of civil liberties, of which you are chairman, undertake to ascertain the full details of the facts in this situation and again restore to the employes of the Western Union Telegraph Co., their full rights as citizens of the United States to protection from such intimation and out-right oppression."

AFL Grabs Notorious Hershey Stooge Union

Hershey, Pa.—Figuratively thumbing their noses at the Hershey Chocolate Corporation's attempts to suplant with the American Federation of Labor its deceased company union, over 500 enthusiastic Hershey workers attended a CIO meeting here Wednesday night.

The American Federation of Labor entered the Hershey scene on the same day that the company union was disbanded by order of the National Labor Relations Board. This order was handed down after the Hershey Chocolate Corporation had signed a stipulation admitting its guilt in fostering and financially aiding the Loyal Workers Clubs which through vigilante activities brutally broke a CIO sit-down strike in the Hershey plants in April, 1937, and the stooge Independent Chocolate Workers of Hershey which was later organized in their stead.

Immediately after the company union voted to accept the Board's order and disband, the president of the dead outfit introduced a representative of the Bakery and Confectionery Workers International Union who reorganized this Corporation under the banner of the AFL.

At long last, however, the Hershey workers realize that their only hope for true unionization lay with the United Chocolate Workers of America, the CIO affiliate. In tens and twenties they are coming to union headquarters every day and joining the CIO as dues paying members.

John W. Edelman, CIO regional director, stated, "The American Federation of Labor has branded itself unfit to represent the workers of this country by its action in lining up with and taking over the company union in Hershey."

The membership of the company union and its illegitamate successor, the AFL, has dwindled to a handful with CIO membership growing by leaps and bounds.

CIO Office Workers Hold Convention Next Week

WASHINGTON — Representatives of thousands of American white collar workers in every part of the country will gather in Washington May 18 as the first annual convention of the United Office & Professional Workers, CIO, gets under way.

From a membership of little more than 1000 a year ago, when the union was first formed and affiliated with the CIO, the UOPWA has grown to more than 45,000, according to President Lewis Merrill.

In the 12-month period UOPWA organizers have penetrated into the exploited offices of Wall Street's financial district; have gained outstanding success in their campaign to organize industrial insurance agents — a campaign climaxed by a victory in a state labor board election at the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. in New York.

They have taken in workers in the book and magazine trades, artists from the advertising offices, and white collar workers of various classifications in the mass production industries.

Exhibit Planned

A feature of the convention will be an exhibit of the products of unionized firms in the book trade.

The union's growth has not been limited to any one section of the country, UOPWA officials point out.

The convention will map plans for carrying on the organizing campaigns and extending the union's influence into new fields.

New Jersey League Meets

Trenton, N. J. — New Jersey's Labor's Non-Partisan League will hold a statewide convention here on May 21 and 22.

Faced with the growing menace of Hagueism, the delegates will build a program based on preservation of Constitutional rights and additional safeguards for labor union members throughout the State.

Fight 10% Wage Cut

Newton, Ia. — More than 300 workers, all members of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, CIO, took to the picket line when company officials ordered a lockout.

The union had refused to accept a 10 per cent. wage cut, offered when a union contract expired May 1.

Sign Two Pacts

Kokomo, Ind. — The Kingston Products Co. of this city has signed a one-year contract with the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, calling for maintenance of the present wage levels, a week's vacation with pay and quick settlement of grievances.

Workers at the Climax Machinery Co. of Indianapolis gained wage raises of up to 5c an hour through a new pact with the SWOC, it was announced by James Robb, SWOC field director.

New SWOC Pact With Big Steel

Pittsburgh—The Steel Workers Organizing Committee has signed another contract with U. S. Steel.

The new pact covers the 1,200 employes of the Union Railroad Co., a Big Steel subsidiary operating among the company's plants in this area.

Provisions for half a dozen shop crafts are contained in the agreement, which establishes wage scales, provides for the eight-hour day, time-and-a-half for overtime and division of work under seniority clauses.

It Just Doesn't Make Sense

While members of the United States Chamber of Commerce mumbled over their threadbare anti-spending theories as a means of providing abundance for all, a mounting army of jobless throughout the nation looked to the President's New Deal relief-recovery program as the only immediate answer to their needs. Shown at left are Pres. William Knudsen of General Motors and Pres. George Davis of the Chamber of Commerce. While they listened to anti-union diatribes, lines of unemployed gathered in Cleveland, Ohio, to receive oranges, appes and rice from outdoor distribution centers. Relief funds to take care of the city's 87,000 unemployed had entirely run out.

KENNEDY VOTE SHOWS RISING LABOR POWER

Two CIO Unions In Session

(See Stories on Pages 3 and 5 and editorial Page 4)

WASHINGTON — Two important CIO unions wound up conventions this week.

In Atlantic City, N. J., the Amalgamated Clothing Workers adjourned its twelfth biennial meeting with a resolution pledging continued loyal support to the CIO, its program and principles.

The ACWA looked towards peace in the labor movement, but warned that to be effective, it must be a peace signed between equals, with no sacrifice of the basic CIO program of organizing the unorganized in the mass-production industries.

UOPWA Meets

Meanwhile in Washington some three hundred delegates attended the first annual convention of the United Office & Professional Workers.

They heard reports describing the union's growth in every part of the country, and mapped plans for continued organizing activity in the next twelve months. The UOPWA has been successful in unionizing industrial insurance agents, as well as office workers, Wall Street employes and other white collar workers.

Stars Dot Hollywood ANG Picket Lines

By JOHN R. CHAPLIN

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., (FP.)—The brighest picket line in America swung into action here when 20 editorial workers, members of the American Newspaper Guild, CIO, struck against the Hollywood Citizen.

Hundreds of celebrity-chasers stopped to watch such screen stars as Robert Montgomery, Lucille Gleason, Ralph Morgan, Director Frank Tuttle and Scenarist Phillip Dunn carry picket signs in support of the strikers.

The stars were mobilized by a committee headed by Frank Scully, writer, who has promised to deliver the solid backing of Hollywood's unionized actors, writers and other film craftsmen.

The walkout was called when Publisher Harlan G. Palmer, famed for his liberal policies, refused to reinstate three guildsmen fired for union activity. According to Guild members, the dismissals were Palmer's final attempt to avoid signing a contract that had already been negotiated.

Charges against Palmer have been filed with the regional office of the National Labor Relations Board.

The picket line is being swelled to mass proportions in the early morning hours by the CIO Dawn Patrol, whose 300 members turn out before breakfast. In recent months this flying squadron of unionists has been canvassing unorganized shops in an effort to make a union town out of traditionally open-shop Los Angeles.

Unions, Progressives Will Benefit, CIO Leaders Predict

HARRISBURG, Pa. — Organized labor studied primary election returns in Pennsylvania this week after the most hectic contest in the State's recent history, and found little reason for gloom.

The "knockout" blow to the CIO, described in lavish terms in reactionary papers throughout the nation, was little more than a light tap in the first round, union leaders and liberals declared. The results actually registered a great increase in labor's independent political strength, they found.

To prove their contention, they pointed to:

1. The more than 500,000 votes polled by the labor candidate.

2. The influence this block of voters, together with those that went to other liberal candidates, will have on the State government in the future.

3. The fact that the Kennedy vote came from both city and farm areas, and that it resulted from less than six weeks of campaigning against the strongly-entrenched Democratic machine.

7,000 Salmon Workers Choose CIO Union

SEATTLE, Wash.—Seven thousand Alaska salmon cannery workers will have Local 7, United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers, CIO, as their collective bargaining agency, as the result of a Labor Board election won by the CIO union.

Immediate negotiations to complete an agreement for the 1938 season will be opened with the salmon packers, according to Conrad Espe, business agent of Local 7 and secretary-treasurer of the national union.

Previously the local was prevented from conferring with the employers for a contract by AFL leaders who were seeking to win recognition for their union.

Local 7 voted to join the CIO last August, but AFL leaders took possession of the AFL charter and claimed to have sole bargaining rights for the union.

Employes Double-Crossed

In April the Labor Board conducted an audit which showed that the CIO cannery union had a large majority of the workers signed up. The employers who had agreed to accept the results of the audit as disclosed by the Board, broke their agreement when the AFL threatened to boycott the industry. Local 7 then asked for an election.

Efforts to put over a 10% wage cut in the salmon packing industry will be fought by the union in the coming negotiations. Union spokesmen claim that a financial report on the industry disclosed a net profit of $63,655 over the profits made last year.

BARBERS DROP SCISSORS

New York—Six hundred barbers walked out in two sections of Brooklyn this week to gain a three-year contract between their union, the CIO Barbers and Beauty Culturists Union, and the master barbers.

Strike At Goodrich

Akron, Ohio.—The latest in a long series of seniority violations and firings of union men by the Goodrich Rubber Company closed the Akron plant in a strike affecting 9,000 workers, members of the United Rubber Workers, CIO.

Immediate cause of the strike was the firing of union electricians while apprentices were retained at considerably lower wages. A compromise plan offered by the union was rejected by the company in spite of a union warning that a strike was inevitable if it persisted in its anti-union policies.

The company has been carrying on a guerrilla war against the union for some time now with repeated firing of union men who are replaced by non-union workers.

The Pacific Is Terrific

Few sections of the country can match the enthusiasm for unionism to be found along the Pacific Coast.

Little wonder—for up and down that shoreline the unions affiliated with the CIO have long records of valiant service for the workers. Right up at the top of that list stands the Inland Boatmen's Union of the Pacific.

Glass-bottomed tourist boats in San Pedro harbor; on ferries inside the Golden Gate; on motor vessels up on the Columbia River, members of the Inland Boatmen's Union are to be found.

For the story of the rise of this organization from a small local union to one of the nation's most important maritime labor organizations, turn to Page Six of this issue.

Paper in Red, ANG Wins Strike In Orange

Orange, N. J.—The American Newspaper Guild, CIO, added another to its long string of victories when a 10-day strike at the Orange Courier ended with an agreement establishing the preferential shop and barring pay cuts or economy dismissals for the next six months.

Three discharged editorial workers were re-hired, and two others placed on a preferential rehiring list.

Picketing of stores which refused to kill their advertising in the paper helped bring the walkout to a speedy end.

Workers Choose The CIO

Anxious to sail for their season's work in Alaska, these salmon cannery workers balloted in Seattle, Wash., in a labor board election, and chose the CIO's United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers, by an overwhelming majority. Robert McGuire, at left, supervises the voting for the NLRB.

Firestone Signs New URW Pact

Akron, O.—Preservation of existing wage rates and the six-hour day featured the renewal of the contract between the United Rubber Workers, CIO, and the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. here.

Significant in the new pact is a clause barring "solicitation of membership by any organization on company time or plant property." Union leaders pointed out that the section was directed at the "independent" union at the Firestone plant which has openly solicited membership within the plant.

Vacations with pay; seniority rights, with hours to be reduced to 24 a week before layoffs occur; and retention of the present grievance system are included in the agreement.

"We believe this agreement marks a definite forward step for our union in this period of depression," declared L. S. Buckmaster, president of URW Local 7.

"Every effort is being made at this time to 'liquidate' labor we are happy to say that so far as rubber is concerned, the union is holding the line and mapping out the ground for further advances."

Labor Wins New Court Tests

Rathborne, ACA Head, Hails Decision In Mackay Case

WASHINGTON.—Striking workers are still employes, and have a right to job protection, in the unanimous opinion of the U. S. Supreme Court. The opinion was handed down in a 7-0 decision ordering the reinstatement of five employes of the Mackay Radio Corp. who were fired during a strike called by the American Communications Assn., CIO, three years ago.

The decision at the same time upheld the procedure of the Natl. Labor Relations Board in ordering the reinstatement of the five workers, upsetting a decision of the Circuit Court that had previously overruled the Board.

Vindication of ACA

The decision was hailed by Mervyn Rathborne, president of the ACA, as complete vindication of the three-year fight of the union for the reinstatement of the dismissed workers.

"The dispute now settled by the Supreme Court originated in a nation-wide strike called by the ACA in 1935," Rathborne said. "In an attempt to break the strike, the company initiated a 'back-to-work' movement warning strikers who refused to return that their jobs would be lost forever.

"The ACA filed charges with the National Labor Relations Board, which ordered reinstatement of five ACA members with back pay. It was this ruling which the company appealed to the Circuit Court, resulting in two adverse decisions now revoked by action of the Supreme Court, he declared.

"The vindication of the CIO affiliated American Communications Association in this case should have a wide effect on similar cases involving reinstatement of workers dismissed for taking part in strikes," President Rathborne concluded.

The decision of the U. S. Supreme Court on the five Mackay workers employed in San Francisco will result in the reinstatement of 16 additional Mackay workers employed in other cities, Rathborne said, since the company had agreed to use the case as a precedent for all the workers involved in the strike.

It came, Rathborne pointed out, at a time when the ACA is negotiating with the Mackay Corp. for a nation-wide contract covering all workers in the concern.

Negotiations have been under way since April 25, Rathborne said, with the company claiming it could not pay the raises demanded by the negotiating committees on the grounds of "poverty."

Phony Wires Sent To Congress

Buffalo, N. Y.—Proof of the phony character of telegrams sent to Washington denouncing President Roosevelt's various proposals is given in a fraud perpetrated on Charles Rosen, manager of the manager of the Buffalo Joint Board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

Brother Rosen, a staunch supporter of the President's reorganization bill, was amazed, a few days after the bill was defeated to receive a letter from a Buffalo Congressman, acknowledging receipt of a telegram allegedly from Brother Rosen, DENOUNCING the reorganization bill.

The telegram had not been sent by the Buffalo unionist and he had known nothing of it until he received the letter from his Congressman. A check with the telegraph company has failed to determine who misused his name in sending the phony protest.

L. A. Schools Closed To League

Los Angeles, Calif.—Boosters in the City of the Angels who are so fond of calling the world's attention to the supreme or unique feature of Los Angeles, have another to add to the list. It is the only city in the country which has denied Labors Non-Partisan League the right to meet in school buildings.

A group of state legislators and congressmen are among those who have demanded that the Board of Education rescind its order against the League.

NLRB Victories Stop Union-Haters' Campaign

WASHINGTON—In high places and low Tories throughout the nation this week growled in their coffee cups and undertook to find a new combination to crack the National Labor Relations Board.

Their latest campaign, widely-aired in the nation's press, had once again met a stumbling block in the U. S. Supreme Court, where the NLRB gained its eleventh straight victory —a feat almost unparalleled by any government agency.

The court decision upholding the board in the Mackay Radio case gained added significance because it sustained the legal procedure under which the board took action.

Legal representatives of the Ford Motor Co., Republic Steel, Douglas Aircraft and Heinz Food Products have recently hoped that the court would condemn the board's procedure, thereby nullifying its decisions in these cases.

Lower Court On Spot

That their hopes seem doomed to disappointment became more evident as the court ordered the Third Circuit Court of Appeals to show cause why it should not allow the NLRB to withdraw its decision in the Republic Steel case.

The lower court's refusal had drawn Tory applause when it seemed that the board's procedure might come under fire. The NLRB is seeking to withdraw the ruling in the Republic case, follow procedure suggested by the court in a Department of Agriculture case a few weeks ago, and then hand down a new ruling.

Little Steel's attorneys, apparently realizing the hopelessness of their csae, had counted on besting the labor board only through a technically.

With the Supreme Court's unprecedented order to the lower judicial body now on the record, a Girdler victory seems unlikely.

NLRB Pleased

"I am glad that again, by decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in an important case, it has been found that the board correctly interpreted the Act of Congress, and that the order of the board was in all respects correct," declared Charles Fahy, NLRB general counsel.

Fahy pointed to the fact that the court had upheld procedure in the Mackay case despite the fact that there had been no trial examiner's report.

"The court reviewed the proceedings and held that the company had not been denied a full and adequate hearing," Fahy said.

"Neither the Supreme Court nor any circuit court of appeals has ever held in any case that the board has ever failed in this regard."

NLRB Official Scoffs At Tory Attacks

New York, (FP).—Scoring the U. S. Chamber of Commerce for its attacks upon the National Labor Relations Act, Mrs. Elinore M. Herrick, NLRB regional director here, told a meeting of the League of Women Voters that the chamber had failed to take the advice of two industrial leaders, both members of its organization, when it condemned the act.

Mrs. Herrick said she referred to Pres. Gerard Swope of General Electric and Myron C. Taylor, former chairman of the U. S. Steel Corp.

Employers, she said, have lost none of the privileges enjoyed before the act was passed. Admitting that the board had made mistakes, she reminded its critics that "we have been charting an unknown sea, that we have been establishing rules and precedents in a field of human relations with which the American government has never dealt before."

Ask Housing Fund

Albany, N. Y.—The American Labor Party proposed a half-billion dollar revolving fund to carry out low-cost housing and slum clearance projects throughout New York State. The plan was placed before the State's constitutional convention by Delegate Charles Polletti of the ALP.

FIGHTS RATE BASES

Great Falls, Mont.—A difference of $92,000,000 exists between the valuations established for rate-making and taxation purposes for the Mountain States Telephone & Telegraph Co. and the Montana Power Co., it is charged. Jess Stevens, publisher of the State Journal here has suggested that the rate-making valuation claimed by the companies should be the one used for taxation purposes.

Ask Labor, Consumer Unity

New York, (FP) — Consumers should take a strong stand with organized labor to fight off attacks by manufacturers, Pres. Michael Quill of the Transport Workers Union, CIO, told 1,500 persons at the annual membership meeting of Consumers Union of the U. S., Inc.

Quill, who is also an American Labor Party member of the New York City Council, warned that newspaper publishers have joined with manufacturers to mobilize public sentiment against the Wagner Act and other labor legislation.

The trick used is to sell the consumer—or the public — the idea that the working man and the consumer are "two different entities with opposing interests," whereas, Quill pointed out, about 98% of the population are working people.

How Does 'Public' Live?

"Whenever labor has taken the field to win better conditions for itself, the bosses have inevitably pointed to their mythical consumers as being most injured by the demands of the workers," Quill added.

"Lord only knows how this 'public' manages to live without working or without depending upon the profits created by workers, but it probably ekes out a miserable existence upon a diet of newsprint and printers' ink."

Mexicans Strike Ford Plant

Striking workers at the Ford assembly plant in Mexico City haul up their strike flag as protests against starvation wages mounted in the Mexican capital. The United Automobile Workers, CIO, is backing their fight for a union contract.

Fewer Workers— More Accidents

Vancouver, B. C.—Since the first of the year, 20 loggers have been killed in lumber camps of British Columbia, 13 more than last year during the same period, according to B. C. Coast District Council of the International Woodworkers, CIO.

This, in spite of the fact—or possibly because of it—that only one-third as many men are working at present as were employed last year. The two most recent fatalities were Alex Servis, 27, killed at Youbou by a falling tree, and Hans Dahl, a Vancouver logger killed at Port McNeil.

CIO Fights Ad Agency

Long Island City, N. Y.—On strike against mass lay-offs, with resultan tspeed-up, and the wholesale use of a vicious spy system, the United Carders and Bill Posters of this city, a CIO Local Industrial Union, are appealing for CIO support in helping them to fight the Collier advertising agency's attempt to break their . ion.

Forty-four men have been laid off since January 1, the union declared, and an intolerable speed-up system introduced. The men were spotted as active union members by a network of spies that the company has introduced, who followe the workers everywhere.

TWU Help Given

The Transport Workers, CIO, have already helped by protesting against the use of scab advertising workers in the subways and street cars. The men have sworn they will not return until they get a contract providing for the return of the laid off workers and the abolition of the spy system and the speed-up.

ACW Asks Passage of Relief Program, Lauds CIO Gains

ATLANTIC CITY—Calling for a four-point social and recovery program "for the protection of the masses of the people" the 600 delegates and many hundreds of visitors brought the nine-day convention of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, CIO, to an end this week.

The convention reaffirmed unanimous support of the CIO, stating in the resolution adopted that: "The record of achievement of the CIO is a mighty one. It proves beyond dispute that the decision of the Amalgamated to participate in the effort to organize the unorganized on an industrial basis was wise and constructive."

Sidney Hillman, general president of the ACWA and vice-chairman of the CIO, was unanimously renominated to lead the union for another two years.

Four-Point Program

The four-point program put forward in the resolution on legislation included demands for the passage of the wage and hour bill, enactment of President Roosevelt's relief and recovery program, expansion of the Social Security act, and passage of a pending amendment to the Housing Act which would release an additional half billion dollars for low cost housing.

The convention had previously gone on record for the wage and hour bill, President Hillman describing it as first step in a definite program to "get the country out of this depression."

The relief and recovery program was upheld as "a minimum condition for the protection of the health and security of the nation."

Political Duties of Labor

Expansion of the Social Security Act was called for on the lines laid down by the Atlantic City conference of the CIO, which pointed out the need for removing discriminations now present in the Act and for the broadening of present payments.

President Hillman, in his closing speech, urged the delegates to work tirelessly on their return home "so that our decisions will become a reality."

The ACWA head again stressed the need for political action on the part of labor, emphasizing the necessity for political gains to help in retaining gains made on the economic front.

President Hillman concluded by urging a still stronger CIO as the best guarantee of unity within the labor movement, saying that "the stronger the labor movement is, the sooner we shall have a unified labor movement."

Peace Action Taken

The convention went on record as unanimously supporting the O'Connell amendment to the present Neutrality Act, which would make it impossible for fascist aggressor nations to receive arms from this country to aid their attacks on democratic countries.

The resolution also called for joint action with other labor and progressive groups in boycotting goods produced in fascist aggressor countries as an effective way of protesting their actions.

UAW Local Gets Labor Library

Detroit. — The valuable labor library of Brookwood College is being moved from Katonah, N. Y., to the brick building owned by the West Side Local of the United Automobile Workers.

It will form, with its 5000 volumes and numerous pamphlets and labor newspaper files the nucleus of what is expected to be a comprehensive labor library for Detroit workers and students of the labor movement.

Brookwood, original owner of the collection, closed its doors about a year ago.

Growing Labor Strength Shown In Pennsylvania

HARRISBURG, Pa. — Far from discouraged by the Pennsylvania primary results, leaders of the Kennedy campaign pointed to the vast outpouring of votes for the United Mine Workers secretary-treasurer as an indication of the rising political strength of labor throughout the nation.

Though Kennedy lost — by only 66,000 votes out of a total of a million cast in the Democratic primary—political observers here do not deny that his campaign will give a great impetus to the progressive cause in this important industrial state.

With all but a handful of the state's election districts tabulated, Kennedy was credited with 517,913 votes. Jones had a plurality of 66,512 out of the 1,283,253 votes polled in the governorship race.

Charles Alvin Jones, the Democrat nominee, did not receive a majority of the votes. Charles Margiotti, former attorney-general, ran a poor third in the contest, but succeeded in drawing many votes away from Kennedy, it is believed.

Kennedy himself declared that, "all things considered, the labor and liberal forces have gained a moral victory."

Murray's Comment

While reactionary papers throughout Pennsylvania — which had waged a vicious battle against Kennedy—gloated in the nomination of Jones, Philip Murray, head of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee and a CIO vice-chairman, pointed out:

"The CIO has scored a remarkable victory in the Pennsylvania primary election."

Continuing, Murray asserted that the CIO had "demonstrated its strength to the tune of nearly a half million votes of confidence in its program and objectives.

"It stopped the retreat from the New Deal by forcing everybody in the Democratic party to go forward with President Roosevelt.

"It won the support of the farmers of the state, as demonstrated by the actual vote in the rural counties, to its broad principles of cooperation for the betterment of business, farmers and labor."

"For these reasons we must not only keep this political arm of the labor movement intact, but must build it even stronger. To do anything else would be betraying the half-million who voted their confidence in the CIO program, in the face of vicious and misleading charges."

Murray called attention to the fact that Jones had failed to get a majority of the votes, and that the Kennedy political organization "was thrown together in about six weeks."

"There is only one explanation for our remarkable showing. That is that our program is in harmony with what the people want. We are in step with the times. A

Unveil New Picture

Pres. Sidney Hillman of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers (left) and Chairman John L. Lewis of the CIO admire a new portrait of the ACWA leader, which was presented to him by members of the union. Continued loyalty to the CIO was expressed in resolutions passed at the clothing union's 12th convention, which ended in Atlantic City, N. J., this week.

Oil Union Wins In St. Paul

Washington.—All drivers, warehousemen and watchmen employed by the Texas Company at its bulk plant in St. Paul, Minn., will be represented by Local 387, Oil Workers International Union, for the purposes of collective bargaining.

The CIO union was certified by the Labor Board following a comparison of the pay roll list with union membership cards and with a petition signed by employes asking to be represented by Local 387.

The Board found that the claims of an AFL union which asked for jurisdiction over the Texas Co. employes were insufficient, since there was "indisputable evidence that the oil workers' union had represented a majority since Jan. 15, 1938."

23 REINSTATED

New York — Twenty-three members of the National Maritime Union, CIO, who were fired off the S. S. Sacarappa of the South Atlantic Line, have been ordered rehired by the National Labor Relations Board. They will receive back pay and subsistence.

The Press and the NLRB

Most of the newspapers of America are having a pretty hard time swallowing their editorials, news stories and headlines about the National Labor Relations Board.

The Supreme Court decision upholding the Board in its order to the Mackay Radio and Telegraph Company to reinstate five former strikers fills the newspaper publishers with anguish.

Most pitiable of all is the plight of the Herald-Tribune of New York. This "journal of record" can hardly believe that the bad news is true. For weeks it has been whooping it up in its campaign against the NLRB. There have been constant editorials and two-column headlines proclaiming the theory that the days of the Board were numbered. Indeed the Herald-Tribune, like many other papers, went to the length of asserting that even the Board itself was now willing to admit that in judgment and technique it had failed to be impartial.

Then came the decision of the High Bench by the rousing figure of 7-to-0, which sounds more like a game between the Giants and the Phillies than a Supreme Court verdict. In the Herald-Tribune the event was not considered worthy of more than a single column head and one as extraordinary as I have ever seen in a newspaper.

"Labor Board Claims Major Court Victory," was the way the news was broken to the embattled conservatives.

It might have been a good idea for the editor of the Herald-Tribune to have sent out for a newspaper so that he might have ascertained what really happened. It is a major victory for the Board and it is a smashing victory for labor.

Here's News!--Ford Recognizes U. S. Laws

DETROIT, Mich—The right of the United Automobile Workers to distribute its weekly paper at the gates of the Ford River Rouge plant without being molested has finally been recognized by the Dearborn corporation counsel, according to Larry S. Davidow, UAW attorney.

By the terms of an agreement drawn up between the CIO union and Dearborn counsel, the city will give "adequate police protection" to UAW distributors, who may give out the papers subject to reasonable rules of the police department to avoid congestion and interference with traffic.

The union agrees to refrain from demonstrations other than distribution of papers, and to drop civil suits threatened against the city or city officials for false arrests and false imprisonment.

Will Drop Suit

Counsel for Dearborn, promised to dismiss the pending case of Edward Lyons, which was started as a test case to determine the validity of a traffic ordinance designed to prevent distribution of literature at the Ford plant gates.

Nearly 1,000 persons were arrested and held in the city jail from one to three hours under this ordinance.

Commenting upon the agreement reached, President Homer Martin of the UAW said: "I am glad to see we can now exercise our constitutional right of free press in Dearborn without interference.

"I believe this agreement indicates that the police force and officials of the city of Dearborn are coming to realize that the UAW is building a substantial, responsible and worthwhile organization."

UCAPAWA Local Certified in 3 Plants

WASHINGTON — Alaska Cannery Workers Union, Local 5 of the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing & Allied Workers, has been certified as the sole bargaining agency for three Alaska salmon packing companies by the Labor Board.

The Board's action was based upon a comparison of the company pay rolls with the union's lists which showed that the union had a majority in each company.

The companies involved are the Alaska Packers Ass'n., Alaska Packing Co., and Red Salmon Canning Co., all with headquarters in San Francisco.

The Pennsylvania Primaries

The splendid vote polled for Thomas Kennedy in the Pennsylvania primaries, despite the opposition of an entrenched political machine, reflects the rapidly growing power of labor as an independent political force.

Kennedy polled half a million votes, carrying 35 of the State's 67 counties. He failed of election only because of the machine-controlled majorities against him in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, though he carried the industrial suburbs of those cities and ran well throughout the rest of the State, including the farming areas.

If Charles J. Mariotti had not been in the race, as a third candidate, Kennedy would have been assured of the nomination for Governor with a big majority, since Margiotti polled a large number of liberal and anti-machine votes.

The liberal votes were further divided by the fact that many of them went to Gifford Pinchot in the Republican primary, and even C. A. Jones, Kennedy's opponent, campaigned as a supporter of the New Deal.

The forces of reaction are kidding themselves, if they think the primaries did not show that the majority sentiment in Pennsylvania is still strongly liberal and progressive. They should note the inglorious defeat of Congressman Stack, who bragged of his opposition to wage-hour legislation.

The chief lesson for labor and progressive voters is that they must strengthen their own independent organization through Labor's Non-Partisan League, if their interests are not to be flouted by old-time political machines. Particular attention must be devoted to improving ward and precinct organization in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh.

Labor's political organization was thrown together hastily for the campaign in about six weeks, and it lacked the efficiency of the old political machines. But in spite of this, a large and solid bloc of progressive voters was organized, which holds the balance of power in the State.

The experience of the campaign will not be utilized to improve labor's organization and to cement still further the promising alliance between labor, farmers and the progressive forces generally.

Labor is building surely and solidly to win its place in the sun. On the basis of its remarkable showing in the Pennsylvania primaries, it has every reason to face the future with confidence.

Unionizing The White-Collared

The convention of the United Office and Professional Workers, CIO, brings encouraging evidence that the so-called "white collar" is ceasing to be a badge of non-union docility, and that the labor movement is expanding into territory that was once regarded as closed to it.

In the AFL, office workers were accorded an inferior status. The general attitude was that they could never become real trade unionists. They were divided into small federal unions, made up mostly of employes of union offices. All their pleas for an international union of their own and a real organizing campaign were consistently rejected.

The onward sweep of industrial organization through the CIO, however, brought new hope to these salaried workers.

The CIO gave them an international union of their own. It assigned organizers to them and lent them organizing support in every possible way. Under CIO influence a turn was made at once to concentration upon organizing the big insurance companies, banking houses and other concerns in which white-collar workers predominate.

The results are already apparent in the growth of the UOPWA from 9,000 to 45,000 members. A majority of the employes of some of the biggest insurance companies have been organized, and an outstanding election victory was recently won at the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. in New York.

The urgent need of office workers for union organization is shown by the many recent salary reductions put into effect by industrial corporations, which have been prevented from cutting the wages of their production employes by CIO organization.

The labor movement generally needs the support of unionized office employes, so that a united front may be presented against all wage and salary cutting and the resultant decreases in purchasing power which threaten to deepen the present economic depression.

Organization of the white-collared has a further and still wider social and political significance. Salaried employes are middle class in many of their associations, if not in actual economic status. Their contacts are among professionals, little businessmen and the other groups who belong in the political camp of labor and progress, but who are a frequent prey to the demagogues of reaction.

It is of the utmost importance that the middle classes should realize their identity of interest with labor, if democracy and liberalism are to prevail over the menacing forces of reaction of fascism. Unionization of white-collar, office and professional workers is one o the most effective means of spreading labor sympathy and understanding among the middle classes.

The UOPWA and the other white-collar unions of the CIO have made an excellent start on one of the most important movements of our times.

We Will Not Forget

Looking Ahead By LEN DE CAUX

Who Cdows Last, Crows Best

THERE has been much crowing and cackling in the barnyard of reaction about the Pennsylvania primaries.

The cocks of the Tory walk have mistaken so many haystacks fires for the rising dawn of old guard Republican hopes, that they may be excused a little more of such false alarm srowing, before the voters' ax finally falls on them.

The goose-step parade of the anti-labor press also struts true to form.

Even the cackles of these champiaonms of "individualism" seem ot be regimented nowadays. Three Washington dailies on the same day, for instance, ran separate cartoons all showing a heavy keystone falling on John L. Lewis and the CIO.

The papers seem to have standing type, not to mention form editorials, on the collapse and defeat of the CIO. They have been printed and reprinted so often that the CIO publicity department knows them by heart and has almost learned to love them.

This growing affection for old fomiliar things is not entirely altruistic, however. For experience has taught that each such newspaper collapse of the CIO has been accompanied by the organizations biggest advances.

Last year, each synthetic newspaper defeat netted the CIO on an average ten thousand new members; so that after a summer of almost continuous collapses in the press, the CIO found its membership increased by an additional million.

Labor's Balance of Power

In the Pennsylvania primaries, organized labor emerged as an independent political force of the first magnitude. Challenging the power of the entrenched Democratic machine, it rolled up a vote of more than half a million for Thomas Kennedy, carrying a majority of the state's counties. It would assuredly have nominated Kennedy with a comfortable margin, if a third candidate had not split the liberal and anti-machine vote.

The results register a notable advance in the political consciousness of labor and progressive voters. They show the existance of a great and solid bloc of votes which holds the balance of political power in the state.

Yet these results, the editorial goosesteppers would have us believe, are "a staggering defeat for the CIO," and a lesson that labor should give up mixing in politics.

Learning From the Enemy

Labor should listen carefully to the advice of its enemies — and then do the opposite. The lessons it will draw from the Pennsylvania primaries are in fact the exact opposite of those drawn in the hostile press.

Not less political activity, but more, is the first of these lessons.

Betrayed by the Democratic party machine in the recent elections, labor had to build independent campaign machinery of its own over-night. If this machinery did not achieve everything that could be desired in its first test, the obvious conclusion is that it should be strengthened and perfected in every ward and precinct, so that old party machines cannot afford to neglect labor interests in future elections.

Another lesson labor will learn from its enemies is to overcome the isolation which they sought to create. It will remove the false impression that labor represents a sectional interest (rather than the interests of the common people generally) by strengthening its alliance with farmers, middle classes and all other progressive voters.

Donald Duck Quacks

In speaking of the goose-step parade of reaction, we nearly neglected to mention that Donald Duck of labor division, William Green. Valiantly trying to keep in step, and to look as big a goose as the rest, he contributed his falsetto cackle to the anti-labor chorus.

In Pennsylvania primaries, Green and other AFL craft leaders succeeded in reversing the old Federation policy of "rewarding labor's friends and punishing its enemies." They consistently endorsed labor's enemies and did their best to punish every labor-endorsed candidate.

Fortunately their influence was insignificant, since most of the AFL rank and file prefer tried-and-true labor men and liberal candidats to the employers' men to whom the craft leaders attempted to deliver their votes.

LABOR and the LAW

(LABOR and the LAW is a feature prepared for THE CIO NEWS by Lee Pressman, general counsel of the CIO.

THE MACKAY CASE

The victory of the National Labor Relations Board in the Supreme Court is reported in this issue of the CIO News. In this column the legal points will be simply stated so that union members will know exactly what the court's decision means.

The facts of the case are briefly these: A strike was called by the American Radio Telegraphists' Assn. at the San Francisco offices of the Mackay Radio and Telegraph Co. The strike was not called because of any unfair labor practices by the employer, but simply because the union and the company could not agree on terms.

Subsequently, when the strike was called off, all of the men were taken back to work by the company except five leaders of the strike. The company tried to show that the reason for its refusal to reinstate these men was that it had filled their places during the strike. The Board found that the company had discriminataed against them because of their union activity and ordered their reinstatement with back pay. The Supreme Court upheld the Board's order.

By this decision, four important points in the administration of the Wagner Act have been definitely confirmed by the Supreme Court.

The first point is that under the Act, strikers are still employes and are therefore protected against any unfair labor practices committed during or after the strike.

This is important because it means that strikers will be protected against vigilantes and "back to work" movements fomented by the employer after a strike is called, in his attempt to break the strike.

The second point is that strikers will be protected against discrimination by the employer in taking back men after a strike is over, even though the employer is not guilty of any unfair labor practice when the strike is called. This is a concrete application of the first point to the facts in the Mackay case.

Differs From Republic Case

The Mackay case differs from cases like the Republic Steel where the strike was called because of the unfair labor practices of the corporation in trying to crush the union. In such cases, all of the strikers are entitled to reinstatement and the employer cannot fill their places with scabs.

In a situation like the Mackay case, where the employer is not guilty of any unfair labor practice before the strike was called, he may try to fill the places of the strikers, but after the strike is over, he cannot discriminate because of union activity in deciding which men he will take back.

In the Mackay case the company claimed that the evidence showed that the men were discharged not for their union activity, but for other reasons. The Board, however, found to the contrary.

In nearly every case there will be some conflicting evidence on questions of fact, but the Supreme Court has ruled that it is up to the Board to find whether the union or the employer is giving the real facts in the case, so long as there is some evidence to support the Board's findings. This is an important point because if the courts can substitute their judgment for that of the Board in determining the facts, hostile judges would have an easy chance to wreck the administration of the Wagner Act.

In two recent cases a circuit court of appeals decided for itself what the facts were and upset the findings made by the Board. If the Supreme Court holds to the principle which it has laid down in the Mackay case, it will reverse the two court decisions.

The fourth point in the Mackay case is that the procedure of the Labor Board is fair, even if there is no intermediate report by the trial examiner. As was stated in this column last week, certain corporations and their Wall Street lawyers, are making a bitter attack upon the procedure of the Labor Board in those cases where there were no intermediate reports. The Supreme Court once again has told the Wall Street Liberty League lawyers that they are wrong.

The Mackay decision enforces the Wagner Act in accordance with what Congress intended when it passed the Act. It is important to remember that the Supreme Court is doing no less than it should, when it rules that an act of Congress means exactly what it says.

Labor's Power At Polls Seen Gaining

half-million voters told us so."

Similar sentiments were expressed in Washington by E. L. Oliver, executive vice-president of Labor's Non-Partisan League.

Sees Step Forward

Address a convention of the United Office & Professional Workers, Oliver described the Pennsylvania primaries as a step in labor's forward march.

Pointing out that labor is taking, for the first time in this country, an active interest in national politics, Oliver warned that union members should be not at all disheartened by the tremendous strength evidenced in the Kennedy vote.

Progressives from both urban and rural areas joined to vote for the mine workers' official, he pointed out, and this unity will be increasingly evident in the next few months.

An analysis of the Pennsylvania vote indicated that Kennedy was victorious in a majority of the state's 67 counties. Except for Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and a small number of other districts, Kennedy led his machine-backed opponent. The Philadelphia plurality, however, was instrumental in his failure to win the nomination.

Defeat Anti-New Dealer

An interesting sidelight of the primary race was the fact that Rep. Michael Stack, Coughlinite and opponent of the President's reorganization bill and the wage-hour bill, was trounced. With only one exception, all Pennsylvania Democratic Congressmen were renominated.

Scarcely surprising to those who have watched the rapid disintegration of political principles at AFL headquarters was the post-primary statement of Pres. William Green.

Neatly harmonizing with Tory leaders, Natl. Association of Manufacturers executives and sweatshoppers throughout Pennsylvania, Green rejoiced in the defeat of both Kennedy and Gifford Pinchot, liberal candidate for the Republican gubernatorial nomination.

Green complimented leaders of the AFL for refusing to vote the labor slate.

UOPW Meet Hears Need For White Collar Unions

WASHINGTON—With a record of 500 per cent. growth in less than a year of affiliation to the CIO—from 8600 members to 45,000—and a record of organization in industries previously untouched, the United Office and Professional Workers of America opened its second convention in Washington this week with a background of acheivement outstanding even in the CIO.

"We are now an integral part of the American labor movement," Lewis Merrill, president of the union, told the 300 delegates in opening the convention. "In the AFL we were sub-citizens. Today we have full citizenship in the CIO."

A Time of Crisis

"Today we meet under conditions of crisis," he declared. "We have to meet this problem, because of the needs of our own organization and because millions of unorganized white collar workers are faced with a condition of economic disaster.

"We have done well. A new organizing opportunity is coming. There is no reason why we cannot grow to an organization of hundreds of thousands of members by the time of our next convention," he added.

Touching briefly on the need for political action by organized labor in his opening speech, Merrill stated that full political participation on the part of workers of all occupations was a vital necessity for the protection of economic gains.

A Message From the CIO

Len De Caux, CIO publicity director and editor of THE CIO NEWS was keynote speaker at the opening of the convention.

"There are no real distinctions between white collar and manual workers," he declared. "Such distinctions are drawn largely for the purpose of promoting a split between the two groups. Your interests are the same. Your need for organization is the same."

The white collar workers' role was especially important in meeting the menace of fascism, De Caux explained. Hitler and Mussolini had made their headway with demagogic appeal to the middle class. Union organization of office and professional workers close to this group could prevent similar headway here, he declared.

Board Reports

Presenting the report of the General Executive Board to the delegates, Preisdent Merrill called attention to those sections listing the union's growth and to the policies carried out by the Board.

The union, in its less than a yaer of existence as a CIO international, had grown to 77 locals ni 26 states and in Canada, the report stated.

Concentration in the insurance field and the drive to organize financial workers has resulted in very gratifying gains already, Merrill stated. Industrial insurance agents, especially in the big companies, were flocking into the union, and organization was making rapid strdies "under the Moses of the Financial Moguls of Wall Street," he declared.

Baker, Flaxer Speak

Jacob Baker, president of the CIO United Federal Workers, and Abram Flaxer, preisdent of the State, County and Municipal Workers, addressed the convention on the opening day.

E. L. Oliver, executive vice-president of Labor's Non-Partisan League, also spoke to the delegates, stressing the importance of their task in bringing middle class voters to support labor's political demands.

Jacob Potofsky, assistant president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, brought greetings from the ACWA convention, just closed in Atlantic City.

CAPITAL CLOSE-UPS

By MARTIN STRONG

The mud-gunners of 1938 are opening up their batteries!

The first major stink-bomb of the forthcoming Congressional campaign burst forth from Republican National Committee headquarters last week, and if it is any sample of what is to come later the country probably will have to organize a rescue squad to save the manufacturers from the fumes of their own products before they can get them off the mimeograph machines.

The planned campaign is the same old strategy that failed so excruciatingly in the last three elections, but the fat dinosaurs of reaction never learn. They still think that America loves it "rich and rotten"—and you can take that more ways than one.

For example, the country had it rich and rotten from 1920 up to 1929—so rich on the top and with such a rotten sub-structure that the whole edifice finally fell into the gory muck of 1929.

But "rich and rotten" is such a prize Republican recipe that the fat boys are stirring it up again. With a mixture concocted half of money and half of the muck they fell in, they still hope to build a staircase back to glory. But even with the golden "ad-mix" the resulting pour wouldn't pass muster with a fifth-class sewage inspector.

As for its setting into anything that would support even the frailest elephant, let alone all the dinosaurian throw-backs of political history, make your own guess on the basis of last week's best anti-climax here.

The Three Tripesters

The new batch that was to speed the Republican way upward and onward to greater greed was chiefly the concoction of the Three Tripesters of Piffle Street—otherwise the Messrs. Congressmen Taber, Bacon and Wigglesworth of the House Appropriations Committee's Republican remnant.

With the aid of the Republican National Committee's mimeograph machines, "research experts" and new press-agent-in-chief, the Three Tripesters mixed up a mess that was manifestly intended to raise them at least five steps above the grave bottom and leave enough left over to sink the Administration's relief and recovery bill 90 feet beneath the sea.

Ah, vagrant hope and faith unsound!

The mess ran to 17 full pages. Practically every telegraph messenger in Washington was mustered into the ranks to get it to the press associations, correspondents, political pundits and park-bench sitters in time for thorough digestion. In fact, so eager were the amateur mixologists to get their batch of unsettable concrete out to the great world that they neglected even to get its approval by their eight G. O. P. colleagues on the committee.

What they really should have done was to call in any odd unemployed working newspaper man to take a squint at it. Probably the least of one of these could have told the fat boys the stuff wouldn't jell, and for exactly the same reason that the WPA told them off a couple hours later.

For the chief ingredient of this squashy mess was a screaming claim that the WPA's relief rolls go up and down solely on the basis of politics and entirely contrary to the level of unemployment from time to time.

Thus the Tripesters alleged with many a citation of figures that the relief rolls went down in 1933, 1935 and 1937 when there were no national or Congressional elections, even though unemployment was increasing at the same time, while they went up in the campaign years of '34 and '36 when business generally was getting better. And this proved, said the Tripesters, that relief should be "given back to the states," where there would be "no politics"—save the mark! Or possibly their real idea was that there shouldn't be any relief at all.

Unhappily for the Tripesters, it took only one page of a WPA statement to knock the 17-pages mud-bomb of the slop-gunners into just so much mush. When an unnamed WPA employe got through doing this piece on his little typewriter there wasn't enough real concrete in the mix to seal up a flea's ear.

A 4,000,000-Man Lie

Here were the only things wrong with the mess.

1. The mixers based their whole case on a WPA table of figures which they said showed WPA employment for the various years, but which really included not only all those on the WPA roles but also all those cared for by all other state and local relief programs, plus federal programs for dependent children, the aged, the unemployable and the blind! And they took this table out of Harry Hopkins' testimony before the Appropriations Committee—which the Three Tripesters presumably heard—in spite of the fact that Hopkins also had submitted at the same time a table really showing WPA employment by itself and completely nullifying the Tripesters' charges.

2. Secondly, they paid no attention to tremendous effect of the droughts of 1934 and 1936 in increasing the WPA relief load part of the tables they erroneously used.

3. And finally, according to WPA, they just plain lied about one important figure in the wrong table, because it still wasn't good enough to support their phony case. Or as the WPA statement put it, "they misquote the table for the year 1933, stating that a decrease of 3,243,000 persons occurred between June and November of that year, whereas the table itself shows an increase of almost 1,000,000 persons between those months."

Well, a 4,000,000-man lie is pretty good, even for the Republican National Committee, which officially sponsored the Three Tripesters' mess of muck.

And with the recipe of "rich and rotten" for the G. O. P. concoctions, the future output can well be guessed at—even if you can't already smell it at this good moment.

Organizing The Unorganized

Inland Boatmen's Union Fights For Workers Up and Down The Pacific Coast

By C. W. DEAL
President, Inland Boatmen's Union of the Pacific

(This is the third in a series of articles describing the growth of unions affiliated with the Committee for Industrial Organization. The next story in this series will appear in an early issue.)

The Inland Boatmen's Union of the Pacific is an organization covering all men employed in unlicensed capacities on all craft plying the waters of bays, sounds and rivers, lakes, or what is commonly called "inland waters," on the Pacific Coast.

It was organized November 20, 1918, in San Francisco, California. Its original charter was granted on April 1, 1919, by the International Seamen's Union of America.

In the beginning, the organization was known as the Ferryboatmen's Union of California and later as the Ferryboatmen's Union of the Pacific. Then, in 1936, the name of Inland Boatmen's Union of the Pacific was adopted as being more descriptive of the scope of the Union.

Beginning in 1931, and up to the present time, the efforts of the Union have been dedicated to organizing the unorganized workers under its jurisdiction.

It has spread from a local organization on San Francisco Bay to a coastwise organization of 3000 members under contracts and agreements. It has established offices and divisions in all of the principal ports on the Pacific Coast.

It has conducted three major strikes on Puget Sound, three major strikes on the Columbia River, two strikes in San Francisco and two in San Pedro, within the last five years. It has won every strike. It has financed all its strikes.

The Inlandboatmen's Union of the Pacific was responsible for the first marine council. It organized the California Marine Council with the engineers and masters, mates and pilots employed on San Francisco Bay. This council operated successfully for a period of three years.

It assisted and encouraged the reorganization of the longshoremen of the Pacific coast in 1933 and 1934, in Seattle, Washington and in San Francisco, California.

It has been a consistent advocate of the industrial form of organization.

It has fought every attempt to tion of the Pacific.

It believes that the purpose of the union is to improve the wages and working conditions of its members.

It believes that final security for the worker can never be attained until all workers are organized into a progressive and wide awake organization.

Its members voted over 10 to 1 in favor of CIO affiliation last summer, and it received its CIO charter September 20, 1937.

The Beginning in San Francisco

For 10 years the Union concentrated its fight against the four big railroad companies that owned and operated practically all the floating equipment on San Francisco Bay. During this period, from 1918 to 1928, it reduced the hours from 63 to 48 per week and increased the wages approximately $35 per month.

Last August a further wage increase was established on railroad floating equipment.

As this is written, the negotiating committee reports agree- the independent ferries in the ment being reached with one of bay that has been tied up since February 2, 1938, through the refusal of the company to increase the wages to the standard and make certain other changes and improvements in the agreement. The committee reports a successful conclusion to this long drawn-out dispute.

In 1927, the organization conducted the longest arbitration proceeding in the history of organized labor in this country. The arbitration was joint with four railroad companies—the Southern Pacific, Santa Fe, Western Pacific and the Northwestern Pacific and was heard by a six-mon board, two neutral members. It lasted 122 days from July to October, 1927; 343 witnesses were presented by the Union under oath and 80 exhibits presented to sustain the contention of the Union. The principal objective was the establishment of the consecutive eight-hour day. The award sustained the union's demands. After many unsuccessful appeals the companies finally accepted the award. Each one of our members concerned collected approximately $300 in back wages and overtime.

Shortly after the 1927 arbitration had been successfully completed, the union began to think in terms of coastwide organization.

Puget Sound

The International Seamen's Union was approached relative to organizing on Puget Sound and agreed that if we would carry the financial burden we could go ahead with our program. This work started in December, 1931.

At that time there was a company union on the tugboats. Like all company unions it had never done anything for the men. The Masters, Mates and Pilots were unorganized, and as the deck officers hired and fired the men, we felt that it was necessary that they be organized at the same time we organized the unlicensed personnel.

The organizing work on Puget Sound was not limited to ferry boats since, from 1918, the union had jurisdiction over all inland craft. Therefore the ferry boats, the tugboats, the Sound steamers and the Sound freighters were organized.

In addition to establishing minimum standards through negotiations, the organization has been directly responsible for the discovery and enforcement of a 1907 law regulating motor vessels operating in the waters of the State of Washington. So far as we know, this is the only case in the country, and certainly the only case on the Pacific coast, where motor vessels are under state regulation of manning and other safety requirements.

Apparently the various legislative bodies seemed to think that an internal combustible engine automatically offers all the safety necessary in the operation of vessels. This strange and unexplainable condition has now been broken down, at least in the state of Washington, and directly through the efforts of the Inlandboatmen's Union the regulation is now in effect. We believe this will lead to Federal legislation, regulating motor vessels in all the waters of the United States.

Thus through the work of the union the towing industry in the Northwest has been virtually revolutionized. In addition to reducing the hours and increasing the pay, a great number of new positions have been created.

It can be stated without exaggeration that the conditions in effect in Puget Sound prior to the entry of the Inlandboatmen's Union of the Pacific into the picture were more deplorable than those in effect on any inland craft in the waters of the United States, not excepting the Gulf of Mexico and the Mississippi. These conditions could very well be summarized as constituting virtual slavery.

In contrast, there is freedom on Puget Sound today and, while further improvements will undoubtedly be made, no one can deny that giant strides on the road of progress have been made between the years 1932 and 1937.

British Columbia

At the present time, the Inlandboatmen's Union of the Pacific is organizing in British Columbia.

Agreements have been established with several companies. The tugs have been completely unionized in Victoria and great progress on the Canadian Pacific Railroad boats and tugs out of Vancouver and other ports has been made. We anticipate that with the aid of the CIO the organizing campaign in British Columbia will come to a successful completion in the very near future.

San Diego

San Diego was organized in 1934. The first "settlement" agreement in San Diego was made only after the members, by an almost unanimous vote, had determined to strike. The monthly income of the unlicensed personnel has moved up from approximately $97 per month to $136.94 per month, and at the same time we obtained two weeks vacation with pay.

The organization is now extending to include water taxes and other small craft in Southern California.

San Pedro

Organization in San Pedro started in the summer of 1935. The minimum wage paid was $75 per month, with unlimited hours per week (the employes in a few companies fared slightly better). The minimum wage in effect now is $150 per month, with the hours limited to 60 per week. A few companies have, by agreement with the union, better conditions than the minimum standards.

The water taxis tell a similar story. These are motor boats that carry passengers for hire, with some freight occasionally. It is a business peculiar to this area, due to the great number of ships constantly at anchor. Minimum wages have been greatly increased and a majority of the water taxi companies, by agreement with the union, pay a wage 5c or more per hours than these minimums. There is still much improvement to be made in this industry; however, substantial progress has been made against great difficulties during the comparative short period of organization.

Substantial pay raises and improvements in conditions, with 100 per cent. organization, have also been established on what is commonly known as the gambling barges lying off Long Beach and the tourist excursion boats at Catalina Island. These include the glass-bottomed boats and are used principally for the benefit of tourists who desire to see the Marine Gardens off Catalina Island. The deckhands on these boats are the highest paid in the world, their wages having been increased by the union to $179 per month.

C. W. Deal has been executive officer of the organization since its founding in 1918. Prior to that time a deckhand on the Southern Pacific ferries, Deal is now president of the union. Philip Bradshaw is the treasurer, while six vice-presidents represent the various divisions of the union.

Summary of Accomplishments

In the foregoing history of the Inlandboatmen's Union of the Pacific, we have attempted to trace the progressive evolutionary change from a comparatively small local union confined primarily to railroad equipment in the port of San Francisco to a coaswtise organization extending from the Mexican border to and including British Columbia.

It must be remembered that the Inlandboatmen's Union of the Pacific inherited nothing. There had been a few half-hearted attempts to organize inland boatmen of certain craft. Invariably, however, these small isolated unions had a brief and somewhat fruitless life.

Who was at fault—and why—we do not know, but no one who was in a position to do so had ever taken seriously the position that inland craft should be organized effectviely.

Unity and cooperation — these have brought about effective organization on the West Coast.

UAW, Chevrolet Reach Agreement On Seniority Lists

Detroit, Mich. — The dispute between the United Automobile Workers and Chevrolet officials over the "preferred lists" of employes at the Flint plant is being ironed out in conferences between the two groups.

Contending that the so-called preferred lists were being used to circumvent the seniority rights of workers in layoffs, UAW officials demanded that joint conferences be held to discuss the matter.

Corporation representatives conceded that the union would be allowed to challenge the right of anyone whom it felt to be unfairly included on the special lists.

In cases of a disagreement arising over who should be on the lists, the dispute is to be returned to Detroit for further conferences and may go to arbitration, according to an arrangement worked out in Detroit with company officials.

To Probe Philco Labor Practices

Philadelphia—The National Labor Relations Board has been asked to investigate charges of unfair labor practices at the Philco Radio and Television Company, the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, CIO, announced here.

The union charged the company with practising discrimination in a lockout and refusal to bargain.

Wages Almost Doubled In Bond Contract

TRENTON, N. J.—The CIO has signed a contract with the Bond's Clothes Store in this city, granting retail employes of the concern wages in some cases close to double the amount they formerly received.

The store was picketed for two days, following which the labor relations executive of chain agreed to negotiate with the union. Previous to the picket line, union requests for bargaining conferences had met with long delays.

Mine Bosses' Thugs Panicky As U. S. Opens Harlan County Case

LONDON, Ky.—The long and difficult process of bringing notorious Harlan County back into the United States moved into a new phase as the government's first criminal prosecution for violation of the Wagner Act opened in the closely-guarded courthouse here.

Sixty-nine persons—mine executives, deputy sheriffs and thugs hired by the companies—are being prosecuted for their violent treatment of organizers and members of the United Mine Workers.

Brien McMahon, assistant U. S. attorney-general, who is handling the case for the federal government, will ask a 12-man jury to find the defendants guilty of violating a statute passed in 1870.

Jail Terms Possible

The law, providing for a maximum sentence of a $5,000 fine and 10 years in jail, declared it illegal for two or more persons to conspire to threaten or intimidate any citizen in the exercise of rights or privileges granted him in the Constitution.

The case grew out of revelations before the Senate Civil Liberties Committee last year. At that time, Harlan County gained nationwide fame as a seat of unparalleled violence. Terror, murders, floggings, kidnapings were shown to be the county bosses' method of combatting the union.

Deputy sheriffs, the LaFollette Committee revealed, were in the pay of the companies.

Immediately following the revelations in Washington, 20 G-men were sent into the county to secure additional evidence. The 20 investigators, together with some 200 other witnesses, will testify for the government in the case.

Output Rises, Jobs Fall WPA Survey Finds

Philadelphia. — Men and machines have been the subject of intensive studies by WPA for the past two years, and an eagerly-awaited summary of findings has recently been released by the WPA National Research Project on Reemployment Opportunities and Recent Changes in Industrial Techniques.

Unemployment continues to increase. Thousands of local unions are faced with dismissals. Manufacturers are trying to slash wages, or to increase hours of work. New machines are installed, displacing workers. Does skill mean anything when you're looking for a job? Can there be enough jobs to go around?

Productivity Rises

Many industries were studied by the National Research Project. The most significant finding is that in the great majority of them, productivity—the amount of goods produced per worker during a certain period of time—has increased considerably since 1929.

In glass, confectionery, underwear, and silk and rayon goods, productivity increased by 10 per cent. each year between 1929 and 1935. With a steadily increasing amount of goods produced per worker, it is easy to see why employment falls off so sharply during a depression period, and rises so sluggishly during a recovery period.

Between 1920 and 1929, production rose by 46 per cent. while employment rose only by 16 per cent. By 1935 production would have had to be almost one and one-half times as great as it actually was in order for the number of people employed to have reached the 1929 level.

Especially interesting are the investigations into the problems faced by displaced workers in various occupations, such as radio workers, railroad employes, weavers and loom-fixers, cigar makers, and machinists.

It is pointed out that until private capital outlays are substantially increased, the technologically displaced worker stands a pitifully little chance of finding a job.

ACW Report On CIO

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.—The 12th convention of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers adopted the following report on the CIO:

The purpose of the Committee for Industrial Organization to which the convention of the Amalgamated in 1936 gave its support, has been fulfilled to a degree surpassing the highest expectations of its founders.

In 1935, when the CIO was formed, the membership of the American Federation of Labor was three million. Today the strength of organized labor exceeds seven million. More than four million men and women have been added to the ranks of organized labor since the inception of the CIO. The membership in American labor unions has been more than doubled in two momentous years.

The organizing campaigns of the CIO have met with an overwhelming response because the position of the CIO was sound. The accomplishments of the CIO constitute the greatest achievement in all labor history.

The CIO has organized new sectors of American industry. The mass-production industries are no longer havens of the open shop.

A Mighty Record

The record of achievement of the CIO is a mighty one. It proves beyond dispute that the decision of the Amalgamated to participate in the effort to organize the unorganized on an industrial basis was wise and constructive.

The CIO has raised labor's gains and labor's dignity to unprecedented heights. It will fight even more valiantly in the future to achieve even greater gains.

The Amalgamated has done its full share in helping to carry on the great organizing campaign of the CIO. The organizers of the Amalgamated, its officers and members all have served in the great drives of the CIO. The Amalgamated has never stinted, either in financial support or in man power in helping to carry on the organizing drive to enroll millions of workers into strong labor unions.

Although the Amalgamated has centered its greatest effort on organizing the textile workers, it has contributed money and men to the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, to the United Automobile Workers, and to unions in numerous other industries.

The Need for Unity

The needs of the labor movement demand unity. However, unity, to be of real service to the labor movement, must be based on the perpetuation of the gains which the CIO has so brilliantly secured.

Your committee, expressing pride and satisfaction in the accomplishments of the CIO, and the magnificent share that the Amalgamated has had in bringing them about, and believing that events have fully demonstrated the wisdom of its position taken in 1936, recommends that this 12th Biennial Convention of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, meeting here in Atlantic City, reaffirm its decision taken then, and instruct its officers to continue their full support of the CIO.

Your committee further recommends that the convention approve the efforts of your officers heretofore taken to bring about unity between the AFL and the CIO and directs that they continue these efforts to the end that unity may be brought about when a satisfactory basis can be found.

Economics A La Bethlehem

WASHINGTON — The minds that control Bethlehem Steel have worked out a new line in corporation economics. It runs like this: the more orders you get, and the more profit you make, the more workers you lay off.

For the first quarter of this year, Bethlehem made $994,908 in profits, enabling the directors to pay the regular $1.75 dividend on its seven per cent. preferred stock and 25c on the five per cent.

Orders on hand at the same period amounted to $99,934,192. This represents an increase of $6,500,000 over the preceding quarter.

11,000 Lay-offs

Bethlehem has many plants throughout the country. In one of them at Sparrows Point, Md., 11,000 workers have been laid off in the past few months, reducing the normal working force from 21,000 to 10,000. The 10,000 that remain are working half time.

Sparrows Point Bethlehem workers have been wondering about this. It would seem that the regular dividend and the increased orders on hand might call for increased employment rather than new lay-offs.

They took their problem to Senator Radcliffe of Maryland last week and asked for the benefit of his thought on it. The Senator, somewhat preoccupied with affairs of state, answered through his secretary that he couldn't understand it either.

The Sparrows Point steel workers have promised to keep on asking until they find an answer.

Shipyard Union Asks Wagner Bill Passage

Camden, N. J.—Workers in the shipbuilding industry, largely sustained by government contracts, this week added their voice to the growing demand for passage of the Wagner-Healey bill aimed at ending labor law violation by contractors for Uncle Sam.

In letters sent to every Congressman and Senator, President John Green of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers, CIO, called attention to a "most disgraceful and indefensible contradiction" in United States Government policy.

Companies Defy Laws

Green referred to the condition "under which millions of dollars of public funds are being paid to private corporations for the performance of government contracts, at the same time that these corporations are wilfully and flagrantly defying the laws of the land—and in particular, the National Labor Relations Act."

"We believe it is high time that this practise was ended, and that the Government itself set an example in requiring obedience to the law.

UAW Pact Covers Tool Workers

Detroit — A new agreement has been reached between the United Automobile Workers and the Tool and Die Manufacturers Association, covering 26 plants and several thousand skilled workers in Detroit.

UAW Locals 155 and 157, units affected, will vote on ratification of the new blanket contract which guarantees no wage cuts, provides for a reduction to a 32-hour week before starting layoffs, and clarifies clauses in the previous contract on seniority and transfers.

Will Void Strike Vote

If ratified, the new contract, replacing one which expired May 1, will void a strike vote taken by the two locals.

The agreement was preceded by prolonged negotiations which were deadlocked until the strike vote was taken. Governor Murphy intervened at the request of the Association, and negotiations were resumed, resulting in conclusion of the new agreement.

The Association represents about 80% of the production of tool and die shops in metropolitan Detroit.

New York—Renewal of contracts with the Northam-Warren Corporation, manufacturers of Cutex and Odorono was announced here by District 50 of the United Mine Workers, CIO.

Use Wall Maps To Organize Ford

Buffalo, N. Y.—The old wall maps covered with colored pins with which sales managers are accustomed to stir up rivalry among their salesmen are being used for stictly union purposes here.

The United Auto Workers, out to prove the union represents the vast majority of Ford workers in this city, has gotten up such a map of Buffalo with a colored pin representing the home of every Ford worker.

Under direction of George Wilson, UAWA representative, a drive is being made among members of other unions and all persons who are not recognized by Ford spies as organizers, to sign up Ford workers living in their own neighborhood.

For activity in making workers leary of being seen talking to known active members of the union, gave birth to the new plan, which promises to be the best method of signing up workers yet devised.

Members of the CIO council have undertaken to carry the union's campaign into every neighborhood in the city, carying out organization on a friendly next-door-neighbor basis that will put a stop to Ford spotters' espionage activities.

SWOC Wins 76% Of NLRB Polls

Voting Shows Favor For CIO Steel Union Is Overwhelming

By HOWARD J. M'CARTNEY

PITTSBURGH.—Out of 77 elections sponsored by the National Labor Relations Board involving the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, the CIO affiliate was the winner in 59—losing only 18.

This remarkable record was disclosed in a survey made recently by the national headquarters of the steel union to follow up the survey made last December.

The victories continue to pile up, and those recent victories include the elections at International Harvester in Chicago, which the SWOC won by 3255 to 1821; Northwestern Barb Wire, Waukegan, Ill., which the SWOC won by 687 to 482; the Simmons Bed Co., San Francisco, which the SWOC won by 263 to 191, and the Wickwire-Spencer Co., Buffalo, which the SWOC won by 412 to 354.

That practically all workers desire representation through bona fide labor unions can be proved by the fact that where SWOC was the only organization on the ballot it lost in only 4 out of 33 elections.

Significantly, in the 18 elections lost by SWOC there was a total of only 3,510 votes involved. Of that number the SWOC received 1,908 as against 2,603—a difference of but 694 votes.

Big Majorities

Victories for the CIO union range as high as 22 to 1, but in mills involving a sizeable number of workers the most impressive victory was at the plants of Pittsburgh Steel Corporation, where 5,297 workers voted for the SWOC and only 645 against.

Among the smaller plants, amazing victories for SWOC resulted. At the Woodward Iron Company, Woodward, Ala., the SWOC won by a vote of 427 to 17—giving SWOC 95% of the votes cast.

At the Pacific Gas Radiator, in Los Angeles, SWOC won by 176 votes for and 16 against—thereby getting 91 percent of the votes. At the Diamond Power Specialty Co., in Detroit, the SWOC received 94 percent of the votes cast.

Cleaned Up Independents

Where the SWOC was pitted against so-called "independent unions" similar overwhelming victories resulted. In a few elections the SWOC competed against AFL organizations. Practically all resulted in SWOC victories.

Meanwhile, back pay totalling upwards of $1,400 for five members of the SWOC was ordered by the Labor Board paid by the United States Sanitary Manufacturing Company.

The men were fired, allegedly for activities in the SWOC, despite the contract the company had signed with the SWOC. Charges were filed with the Labor Board against the company and the Board's stipulation resulted.

The largest meeting in the history of the lodge was held after the settlement was handed down by the Board, at which time the terms and conditions were fully explained to the membership. The five men who were reinstated used some of their back pay checks to pay dues.

Back Pay in Moline

At the same time the SWOC announced that back pay amounting to more than $3,000 for 34 members of Lodge 1449, was won in agreement signed by the Moline Iron Works, Moline, Ill.

In addition, the company signed an exclusive bargaining contract for the 543 men and women in the plant. It establishes the 40-hour week, time and one-half for overtime, double time for Sundays and holidays, strict seniority rights and provides grievance machinery.

Settlement was brought about after the SWOC filed charges with the National Labor Relations Board. A trial examiner was ready to begin hearings when the company asked for a 24-hour delay. During that 24-hour period the company agreed to negotiate a contract and to settle by stipulation any question of unfair labor practice.

Honor Massacre Victims

The workers who lost their lives in the Memorial Day Massacre of 1937, during the strike at Republic Steel, will be honored at a mass meeting to be held in Chicago, Sunday, May 29.

Ten strikers and sympathizers were shot down by Chicago police as they marched peacefully in a demonstration last Memorial Day. The La Follette Civil Liberties Committee laid the responsibility for their deaths to the brutality of the Chicago police.

Philip Murray, chairman of the SWOC, will be the principal speaker. The mass meeting was arranged at a district convention of 48 lodges of the SWOC in the Calumet area, held a short time ago. The meeting will attract nation-wide attention.

TWOC Files Charges Against Carpet Firm

New York — As a further step to force the Bigelow-Sanford Carpet Co. to comply with the Wagner Act and bargaining collectively with its employes, the Textile Workers' Organizing Committee has filed charges with the Labor Board against the company.

Union officials declare that the strike called at the two plants of the company in Amsterdam, N. Y. and Thompsonville, Conn., is 100% effective, both being shut down completely. About 5,500 workers are employed at these plants.

Thousands at Meetings

Protest meetings held at Amsterdam and Thompsonville were attended by some 2,000 workers.

The CIO union charges that the firm violated its contract by a ten per cent. wage reduction and refusing to negotiate with TWOC Locals 1 and 2188, as provided for in an agreement drawn up between the company and the TWOC, Dec. 3, 1937.

The union maintained that the 10% wage cut announced by the company, May 4, was unjustified, as Bigelow-Sanford profits were high. A payment of $80,000 in preferred dividends, equal to eight weeks' pay cut, had just been arranged by the company, the union claims.

Mass picket lines are being placed before the New York City offices of the company and at its warehouses throughout the country, the TWOC has announced.

"Ruin is certain to this industry and its workers if this company is permitted to get away with this wage cut," a TWOC statement declares. "The Bigelow-Sanford carpet workers are defending the interests of the workers of this country."

ACW Hails TWOC

Atlantic City.—Declaring that the organization of the textile industry is of "vital concern, not only to the men and women who work in it, but to labor generally and to clothing and cotton garment workers especially," the convention of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, CIO, went on record endorsing the work of the Textile Workers Organizing Committee.

It urged its officers to lend all support to the TWOC in its campaign to organize the unorganized textile workers of the nation.

Pointing out that the textile industry employs 1,250,000 workers in 32 states, and that therefore its wages and working conditions exert a strong influence throughout industry, the resolution declared that only the principles of the CIO had enabled the workers to make progress in organization.

A National Campaign

This progress has been substantial, the resolution explaind. Two hundred and forty TWOC locals have set up, with over 400,000 members, 250,000 of which are under contract. The rayon industry is 80 per cent organized, carpets and rugs 75 per cent., silk 75 per cent., with many contracts with leading firms in each branch of the industry, including woolens and cotton.

"The campaign must go on," the resolution stated. "Much has been accomplished. More remains to be done. The ACWA and the general labor movement will be enormously strengthened by the complete organization of the textile industry.

"Your committee recommends that the convention fully endorse the program of the TWOC, and instruct its officers to continue their participation in its great work."

League Meets In Vermont

Winooski, Vt. — Formation of Labor's Non-Partisan League in the Green Mountain State climaxed the third of a series of preliminary conferences held by the organization in key spots throughout the state.

Permanent organization machinery was established at the meeting.

Speakers included Gov. Aiken; Pres. Arthur Packard of the Vermont State Farm Bureau; Mayor John Gordon of Barre, and Frank Manning, New England TWOC director.

The Vermont league has the support of leaders in both CIO and AFL unions. It is seeking passage of a state "Wagner Act", establishment of a state department of labor, adequate relief for the jobless and liberalization of the unemployment compensation laws.

AFL Mine Drive Proves Fizzle

BLUEFIELD, W. Va.—Here in the coal fields of West Virginia, where actions speak louder than words, the "mammoth" organizing drive of the AFL's Progressive Mine Workers is proving to be nothing more than a second-rate fizzle.

It was one thing for Joe Ozanic, long-time dual unionist, to explain to the aged brethren of the AFL's executive council how he could lead the miners back into the Federation. The council envisioned a glorious picture of miners flocking into the PMA, chartered the Progressives, and in a blaze of publicity announced their "organization drive."

Got Cold Shoulder

Opening shot in the campaign was a "monster" mass meeting scheduled for Bluefield.

Eight hundred miners packed the hall. They came from United Mine Workers locals as far as 100 miles away.

Only element lacking in the PMA picture were representatives of the dual organization.

"I'm not sure the organizers understood they were to attend," was the only alibi which came to the mind of Tom Cairns, who was made president of the state federation of labor when the AFL created a dummy organization, after the older body had been expelled from the AFL.

Members of the UMW took over the meeting when the PMA stooges failed to make their appearance. The crowd cheered when they warned that the UMW would not allow the AFL to split the workers.

Wages Up In New URW Agreements

Akron, Ohio—Wage increases won in contracts signed by two Chicago locals of the United Rubber Workers, CIO, when added to others secured recently in other parts of the country, show that the union is making progress in spite of the depression, declared Frank Grillo, UAW secretary-treasurer.

Local 120 has signed an agreement with the Rapid Roller Co., granting a union shop, a 10% wage increase, a guaranteed minimum wage of $25 a week, and paid vacations, Grillo said.

At the Atlantic India Rubber Works, Local 121 concluded a contract providing for five per cent. wage increase and paid vacations. An agreement between Local 1 and the Palmer Asbestos Rubber Co., also in Chicago, was renewed for another year.

Nine AFL Union Leaders Indicted For Attack On CIO

CANTON, N. Y.—Nine leaders of the AFL aluminum workers union were indicted here on charges of rioting and injuring property.

The indictments followed an attack on headquarters of the CIO Aluminum Workers of America at Massena, near here. AWA organizers were beaten and told to leave town by the mob, led by the AFL union bosses.

The AWA has charged the AFL union with failing to represent the workers in the Aluminum Co. of America plant at Massena, and has been enrolling the company's employes into the CIO union.

Glass Workers Flock To CIO

Streator, Ill.—Employes of the Owens-Illinois Glass Company are flocking into the Federation of Flat Glass Workers since a charter was issued for the local here.

Organizing crews have been at work daily and in a short time the quota will be reached, according to Roy Bronson, president of Streator Local 61.

Meetings are held every two weeks and more are attending each time.

At the present time 1150 are employes and of this nearly one half are girls.

Furriers Show Strength

Members of the Intl. Fur Workers of America, CIO, gathered for a giant demonstration in New York City's fur district as their strike against wage cuts entered its 15th week. Negotiations between the union and the bosses' association are continuing.

WAGE-HOUR BILL VOTE IS VICTORY FOR LABOR

Mine and Mill Workers Win Poll, 1,185-623

Waterbury, Conn.—Local 251 of the CIO Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers won a big victory in its drive to organize brass workers in this city when it piled up 1185 votes against a company union total of 623, in a Labor Board election held to determine the collective bargaining agency for the workers.

The victory came in the midst of an organizing drive the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers have been conducting in the Brass city for the past few weeks. They had to fight the largest concern in the industry, the American Brass Co., a company union and the AFL, which has been keeping full time official on the spot seeking to divide the workers.

Entire State Organizing

Particularly good progress has been made in Waterbury, Torrington and Ansonia. The AFL has been concentrating in the last city with the result that the workers have flocked into the CIO.

The Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers campaign for the election centered around a program of restoring a wage cut put into effect recently. One-third of the cut has already been rescinded by the company as a result of CIO pressure and the rest is expected to follow as the local grows in power.

Oil Union Convention In Texas

Washington — More than 350 delegates will assemble in Houston, Texas, for the convention of the Oil Workers International Union, to be held the week of June 6. The convention will be preceded by a meeting of the executive council which will start in the same city May 30.

John Brophy, national director of the CIO, will be a featured speaker at the convention, making his address at a mass meeting called in the Houston Auditorium which will be attended by workers and friends of labor from the city and surrounding area.

Campaign Planned

Edwin S. Smith of the National Labor Relations Board will be another speaker at the convention. The keynote address will be given by Harvey C. Fremming, president of the international union.

Adolph Germer, CIO regional director in Michigan and president of the Michigan state Industrial Union Council, will also speak to the convention. Germer, an oil worker by trade, will undertake an organizing tour for the union as soon as the convention is ended.

Wages Up 29% In New Marine Pact

NEW YORK — Wage increases ranging from 15% to 29% were won by the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers, CIO, in an agreement with contractors for the Munson Line shore gangs.

Approximately 70 men will share in the increased pay, union officials predicted.

The contract also provides for the union hiring hall, closed shop and extra pay for overtime work. For the first time the contractor has agreed to pay all traveling time and expenses incurred in traveling to a job.

Workers Choose The CIO In 5-1 Vote

Washington — Piling up a better than five to one vote, 542 workers in the big government building cafeterias and lunch rooms indicated their preference for the CIO as sole collective bargaining agency in a vote conducted this week by the National Labor Relations Board.

The workers are employed by the Welfare Association of Washington, which runs the cafeterias on a "non-profit" basis, which seems in spite of the welfare angle to require low wages and long hours on the part of its employes.

Long Campaign By CIO Near Successful Climax

(See Stories Pages 3 and 5)

WASHINGTON—The year-long effort by the forces of Labor and the New Deal to establish a floor for wages and a ceiling for hours of exploited workers drew near to successful completion this week as the House of Representatives passed the Norton Bill, 314-97.

Backers of the measure sat through one of the longest daily sessions of Congress this year to ward off a host of amendments offered by the bill's enemies, who hoped to cripple it with restrictions and loopholes.

The legislation now goes to the Senate, and later to conference to reconcile differences between the two versions of the bill.

Meanwhile, the relief-recovery bill, already passed by the House, awaits action by the Senate. It is expected that the Senators, who have received vast numbers of letters and wires from unions and the jobless, will speedily give the President's program their anction.

One other item on labor's "must" list received favorable action last week, when the Senate granted the LaFollette committee its request for $60,000 to continue the work of investigating violations of civil liberties.

CIO Offers U. S. Data On Hague

Washington.—Describing Mayor Frank (I am the Law) Hague's anti-constitutional activities in Jersey City as directed chiefly against the unions of the CIO, Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, wrote to U. S. Attorney General Homer S. Cummings offering to place evidence in the possession of the CIO at his disposal for the current Justice Department investigation of Hague's feudal bailiwick.

"The principal violations of civil liberties by the Hague administration in Jersey City have been directed against the CIO and its affiliated organizations," Pressman's letter stated.

"Labor organizers representing these unions and their members have been harassed and persecuted by the Jersey City police, officials and courts. Leaflet distributions are prohibited, meetings banned, and all union activities subjected to hostile surveillance," the letter declared.

Civil Rights Barred

"It has been absolutely impossible to exercise any constitutional and civil rights of freedom of speech, freedom of press, freedom of assembly. Any attempts on the part of the workers to exercise their rights under the Labor Relations Act are met with swift and severe repression," Pressman said.

Cops, Thugs Slug URW Pickets

Akron, Ohio — Fifty men and women are in a local hospital as the result of a wanton police attack on a union picket line at the Goodyear tire plant.

The strike of the United Rubber Workers developed suddenly when workers found the company moving tires out of the plant in preparation for a strike.

The workers were peacefully picketing the plant when police and company guards suddenly attacked with clubs, tear gas, vomit gas and blackjacks.

The company has also imported gunmen and spies from an outside agency and is making provisions to keep scabs in the plant.

The strike was caused by workers unrest over unsettled grievances, wage cuts and seniority violations.

The URW has protested the police and company violence in a wire sent by Vice-President Burns, in which he asked "Must we have a Memorial Day massacre in Akron before workers can secure their rights?"

Green Ousted By UMWA

Washington—William Green was read out of the United Mine Workers, CIO, the union that helped him rise to prominence.

Action was taken this week by the UMWA Executive Board, which accepted Green's resignation.

"With the shameless zeal of a betrayer, he has branded himself the chief antagonist to an effective labor movement in America," the Board declared.

As Relief Crisis Mounts In Nation

NLRB Answers Tory Critics

Smith and Madden Warn Public Against Charges Of Labor-Haters

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

Washington — The National Labor Relations Board, the butt of the most vicious smear campaign conducted against a government agency in recent years, this week carried the war into its enemy's country.

Tory manufacturers, their spokesmen and the press were challenged by two leading members of the board to substantiate their attacks with grounds more solid than were wishful thinking.

Such grounds, the board members predicted, cannot be found.

The NLRB's counter-offensive came from Chairman J. Warren Madden, in a speech delivered over a national radio hook-up; and from Board Member Edwin S. Smith, in an address to the first annual convention of the United Office & Professional Workers, CIO.

Opposition to the Wagner Act, having failed in Congress, was transferred to the courts and still later, was changed to wilful knifing of its administration under the guise of respecting it, Madden charged.

"Absence of Fair Play"

There is a discouraging absence of fair play among these people," the NLRB head declared.

"Those who never once protested against the one-sidedness of the law in the days when the employed could with legal impunity spy upon the union activities of his men, discharge or lock them out for such activities, refuse to bargain with their representatives and compel them either to yield their freedom or strike, are loud in their protestations of one-sidedness when the law begins to accord to their employes protection in their fundamental rights.

"The plain truth is that these people are opposed to labor's having the right to organize and bargain collectively.

Spread Malicious Rumors

"They assign to the man who works a low place in the social scale, and believe that he should take what his employer is willing to give him for his work and not meddle in matters that should be decided by his betters.

"And so deeply do they and their advocates believe that working people must be kept in their places that they are willing, like common scolds, to repeat by word of mouth or in print the most ridiculous and baseless rumors being careful not to attempt to verify them, if those rumors are calculated to discredit this law or its administration."

Reciting the work of the NLRB since its creation under the Wagner Act, Madden charged that criticism of the board has come almost entirely "from editors and publicists who do not read the decisions."

Smith's Speech

Smith, in his speech to the UOPWA, called upon labor union members everywhere to defend the Wagner Act and the labor board from those who would destroy them.

"The next session of Congress will undoubtedly see definite effort to amend the Wagner Act in such a fashion as to pervert its original objectives if not to abolish it outright. Labor must prepare to defend its interests in this situation with the utmost diligence."

Some prominent "die-hard" employers have abided by the act and are now dealing on a friendly basis with unions, Smith pointed out.

On the other hand, he continued, "most employers are so accustomed to reading the condemnations of the board in the daily press and particularly in the organs of employers' associations, that I presume they expect every Board hearing to be opened with a thunder-clap and a smell of brimstone."

Answers Story in Liberty

As an example of the type of propaganda written to destroy the board, Smith referred to an article in Liberty magazine by Sen. H. Styles Bridges, the highly-vocal reactionary from New Hampshire.

"Emotional . . . highly colored . . . utterly unreliable . . . obviously distorted . . . stupid . . . but necessarily injurious" was the way the article was labeled by the NLRB member.

Smith reviewed the board's recent activity in the courts, discussing the Ford case particularly.

The "whole field of labor relations in this country" would be affected by the final disposition of the case, Smith pointed out.

Action in Ford Case

Fearing the possibility that after many months, the Supreme Court might rule against the board on technical, procedual grounds, "we concluded that in the Ford case and in certain other cases of particular importance it was wiser to withdraw the decision and to issue provisional findings of fact to which the employer might file exceptions."

Counsel for the Ford company, "with a keen if not too scrupulous publicity sense," then sought to make the public interpret the move as a gesture of humiliation on the part of the NLRB, he continued.

Warns of Court Threat

Any attempt by the courts, with their typically backward outlook on labor cases, to cripple the work of the board should be "wholeheartedly resisted by all who believe in the orderly process of government," Smith warned.

"If labor gives to the Act its constant and intelligent support in Congress and elsewhere, the future is secure.

"If one contemplates the industrial chaos, the persecution of labor which would follow upon the abrogation of the Act or the crippling of its effectiveness by amendment, the importance of its active defense by labor and by all citizens who can think clearly on those problems is perfectly obvious."

The Story in a Nutshell

Chairman J. Warren Madden of the NLRB, discussion opposition to the board and the Wagner Act:

"Some great employers, employing scores of thousands of workers, flatly refused to recognize any power in the Board to proceed in cases involving them.

"The consequence was that their employes, feeling that they had been given a law but were being cheated of its benefits by the dilatory and obstructive tactics of their employers, and that resort to the Board and the courts would take so long that the delay would nullify any effective action, went on strike instead of tangling themselves in litigation.

"Where upon the opponents of this law said, 'See, the law doesn't work. Here are strikes that it didn't prevent. It ought to be repealed.'"

Hoffman Bomb For NLRB Proves Dud

Washington—One more of those wild stories about the labor board and the CIO proved, on investigation this week, to be nothing more than a fairy tale.

Rep. Clare Hoffman, leading exponent in the House of 18th century industrial relations, had charged that two labor papers had known of labor board decisions 11 days prior to their general release.

The board, after investigation, found that the California edition of the United Auto Worker, UAW publication, had printed the board's decision in the Douglas case, made public April 23, in its April 9 issue.

Postal Regulations

The board found that the California edition, however, had in reality been printed on the same day as the decision. Postal regulations require all editions of the same paper to carry the same date, and although copy was two weeks late arriving in Los Angeles for the UAW publication, it had been forced to retain the April 9 date line.

Similarly a Detroit labor paper, claiming to have the decision in the Bradford Dyeing case in its hands prior to release, erred in doing so. Actually it had only the intermediate report of the trial examiner, made public six months previously.

Detroit Hears 'I Am The Law'

DETROIT—"I am the law—and you can do whatever you want to about it."

This was the Hagueism repeated by WPA Coordinator William Walker, Jr., when a delegation representing AFL and CIO unions and the Detroit Civil Rights Federation protested the fingerprinting of canvassers on the WPA's Housing Survey Project.

Walker admitted that he had no authority to require fingerprints, but would continue to do so. The delegation pointed out that the practice could legally apply only to felons.

Supreme Court Again OK's Board's Rulings

Washington—The National Labor Relations Act plowed on to new victories before the judiciary this week as the U. S. Supreme Court refused to upset NLRB decisions in a trio of important cases.

By refusing to review circuit court decisions which had been favorable to the board, the Supreme Court forced the Remington-Rand Co., the Carlisle Lumber Co. and the Black Diamond Steamship Co. to comply with the NLRB's orders.

The Remington-Rand case gained particular prominence because the company's chief boss, James Rand, Jr., is credited with the invention of the Mohawk Valley Formula for deluxe, streamlined strike breaking.

The high tribunal's hands-off attitude will result in the company's being forced to rehire some 4000 workers, members of the AFL union, who conducted a hard-fought strike in Rand's New York and Connecticut factories some time ago.

Lumber Case Ruling Upheld

It was during this strike that Rand, assisted by a choice collection of Bergoff finks, developed the Mohawk Valley Formula, which has made him the darling of labor-haters up and down the land.

In the Carlisle Lumber case, the labor board had ordered the company to pay $153,000 in back wages to 147 employes, under the jurisdiction of the International Woodworkers of America, CIO, who had been fired for union activity.

In the third case involved, the labor board had ordered the Black Diamond lines to bargain collectively with the Marine Engineers' Beneficial Association, CIO, as representative for licensed engineers, and to reinstate with back pay 35 of the men who went on strike in November, 1936.

The Black Diamond episode was the first in which the board's jurisdiction in maritime labor affairs had been questioned.

Net result of this new NLRB field day before the high court was to further strengthen the labor board's position against attacks from reactionary corporation executives.

Busy

Jane Smith, chairman of Western Union Local 36B, American Communications Assn., who as secretary of the Western Union Organizing Committee, is playing an active part in bringing the union to the wire service employes. A labor board case against the company is due to open soon.

One Willie Overlooked

Cincinnati—A local afternoon paper carried two labor stories on its front page one day last week.

One was about Pres. William Green of the AFL criticizing the CIO for condoning alleged "illegal methods."

The other was about the slugging of a former local AFL official, who had been forced out of his union by racketeers.

News Guild Victor In 7-Week Duluth Strike

Duluth, Minn.—The seven-week strike of the Duluth News-Tribune was settled this week, two days after a vicious police attack upon picket lines established by the Duluth Newspaper Guild, CIO.

The contract met principal Guild demands.

The management agreed to the five-day, 40-hour week, and to the Guild shop, except for the editorial department.

In addition it promised to make no economy dismissals during the next six months, and after that time will order lay-offs only after the Guild has been consulted.

Other Unions Helped

The strike was called to enforce the right of collective bargaining for the paper's workers. Picket lines were augmented by maritime workers and steel company employes, prevented the publication of the paper for almost the duration of the strike.

The Guild, however, allowed the publication of 125 papers a day in order that the management might not lose its franchise from the Associated Press.

NLRB Report Backs Instrument Union

NEW YORK—The Arma Engineering Co., manufacturers of naval engineering instruments, has been ordered by the National Labor Relations Board to stop interfering with the organizing activities of United Instrument Workers Local Industrial Union 238, CIO.

At the same time the trial examiner's report found the company guilty of unfair labor practices in favoring the Independent Instrument Makers and Machinists Council, and ordered its dissolution of the fake union. A contract signed last July with the council was declared void by the NLRB.

Boston—United Bakers Workers, CIO local industrial union 84, has signed a contract with Gorman's Bakery, Inc., of this city.

Great Drive Ahead After Depression, Lewis Tells UOPWA

Washington.—Extension of the organization of the unorganized into social service, insurance and general clerical fields marked the close of the CIO United Office and Professional Workers convention held this week in Washington.

Lewis Merrill, general president since the formation of the CIO international at Philadelphia last year, was re-elected to head the 45,000 workers represented at the second convention. Eugene Turner was re-elected secretary-treasurer.

John L. Lewis, chairman of the CIO, brought greetings to the convention toward the close of the five day session. He assured the 300 delegates present that "the greatest organizing drive in the history of our country" will be seen as soon as the present industrial depression lifts.

Labor's Increasing Strength

Lewis called attention to the role of the CIO in bringing organization to the white collar and professional workers, previously untouched by the American labor movement.

"This is the first time in the history of our country that a serious effort has been made along methodical lines to interest the white collar workers in the advantages of organization," the CIO chairman declared.

"You have made a remarkable record in the brief time that your union has been functioning," Lewis told the delegates. "You have made a record of organization in a field where organization was without precedent. The vigor of your attack on your problems has demonstrated that the United Office and Professional Workers, as a part of the CIO, is here to grow and to stay."

Political Growth

Pointing to the record of the CIO in maintaining and extending its gains in spite of the depression now upon the country, Lewis described the need for political action on the part of American workers to reinforce the gains they are already making on the economic front.

"As we grow in numerical strength, our unions and our movement will grow in political strength, because the exercise of political influence is a natural by-product of the economic strength and influence of great labor organizations in this country," Lewis said.

Backs Labor's League

The UOPWA concluded its convention with the passage of a number of resolutions and the adoption of a program to carry out its task of organizing the unorganized in a jurisdiction covering millions of workers close to both the middle class and the industrial wage earners of the nation.

Among these were a resolution pledging full support to Labor's Non-Partisan League, to the unity of the American worker on industrial principles, passage of President Roosevelt's relief and recovery program, and for support to the railway brotherhoods in their fight against wage cuts.

In addition, the convention called for a policy of economic quarantine against Fascist aggressor nations, urging the President and the Congress to differentiate between aggressors and their democratic victims.

Charity Begins at Home

SAN FRANCISCO—The cart went galloping off before the horse when the management of the Rosenberg rice mills were engaged in collective bargaining with the Intl. Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, CIO.

"The company contributes to charity, and does not feel in a position to increase the scale," was management's answer to union demands for higher wages.

The entire rice industry throughout the state remains tied up while management of the mills refuse to raise wages over 50c an hour or cut wages below 10 a day.

Vote On Wage Bill Is Victory For Labor

Washington — The wage-hour bill, backed by practically every union in the nation, took another hurdle in its stride this week as the House of Representatives passed the measure and sent it to the Senate.

The final vote was 314 to 97, with the opposition coming largely from southern members of the House.

The bill passed by the House provides for minimum wages starting at twenty-five cents an hour and increasing five cents a year for three years. Maximum hours start at forty-four, dropping from that number to forty a week after the second year. The bill, in its present form, allows for no geographical differentials in pay or hours. It would be administered by the Department of Labor.

Plug U. Loop Hole

A last minute attempt to curb the measure by exempting some farm and "seasonal" industries was defeated. Proponents of the bill pointed out that the loophole would have allowed almost every industry, from automobiles to soap, to escape the law.

The bill may meet with some opposition in the Senate, where reactionary Democrats have threatened a filibuster against it. Little time remains in the present Congressional session, since leaders hope for an adjournment early in June.

"American labor has won a decisive victory" in the passage of the bill, Labor's Non-Partisan League commented.

"The vote, which was a complete rout for the opponents of the legislation, crowns a year-long campaign in which the wage-earners of the country, through their economic organization and through Labor's Non-Partisan League, have fought for minimum wage and maximum hour regulation."

The League predicted that while there may be some change in the form of the bill after it had come from conference between the House and the Senate, the League "will continue its insistence upon immediate final passage."

Passage, it continued, "seems assured, on the basis of yesterday's vote, but League members and officers are taking nothing for granted in their determination that Congress shall fix a floor for wages and a roof for hours at this session."

Evidence In Harlan Trial

Mr. and Mrs. A. Musick and their daughter Pauline exhibit the sort of thing union organizers had to put up with in "bloody" Harlan County, Ky. They are showing bullet holes in an apron and dress, to be used as evidence in the trial of mine operators and deputy sheriffs, who face long prison terms for conspiracy to violate the Wagner Act.

Plan Council In Northwest

Seattle, Wash.—Delegates of Washington met here this week to plan organization of a state CIO industrial union council.

Bertel McCarthy, secretary of the Intl. Woodworkers of America, declared: "The tremendous growth of the CIO unions in Washington state has made necessary the establishment of a state labor union council to carry on the necessary trade union functions."

Acceptance of the council recommendations made by McCarthy and Richard Francis, CIO regional director, will bring together the thousands of CIO members in the state.

Heywood Broun

The Press and the NLRB

Members of the CIO will do well not to heed the unsolicited advice which many newspaper publishers are giving the organization on the basis of the primary elections in Pennsylvania. Some have even included Oregon in their argument.

Everybody is familiar with the lesson which the American press would like to read from these episodes. Editors, pretending a great sympathy for trades-unionists, have said, are saying and will continue to say that it all goes to show that Labor should take no part in politics. To this will be added the smug assertion that uion members should be concerned only with wages and working conditions and remain strictly neutral in elections and primaries.

This is bad advice and it rests wholly on the wishful thinking of the newspaper publishers. As a matter of fact every test at the polls has proved the power of Labor. Political action is still a new weapon and it must be used shrewdly, and it is a weapon which can be used to improve working conditions.

It is silly to talk of the CIO as vanquished in any spot where the actual figures show that it holds the balance of power.

Of course, the fundamental strength of trades-unionism lies in the power of its own organization. Nobody is suggesting that workers should ever allow themselves to become wards of the Government. But it would be the greatest folly in the world to desert the political front at the very time that Labor has indicated that it is on the march. The fight has just begun.

Auto Designers Sign Pact With Briggs

DETROIT—The first union contract covering engineers and designers in the auto industry was signed last week by the Briggs Manufacturing Co. and the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians, CIO.

The agreement gave the FAECT organization drive in the automobile industry, plans for which had been drawn up only two weeks ago, a flying start, union leaders declared.

Marcel Scherer, FAECT organizational director, explained that under the contract's terms, the "FAECT is recognized as the bargaining agency for the engineers, draftsmen and technicians in the plant. Its shop stewards are to be duly certified and to receive preferential seniority during their terms of office."

Minimum Pay

Minimum pay provided for in the contract runs as high as $400 a month for body designers; $200 a month for testers; $1.20 and $1.60 an hour for tool and die designers, and $1 an hour for detail men.

The contract ws signed by Detroit Chapter 201 of the Federation.

"This victory is of particular significance at this time, due to the fact that the FAECT has just initiated an organizational campaign in the automotive field, with the backing of the UAW and Chairman John L. Lewis of the CIO," Scherer declared.

"Negotiations are now being started for similar contracts in Packard, Murray Body, Hudson Motor and many independent jobbing plants.

"Simultaneous with the drive in Michigan, is our drive in the East to raise the rates paid in auto, tool, auto accessory and auto instrument plants to the level paid in the Michigan area.

"The rates in the East today range from 25 to 50 per cent lower than those paid for similar work in Michigan."

The FAECT was recently strengthened by the affiliation of the Society of Designing Engineers, an independent union which had existed in Detroit for the last five years.

News Guild To Meet In Toronto

Toronto, Canada—The annual convention of the American Newspaper Guild, CIO, will meet here June 6, with delegates coming from all parts of the United States and Canada.

The last twelve months have brought about great organizational gains for the Guild, its leaders point out. The 1937 convention provided for the enrolling of employes in the advertising and commercial departments of newspapers.

Since that time several thousands of these workers have joined the Guild, and a number of contracts have been signed which include the new departments.

Despite constant opposition from the American Newspaper Publishers Assn., the Guild has signed a large number of agreements, and has won every strike it has undertaken.

The Wage-Hour Bill

Labor can claim full credit for the passage of the wage-hour bill by the House of Representatives; and of this credit the major part belongs to the CIO and Labor's Non-Partisan League.

Wage-hour legislation should have been passed at the last session of Congress. But one of the factors in its defeat was the activity of President William Green and other AFL leaders in lobbying against the only bill that had a chance of passage.

The CIO and Labor's Non-Partisan League, on the other hand, have never wavered in their demand for wage-hour legislation. They took the attitude that the menace of the sweatshop was such in the present depression that wage-hour legislation of some kind must be enacted at once, even if the particular bill that would pass might be inadequate to meet the problem fully.

But Congress failed to act at the last session. The result was that conditions grew worse and worse, hitting AFL as well as CIO union members.

The unions of the CIO renewed the battle this year. They gave their representatives no peace on the issue. And when the rules committee attempted to bury the measure, such a storm of protest arose from their ranks and from Labor's Non-Partisan League that most Congressmen feared to face the next elections without going on record for wage-hour legislation.

Meanwhile the rank and file of the AFL were also stirred and compelled their leaders to drop their sabotage; so that Congress can now have no doubt that all of American labor is united in its demand for action.

The bill reported to the House was by no means all that the CIO and Labor's Non-Partisan League could desire. But they remained consistent in their attitude that even inadequate legislation was better than none, and could be perfected later if the basic principle was once enacted into law.

Prospects of final passage by both Houses of Congress seen good at the time of writing, but the CIO and Labor's Non-Partisan League remain vigilant until final victory is assured.

What Depressions Are Made Of

The Utah Copper Company made profits of $30,000,000 in 1937, which was double the amount it made in 1936.

Yet this same company is now laying off its employes by the hundreds, and contributing its full share to the deepening of the present depression.

It is not adding to the general unemployment because its business has not been profitable. On the contrary, it has been making record profits.

What then is the trouble, not only in the case of this company, but in the cases of hundreds of others that have made huge profits but are now closing down their plants and laying off their employes?

The trouble very evidently is that when business is good, too much money goes to the few who can use it only for making further profits; and too little goes to the workers who produce the wealth, and through them to the multitudes whose necessities keep money in circulation to create ever more demand for the products of industry.

The result is that the accumulated wealth of the few becomes barren; while the many in whose hands this wealth would bear fruit in renewed general prosperity, are driven to unemployment and starvation.

So each period of too great prosperity for the few carries in it the seeds of the next general depression.

The chief force operating to break this vicious circle, or at least to mitigate its effects, is the aggressive type of unionism represented by the CIO.

The victories of the CIO in winning higher wages postponed the coming of the present depression by increasing the purchasing power of the many; its resistance to wage cuts now is a check on the deepening of the depression.

Buildin' Up His Muscle

Looking Ahead By LEN DE CAUX

Saved In The Nick Of Time

WHEN movie hero and villain are in a death grip at the edge of a precipice, the audience gasp and grip their chairs. It always seems at first that the villain is winning and that the hero must soon go hurtling over the cliff.

But if they have been to any movies before, the audience can also find relief from the worst suspense in the reassuring knowledge that the hero will inevitably win in the end.

This movie tradition that the villain must come to grief and virtue must triumph, carries over into the American press. Not only is this true in the comic strips, where it would be a violation of contract for an artist to let his hero be killed, but even in the handling of political news.

If the CIO is cast as the villain, as it now is in most of the business-controlled press, it must always be reported as coming to grief. Its triumphs must be editorially discounted or treated as teasers to make anticipated defeat more overwhelming.

But in its treatment of the recent Oregon primaries, the reactionary press nearly slipped up.

Its hero, Governor Martin, had said that John L. Lewis was the issue, and that Villain Henry Hess was the "CIO candidate." So the press warmed up to the idea that here was "another CIO defeat" in the making.

Hess was mated with the CIO in nearly every headline; and even on the day election returns were coming in, showing Martin ahead at first, New York and other papers were carrying headlines about "CIO Candidate Trailing," "CIO Defeat Seen In Oregon," etc.

But then something happened, and it turned out that the "hero" was pitched over the cliff and the "CIO candidate" won.

With all their traditions at stake, the papers saved themselves only in the nick of time. No CIO villain could triumph. It had to turn out that he wasn't a villain after all.

So suddenly, between editions, all references to Hess being a "CIO candidate" were deleted from the headlines and stories about his victory.

* * *

When a candidate supported by the CIO and all other progressive groups fails of nomination or election, it rates glaring headlines, editorials and cartoons all over the country about "CIO defeat." But when he wins, you will search in vain for references to a "CIO victory."

* * *

Why They Try To Hide

Actually, the Oregon primaries, the Pennsylvania primaries and nearly every other recent election have shown something from which the anti-labor press has been hard put to it to distract attention.

They have shown above all the consistently rising power of the labor vote. Governor Martin's bitter attacks on the CIO and on labor generally were the biggest factor in his defeat, just as the way to the defeat of Seattle's Mayor Dore was paved by his violent attempts to crush the CIO.

In Pennsylvania, even the political scabbery of AFL leaders in fighting the labor and liberal candidates, failed to prevent Tom Kennedy from carrying most of the state and polling the biggest vote ever achieved by a labor candidate without benefit of on old-party machine.

Kennedy's more than half million votes outshone even the notable vote-getting achievements of the American Labor Party in the previous New York elections.

* * *

Employers' Pets

Scabbery takes different forms from time to time, but its essence remains the same. Before the CIO, company unions were used to scab on the AFL unions. But now that the Wagner act is putting company unions out of existence, anti-union employers are discovering a sudden enthusiasm for craft unions, if they can use them to scab on CIO industrial unions.

William Knudsen of General Motors was never known as an advocate of unions of any kind, until the CIO United Automobile Workers organized his plants. But at the recent Chamber of Commerce convention he delivered a speech advocating craft unions as against industrial unionism.

Similarly the Hearst management, in its fight against the American Newspaper Guild, has been calling in AFL craft unions and telling them they should claim jurisdiction over business office and other employes whom they had never even thought of before.

In Chicago, Hearst has recently got as many as a score of such AFL organizations to challenge Guild jurisdiction over previously unorganized newspaper employes who have flocked to the CIO ranks.

* * *

William Green accepts this role of employers' pet with great enthusiasm, it seems. Not only did he scab on labor politically in Pennsylvania, but in the past week alone he has added to his record by making a speech against government spending for relief; by declaring that employers are justified in fighting "sit-down strikes and other illegal and high-handed procedures" on the part of labor; and by writing Sen. Copeland to oppose one of maritime labor's main demands, union hiring halls.

Highway Strike Looms In Pennsy

Harrisburg, Pa. — A strike of CIO State highway workers looms in Indiana County.

Local 20 of the State, County and Municipal Workers voted for the walkout this week, pending refusal of the State Department of Highways to meet the union's demands before the end of the month.

The local charged that Supt. Betts of the county highway department had intimidated union members, fired many workers for union affiliation and he predicted he would smash the CIO union.

Before the State primaries, the union asserts, Betts, with the aid of AFL organizers, sought to establish a "company union." Since the voting, he has discriminated against men who favored Thomas Kennedy for governor.

Reinstatement of dismissed employes, removal of the superintendent and recognition of the SCMWA as the workers' sole bargaining agency is being demanded by Local 20.

LABOR and the LAW

By LEE PRESSMAN,
General Counsel, CIO

Right to Counsel

In addition to sustaining three Labor Board orders, the Supreme Court, last Monday, also handed down a decision protecting civil liberties.

The name of this case is Johnson vs. Zerbst.

The court upheld the constitutional guarantee of the right to counsel in criminal cases. It ruled that a person cannot be tried and convicted of a crime without being given an opportunity to get a lawyer for his defense. In any criminal case the defendant has the right either to ask for a reasonable time to get his lawyer, if he has one, or else ask the judge to appoint a lawyer for him. The decision, enforcing a plain constitutional guarantee, will help protect workers against the arbitrary action of hostile prosecutors and judges.

Attacks Upon NLRB

The attorneys for the Ford Company are now trying to require the members of the Labor Board to tell how they made up their minds in deciding the case against the Ford Company. Without the presentation of any evidence to support their position, the company's attorneys, with unmitigated gall, are attacking the good faith and integrity of the Labor Board by requesting the Board members to say whether they consulted with John L. Lewis, Homer Martin and others, what help they got, and how the staff of the Labor Board worked on the case.

If the attorneys for the Ford Company are permitted to carry out these demands, the results will be disastrous. It would be as if the parties to a lawsuit could require the judge to tell them how he reached his decision.

It would mean that no administrative agency of the United States could ever hand down a decision, because every time it made a decision it would have to explain in detail how it read the record in the case, what memoranda and reports its subordinates prepared, and, in short, describe its entire operations.

Such a procedure is entirely uncalled for, because every decision which the Board or any other administrative agency or any court, makes, must be based upon the record before it and the law under which it is authorized to act.

Court Support Unlikely

It is hardly conceivable that the Supreme Court will permit such wild attacks to be made upon the proceedings and conduct of an administrative agency of the United States. The Ford Company lawyers in their attack upon the Board, are relying upon a decision of the Supreme Court in April, 1936, before the President's court plan was proposed.

The efforts of the Ford attorneys to use this old decision to defend violations of the Labor Act give warning that the Supreme Court still has tremendous power over the political life of this country. In the face of immense popular resentment against its past reactionary decisions, the Supreme Court has given up its open opposition to measures which the people want. The court can use legal technicalities, however, which are not obvious to the layman, as a check upon the administration of laws which it does not like.

Any tendency on the part of the courts to thwart the policies of the American people, as expressed in the legislation which their representatives have enacted, must be vigilantly observed. The final power with respect to legislative and social questions rests with the people. The courts must never be permitted to take that power away from them.

Depression Fails To Halt St. Louis CIO

St. Louis, — The CIO is taking advantage of the business depression to consolidate its forces in this important mid-west industrial center.

The St. Louis Industrial Union Council of the CIO, formed a year ago with a membership of about 13,000, has now grown to the point where it has some 150 affiliated local unions, and a total enrollment of 60,000, according to John Doherty, CIO regional director here.

Largest unit in the council is the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, with 44 lodges and 27,500 members in this area.

Boosted Wages

Although 12,000 of the steel workers are now unemployed, the SWOC has been successful in boosting wages here about 25 per cent., as well as in gaining the 8-hour day, 40-hour week for a large number of employes.

The United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, which has 7500 workers in nine locals, is the second largest unit in the council. Other major units are the clothing and garment workers and the packing house, quarry and warehouse employes.

"Slack times in industry have given the CIO an opportunity to prove its worth, "Doherty pointed out. "The Industrial Union Council has served its unemployed members by speeding up direct relief and WPA certification.

"There has been little loss in membership through unemployment."

FIGHT WPA RULING

New York. — The American Labor Party has gone on record against the WPA ruling budgeting WPA expenditures to $1000 annually for each person.

ST. LOUIS—Half of the CIO membership in St. Louis is unemployed, a committee from the Industrial Union Council told Mayor B. F. Dickman. The unions are seeking enlarged relief appropriations.

CIO'S Unemployment Director Explains Relief Bill Details

By RALPH HETZEL, JR.
CIO Unemployment Director

Washington — Congress is now debating a bill which carries the President's program for relief and recovery.

Last week the House passed the bill by a vote of 329 to 70. This week the bill is in the Senate. It now looks as if it will go to the President for final approval some time in the next two weeks.

The CIO and Labor's Non-Partisan League launched a drive for 3½ million WPA jobs back in February. Labor can take a large share of the credit for the fact that the President's measure was introduced and for its overwhelming approval thus far.

A nationwide campaign by local unions, by international unions and by industrial union councils during the past three months has brought to the attention of Congress the bitter need of our people. The present bill, H. R. 679, is the culmination of this pressure.

The main provisions of the measure are appropriations for the Works Progress Administration and for the Public Works Administration. When the House passed the bill it appropriated $1,250,000,000 for the WPA for seven months beginning July 1. That means that the WPA would be able to provide 2,800,000 jobs per month for that period. The Senate Committee has changed this provision to cover eight months and added $175,000,000 for the additional month.

The Senate provision will give the WPA a little more leeway in spending its money because a seven-months appropriation would last only until the time when Congress next meets. The additional appropriation will better enable the WPA to meet emergency situations when they arise.

The House bill provided the PWA with $965,000,000 for loans and grants on heavy construction projects. The Senate bill cuts $100,000,000 off that appropriation.

How Many Jobs?

Chairman John L. Lewis, in testifying for the recovery program before the House Appropriations Sub-Committee, pointed out that the CIO estimated that approximately 13,700,000 persons were unemployed. He said that in order to take care of these people adequately the Federal government ought to provie something over five million jobs. Labor was very modest in asking for only three and one-half million jobs he told the committee.

Chairman Lewis' analysis of the bill showed that if the money to be appropriated were spent properly it could be made to provide between the PWA and the WPA just about labor's request of three and one-half million jobs.

The present WPA appropriation will give jobs immediately to only 2,800,000 persons. The work of the PWA which is supposed to supplement the WPA, will not, according to Secretary Ickes, get under way for at least 60 days after the appropriation is made.

Therefore two or three months would be left in which only 2,800,000 jobs would be available. The CIO asked that the bill be so drawn as to allow a greater proportion of the WPA funds to be spent immediately to provide three and one-half million jobs until the PWA could get under way and take up the slack. The CIO is now urging provisions in the bill which will allow this to be done.

One way in which the bill is an improvement over last year's provision is that no supervisor or WPA official is allowed to discriminate against any person on the rolls due to membership in a labor organization.

Another section provides that: "No person employed on work projects under the appropriations . . . and in need who refuses a bona-fide offer of private employment under reasonable working conditions which pays as much or more in compensation for the same length of service as such person receives or could receive under such appropriations (WPA) and who is capable of performing such work, shall be retained in employment for the period such private employment would be available."

The CIO interprets that to mean that workers may stay on WPA unless they are offered jobs which give them at least as much income per week as the WPA.

The House version of the bill provides that aliens who have not before the date of its enactment filed declaration of intention to become citizens shall not be given employment or continued in employment on projects. The Senate version is even more severe, providing that the declaration of intention must not have expired.

Unions which have members who have not filed declaration of intention to become citizens should urge them to do so immediately before the bill is passed.

CAPITAL CLOSE-UPS

By MARTIN STRONG

The promise of a wages-and-hours law from this session of Congress is more definite at this last moment of writing than it has been at any time since the idea was first introduced.

The House has passed a bill by an overwhelming majority which surprised everyone. The Senate passed a bill last December which differs in various aspects. But if both chambers cannot get together on a measure on which they can agree, the whole effort must be started from scratch again by the next Congresss which meets in January.

That is the ultimate obstacle, the point toward which the last-ditch enemies are driving.

But since the House of Representatives put its bill through with a more than three-to-one vote a good many of its former enemies are softening. And there are several very important reasons for this melting down of the "irreconcilables."

One of them is the triumphant march to victory made by several friends of the proposal when they sought renomination in the deep South where the opposition was supposed to be the strongest. When Claude Pepper obtained renomination for the Senate in Florida over four opponents, none of them favoring the measure, the termite crew took one good long thought. When Luther Patrick achieved the same victory in the Birmingham, Alabama, district against three opponents on the sole issue of passing a wages and hours law they thought even longer.

6 Southern Votes

And then came the House vote on the proposal with 56 Southern members voting in favor of it. If the handwriting wasn't already chalked up on the wall where even the dumbest enemy could read it, the only specs he needed was a look into the record showing that 18 Southern Senators voted for the Senate's bill last winter.

And now it appears that the big thaw has come.

Today the situation is this: that the best opposition—particularly the Southern opposition—hopes to get a measure which will provide lower wage standards for the South than for other regions.

And while the situation may change before the final test arrives, it stands today as follows:

Southern opponents who were threatening to filibuster against the passage of any law are now agreeing that they will relent—thinking of their own futures—if they can get into a position to get those good old differentials.

Change in Tactics

So they have laid it down on the line that if Southern Senators get a "proper" representation on the conference committee which will be created to get the House and Senate bills together they will make a "gentlemen's agreement" not to filibuster the result.

The threat they are using to get their ends is a Congressional session which would last all through the summer, and then probably not bring any results.

So it can be expected that if this combination threat-and-agreement are good the House bill will be sent to conference with the Senate bill and the result will be a measure which both Houses should probably accept.

Several circumstances indicate that this deal, if it really is a deal, can come out to a definite result. For one thing the chief Southern Senatorial opponents of the bill including the potent Senator Pat Harrison, seem to be reconciled to having some kind of a measure passed. For another, the actual merits of a law seem to have gradually penetrated into some of the opposition brain-pans.

And finally, there is an impression abroad on Capitol Hill that a lot of the nation's low-paid workers have found out how to discover who are their friends and who are their enemies, and that if a law's passage is prevented, even by concealed filibustering tactics, the rank-and-file voters in the obstructionists' districts will learn about it somehow.

If you don't think this means anything, recall that every member of the House is up for reelection this year and also one third of the Senate. And furthermore, recall that of the thirty-odd Senators who must face the voters, twelve are from the South.

The higher education is supposed to be a slow process in which some have to be put out of school because they just can't absorb it. But the "higher education" seems to be taking even with the slow learners, right now.

The United Federal Workers

Young CIO Union Helps Uncle Sam's 800,000 Employes Improve Their Status

(This is the fourth in a series of articles describing the growth of unions affiliated with the Committee for Industrial Organization, and the services they render. The next story in this series will appear in an early issue.)

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON—One of the newest of the CIO affiliates, the United Federal Workers of America has one of the largest fields for organizing in the labor movement of this country—the 800,000 men and women workers in the Federal service. They are employed by the largest single employer in the Nation, they comprise the widest variety of workers, are scattered over the widest area.

The U. S. Government is the largest employer of clerical and custodial workers—largely listed in the "white collar" groups—and it is also the largest employer of many types of industrial workers. The field of the United Federal Workers therefore offers an opportunity for complete industrial organization, taking in almost every occupation and profession known in the U. S.

Its members and potential members range from stenigraphers, accountants, scientists, lawyers, research workers, to steel workers, builders, forestry workers, janitors, lighthouse keepers, hospital employes, agricultural workers. Probably no other union in the labor movement has such a variety of organizational opportunity.

An Untouched Field

This enormous field has been comparatively untouched. Before the advent of the CIO and the chartering of the United Federal Workers, the men and women in the federal service were largely unorganized. Sporadic efforts have been made over the past century to build trade unions in the federal service, but without real progress, except among postal workers, until the UFWA was set up.

As far back as the Civil War, the postal workers tried to organize for the protection of their living and working standards. In the late 80's the letter carriers affiliated with the Knights of Labor. Since that time, a number of craft unions and even general unions were formed, each of which failed to make a real dent in the vast body of unorganized federal workers.

In 1915, a general union was founded, which affiliated to the AFL. After 17 years of minute progress, the union split into two groups, one remaining with the AFL, the other becoming independent. Both have remained small and comparatively impotent.

The net result of close to 80 years of effort is that 50,000 government employes, out of a possible 500,000 (excluding the postal workers) are organized today.

The United Federal Workers did not expect to change this picture overnight. Government workers, because of their feeling of comparative security (which they are learning is an illusion), and because the government has been a constantly expanding employer, do not flock into the union by the scores of thousands.

There has been almost no tradition of organization among them. Previous unions were neither progressive nor active in working for their economic and social betterment. Before the formation of the UFWA under the leadership of the CIO, there was no union that could act as a vital, living force in their daily work and conditions of living.

Very real progress has been made. Starting with a progressive group of 1,200 members of the AFL Federation of Government Employes, tired of constant obstruction and charter-jerking from the top leadership when they tried to do something for government workers, the UFWA has built a going concern, able to take its place with other CIO unions in the new American labor movement.

The UFWA today has close to 14,000 members enrolled in 115 locals, distributed through almost every state in the U. S. It has become a real force in the struggle of federal workers everywhere for the improvement of their living and working standards, in their daily relations with thousands of supervisors, administrators, bureau chiefs, and the like, and on the legislative front, where broad conditions of government employment are set.

This has been done in less than a year's time, in the face of a number of difficulties not ordinarily encountered by labor unions. By its own choice, the UFWA has denied itself the right to strike and to picket.

Government workers have other problems peculiar to their job. The government does not possess a unified labor relations policy. Broad conditions of work are laid down by Congress, but their daily application and the thousand problems that come up are settled by a multitude of sub-employers. Each section or department has its small chieftains whose word has been law in the adjustment of grievances, in the policies followed in day to day relations.

Day By Day Contact

The UFWA has met this problem by an intensive development of its grievance work, both through the national union and through the locals. One of the handicaps of membership in the AFL was the refusal of top leaders to back up necessary grievance work by the locals.

Today this has been changed. The national UFWA functions to support the locals in every issue where national aid is needed. Each local has its own grievance committee that takes care of problems in the minor sub-divisions of the departments and agencies.

President

Jacob Baker, president of the United Federal Workers, CIO, who has been leading the union's campaign to gain better conditions for the thousands of men and women employed by the government.

At the same time the UFWA has developed its legislative work in Congress and its work with the major departments to a high degree.

At the beginning of its career, the UFWA, through President Jacob Baker, secured a statement of policy from President Roosevelt recognizing the desirability and the legitimacy of unions for government workers. This statement was also secured from a number of heads of leading departments and agencies.

On the legislative front, the UFWA has pressed for laws to set decent and uniform wages—the wage structure in government service is chaotic in many spots, with great masses living on wages far below decent minimums set by the government's own experts—for a standard and shorter work week, for vacations and sick leave, which do not apply to many thousands, and for fair standards in hiring and firing.

The Fight for Decent Conditions

Chief among these struggles has been the fight for a federal minimum wage bill, for overtime pay (almost non-existent throughout the entire field), an appeals bill, to provide regular machinery for settlement of grievances, and for a five day week.

The UFWA also pressed hard for President Roosevelt's reorganization bill, stalled this session by a combined attack of all tory elements in the nation.

This is the program of the UFWA. It has been applied, with success, over all the states. The importance of UFWA work in the states is not always realized. Of the 800,000 government workers, little more than 100,000 are in Washington.

In the field, outstanding successes have been made in veterans' hospitals, where a working week as high as 80 hours was once common, in marine hospitals, arsenals, the customs service, and clerical and administrative offices.

Outstanding in Washington is improvement of overtime, adjustment of grievances, and reinstatement of many workers arbitrarily fired.

"Security" a Myth

Federal workers are learning quickly that their supposed security is largely a myth, and they are turning to the UFWA to help them. They know already that their earnings are not better than those of other workers.

They know that their employer gets a large amount of free overtime work out of them, without any apparent intention of paying for it. They know they can lose their jobs—especially if the work is in the new agencies—just as quickly as they can in private employment.

They are learning, through union success in grievance adjustment and in pushing legislation, that the UFWA and the CIO can help them toward a better and more secure way of working and living.

The UFWA has developed other sides of its work with the government employe to supplement grievance adjustment and legislation. Notable here is the union's educational program. Last winter the first Federal Workers School was started, and proved to be a success right away.

Educational Work

More than 350 students registered, attending 26 courses in the two terms the school has been in operation. Courses ranged from union tactics and organization methods to tap-dancing, from civil service regulations to statistics, public speaking, and foreign languages.

The school was run by the students, organized in a council elected from each class. It attracted considerable attention in the newspapers at the time, since it was the first successful workers' school in Washington and the first in the country established by federal employes.

The UFWA has also maintained a national organ, the Federal Organizer, as well as a number of local publications.

The need of the federal worker for the CIO is well established. As white-collar workers, as clerical workers, as administrative workers or professionals, they all need the benefits that industrial organization can bring as much as the worker in private employment.

Under the banner of the CIO, they are realizing this in constantly increasing numbers. The UFWA is expanding. It is a poor week when two or more new locals aren't chartered, either in Washington or somewhere in the field.

An Aid to the Movement

Without the CIO, with its help in money and organizing aid and the tremendous support of its 4,000,000 organized workers, led by Chairman Lewis, the UFWA would not exist.

The CIO will benefit by this help that has been given. In spite of all previous failures, in spite of predictions that the federal employe couldn't be organized, the UFWA is signing them up as full fledged CIO members.

It is bringing them to realize the basic importance of the industrial labor movement, and with that realization, they will become an asset and a support to the industrial workers that have shown them the way.

The Union Of The 800,000

18th CIO Council Formed In Indiana

Washington — Four hundred and thirty-three delegates, representing 300,000 Indiana workers organized in nine CIO international unions and numerous local industrial unions, met here this week to form the Indiana State Industrial Union Council, 18th in a growing list of state CIO delegate bodies.

Unions represented included the Steel Workers' Organizing Com- United Mine Workers with 53, the mittee with 146 delegates, the Auto Workers with 70, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers with 34, the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers with 28, the Hosiery Workers and the Furniture Workers with 13, and the State, County and Municipal with nine.

A Message From Lewis

John Brophy, national director of the CIO, read a message of greetings from Chairman John L. Lewis, and made the keynote speech at the convention. The main emphasis of Brophy's speech was placed on economic and social security in a period of industrial depression.

Pointing to the contradiction of 13,000,000 unemployed in an economy capable of consuming the product of their work and that of millions more, Brophy called for a full use of the bountiful natural and economic resources that have been developed in this country.

"The CIO is not a fair-weather friend of the workers," Brophy declared, describing the role the CIO was playing in the present crisis. "It fights for unemployed as well as employed workers. It has held out against the attempt of tory employers to cut wages which would have added to the distress of the workers."

Briefly noting a portion of the enormous profits made by big business corporations in this country, Brophy demanded that a portion of these dividends sufficient to maintain American citizens in a decent standard of living be returned to the workers who made such profits possible.

A Program For Security

Security for the working population could only come through carrying out the CIO legislative and economic program, Brophy declared. As a minimum step toward this realization he urged the passage of President Roosevelt's relief and recovery program, passage of a bill to force Government contractors to obey the Wagner Labor Relations Act, and the full carrying out of the right of every worker to a job at a living wage.

The convention was also addressed by Governor Townsend of Indiana, who assured the delegates of his support for labor's right to organize in defense of its living standards and in defense of American democracy.

The convention went on record in support of a policy of quarantining Fascist aggressor nations, calling for application of the principles of the O'Connor amendment to the neutrality act, which would use the economic power of the U. S. against lawless nations.

James Robb, CIO regional director in Indiana, was elected president of the newly-formed CIO body, and John Bartee of South Bend, secretary. Eleven vice-presidents were elected, including Walter Truman, Clarence Lyons, Joseph Persily of the Furniture Workers; Jake Gershwin, Don Zinn, William Abel, William Yeger, Thomas Davis, William Young, Walter Frisbie and Fravel Goss.

Senator, Labor Delegates Confer

Birmingham, Ala. — A conference attended by Sen. James A. Simpson and leaders of CIO and AFL unions resulted in marked improvement of the Senator's understanding of labor problems, William Mitch, SWOC southern representative, declared.

Although labor forces in the state had opposed Simpson in recent voting contests, the conference was reported to have cleared away difficulties which had previously existed.

TWOC Wins Three More In South

New York—Three more election victories have been won in Southern textile mills, announces the Textile Workers Organizing Committee.

Polls conducted by the Labor Board covering 2000 workers, in textile plants of the Gaffney Manufacturing Co., Gaffney, S. C.; Puritan Weaving Co., Fayettville, N. C.; and Spray Cotton Mills, Spray, N. C., were won overwhelmingly by TWOC locals.

Added to the long list of victories won in the South in recent weeks, the elections show that "Southern workers want organization," said Emil Rieve, acting TWOC chairman.

Approve of TWOC

"They have recognized in the TWOC an organization capable of leading them in their struggle for better conditions and for full recognition of their right to collective bargaining," he declared.

Green "Resignation" Accepted By UMWA; Hostile Acts Listed

WASHINGTON—The International Executive Board of the United Mine Workers of America, CIO, this week accepted the resignation of President William Green of the American Federation of Labor.

Reciting a long list of Green's disloyal actions, the board ordered that "this account of his perfidy be entered upon the records of the UMW for the information of its future generations."

The miners' executive group took note of the fact that Green's resignation had long since been made public, but declared that Green had been guilty of "apostasy" and that the board's action "should be spread upon the records of the UMW."

Green "betrayed the union to which he owes honors and prestige," the board's resolution declared. "He has given counsel and aid to those whose admitted object was to cripple and destroy our union.

"He has fostered and promoted a union dual to the UMW; as president of the AFL, he has chartered this dual union and he has undertaken to enlist the financial support of other labor unions to harass our members.

"He has appealed to those forces of organized labor for which he assumes to speak to oppose the candidacy of Thomas Kennedy for the governorship of Pennsylvania —a course which could have been prompted only by his malice and by disregard of the welfare of the members even of those unions for which he claims to speak.

"He has encouraged factional opposition to labor candidates; he has recently threatened to ruin politically well-known friends of the labor movement merely because they were supported by unions not subservient to his will.

"He has opposed and denounced the Wagner Labor Relation Act and the board administering the law, notwithstanding the shelter it has afforded for all labor unions, and the protection its administration has given the AFL, solely because it has permitted organization and collective bargaining in the mass production industries.

"He has jeopardized enactment of adequate wage and hour legislation by his repeated dictatorial interferences with its consideration.

"He has undertaken to brand as Communists and as unworthy of public sympathy those American workers who seek to enjoy the privileges of collective bargaining through industrial organization.

"He has been indefensibly silent with respect to anti-labor vigilante activities, the brutal Chicago massacre and the dictatorial and Fascist behavior of Mayor Frank Hague, and by his silence he has given comfort to the enemies of all organized labor.

"In his hatred of industrial organization, he has become the recognized puppet of associations of manufacturers and the essential ally of sweatshop employers and labor-baiting corporations.

"He has ordered his followers to refuse local co-operation with industrial unionists, mustered them out of Labor's Non-Partisan League, banned their association with the American Labor Party, and sacrificed the common interests of all organized labor to gratify his petty spite against the CIO.

Declared War on Workers

"He has declared war upon all workers who seek to organize except upon the inept pattern of craft distribution; he has intrigued with employers and connived with strike breakers to prevent such organization, and now, in a climax of foolish frenzy, he is preaching a boycott of the services and products of these organized workers.

"Himself the son of this great industrial union of mineworkers, William Green has repudiated the principles upon which it has been established and conducted, and with the shameless zeal of a betrayer, he has branded himself the chief antagonist to an effective labor movement in America."

California Vigilantes Condemned

Sacramento, Cal.—A first-rate scandal was brewing in the California capital when a suppressed report by a state official committee came to light, revealing support for the CIO's contention that the law had been flouted in Nevada county's gold mining district.

Vigilantes had raided union headquarters of the Mine, Mill & Smelter Union, CIO, beaten members, and driven scores of strikers and their families from their homes.

The report of the committee, which had been picked by Gov. Merriam, found that "law and order broke down" in Nevada county, and that the CIO workers "were not afforded protection" from the mobs.

Merriam, while pigeon-holing the committee's report, had given wide publicity to a letter from the company-controlled Nevada county sheriff denying the charges.

The governor's investigators reported that at the Murchie mine "deputy sheriffs stood by and did nothing to prevent half a dozen members of the CIO union being so severely beaten that they were hospitalized."

Sheriff Carl Tobiasen had told Merriam that "disturbances in this county were trivial when compared with waterfront outbreaks in San Francisco."

Nevertheless, one of the beaten men is still in the hospital and five others are being tried in Nevada county for "rioting."

$60,000 For LaFollette Committee

Washington.—The LaFollette Committee's civil liberties work will continue.

Labor won this new victory when the Senate voted to appropriate the $60,000 additional funds asked by the committee. CIO unions throughout the country had urged their Congressmen to support the committee's work.

Story of Back-Country Unions Told in "Frontier Film" Movie

The Frontier Films production, "People of the Cumberland" represents something new in the field of the American documentary film.

In it we are introduced to a part of America that to the average American is an unknown area —the badlands of the Cumberland Plateau.

We see for the first time the people of the Tennessee hinterland, descendants of the pioneers, ravaged by poverty and isolation, but proud, essentially noble, animated by the desire to raise themselves.

Highlander Folk School

Into this region of ruined lands and ruined people comes the Highlander Folk School, organized by a handful of progressives and native Tennesseeans who had returned from the universities determined to improve the lot of their people.

The school, despite the opposition and the threats of opposed groups in the large cities, succeeds in organizing the immediate community around it, and brings hope and a sense of unity to a divided people.

With time, the school gradually finds its true task—building up a body of organizers drawn from the farms and textile mills of the neighboring towns. When the great union drives of 1935 and 1936 come, the school is ready. It goes hand in hand with the unions in reclaiming the most precious resource of our country —its men and women.

UMW Man Killed

The efforts of the unions and school are not unresisted. The film recounts the tragic death of the United Mine Workers organizer, Barney Graham, an actual incident that stirred the country several years ago.

"People of the Cumberland" concludes on a note of high humor and resolution embodied in the July 5th, 1937 union celebration of the town of LaFollette, a former open shop town in which a most miserable and oppressive order of life had been the rule—today, happy and properous; organization is the way out for the people of the Cumberland.

Films Tell Real Truth

Frontier Films was organized by a group of forward-looking professional scenarists, directors, dramatists and cameramen in response to the need for producing films that truthfully reflect the life and drama of present-day America.

Frontier Films places itself at the disposal of progressive orgaizations and agencies in all fields —trade unions, educational institutions, social welfare groups, farm organizations, cooperative societies, peace organizations, etc. The Frontier Films technical staff is available for the production of dramatic feature films, documentary and dramatic shorts and newsreels for these groups.

Rentals on "People of Cumberland" are quite inexpensive. The film can be obtained through Garrison Film Distributors, 1600 Broadway, New York City.

Unions Come To Cumberland

Into the Cumberland area of Tennessee, the unions have come to help rescue the people of a run-down area. Upper left shows an organizer addressing workers in front of a lime plant; lower left, poverty-stricken kids of a farmer in the "bad lands"; lower right, two miners pause for a chat in front of their union hall. The pictures are from the movie, "People of the Cumberland," produced by Frontier Films.

Steel Union Active in Southwest

New Lodges Formed in Texas; NLRB Order Aids Ohio Tool Makers

By HOWARD J. McCARTNEY

Pittsburgh — Steel workers in Texas and the Southwest are building a powerful union.

New lodges of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee are being established every day. Steel fabricating firms are quickly renewing their contracts with the steel union, and new companies, seeing the stability brought to the industry by these contracts, are signing agreements with the CIO affiliate.

Progress of the steel union in Texas, as reported by SWOC representatives there, may be measured by the fact that two contracts have been signed with added concessions over the old pacts. General American Transportation Company, Fort Worth, has signed a contract granting the CIO steel union sole bargaining rights, time and one-half for overtime, the 40-hour week, and vacations with pay.

The dock and warehouse employes of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Co. are covered by a contract signed recently. The terms are similar to those of the standard United States Steel agreement — establishing the $5-day and 40-hour week, with a clause giving both the union and company the right to re-open negotiations with a 20-day notification.

In the plant of the Reed Roller Bit Co., employing 1200 persons, a new SWOC lodge has been set up. Application for the charter was submitted by H. A. Rassmussen, SWOC sub-district director.

Important Cincinnati Case

A similar picture is presented in the Cincinnati area, where a momentous decision affecting the steel union was handed down by the National Labor Relations Board. The board ordered the Cincinnati Milling Machine Co. to disband its company union and reinstate the president of the SWOC lodge to his job with back pay totalling upwards of $1200.

He was fired for activities in the SWOC. The company was also ordered to disband its company union.

The decision, by killing the "Employes' Service Committee" — company union — eliminates the chief obstacle to bona fide unionism, thereby cracking the wall of opposition thrown up in Cincinnati by anti-unionists. On the heels of the announcement of the Labor Board's decision, an intense drive has been launched to organize the company's 3000 employes into the SWOC.

Lodges Aid Strike

A committee of representatives from every SWOC lodge in Cincinnati's machine tool industry pledged moral and financial support to the campaign, which is being directed by T. Louis Majors, SWOC district director. Extreme confidence in the SWOC success surrounds the campaign. This confidence is based on past results of the steel union in organizing the major portion of the machine tool industry.

Such companies as Lunkheimer Co., American Tool Co., R. K. LeBlond Co., and Powell Valve Co., have signed CIO agreements. These firms represent the bulk of the world's makers of the machine tools, and employ some 15,000 workers.

Succeeding where the American Federation of Labor failed in bringing strong unions into these leading machine tool firms, the ultimate end of the campaign will be the raising of wages and lowering of hours for the thousands of workers in the industry. A "drive" by the AFL, before the SWOC entered the picture, culminated in miserable failure in the Cincinnati mills.

AFL Ousted in Des Moines

In Des Moines, Iowa, at the Des Moines Steel Co., a closed shop contract for Lodge 2071, was signed. The contract is significant because of the fact that the entire membership had been working under a contract last year made by the AFL Structural Iron Workers.

Last December the membership, tired of AFL tactics, made application for membership in the SWOC. The matter was then presented to the National Labor Relations Board and, following hearings in March, the board certified SWOC as the sole bargaining agent for all employes of the plant.

A new contract was negotiated with the company, in which the company agrees to keep in its employ only those in good standing with the union; and all new employes must join the union within 15 days.

CIO Nips Hershey-AFL Plan

Hershey, Pa. — The Hershey Chocolate Co. with surprising speed, this week "consented" to a proposal urged by the AFL bakery workers for a labor board election at the plant.

The CIO United Chocolate Workers Union, through Regional Director John Edelman, refused to accept the plan, charging that an investigation would prove the AFL union at Hershey to be merely the discarded company union with a new disguise.

CIO leaders see the bakery workers' drive for an early election as a convincing demonstration that the employer is cooperating in the formation of the AFL union. The CIO union is now carrying on an intensive organization drive in Hershey and vicinity, and expects to have signed up a majority of the workers inside of a few weeks.

Chicago Guild Girds For Fight Against Hearst

Chicago — Fighting against ruthless firings on both of William Randolph Hearst's Chicago papers, the Chicago Newspaper Guild is entrenching for a possible strike.

Chicago's Guildsmen are working on a day-and-night schedule of activity to acquaint Chicagoans with "Hearst's private war upon his workers, as well as upon the labor movement in general."

More than 330 workers have been lopped off the Evening American and the Herald and Examiner since last July, Guild officials charge, and the management has been chiselling on its contracts signed last January with the Guild.

Brophy Speaks In Mine Areas

Butte, Mont. — Men employed in both the coal and metal mining industries of the country have always been in the forefront of the labor movement, John Brophy, CIO director, told a mass meeting held by the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers in Butte.

"That is why they have always stood for industrial unions in their own indutries," he said.

At two MMSW meetings held the day before in Salt Lake City, Brophy referred to the huge profits made by the Utah Copper Co., which netted $30,000,000 in 1937, double the amount made in 1936 and now has laid off large numbers of their employes, despite the tremendous gains made last year.

He referred also to the curtailed employment at the American Smelting and Refining Co., which with its subsidiaries, reported an income of $18,285,000 in 1937 as compared with $17,131,000 in 1936.

Asks Support For League

In Butte, Brophy in speaking of labor's political program, asked for CIO support for Labor's Non-Partisan League, and praised the record of Senator Murray and Representative Jerry O'Connell.

He told union representatives in Salt Lake City that Senator Elbert D. Thomas of Utah "is doing wonderful work for the people" and that Utah's representatives in the lower house, Abe Murdock and J. W. Robinson are New Dealers "with an excellent voting record on labor bills."

Recognize Union

ST. LOUIS — The David G. Evans Coffee Co., has recognized the United Coffee, Tea and Spice Workers, Local 197, CIO, as sole bargaining agency for its employes, it was announced by John Doherty, CIO regional director in St. Louis.

Fur Union Victor In Three-Months Strike

New York. — The three-month strike conducted by the International Fur Workers, CIO, ended in a big union victory this week.

Under the contract, which is to run three years, minimum wages were lifted as much as $2 and $6 a week.

The 35-hour week continues. In addition, fur workers are guaranteed continuous work throughout the "season," which has been set at eight months, instead of six as formerly.

CIO Chairman John L. Lewis sent the following wire to Pres. Ben Gold:

"Just heard of your splendid victory. The CIO wishes to extend to you and your members congratulations for your fine work. The settlement in your industry will go a long way in stopping the downward trend of wages."

Fur workers in Russeks Department Store on Fifth Avenue who have been working under very bad conditions with wages 40% below those in union shops, have joined the strike, according to the committee.

The Russek employes worked long hours, were hounded by stool-pigeons, and had to go to the employment bureau each morning to plead for a day's work, the union charges.

Seek Union Recognition

The strikers are asking for union recognition, the right of collective bargaining and better working conditions.

Negotiations for a settlement of the strike are being conducted with the Associated Fur Coat and Trimming Manufacturers, Inc., under the chairmanship of Dr. Paul Abelson, arbitrator for the fur industry.

Irving Potash, secretary of the strike committee, said that some progress had been made during the conferences.

Jersey League Hears Attack On Hague

Trenton, N. J.—Progress of Labor's Non-Partisan League of New Jersey was reviewed Saturday, May 21, in its second convention held and the more than 200 enthusiastic delegates approved plans for active growth in the future.

Advances of the New Jersey LNPL in the five months since its first convention were indicated by the report of Chairman Carl Holderman that 90 unions, both CIO and AFL, are actively affiliated and have paid the per capita dues as well as supporting the policies.

"Dissatisfaction with the policies and tactics of the corrupt politicians of both major parties caused many liberal Democrats and Republicans to look to the League as the only medium for progressive political action," he said.

Addresses by E. L. Oliver, executive vice-president of Labor's Non-Partisan League, and Rep. Jerry J. O'Connell, of Montana, were highlights of the session.

NEW HANDBOOK

WASHINGTON — A "Consumers' Bookshelf," listing titles of publications on every sort of consumer problem, has been prepared by the Consumers Counsel of the AAA and the Consumers' Project of the Dept. of Labor. The booklet may be obtained by sending 15c in cash or money order to the Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C.

Funds For Needy

Helen Sugarman and Gertrude Hines, office workers employed by the Intl. Ladies Garment Workers Union, CIO, display a few of the many checks being distributed to needy union members. The funds, $75,000 in all, were raised by assessing those members working steadily.

Labor Shows Strength In Oregon Voting

Salem, Oreg. — Labor's politicial strength, already proven to be a powerful factor in many states, came into its own in the Oregon Democratic primaries, as Governor Charles H. Martin, die-hard reactionary, was defeated by State Senator Henry Hess.

Running with the support of both CIO and AFL union groups, Hess won the nomination by more than 6000 votes, a sizeable plurality for this state.

"This triumph was possible because Oregon labor and farmers refused to be split at the ballot box," declared Munroe Sweetland, executive secretary of the Oregon Commonwealth Federation.

In addition to contributing to Martin's defeat, the federation succeeded in naming eleven of its fifteen candidates for the State Legislature.

Martin, a retired army general, had declared war upon all labor unions, criticized the National Labor Relations Board and Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, and made known his hostility to the New Deal in general.

UMW Raps Foes Of Labor Board

Washington — The International Executive Board of the United Mine Workers, meeting here this week, expressed "its complete support" for the Wagner Act and the Natl. Labor Relations Board.

The miners' board criticized "reactionary industrialists," "powerful newspapers" and the "decisions of certain Circuit Courts" for hostility to the NLRB.

These attacks on the rights of labor and the American people, the UMW board said, have been "lacking in decency and the simple essentials of fair play."

RUBBER WORKERS HALT ATTACK BY EMPLOYERS

SEE STORY PAGE THREE

CIO Forces Sugar Firm To Obey Wagner Act

Denver, Colo. — Even the most powerful anti-union corporations are learning that labor laws must be obeyed, when the CIO undertakes to see that they are enforced.

Latest to absorb this lesson is the Great Western Sugar Co., which has been forced to publicly repudiate a company-sponsored AFL union by action of District 3 of the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing & Allied Workers, CIO.

Faced with a CIO boycott of its plants, the Great Western Sugar Co. got together with Montana AFL top leaders and set its foremen and straw bosses to organizing the workers in an AFL federal union. In almost no time the AFL got a contract—which had nothing to say about wages or hours or other fundamental working conditions in the plants.

The workers, seeing through this dodge, called in the UCAPAWA, which immediately filed charges of company unionism with the Natl. Labor Relations Board. As a result of these charges, the company has posted a public notice agreeing to stop trying to organize the AFL in its plants and to allow the CIO full freedom to organize.

SHOE UNION STRIKES

Philadelphia—In protest against against announced wage cuts and refusal of the company to sign an agreement, employes of the Keystone Slipper Company, Inc., and the Brooks Shoe Manufacturing Company, Inc., have stopped work. They belong to Local No. 127, United Shoe Workers, CIO.

May Strike New York Mirror

New York—Editorial and business office employes of William Randolph Hearst's New York Daily Mirror voted overwhelmingly for a strike this week.

The ballot, which needs the approval of the representative assembly of the New York Newspaper Guild, followed long stalling on the part of the Hearst management.

Meanwhile the Guild anticipated a favorable result in a national consent election to be held among eligible employes of King Features, Inc., a Hearst service controlling International News Service, International News Photos and the feature service itself.

Labor's Prestige Rises As Wage, Relief Bills Near Passage

By ROBERT DALE

WASHINGTON—Labor's political prestige on Capitol Hill was never greater than right now as the 75th Congress draws to the end of its third and final session.

The political influence of the millions of labor-minded voters was apparent behind Congressional action on most of the legislation passed on at this session, particularly as election day drew nearer.

Outstanding among the gains for labor was faborable action by both Houses of Congress on the wages and hours bill. The bills enacted by Senate and House differed widely, but differences are now being adjudged in conference committee.

Prospects are that final action, voting on the conference report, will come within the next two or three weeks since adjournment is planned for mid June.

Sure to Pass

Administration leaders on the Hill have given definite assurances to President Roosevelt and to labor that this session will not adjourn without passing wages and hours legislation.

Next to wages and hours, the other big item backed by labor is the relief and recovery bill which Administration leaders are steering through Senate shoals with every indication of final victory without substantial change. The bill appropriates $2,816,905,000 to provide approximately 3,500,000 jobs for the seven months of the fiscal year that begins July 1.

It was labor's persistent drive that paved the way for passage of both these major items.

Labor Served Nation

These two items are the only really constructive job-creating proposals considered by Congress this session. Thus, labor has once more served the entire nation and recovery from the depression by taking the initiative in insisting on enactment of these measures.

Unions affiliated with Labor's Non-Partisan League, particularly those in the mass industries, have been the decisive factors in obtaining Congressional action on these proposals. Millions of letters, telegrams and postals descended on Congress from union members. The delegations marshaled by Labor's Non-Partisan League on behalf of wages and hours legislation caused many wavering Congressmen to switch to the affirmative side.

Chicago Police Nab Carey

Chicago—James B. Carey, president of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, CIO, was arrested here as he distributed strike leaflets at the swanky Edgewater Beach Hotel.

Together with six other members of the union arrested at the same time, Carey was charged with disorderly conduct and released on $100 bond.

The UERMW members were handing out letters to distributors of Philco radio products, meeting at the hotel for a sales convention. The letter described the lockout called by Philco May 1.

Whole Families Fight Wage Cuts

The strike at the Bigelow-Sanford Carpet Company's plants at Thompsonville, Conn., and Amsterdam, N. Y., is proving to be a regular community affair. Fighting against threatened 10 per cent. wage cuts, whole families are turning out on the picket line. Picture at left shows two pretty members of the younger generation who think that 10 per cent. less food is hardly satisfactory. At right, strikers patrol entrance to the Thompsonville factory, where production has been completely halted. (Pictures Courtesy Bridgeport, Conn., Herald)

NLRB Wins Again As Supreme Court Ends Session

Washington.—The nine members of the U. S. Supreme Court this week packed their bags for the summer vacation while the forces of labor and the New Deal looked back over their most favorable court session in recent years.

The National Labor Relations Board, in particular, found reason for glee in its court record during the winter and spring, for in its final meeting the high tribunal had added one more to the NLRB's triumphant march.

By allowing the labor board to withdraw its decision in the Republic Steel case, the justices wrote "finis" to another reactionary attempt to toss monkey-wrenches into the board's operating machinery.

The decision will permit the labor board to take additional steps designed to make certain once and for all that its epoch-making Little Steel ruling is technically perfect before it is submitted to the courts.

With the high court's decision the hopes of counsel for Ford and other anti-labor corporations that the NLRB's powers, delegated to it by the Wagner Act, might be curtailed through legal hair-splitting.

In the past few months almost every aspect of the board's activity has been brought to the attention of the court, and in every case the board has been upheld.

Major Tests

Important NLRB cases heard this session include:

1. Pacific and Pennsylvania Greyhound Lines, in which it upheld board's right to order disestablishment of a company union, and its right to decide that such a union remains a company union even when the employer goes through the motions of withdrawing support.

2. Santa Cruz Packing Co., supporting the board's contention that the company, getting its materials from one state and sending only 25 per cent. of its products across state lines, is engaged in interstate commerce and subject to the Wagner Act.

3. Mackay Radio, upholding the NLRB ruling that strikers remain employes of a company, and that unfair labor practices committed during or after a strike are nevertheless violations of the law.

In addition, the Supreme Court issued refusals to consider four other important cases in which the board's practices were questioned.

So - - - Mooney Must Wait

Washington — Tom Mooney, 22 years in California prisons on framed charges, will have to wait another four or five months because the United States Supreme Court can't get around to reading the testimony in his case.

The Supreme Court this week put off decision until the fall term because the transcript was presented in typewritten form, which, it said, would require "too long" to read in the present term.

So Tom Mooney will have to sit in San Quentin until the Supreme Court can find time during a long summer vacation to read the testimony proving one of the most monstrous frame-ups in American history.

CIO Wins Three-Year Fight

Lancaster, Pa. — A three-year-old struggle with the Lancaster Iron Works ended in a complete union victory when the Labor Board ordere the firm to cease supporting a company union and to bargain collectively with the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

Reinstatement of 38 men with back pay, was also included in the Board's decision.

Detroit, Mich. — United Cigar Workers Local Industrial Union 24, has been certified by the Labor Board as sole bargaining agent for employes of the Bernard Schwartz Cigar Corp. following an election won 168 to 145 by the CIO union.

Kennedy Vote In Pennsylvania

This map of Pennsylvania, prepared by Labor's Non-Partisan League, shows how each county voted in the recent primaries. The shaded counties, 34 in all, were carried by Sec.-Treas. Thomas Kennedy of the United Mine Workers, while the one county won by Charles J. Margiotti is shown with diagonal lines. The Kennedy counties include two-thirds of the State, covering nearly all farm, steel, coal and suburban areas.

UMW District To War On Wage Cuts

Boston — A warning that the United Mine Workers, CIO, will permit no wage-slashing in the New England gas and by-products industry, was issued here by Michael Widman, Jr., CIO regional director and representative of District 50 of the UMW.

Widman announced a meeting of District 50 local representatives in this area will be held in Boston June 19, to organize a campaign against pay cuts.

"We expect the full support of the consuming public in our drive against wage cuts," Widman asserted.

"The public, I am sure, knows full well that wage cuts will not result in lower rates. The gas, light and power companies alone will benefit from this, through increased dividends and profits."

NEWSIES STRIKE

Erie, Pa.—Two hundred newsboys employed by two local newspapers went out on strike after the papers' managements had ordered a cut in the commission on each sale.

Shields On Spot; Took Bribe, Is Charge

Johnstown, Pa.—Mayor Daniel J. Shields of Johnstown, ex-bootlegger, ex-convict and ex-darling of strikebusters everywhere, faces another possible term in the big house.

The blustering hireling of the steel interests, who had draped himself in the togo of an embattled citizen seeking to preserve "law and order" during the Bethlehem Steel walkout, was handed a warrant charging him with bribery, extortion and malfeasance in office.

Together with City Councilman Fulton Connor, Shields posted bonds and awaited hearing in court.

The warrant concerned the mayor's acceptance of $36,449.50 from the Johnstown Citizen's Committee.

Paid Off Debts

Evidence given the LaFollette committee in recent hearings at Washington disclosed that almost all the Citizen's Committee's funds had come from a local high official of the Bethlehem Steel Co., to whom Shields or one of his cronies made frequent trips to receive the cash.

While the money was supposed to be used for the payment of deputy sheriffs and additional police, the amount received was far larger than needed for that purpose alone. Subsequently, it was pointed out that Shields and his wife had paid off longstanding debts, and many believe that actually the steel concern was "taking care" of the mayor.

The warrant on which the mayor was arrested, cited five specific instances when he "knowingly, unlawfully, fraudulently, and extoriously did extort, receive and take under color of his said office certain fees and awards . . . not being allowed by any act of assembly of this commonwealth."

Labor Gaining Strength

That times have changed in Johnstown is readily acknowledged by observers here.

Public opinion, part of which was raised to near hysteria against the steel strikers by adroit publicity, swung to the CIO as one after another of the company's tactics was bared. The editor of the Johnstown Tribune, which had been critical of the union, has been equally vociferous against months in his charges against Shields, the Citizen's Committee and the company.

Depression Is Worst In U. S., Says ILO

Geneva, Switzerland—The present industrial depression is felt most severely in the United States according to a study prepared by Harold B. Butler, director of the International Labor Office in Geneva.

The study was presented to the ILO Conference now going on in Switzerland, which A. D. Lewis of the United Mine Workers is attending as an American delegate.

According to Butler's report, the index of production of investment goods in the U. S. dropped from 104.1 in August, 1937, to 49.7 in December—a much more rapid fall than in any other country, where production levels tended to remain stable in the last few months of 1937.

The Menace of War

Director Butler also drew attention in his report to the wars and threats of wars now sweeping Europe and the Far East, with the inevitable lowering of earning and living standards that war brings to the workers.

Butte Miners March In June 13 Parade; Smethurst to Speak

Butte, Mont. — Some 8000 union men will march through the streets of this city on June 13 to celebrate the fifty-seventh anniversary of the formation of the Butte City Miners' Union.

The Butte union, forerunner of the Western Federation of Miners, was one of the most militant unions in the nation during the last few years of the nineteenth century.

At the present time, the union now affiliated with the CIO through the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, has regained the strength it commanded in its most prosperous years.

Southurst to Speak

Walter Smethurst, assistant to the chairman of the CIO and a one-time Montana state legislator, will be a featured speaker at the celebration.

It was in June, 1878, that a group of miners in Butte—then one of the West's most colorful mining camps—met to form their first labor organization.

"A sense of self-preservation forced them to take the step which would afford them some protection from a bunch of unscrupulous employers who had consistently cut wages from a high of $10 to $12 a day until several employers were paying $3 for a 12-hour day," Sylvester Graham, president of the Butte union at the present time, points out.

The union grew in strength, and later, with its treasury greatly increased, sent organizers into a few of the other Montana camps.

Confab in 1893

With other unions springing up in various localities, the Butte organization, in 1893, called a conference of workers' representatives and helped established the Western Federation of Miners.

"Some of the worst acts of brigandage ever perpetrated against any group of citizens in a so-called free country were inflicted upon the officials in collusion with native and imported thugs," Graham said.

Nevertheless, the federation left a lasting imprint on the west and provided a base upon which the current organizing campaign of the CIO is founded.

To Speak

Walter Smethurst, executive assistant to Chairman Lewis of the CIO, who will address Butte, Mont., miners on June 13.

THREATEN STRIKE

New York—Workers in New York lumber yards, members of the International Woodworkers of America, CIO, planned a citywide walkout unless the employers' association agreed to renew its contract.

PROTEST THUGGERY

Detroit—The Civil Rights Federation has appealed to the LaFollette civil liberties committee to investigate police brutality against Detroit strikers.

CIO Favors Walsh-Healey Amendment

Washington — Urging Senate passage of the bill amending the Walsh-Healey Act, John L. Lewis, CIO chairman, wrote this week to Senator Robert F. Wagner of New York describing the measure as vital to the interests of workers and calling for its enactment during the present session of Congress.

The bill, which has received the support of all CIO affiliates, would require government contractors to obey the Natl. Labor Relations Act on penalty of cancellation of their contracts with the U. S.

"I do not know of any single measure which will contribute more to the establishment of collective bargaining and stable industrial relations in this country than this bill with its provisions for the enforcement of the Natl. Labor Relations Act," the CIO Chairman said.

The bill is at present before the Senate calendar, and all CIO members are urged to write to majority leader Alben Barkley of the Senate urging that it be brought up for immediate consideration and passage.

CIO members are also urged to write to Chairman O'Connor of the House Rules Committee demanding the bill be granted a rule for House consideration, in addition to writing to their Congressmen and Senators in support of the measure.

Thousands Honor Victims Of Girdler

Chicago.—Close to 25,000 workers paid tribute to the 1937 Memorial Day Massacre victims of Tom Girdler's thugs and their allies in the Chicago police department.

In a colorful and dramatic ceremony, the workers massed before Republic Steel's Chicago plant to "honor the dead and protect the living."

They placed scores of wreaths on the graves of the 10 strikers who had been murdered in the most vicious anti-labor attack in recent years. Upon the spot where just a year ago workers had been shot in the back—"attacking the police," according to Chicago newspapers—they tossed hundreds of red roses.

Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, advised the throng, "You and I must see that Tom Girdler signs a contract."

The SWOC leader began his speech by pointing dramatically towards the Republic mill.

"Close by is a great plant," he said. "I can see it from here. That is why we are holding this meeting.

"One year ago today there was a meeting on this field. Ten people who participated in this meeting were murdered, and we meet here to pay tribute to their valor, to commemorate their names and as that sign says, 'to honor the dead and protect the living.'"

Previously Nicholas Fontecchio, SWOC district director, had pointed out that the day was being dedicated to "those who gave their lives for industrial democracy."

"But, more than that," he continued, "we protest against the tyranny of the barbarian employers of labor and that the lives of our fellow workers have not been lost in vain and the steel workers union together with all labor will march arm in arm in an organized unit for industrial freedom."

Fur Workers Hail Strike Victory

NEW YORK—Terms of the agreement which ended the 15-week lockout and strike of 15,000 New York fur workers were ratified unanimously by the membership of the Fur Workers International Union at two huge mass meetings held at the Royal Windsor and the Hippodrome this week.

Hailed as the outstanding victory in the history of the union, the contract was signed between the Furriers' Joint Council for the Union and the Associated Fur Coat & Trimming Manufacturers, Inc., representing some 60 shops.

Wage increases which will add $1,500,000 to the pay of the workers for the remainder of 1938 were won by the pact, as well as equal division of work and a guarantee of eight continuous months of employment during the season from May 1 to January 1.

Gold Lauds Union

The trial period for obtaining a job is to be reduced from four to two weeks, and a special bureau of employment is to be set up for elderly persons.

"For 25 years the furriers fought for job security and equal division of work," Ben Gold, president of the union, said.

"Now their dreams have come true. Thanks to the courage and militancy of the furriers and thanks to the support of the CIO and the labor movement, the union has been able to blaze a path for better conditions and higher wages which will be an inspiration to American labor."

All provisions in the old agreement which are not changed by the new contract are to be retained. The pact is effective until February 15, 1941.

Many Congratulations

Telegrams congratulating the furriers on their victory poured in from other unions. A wire from Michael Quill, president of the Transport Workers Union, praised the IFWU for the "progressive leadership which has made your achievements possible.

Allen S. Haywood, CIO regional director said: "The agreement is a great step forward for the fur workers, both in job security and in improved working conditions and wages. Your officers and members are to be congratulated on the solidarity, loyalty and devotion displayed in this struggle.

"The CIO is proud of their victory. This will do a great deal to improve workers' standards throughout the Nation."

CIO Wins Armstrong Strike

Pittsburgh—The bosses' wage cut campaign has been stopped again, this time by the CIO workers of the Armstrong Cork Company in this city, who were forced out on strike against a threatened cut a short time ago.

Under terms of the strike settlement, the 500 workers involved will return to their jobs with an improved contract and with wage cuts definitely ruled out. A 10 and 20-day clause for reopening the contract is included, similar to that in the big steel contracts previously renewed.

Consumers Back Rug Strikers

New York.—In support of the strike of 6000 Bigelow-Sanford carpet weavers called by the Textile Workers Organizing Committee, CIO, the League of Women Shoppers intends to use the consumer power of its 17 member groups throughout the country to aid the strikers.

Broke Agreement

The League declared that the firm had not lived up to the spirit of genuine collective bargaining when it arbitrarily announced a 10 per cent. wage cut in violation of an agreement with the TWOC and refused to negotiate the matter.

Carpet weavers employed at the Bigelow-Sanford plants in Amsterdam, N. Y. and Thompsonville, Conn., struck May 11, following the firm's announcement of a 10 per cent pay cut.

The union has filed a complaint against the company with the National Labor Relations Board, charging unfair labor practices.

Rubber Workers Foil Attempt at Union-Busting

By ROBERT L. CRUDEN

AKRON—The shadow of Tom Girdler, Republic Steel chieftain and Goodyear Tire director, has been hovering over Akron.

After the "Little Steel" strike last summer the rubber companies began getting tough. They began stalling on grievances. They chiseled on wages. They laid off men out of turn. The foremen in the plants resumed the old attitude, "If you don't like it, quit."

Union members got sore, came down to the local union halls wanting action—quick. Union officials listened, considered. Conditions had changed, they pointed out: business was going down, the city and state governments were itching for a chance to strike at labor, employers were deliberately provoking trouble to draw the unions out into battle with the intention of destroying them.

The workers pondered, grumbled, but agreed. "You gotta keep cool, boys. You gotta keep cool."

But last November Goodyear put the heat on too strong on a layoff. The men sat down, but evacuated the plant even as Gov. Davey was hysterically summoning the National Guard. The company signed a memorandum on layoffs and transfers. The union accepted it, returned to work. The men did not know that the folowing day the company sent a letter to Regional Director Miller of the National Labor Relations Board limiting the agreement to Dec. 31, 1937—making it cover eight working days.

Then, out of a clear sky, it seemed, the Goodrich Co., served an ultimatum on the union—take a 17½ per cent. wage cut or we move 5000 jobs out of Akron.

When the time for voting came, Goodrich workers swept out the wage-cut proposition 10 to 1. The company had to sign a contract.

All But Goodyear

The rubber workers perked up. Firestone had signed; U. S. Rubber had signed; Goodrich had signed. What was the matter with Goodyear?

The rumor ran through the town: Goodyear strikes tonight.

A union negotiating committee went into session with the management on long standing grievances. As usual, the company said No.

All day long the company moved equipment from its offices. Tear gas, riot guns, sub-machine guns made their appearance at the gates. All police leaves were cancelled. Reporters from out of town began calling in about the strike—the strike that hadn't been called and so far as the union was concerned, wasn't even planned.

All that day in the plant foremen clashed with union men. The "red apples," non-union men, taunted the union men. In the union hall the feeling ran white hot—"Shut her down."

The executive board met with the union committeemen, reported the company had again refused to settle the grievances. As the meeting was in progress a worker ran in, reported the company was moving out more office equipment, ammunition was going in, a fleet of trailers was moving out thousands of tires.

"Shut her down!" someone shouted. "If we're gonna do something, let's do it now before they can whip the pants off us," cried another.

Within ten minutes pickets were patrolling the gates.

At plant 3 a long fleet of loaded trucks drove up to the gate, paused while police commanded the pickets to disperse.

"I fought in France for democracy. I ain't givin' up my rights," growled a tire builder.

The police swung the gates open, the trucks roared out. Pickets flung themselves against the bumpers and fenders, fell back as the trucks gathered speed and rolled down the highway.

Hollywood On Parade

The American Newspaper Guild's strike at the Hollywood, Cal., Citizen-News, is attracting some of the nation's fanciest picket lines, as movie stars, already organized into a strong union of their own, aid their CIO brothers. Shown in picture is Lionel Stander, movie comedian, who has taken a leading part in helping the strikers.

Unions and Wage Cuts

There are those who seem to feel that labor can be effective in its organized power only during prosperous times. Some leaders are inclined to take cover the moment clouds show in the sky. I have even heard certain so-called unionists weep about the plight of the poor employer during a depression.

I am quite ready to agree that good negotiators ought to be men with a practical knowledge of business conditions. There is a saying that you can't get blood out of a turnip. My own feeling is that possibly this depends upon the amount of intelligent pressure which can be applied.

But in any case it is true that one of the most useful functions which a union can perform is the fight against wage cuts. In one comparatively small field the utility of militant organization has been proved. During the hard times of 1929 and '30, '31 and '32, newspaper men and women all over the country had to endure slashes which went as deep as the curtailment of one-third of pay which was already low.

It is not to be denied that in general newspaper revenues are slackening at the moment, but up to now organization has been able to maintain wage scales at previous levels. Once cuts are taken the dikes are broken and bad times are worsened. If employers only knew it they might realize that they are helped by the stand of workers against reductions. There can be no prosperity without purchasing power.

If economies have to be accomplished it isn't a bad rule to compel the boss to be the first fellow and not the last one to tighten his belt.

The Dead Still Picket

"Ten dead men will picket here forever," said a banner carried by demonstrators before the South Chicago plant of Republic Steel on the anniversary of the 1937 Memorial Day massacre.

Living pickets are human beings of flesh and blood. They may be beaten down with clubs or pierced with bullets. Ambulances and police wagons may carry away their bodies. Brute force may triumph for a day over the living. But it has no power over the dead.

Just as the soul of John Brown went marching on, until slavery was abolished, so the protest of the picket line cannot be destroyed by violence.

Chicago police drove the picketing steel workers from the Republic Steel plant in one of the most fiendish massacres of modern times. But for every man they killed, ten thousand have arisen who are sworn to keep the soul of the 1937 picket line marching on, until its purpose has been achieved.

Republic Steel is more effectively picketed today by the determination of hundreds of thousands of union steel workers than ever before the massacre.

The memory of the ten dead men will continue this picket line until collective bargaining is accepted by every steel company in the land—and until the political hirelings who order working people murdered are removed from every public office.

Pictures That Call For Action

Such pictures as appear in this issue of THE CIO NEWS from Akron and Detroit are usually captioned "strike violence" or "rioting strikers" in the anti-labor press—to create an impression that strikers are violent and lawless people. Yet the facts behind such pictures tell a very different story.

In Akron the rubber workers were peacefully picketing the Goodyear plant, as they have every legal right to do, when they were suddenly attacked by a large force of police and company guards with clubs, tear gas, vomit gas and blackjacks. Scores of the workers were sent to the hospital in a serious condition.

In Detroit, peaceful pickets outside the American Brass Company were similarly subjected to an unprovoked attack.

The Akron attack was perpetrated but a day or two before the anniversary of the South Chicago Republic Steel massacre. Perhaps it is no coincidence that Tom Girdler, labor-hating president of Republic Steel, is also a director of the Goodyear Company.

These pictures are but a sample of similar ones, from other cities as well, which have appeared in the press in recent days.

They indicate that labor, despite all its recent organizational gains, has much work yet to do. Even when they have strong unions, working people may still be victimized by company thugs and uniformed killers acting at the behest of anti-union employers.

These assaults continue, because labor has not yet mobilized its full political power to match its union strength.

In both Akron and Detroit, anti-labor mayors hold office, and Ohio's anti-labor governor, Martin Davey, was holding the National Guard ready to back up Mayor Schroy's police violence.

In the last city elections at both Akron and Detroit, the labor vote was greater than ever before in their history. But it was not yet sufficiently well organized, nor was labor's alliance with all other progressive elements sufficiently advanced, to prevent the election of the reactionary candidates.

The bitter lessons of today's anti-strike violence will bear fruit in stronger ward and precinct organization in both cities, in preparation for a progressive sweep at the next elections.

As for Governor Davey, notorious for his use of troops to break last year's steel strike, labor and progressive voters are ready to settle accounts with him in this year's elections.

More political action for greater political power is the chief lesson that labor will learn from such events as are pictured in this issue.

Looking Ahead By LEN DE CAUX

On "Natural Economic Forces"

NEARLY every forward step in human progress has been made by devising means to control natural forces.

Yet at every stage in mankind's history, there have been moss-back reactionaries and people with vested interests who have demanded that nature be left to take its course.

If their advice had been followed, man would still live in constant terror of the elements. Levees would not be built to check floods. Plagues would not be stopped by the "regimentation" of inoculation and sanitary regulations. Distribution would not be controlled to prevent famines. Rugged individualism would be carried to its logical conclusion of anarchy and jungle ethics. Man would be a crouching cave-dweller with the fear of death ever upon him.

Yet in the economic crisis of 1938, the voice of the moss-back and profiteer is heard again, demanding that "natural economic forces" be freed to take their course.

A serious hearing is actually given to politicians and writers who call for free-play for these forces, and who decry wage-hour regulation, the labor relations act, government relief programs and every other step to exercise control over our economic affairs.

* * *

What Would Happen

Suppose that government controls over "natural economic forces" were withdrawn, as these reactionaries demand.

There are 13 million unemployed in the United States. Without the "regimentation" of government relief, "natural economic forces" would leave these millions to starve.

But before they starved, they and the employed would be at the mercy of employers exercising their natural tendency to cut wages all they could. In the absence of wage-hour legislation, this tendency is already at work, driving many industries to sweatshop levels.

Employers would also be free to cut each other's throats competitively. The starving workers could not purchase their products, but at least employers would have the satisfaction that the jungle law of tooth and claw prevailed in their declining industries.

* * *

Free-Play in Labor Relations

When labor unions first arose, they were considered a diabolical interference with an employer's nautral economic right to run his business and treat his help any way he chose.

If the labor relations act were repealed or crippled, as the reactionaries demand, employers would be free to fight the unions by firing active members and refusing to bargain collectively with labor organizations.

The "natural economic forces" would drive employers to union-smashing violence and workers to bitter strike resistance.

The apostles of "free-play" would have us believe that all this starvation, anarchy and strife would lead to economic recovery. Leave things alone, said their prophet Hoover, and lo! prosperity is just around the corner! But the years from 1929 to 1933 showed that he prophesied in vain.

* * *

One Natural Force Overlooked

There is one natural force, however, that the reactionaries seem to overlook, and that is the force of human nature and human intelligence.

Human nature seldom submits passively to the bitter medicine of the economic witch-doctors. Thirteen million people will not starve willingly, no matter how "natural" this fate is said to be.

Nor will American workers allow their hard-won legislative and union gains to be snatched away to satisfy anyone's theory of free-play.

Even employers, if it comes to that, will object to abandonment of government spending and regulation which have created purchasing power and checked cut-throat competition.

Human intelligence demands not less but more organized control over the "natural economic forces" that have produced the present economic crisis.

The natural force of human nature and human intelligence will have some free-play in this year's elections. And politicians whose reactionary theories lead them to vote against wage-hour legislation and other government action for relief and recovery, will find that this is one natural force they cannot afford to monkey with too much.

Oil Union Gains Pay Raises

Philadelphia, — Wage increases of about $2 a week have been obtained for employes of the Radbill Oil Co., Philadelphia, in a new contract just concluded between the company and the Oil Workers International Union Local 398.

Other provisions include vacations with pay, sick leave, a closed shop, check-off of dues, and equal division of work.

The Keystone Oil Company has just renewed a contract, regarded by the union as a model labor agreement, and negotiations are pending for renewal of a pact with the Houghton Co.

James McCormick, representing the CIO regional office in Philadelphia, assisted in negotiating the Radbill and Keystone contracts.

Fort Wayne Workers Vote For CIO

FORT WAYNE, Ind. — Workers at the Horton Manufacturing Company, makers of motor-driven washing and ironing machines, will be represented by Local 904, United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, CIO, for collective bargaining purposes.

The union has been certified by the Labor Board as sole representative for nearly 100 employes, following a secret election won by the CIO local over the International Association of Machinists, CIO.

Anti-Hague Fight Opens on 3 Fronts

Washington—The war of the democratic United States on Frank (Der Fuehrer) Hague and his fascist control of Jersey City promised new battles this week as public resentment against his anti-CIO dictatorship mounted throughout the nation.

In Washington, the Congressional liberal bloc, led by Rep. Maury Maverick of Texas announced that it had voted unanimously to request a sweeping government investigation of Hague's regime.

Meanwhile proceedings initiated by the CIO and the American Civil Liberties Union to gain an injunction against Hague's anti-union activities, opened before a Federal judge in Newark, N. J.

CIO Man Slugged

The hearings, scheduled to last several days and to bring at least 50 witnesses to the stand, will concern efforts to restrain Hague and other Jersey City officials from interfering with the constitutional rights of free speech, free assembly and free press.

As the hearing opened, Samuel Macri, assistant CIO director for northern New Jersey, lay in a Newark hospital recovering from a severe body attack suffered while Cong. Jerry O'Connell was seeking to test the right of free speech in the Hague principality.

O'Connell was quickly spirited out of town by the cops, but Macri, who had attended the meeting, was found "in a dazed condition" at Pershing Field, in Jersey City. Taken to a Newark hospital, the CIO representative was found to be suffering from apparent concussion of the brain, and a sprained and bruised jaw. Physicians reported he seemed to be "in a state of amnesia."

Representative Maverick, in his statement issued after the meeting of the liberal "Young Turks" group of Congressmen, said the bloc would request the special House Committee on Un-American Activities to conduct a sweeping probe of Hague's activities.

The committee, he added, will be asked to "thoroughly investigate the arrogant violations of constitutional liberties in New Jersey and to subpoena Mayor Hague, his public officials and the judges of Jersey courts who have been party to these disgraceful episodes."

The liberal group, Maverick said further, will call upon Atty-Gen. Homer S. Cummings to intervene in the case.

"We believe that there is sufficient Federal authority, such as used in the Harlan County, Ky., case, for the department of justice to act and we expect to call upon that department also," the statement declared.

"We believe that this question must ultimately be solved by the people of New Jersey. However, the American people cannot sit idly by and permit this spirit of intolerance and violation of liberties to continue because it will spread to other cities and states, and hence to the nation."

"Deported" From Jersey City

Rep. Jerry O'Connell of Montana and Mrs. O'Connell, shown talking to Newark, N. J. reporters, after they had been escorted from Jersey City by Frank Hague's police. O'Connell had sought to test his constitutional right of free speech in the land of Hague. He found it couldn't be done.

Salt Of Earth Goes CIO

ST. CLAIR, Mich. — A CIO union of salt workers has been certified by the Labor Board as the sole bargaining agent for more than 300 production and maintenance employes in the Diamond Crystal Salt plant of the General Foods Corporation.

CIO Signs First Pact With Insurance Firm

New York.—The United Office & Professional Workers, CIO, this week signed the first collective bargaining agreement yet negotiated with a life insurance company.

The pact, signed in the presence of union, company and state officials, took place in the offices of the state superintendent of insurance, and gave the 55 agents working for the Golden Eagle Life Insurance Co. the preferential shop and improved working conditions.

Negotiations between the company and the UOPWA had been in progress for two months. The contract, which lasts for one year, established union grievance machinery and provides for arbitration of disputes.

Lewis Berney, insurance director of the UOPWA, praised the company for reaching an amicable agreement with the union without any appeal to the labor board.

"The Golden Eagle agreement," Berney said, "points the way to the adjustment of labor relations in the life insurance field in the American spirit of fair play and the recognitions of labor's rights as envisioned by the national and state labor relations acts.

"It poses the question very sharply of whether billion-dollar corporations such as Metropolitan Life shall be permitted to defy collective bargaining laws in the state and Nation.

"I say it is the responsibility of the appointed agencies of the states to see to it that all companies, regardless of size, shall be made to obey the laws of this state."

The union recently won a state labor relations board poll among Metropolitan's New York agents, but the company has not yet signed a union agreement.

Washington CIO To Meet In August

Seattle, Wash. — Tentative date for holding a convention to set up an Industrial Union Council for the state of Washington was set for August 13-14 at a conference in this city attended by representatives of a number of CIO unions.

All the delegates present agreed that the local CIO unions are now ready to take this step and form a strong state organization "capable of leading the fight in behalf of labor on a state-wide scale."

ELECTION ORDERED

Washington—The Semet-Solvay Co. of Detroit has been ordered by the labor board to dissolve its company union and to refrain from committing unfair labor acts. The board will hold an election among the plant's workers to determine if they wish to be represented by Disrtict 50 of the United Mine Workers of America, CIO.

LABOR and the LAW

By LEE PRESSMAN
CIO General Counsel

In its last decision before adjourning to October, the Supreme Court once again sustained the Labor Board against reactionary attacks. This time the attack on the Board was made by the three judges of the Federal Court of appeals in Philadelphia, who had refused to permit the Labor Board to withdraw its order against the Republic Steel Corporation.

Under the National Labor Relations Act, a company may petition a federal Circuit Court of Appeals to set aside an order of the Board if it can show that the Board's order is erroneous. The Labor Act further provides that when a company does this, the Board has a short time before it must file the record in the case with the court. Until this record is filed, however, the Board can change or modify its order in any way.

Close Philadelphia

After the Board made its original order against Republic Steel, the Corporation on April 18th brought a petition to set aside the Board's order. It selected the Circuit Court at Philadelphia because it knew that the judges of this court were anti-New Deal and had in the past made decisions adverse to labor.

At that time the Labor Board decided to withdraw its order so that the Republic Steel Corporation could have a chance to argue as to what the final order should be.

The lawyers for the Republic Steel attacked the failure of the Board to grant them this chance for argument and at the same time opposed the attempt of the Board to withdraw its order and thus give them this chance. On the basis of these nonsensical arguments, the attorneys for the Republic Steel Corporation secured an injunction from the three judges of the Circuit Court of Appeals prohibiting the Board from attempting to withdraw its order and compelling it to submit the case to the court.

This action on the part of the judges was plainly contrary to the provisions of the Wagner Labor Act for judicial review. When these three judges refused to enforce the terms of the Labor Act, the Labor Board went to the Supreme Court and asked the Supreme Court to compel the judges to permit the Board to withdraw its decision.

Extraordinary Request

This is an extraordinary request which the Supreme Court grants only when lower court judges commit serious errors in plain violation of the rights of parties to a law suit. Faced with this attack in the Supreme Court, the Circuit Court judges admitted that there might be some question as to their power to prohibit the Board from withdrawing its orders and left the case up to the Supreme Court to decide.

The attorneys for the Republic Steel Corporation then took up the argument before the Supreme Court and claimed that the action of the Board was a conspiracy to destroy the Republic Steel Corporation. The Supreme Court dismissed all the arguments of the attorneys for the company and in

This action on the part of the Circuit Court judges, until reversed by the Supreme Court, was an instance of the judicial arrogance practiced by judges who cannot understand and refuse to accept modern legislation.

Two of the three judges who made the decision, Judge Buffington and Judge Thompson, are old men who were appointed by Republican presidents. Both of them have just retired from the bench. In recent cases before the remaining judges of the Circuit Court at Philadelphia, who are younger men and who have been appointed by President Roosevelt, the Labor Board has been able to secure favorable decisions.

Guild Lauds Gov. Benson For Aid In Strike

New York — Elmer Benson, Farmer-Laborite governor of Minnesota who was instrumental in helping effect a settlement of the Duluth Herald and News-Tribune strike, was invited this week to address the national convention of the American Newspaper Guild, CIO, in Toronto, starting June 13.

In a wire to Benson, Vice-Pres. Jonathan Eddy of the ANG praised Benson as a "farmer-labor governor who demonstrated to us in our time of trial that a public servant elected by the people who work for their living will actually serve their interests in a showdown.

"The Guild picket line in Duluth was not the first against which employers have been able to use the force of the police in denying newspaper workers their constitutional civil rights, but you are the first governor in our experience who did not retire behind contemptible legalisms while these fundamental rights were at stake.

"Despite the suppressions, lies and propaganda with which you may be favored by the free press of this country as a result of your courage in defense of American ideals, we and others who work will know what you stand for."

CAPITAL CLOSE-UPS

By MARTIN STRONG

Anyone who thinks that the new depression—or the revival of the old one—has not found the nation's political leaders almost completely nonplused and at sixes and sevens as to remedies needs only to have listened to a few hours of the Senate debate on the relief and recovery bill in the last week.

And if this wer not enough to convince any doubter, the agonizing wails that have gone up from business over the prospect of having to pay a wage of $11 a week to their employes should certainly clinch the point.

Whether this last horrendous prospect—or even the worse one of possibly having to pay $12 a week or so—is to descend on employers in "the richest nation in the world" is still in the laps of twelve House and Senate conferees on the wage and hours bill. And they have yet to meet, at this writing, for their first session.

As for the remedy—or—remedies—even those august Senators who dare to look at the problem are as far apart as the poles. Senators Logan of Kentucky and Wheeler of Montana shout loudly for an increase in the price level, which might be hunky for those with commodities to sell and long-term debts to pay but doesn't sound so sweet to the fellow who is just praying that the boss will be forced by law to raise his pay to eleven bucks a week.

Senator Borah moans that it is the interposition of monopolies between the consumer and the goods he needs, and makes a good case. But his chief remedy is stronger enforcement of the anti-trust laws, which have been on the statute books for nearly fifty years, and enforced about as much as the counts would permit.

Senator Murray of Montana says the trouble is that business didn't grab hold of the handle after the government primed the pump, but instead spent millions——as it undoubtedly did—scaring itself into fits that "our form of government is going to be changed." And Senator Bilbo of Mississippi would solve the problem at one fell swoop by deporting 12,000,000 Negro citizens to Africa!

Don't Expect Too Much

Meanwhile, it appears that a lot of honest and frightened citizens are being fed ungrounded hopes through the claims—tentatively shoved out by the Administration and eagerly grabbed on by its opponents—that this relief bill is going to pour anywhere from five billions to seven or more billions of new money into the economic system.

But the cold fact is that the relief bill contains less than two billions of new money—a few hundred million more than normally would have been spent for WPA, and the billion and a half which will be available for loans and grants for public construction projects from PWA—more than half of which will be borrowed by the localities just as they always have borrowed for public improvements.

Of course there is more to the entire Presidential "recovery program," as for instance the new authority to the RFC to lend up to a billion and a quarter to business if sound borrowers can be found, and some monetary juggling which was supposed to pile more money in the banks that they also would be under pressure to lend. Even a large section of the business community was in favor of this—it's wonderful what a grand thing incurring debts is so long as the government doesn't incur them.

The "Confidence" Wail

But as the dignified New York Times points out, these last two tricks just aren't working, for bank loans are actually $197,000,000 lower than when the schemes were announced.

Which leads the Times to revert to the one old standard gag—the only solution that business can offer.

"Busines men want credit," says the Times "when they see an opportunity to expand their operations in the reasonable hope of a profit. That requires confidence."

In other words, when business men lack confidence you can't buy bread or shoes or tires because they are too scared to supply them—you've undoubtedly noticed the shortage of all those things. In other words again, when business men HAVE "confidence" they'll expand their plants and businesses even though there are no customers with sufficient purchasing power to justify it.

And of course whether there are sufficient customers present with spending money in their jeans has nothing at all to do with it! Are we cockeyed or are we cockeyed!

Men Who Go Down To Sea Benefit By CIO Unions

NMU Recruits Inland Boat Men in East

New York—Organization of the inland boatmen on the Atlantic coast has been taken over by the National Maritime Union, CIO.

Under the supervision of Joseph Curran, NMU general organizer, an Inland Boatmen's Organizing Committee has been set up to bring some 35,000 harbor and river workers in East coast ports from Portland, Maine to Tampa, Florida, into the NMU as a separate division.

In Gulf ports, the organization drive will continue under the direction of the Inland Boatmen's Union.

Challenges Joe Ryan

The new move, according to Curran, "is in line with a recent re-opening of the drive for a National Industrial Maritime Federation, patterned after the Maritime Federation of the Pacific.

"We are definitely throwing our hat in the ring to break the racketeering grip of Joseph P. Ryan, president of the International Longshoremen's Association, on the harbor workers.

Tried to Interfere

Curran said that the interference of Ryan's men had made it difficult for NMU crews to get their ships handled by tug-boats during a dispute, as in the case of the Shepard Line, when vessels were boycotted by Ryan's AFL union although the Labor Board had certified the NMU as the bargaining agent after an election won by the CIO union.

Some 9,000 harbor workers are already enrolled in the Inland Boatmen's Union on the Atlantic and Gulf coasts, Curran said.

Ohio CIO Group Plans Rally

CANTON, Ohio. — Extensive plans for a big labor rally to be held Sunday, June 26, at the County Fair grounds, have been announced by the Stark County CIO Industrial Union Council.

It will be an all-day affair with plenty of entertainment including a band, dancers and vaudeville, as well as speeches by well-known union leaders, among them Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

The Council hopes to arouse the interests of workers in the neighboring towns to what is going on in the CIO labor movement ,and is inviting all those in the surrounding country who can to come.

Engineers Win Pay Raises

New York, — Engineers employed on 13 tank ships of the C. D. Mallory and Co. line will get pay increases of $5 and $10 under a contract secured by the Marine Engineers Beneficial Association, CIO union.

The agreement, announced by E. P. Trainer, business manager for the MEBA, also provides for $1 an hour overtime which includes Saturday afternoon and Sunday work in port, three weeks' annual vacation and preferential union hiring

The pact covers 52 licensed marine engineers.

Trainer also announced the signing of an agreement with the International Freighting Co., covering four engineers on one ship and providing for terms similar to the Mallory pact. Negotiations with several other lines are under way at the present time.

Fight Phony AFL Union

Washington — Action on the Todd-Johnson shipyard case in New Orleans, La., where the regional National Labor Relations Board certified an AFL union that had almost no members in the yard, moved to this city as the legal staff of the CIO took the case to labor board headquarters.

The case began some months ago when organizers for the CIO Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers went into the Todd-Johnson yard to sign up the workers there. The employer countered this move by inviting the AFL to step in.

AFL Bluff

Though the AFL did next to nothing by way of organizing, a bulletin board announcement of contract terms quickly appeared, signed by the boss. Within twenty-four hours a letter from the AFL appeared side by side with the boss's, stating that the terms were acceptable to the dozen or so AFL crafts concerned. The AFL message also stated that meetings had been held at twelve locals at which the terms were ratified—all this in the space of twenty-four hours or less.

In asking for certification, the AFL claimed to have signatures from a majority of the 850 men employed at the yard. These signatures were not forthcoming when CIO Regional Director Yelverton wanted to see them at a later board hearing.

The AFL hired thugs and gangsters in a desperate attempt to break up CIO organization. Five CIO men, arrested while resisting these gorillas, have been charged with "lying in wait to kill" under an ancient Louisiana statute.

In spite of AFL-boss efforts against the CIO, Regional Director Cowherd reports that signatures from close to 700 of the workers have been secured, indicating an overwhelming preference for the CIO.

Wages Up 50%; Hours Lower

New York.—East coast seaman have secured wage increases running as high as 50 per cent. since the rise of the "rank and file" movement two years ago, it is reported by the National Maritime Union, CIO.

Wage gains have been greatest in the dock department, where the average monthly pay for ordinary seamen has jumped from $37.83 in 1936 to $60 in 1938. On some lines, wage increases won by contract have been even higher. Ordinary seamen, for example, get $65 a month on the Black Diamond Line.

Greatest reduction of hours has been won for the stewards' department, but wage increases there have been smaller in comparison to other departments, averaging about 5 per cent. mostly on freighters, with very little or no increase on the larger passenger liners.

Firemen Benefit

Pay of firemen has increased from $50.77 in 1936 to $71 in 1938, and oilers who received $66.44 in 1936 are today getting $82.50.

Health and safety regulations also have been greatly improved, and better food is served, the union reports, but adds that "conditions on American ships are only just beginning to meet the 'minimum standards for health and deceny' established several years ago by government agencies."

The NMU report is based on a study made by the Waterfront Research Committee which serves various maritime unions and their periodicals.

36 States Adopt New Insurance Plan

Washington.—Under a plan just adopted by 36 states, the worker who goes from a job in one state to work in another state—or in several other states—may draw any out-of-work benefits he has earned in any state by filing his claim in the state where he loses his job.

Under the plan, according to the social security board, he need not go back to each state where he worked in order to establish his claim.

A man on an insured job in Alabama, for instance, may go to another job in Maryland, and then to a third job in Pennsylvania. While he is in Pennsylvania he is laid off.

Cuts Red Tape

If he has the necessary wage credits in Alabama and Maryland to make him eligible to out-of-work benefits under the law of each of those states, the Pennsylvania unemployment insurance agency will handle his claim with the other "liable" states—after first paying whatever may be due him under the Pennsylvania law.

The following states have thus far joined in the program: Alabama, Alaska, Arizona, California, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Hawaii, Idaho, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Nebraska, Nevada, New Jersey, New Mexico, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Utah, Vermont, Washington, Wisconsin, and Wyoming.

Rubber Union Nails Attempt to Smash Workers' Power

ket street, a huge crowd was watching pickets patrol the gates. More than 100 Akron police were lined up in the middle of the street. There was a good deal of bantering and joking—but in the gatehouse police were examining four "tommy guns"—although Akron police possess only two such guns, ownership of which is illegal to anyone except law enforcement agencies. An observer for Gov. Davey stood at the gates, watching.

A little before midnight a chain picket line was formed, began to tramp around while the crowd laughed—and then, without warning, the Akron police swept into the picket line, swinging clubs and blackjacks. From the plant came company police tossing tear gas grenades, firing tear gas shells. The people scattered, ran where they could, pausing only long enough to take along injured men and women.

By this time the entire Akron police force was out. Together with the company police they swept down Market street, laying down a dense barrage of tear and KO gas, clubbing customers in bars and restaurants, tossing grenades through hotel windows, shooting steel coated bullets into the fleeing crowd. When they reached union headquarters they stopped, formed a line, and fired volley upon volley of tear gas shells into the hall, where scores of injured and wounded were lying Hangings and awnings took fire, windows were smashed, while union men and women helped the injured to escape.

All night long the police "mopped up"—until over 50 people were in the hospital, while scores of others sought private physicians to tend their wounds.

Labor Mobilizes

"We won't take this lying down," declared Vice-President Burns of the URWA, as he telegraphed President Roosevelt, "Must we have a Memorial Day massacre in Akron before workers can secure their job rights?"

Labor answered, forming a united Labor Defense Council composed of 75 unions, representing the AFL and CIO. Teamsters and bus drivers served an ultimatum: unless the police were withdrawn, picketing rights restored, and efforts made to negotiate a settlement, no wheels would roll in Akron.

Late in the afternoon the mayor ordered police withdrawn, picketing restored; the company closed the plant down, agreed to meet with the union committee the following morning. Union headquarters were re-opened, and civil liberties were re-established in East Akron.

Checkmated in his efforts to provoke further violence, the mayor, who was in constant touch with Governor Davey, broke out with a rash of unbridled statements attacking the CIO and threatening to arrest union leaders. While negotiations proceeded, all Akron police were mobilized and armed, and 3600 National Guardsmen were ordered to stand by to invade Akron. The mayor declaring Goodyear would open, strike or no strike, dared the workers to picket.

Won Promises

Labor didn't bite. The negotiating committee hung on during the meetings with the company, extracted written promises to correct a flagrant seniority violation and to review all grievances relating to seniority which have arisen since the beginning of the year when an agreement is drawn up between the union and the company. The company also verbally agreed to take up wage adjustments with the union before they are made and to take immediate steps for a written agreement.

The union strike committee met, discussed the situation with Allan S. Haywood, New York CIO director and popular with Akron rubber workers, and approved ending the strike, accepting the company's pledges, and continuing negotiations. A meeting of Goodyear workers the same night almost unanimously supported the committee.

Bloodshed had been averted through the statesmanship of labor. Akron had been saved, not by its industrialists and its politicians, but by the humble folk who earn their bread by labor.

Akron labor is checkmating Girdler. United labor action, a clear vision as to the tactics of union-busting employers, appreciation of the attempt by reactionaries to stir up labor trouble to influence the 1938 elections, and a firm determination to press for the setting up of responsible labor relations in the rubber industry—these are the things which put Akron labor "two jumps ahead" in the forward march of American labor.

Akron Cops Battle Pickets

In what was described as the "most wanton attack in Akron history," members of the police department used tear gas, pistols, clubs and vomit gas on members of the United Rubber Workers, picketing the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company.

New Book Describes CIO Growth

"Labor On The March" By Levinson Lauds Industrial Unions

By C. W. FOWLER

Back in 1901 the directors of U. S. Steel held a meeting. Out of that meeting, first for the newly formed billion dollar trust, came their statement on labor policy—laid down, as they thought, for all time.

"We are unalterably opposed," the directors said, "to any extension of union labor, and advise subsidiaries to take firm positions when these questions come up and say that they are not going to recognize it, that is, any extension of unions in mills where they do not now exist."

In 1937 U. S. Steel and subsidiaries signed a contract covering close to 250,000 workers. Other companies quickly followed suit.

What had happened? Edward Levinson, in his recently published "Labor on the March," tells the story and tells it well in a clear and raidly moving manner. It is a story of industrial organization, under the leadership of the CIO and the eight industrial unions that led American workers beyond the "American Seperation of Labor" into the organization of the unorganized.

Back of this achievement, most significant in the steel industry, is a story of fifty years of labor futility under craft domination. Basic mass productions industries, like steel, were untouched. The crafts weren't interested in them—until a question of jurisdiction came up.

Organize the Unorganized

But a group of leaders of industrial unions in the AFL, headed by John L. Lewis, were. For years they had tried to prod the craft captains into action. Finally, in 1935, they formed the CIO—as a committee to bring the unorganized millions into the Federation.

Everybody knows that the craft captains felt otherwise. Levinson tells the story of their efforts—still going on—to block the organization of the unorganized. The present split in the American labor movement is laid squarely where it belongs, on the shoulders of the AFL top leadership.

Levinson details the amazing success story of the CIO in organizing 4,000,000 American workers, 3,000,000 of which were previously untouched by the labor movement. In a chapter on the great rubber and automobile strikes he analyzes the new organizing methods and the new strike technique that brought victory to thousands of workers in previously open shop industries. Other sections describe the new unions formed by the CIO in industries and occupations the labor movement had always considered untouchable—agricultural workers, white collar workers, professional workers.

A Larger Share

In a final chapter, Levinson describes the program and aims of the CIO, quoting John L. Lewis:

"For the immediate future we want a larger share in the increased income of industry and a more equal distribution of that income. This is a marvelous age in which we live. Science is perfecting machines and formulae which at once make for economy of production and a scarcity of jobs.

"We must give more widespread emloyment, increased wages, create more leisure, if we are to compensate for the producing power of the improved machinery."

The book has been praised by Chairman Lewis as "an admirable analysis of the background, sources and growth of the CIO." It is a valuable contribution to the growing literature about the movement and will help to counteract the reams of hostile propaganda by spreading the real facts more widely before the reading public.

Yale Law Journal Holds Case Against Edward Lamb Has "No Legal Basis"

New Haven, Conn.—The proposed disbarment of Edward Lamb, of Toledo, Ohio, executive vice-president of the National Lawyers Guild and Ohio regional counsel of the CIO, has no legal basis, according to an article in the June issue of the Yale Law Journal, published this week.

Lamb's disbarment was recommended by a committee of three members of the Ohio bar as a result of his courtroom conduct in defending an Ohio injunction suit nine months ago. Proceedings are now pending in an Ohio court.

The case acquired national prominence recently when a group of distinguished attorneys, including Solicitor-General Robert H. Jackson, Assistant Attorney-General Thurman W. Arnold, Justice Ferdinand Pecora of the New York Supreme Court, Governor Elmer A. Benson of Minnesota and Lee Pressman, CIC general counsel, announced their support of the National Lawyers Guild in defending him.

Grew Out of Strike Case

The charges against Lamb, according to the Journal account, were based on his conduct when he argued for the denial of a temporary restraining order sought by the Williams Manufacturing Co. of Ohio against union activities. Believing that the judge was limiting the issues to be considered at the hearing too narrowly and aroused over various unfavorable rulings, Lamb is said to have made certain "improper statements."

The Journal concludes that the charge of "moral turpitude" is completely unwarranted. "Some of the quoted statements," it says, "seem entirely innocuous; others represent minor eruptions invariably accompanying the impassioned atmosphere of a labor controversy." It is pointed out that the term "yellow dog" contracts is in accepted use; that the alleged "threats" upon the court probably amounted only to the expression of an intention to continue the union's case before the National Labor Relations Board.

For the most part restrained in its criticism of the committee's charges, the article ends upon a warning note. The disbarment proceedings against Lamb are said to "involve consequences even more serious than unjust curtailment of a professional career. Rather than encouraging respect for law, disbarment or suspension under present circumstances would indicate, to some at least, the futility of hazarding a solution of basic social problems by acquiescence in the legal process.

"It would afford an additional weapon against attorneys appearing in defense of labor and civil liberties, more refined, it is true, but no less devastating than some of the more direct methods which have been used to terrorize lawyers defending unpopular causes. It would seriously restrict the bar's vital role of preserving the democratic tradition of representation for all causes, whatever their nature."

New Steel Movie Indicates Mechanical Changes—and Value of Unions

By HAROLD J. RUTTENBERG

I recently saw "Steel—Man's Servant," the quarter-of-a-million-dollar sound, technicolor movie of how steel is made. The picture is produced by the United States Steel Corporation subsidiaries.

Ore from the mines hauled to the lake ports and cooked in the blast furnaces; then through the steel furnaces, the rolling mills; and, finally dramatic pictures of the products of steel: Autos, bridges, skyscrapers, stainless steel coffee pots, and the countless other ways steel serves man. This is the picture: "Steel—Man's Servant."

It's a grand picture. But——

As I saw several laborers in rotation walk up to the "Hot as Hell" mouth of the Open Hearth and throw a shovel of manganese into the boiling pot, my mind's eye recalled that just two short years ago — before SWOC's birth — these men did this for 47c an hour. But —— when this picture was made, they got 62½c for it.

When I saw a crew of men shaping an axle under the thumping blows of a huge hammer, my mind's eye recalled since SWOC's birth, their hourly wage is up 21c, or $1.68 a day of eight hours.

Times Have Changed

The furnace was tapped. The ladle filled, hoisted into position over the moulds, and poured. I recalled having read in the legislative journal of Pennsylvania of 30 years ago the following story:

"An open hearth ladle, filled with boiling metal, tipped over. Five men were caught under fifty ton of flaming mass. The hot metal consumed their bodies, clothes. They were no more.

"The company extended the courtesy to the families of the men of waiting until they moved out of town. Then the metal was thrown back into the furnace to be remelted. The company would not give the families of the victims the right to bury the metal that consumed the bodies of their beloved."

My mind's eye recalled, as I saw there was no such danger of an accident of this kind now, that following such things the workmen's compensation law was passed, factory inspection was put on the law books.

Safety of men's life has gradually become as important as the cost of production.

The picture was showing the new strip mills. A six-foot slab slide out of an automatic reheating furnace. The scale was knocked off. The slab was straightened. And then, at the rate of over a third of a mile a minute, the slab was reduced into a thousand foot coil of steel ribbon. And not a man's pair of tongs touched it.

85,000 Jobs Killed

My mind's eye saw the old hand-mill. The men with their tongs. The roller, the rougher, and the screw-boy. It reminded me, as I saw the youngsters sitting in the control booths of the strip mill, that 85,000 old hand-mill workers are being eliminated from their jobs by the strip mill."

Throughout the picture, each man had a smile on his face; some were relaxing; and smoked their pipes. One even heated a coffee pot on a glowing end of an eye-beam. They seemed happy. They seemed safe. They seemed secure. You could see a sense of security in the men's faces that is only possible when the worker knows his job is protected. My mind's eye kept telling me that just a few years ago these men had no union, they enjoyed no security, their jobs were not protected. Today, their union affords them protection and they are happy.

NLRB Raps Armour In Report

Chicago — Complaints of unfair labor practice filed against Armour & Co. by the United Packinghouse Workers, CIO local industrial union, were upheld in an intermediate report issued recently by the Labor Board's regional director in Chicago.

Based on the findings of a hearing conducted for more than a week, the Board's regional office held that the company interfered with the rights of its workers to join the CIO union, dominated the administration of the Employes Mutual Ass'n of Chicago and discharged workers for union activity.

The report recommended that the company file written notice offering to reinstate two discharged workers with back pay, to withdraw all recognition from the company union, and to permit employes to join the CIO packinghouse union or any other labor organization that they choose, posting notices to this effect in the plant.

ILGW Board Meets

Minneapolis, Minn.—The General Executive Board of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, CIO, meeting in Minneapolis, voted to continue "exploring every possibility that would lead to the attainment of a united labor movement through labor peace."

A committee, consisting of Vice Presidents Luigi Antonini, Isidore Nagler, and Julius Hochman, was appointed to seek the reopening of peace conferences.

Action on the question of representation at the convention to form a permanent national CIO organization was deferred until the convention call is actually issued.

ACA Sees Victory Over Western Union

Company Outfit On Last Legs, Says Rathborne

New York.—Death comes, as it must, to all company unions— even to the oldest in the country, when the CIO gets after them.

This was the central point in a statement issued by Mervyn Rathborne, president of the CIO American Communications Assn., in commenting on the beginning of hearings against the Western Union Telegraph Co. scheduled for this week in the New York office of the Natl. Labor Relations Board.

The complaint, issued by ACA some time ago, charges Western Union with maintaining the oldest stooge union in the N. S., the Association of Western Union Employes, with stealing more than $500,000 in "dues" from the workers during its 18 years of life, and with coercion and interference with the workers' desire to join a bona fide labor organization.

"Will Prove Charges"

"The charges against Western Union will be proved to the letter," Rathborne said.

"The hearings will prove beyond a shadow of a doubt that the company has formed, maintained, and supported financially a company union; that it has coerced its employes to compel them to join the company union; that it has employed labor spies who spied on workers at their duties, at their homes and at their place of amusement to keep them from joining the ACA, and that it has collected more than $500,000 illegally from its employes and wastefully spent the money to their detriment, rather than their benefit."

All the Old Tricks Used

"The Western Union Co. has used every trick in the union-busting bag, as was revealed by the La Follette Committee, and we are not naive enough to believe that it intends to suddenly change face,' 'Rathborne declared, warning that the company would likely try to find "other fronts" for its stooge union.

"It is our firm conviction, however, that the maneuvering of the company, no matter how devious, will avail them nothing," he added. "The employes of Western Union have shown their desire for a bona fide union, the ACA, and they will not be satisfied with anything else."

Ward Signs CIO Pact In South

Birmingham, Ala. — CIO progress in the industrial south has brought a new contract to the workers of the Ward Baking Co. in this city, covering more than 130 employes.

The contract provides, in addition to collective bargaining, vacations, seniority, etc., for a closed shop and for a voice for the workers in setting rules for health, safety, and protection of company property.

Yelverton Cowherd, CIO regional director in Alabama, also reports a successful strike at the Birmingham Paper Co., where 200 workers stayed out two weeks in protest against a wage cut. The cut was rescinded, Cowherd reports, and a signed contract giving many improvements in working conditions secured.

ACA Members Back Relief Bill

Philadelphia — Five hundred CIO telegraph workers in Philadelphia have gone on record demanding passage of President Roosevelt's relief and recovery program now before the United States Senate.

The demand for the bill was sent to Senators James J. Davis and Joseph F. Guffey, of Pennsylvania in a wire from the members of Local 38 of the American Communications Association, CIO.

CIO Files Charge In Bank Case

New York—Stating that William Everett, head paying teller of the Bank of Yorktown, was fired "solely because he was an active union member," the United Office and Professional Workers, CIO, filed additional charges this week with the State Labor Board against the bank.

Previous charges filed by the Financial Employes Organizing Committee, financial section of the UOPWA, detailed a list of unfair labor practices on the part of the bank, which has been fighting the union tooth and nail for several weeks.

Lost Injunction Bout

The bank recently lost a round in its anti-union battle when Justice Noonan of the N. Y. Supreme Court ruled against it in an injunction sought to prevent the State Labor Board taking up the case.

Everett, along with several others who have been active in the union was first demoted from a job he had held down for a number of years, and then fired outright.

Union officials expect that an election among the Bank's employes will follow shortly after the charges are heard by the Labor Board.

Government Housing Needed, Says CIO

Washington—Stating that a "paramount interest of the CIO and its unions is the promotion of adequate housing," John L. Lewis, CIO chairman, today accepted the first report of the newly organized CIO Committee on Housing, signed by Michael Quill, president of the Transport Workers Union and chairman of the committee, and Anthony Wayne Smith, secretary.

Chairman Lewis' letter also expressed support of the Committee's stand on proposed amendments to the present Housing Act now pending in Congress which would expand the program by $300,000,000 within the present calendar year.

Need Called Paramount

The Committee on Housing was organized at the April, 1938, conference of the CIO held in Washington together with standing committees on unemployment, social security and legislation.

The report of the committee calls attention to the need for low cost housing, stating: "Of all the unfilled needs felt by the American people in this period of depression, the need for more and better housing for lower income groups is without question one of the greatest," and points out that private industry had failed to meet this need.

The report states also that the only way his need can be met is through large scale government action, pointing to the aid such a program would be in fighting the present depression. It further recommends passage of amendments to the present housing act that would provide a $300,000,000 program for the current year, and an eventual addition of $500,000,000 in housing construction to the present program.

Members of the committee are Michael J. Quill, chairman; Lewis Alan Berne, Van A Bitner, Abram Flaxer, Jacob Potofsky, Harold Pritchett, John Green, and Anthony Wayne Smith, executive secretary.

CERTIFY ILGW

NEW YORK. — A local of the International Ladies' Garment Workers was certified by the Labor Board as the sole union representative for employes at the New York Handkerchief Company, following an election won by the CIO union 53 to 3.

U. S. Protects Harlan Witnesses As Story Of Anti-Unionism Is Told

LONDON, Ky.—Evidence that there is not yet peace in troubled Harlan county came to light this week as government witnesses in the trial of 63 mine operators and deputy sheriffs charged with criminal violation of the Wagner Act, were placed under the protection of the Federal court.

This surprise move came after two witnesses, apparently about to recite stories of coercion or intimidation in Harlan last weekend, were prevented, temporarily at least, from telling all the details.

One of the witnesses, Ernest Huff, had started to tell how Lee Hubbard, one of the deputies now on trial, had summoned him to the back of Hubbard's pool room on Memorial Day weekend. Defense attorneys stopped his testimony before he could go any further.

Charlie Scott, a Negro member of the United Mine Workers, who is one of the government's 200 witnesses, also was stopped from describing a meeting with one of the other defendants in the case.

Witnesses Tell Same Tale

Meanwhile the government legal battery, directed by Brian McMahon, assistant U. S. Attorney-general, has brought to the stand a score of witnesses, most of them coal miners.

They have told substantially the same story: That they were doing all right on their jobs until the company found out they had joined the union. Then they were either discharged or transferred to types of work where it was impossible for them to earn any money.

One of the witnesses was Howard R. Williams, vice-president of a United Mine Workers, CIO, local.

Williams charged from the witness stand that Ben Unthank, a deputy sheriff in the hire of the Harlan County Coal Operators Assn., and a defendant in the trial, had kidnapped him and his wife one Sunday night in 1935. The vigilantes drove Mr. and Mrs. Williams to a lonely mountain near the Virginia line, leaving them there with a warning that to return to Harlan county would mean certain death.

Describes Flogging

Life was never dull for a union man in Harlan, it became obvious from the testimony of Ben Wilburn and his family.

One night in February, 1937, Wilburn testified, he stopped in at a local pool room on his way home to dinner.

There Wash Irwin, a foe of the union, who is now dead, swaggered up to him with a gun on each hip.

"Ben, you're a union man and we're agoin' to get ye," Irwin was quoted as saying.

Soon after he arrived home, Wilburn recounted, he saw Irwin and another deputy climbing over the back fence.

Wilburn's step-daughter then took the stand and told how, from a vantage point underneath a bed, she had watched the two deputies beat Wilburn with pistol butts until he was "covered with blood."

They then rolled Wilburn off the porch, she charged, and proceeded to "stomp" on his body until several ribs were broken.

To climax the affair, the deputies then carried the injured victim and his stepson, also beaten up in the fracas, to the local jail, where they were held several days and fined for "breaking the peace."

Detroit Cops Injure Pickets

Dozens of pickets and innocent by-standers were injured when Detroit police attacked pickets at the American Brass Co. plant. The police were escorting strikebreakers from the factory. Picture shows strikers giving first aid to an injured picket.

Ad Agency Uses Old Slogans Against Union

Long Island City, N. Y.—Using the old familiar weapons of anti-union employers, the Collier Advertising Co. of this city is still trying to break the four-week strike of members of the United Carders and Bill Posters Local Industrial Union 811, CIO.

Putting out false statements to the press about the strike and trying to intimidate local merchants where strikers deal are part of the company's tactics. In addition, the company is trying to work up a connection with the old AFL union of advertising and card workers, discredited since the formation of the CIO organization.

Lay-offs, Speed-up, Spies

The strike was caused by arbitrary lay-offs, involving 54 CIO men, intolerable speed-up, and wholesale use of company spies to spot active union members for discharge.

The Transport Workers Union, CIO, has been helping the Collier Workers through protesting against the use of scabs to place car cards in the subways and street-car systems of New York.

CONGRESS VOTE NEAR ON WAGE, RELIEF BILLS

SWOC Reveals 472 Firms Renewed Agreements

By HOWARD J. McCARTNEY

Pittsburgh — On the eve of its second anniversary the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, at a meeting of field directors from the United States and Canada, revealed that 472 firms had renewed their contracts with the steel union. Only fifty-seven companies have not, as yet, resigned, and negotiations are still under way between the managements of these firms and SWOC representatives.

The meeting, attended by some 50 SWOC directors and all leading officials of the union, followed up the plea for business-labor - government cooperation made recently by Philip Murray, SWOC chairman, in New York before members of the National Industrial Conference Board.

It was pointed out in a resolution adopted by the SWOC keymen that business and economic conditions are "becoming increasingly worse" and that unemployment is increasing while working time is decreasing.

Permanent Solution Needed

"Government spending and pump-priming projects are important, but in themselves do not provide the solution to our problems," the resolution declared.

As a step toward solution, the resolution demanded that President Roosevelt "shall immediately convene a conference of business, banking, labor and farming leaders, and request these representative persons to cooperate in a program to end the recession and put people back to work; and that all business, fraternal, political and veteran groups shall be asked to cooperate in this program and send proper resolutions to the President."

In New York, to 1000 of the Nation's business leaders attending the annual meeting of the National Industrial Conference Board, Mr. Murray put forth Labor's first step in solving the business depression, declaring that "the time has arrived for labor, industry and finance, argiculture and government to cooperate" in conferences.

Mr. Murray also emphasized that "labor's right to function for purposes of collective bargaining has to be fully recognized and completely accepted if any cooperative endeavor is to bear fruit."

"Where labor is engaged in life and death battle for its right to live, cooperation is impossible," he said. "The problem of labor relations is not so much a question of labor trouble as it is employer trouble. We have employer trouble with those employers who ride in airplanes to sell their products but still use horse-and-buggy methods in labor relations."

Philco Strikers Parade

Philadelphia—In protest against threats of a drastic wage cut and longer hours, workers of the Philadelphia Storage Battery Company, 10,000 strong, marched through the Kensington section of the city and threw a mass picket line around the Philco plant.

On May 1, the company, which has been under a closed shop agreement with the union for five years, locked out its workers in an effort to force through a pay reduction of 25 to 40 per cent., and increase hours from 36 to 40 a week, according to the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, CIO union.

Figures In Harlan Trial

Robert W. Creech, the mustached gentleman on the left, is a Harlan County, Ky., coal operator. He faces the possibility of getting a $5,000 fine and a 10-year jail term if a jury accepts the government's argument that he, together with 43 others, employed violence to evade the Wagner Act. Homer Clontz, one of the 200 government witnesses, narrowly escaped injury when a shotgun blast was fired into the room where he was sleeping one night last year.

CIO Is Active In Fight

Washington — Congress swung into the final days of its session here with the likelihood of passage of the wage-hour bill growing hourly stronger.

Before the week is over, the measure, which has been faced with the furious resistance of reactionary forces all over the nation, will be on its way to the White House for President Roosevelt's signature, it was believed.

Relief Bill to Pass

Meanwhile the relief bill, aimed at stopping human suffering and helping the country climb out of the depression, was regarded as certain to pass.

The Walsh-Healey amendment, requiring government contractors to obey the National Labor Relations Act, was before the House Rules Committee. The demand was rising from labor for the Rules Committee, which tried to knife the wage-hour bill, to give it a place on the calendar before the Congressmen hie themselves home for fall campaigning.

Hollywood ANG Strike Wins Popular Support

HOLLYWOOD, Cal. — The three-week strike of editorial workers on the Hollywood News-Citizen appeared headed for victory as members of the American Newspaper Guild, CIO, succeeded in winning community support and a 30 per cent drop in the paper's circulation.

At the same time, advertising space in the struck paper was cut sharply.

Members of the AFL musicians' union voted to refrain from reading the publication, while financial aid came from the typographers' local and from the Screen Directors' Guild.

Eight state assemblymen joined with members of the League of Women Shoppers, trade unionists and members of the movie colony to augment the picket line. The strikers are seeking a signed contract and the reinstatement of five discharged Guild members.

Court Upholds NLRB

San Francisco. — The federal circuit court of appeals this week dismissed a petition filed by the Douglas Aircraft Co., seeking a review and setting aside of the labor board's recent ruling against the corporation.

The company had been ordered to reinstate 49 workers with pay, but since that time the NLRB has withdrawn the ruling in order to make such technical changes as to bar its being thrown out by the supreme court on procedural grounds.

Paterson, N. J. — Negotiations for a new contract affecting 20,000 workers opened here this week between the Federation of Dyers, Finishers, Bleachers and Printers, and employers in the Paterson area.

Gotham Body Plants Sign With UAW

New York. — Local 259 of the United Automobile Workers, CIO, emerged victorious from a two-week strike as 15 body building plants in New York City signed agreements with the union.

The fifteen which signed broke away from the employers association, whic his still fighting the union. Albert Fihscer, chairman of the union negotiating committee, predicted speedy settlement in all shops.

Metropolitan Life Ordered To Bargain

New York.—The Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. was ordered this week by the New York State Labor Relations Board to bargain with the United Office and Professional Workers, CIO, upon the union's request.

The board over-rode the company's contention that its agents do not come within the scope of the labor board. A few weeks ago the union won a labor board election among the company's industrial insurance agents in the New York area.

Leon Berney, national insurance director of the union, hailed the decision.

"This explodes the company's claim to immunity. We will press additional charges of intimidation, coercion and the forstering of a company union. The 29,000,000 policy holders and owners of Metropolitan do not indorse these tactics which violate the law of the land, as this order clearly shows."

CIO To Organize Laundry Workers In Jersey

New York. — A drive to organize 15,000 laundry employes in New Jersey under the direction of the United Laundry Workers Organizing Committee, CIO, was announced by Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and chairman of the Committee.

The Committee has organized 30,000 laundry workers in New York City during the past year.

Western Union Admits Support of Fake Union

NEW YORK. — The Association of Western Union Employes, phoney union, was considered "company business," J. C. Willever, Western Union vice-president, admitted at National Labor Relations Board hearings here.

The wire service, he testified, had paid salaries and furnished free transportation to Association leaders traveling to convention.

Willever also admitted that the company provided free telegram service to the heads of the so-called "independent" union.

The hearings are on petitions filed by the American Communications Assn., CIO, charging the company with maintaining a dummy union and discouraging membership in the CIO affiliate.

Relief Camps Seen as Scab Nests

San Francisco, Calif. — Delegates to the San Francisco district CIO industrial union council, were asked to warn the members of their respective unions that the camps for single men run by the anti-labor State Relief Administration are a direct threat to all organized labor.

The camps were denounced, not only as a first step toward forced labor and concentration camps, Nazi style, but also as an instrument for beating down the wages of WPA workers.

'Frisco's Town Meeting

Nationwide interest has been aroused in the experimental Town Meeting held by the CIO and the employers' Committee of 43 in San Francisco.

For several hours 11,000 people filled the city's auditorium and heard both sides of the employer-employe relationship problem discussed by leaders of capital and labor.

Turn to page six and read the account of the meeting, and excerpts from Harry Bridges' speech on the CIO's policies.

CIO Social Workers Scoff At Charges Of Blame For Cleveland Crisis

CLEVELAND. — (FP) — State Auditor J. T. Ferguson's charge that the breakdown of relief in Cleveland was partly due to "control" of fund administration "by the social workers and their union," brought a sharp response from the State, County and Municipal Workers of America, CIO.

Members of the CIO union worked without pay when funds were exhausted.

Elizabeth Cox, recording secretary of Local 48, pointed out in a leter to Ferguson that similar charges had been made before whenever the legislature faced a relief crisis. The union categorically denied that its purpose was "to control or dominate the administration of relief in Cleveland or elsewhere.

"We would not presume to allocate to ourselves the duties and responsibilities of relief administrators," she wrote. "We are interested only in the welfare of those clients who are deserving of relief and in the efficient administration of relief by a responsible and competent staff."

The union invited an official investigation of its activities, and warned that Ferguson's charge indicated an attempt "to extend political control of relief administration throughout the state."

New Crisis

CLEVELAND—Present inadequate distribution of food to Cleveland's 75,000 unemployed workers and their families will come to a halt by the end of the week unless the state legislature takes quick action, Mayor Harold Burton warned.

He urged the state legislature to take immediate steps to remedy the situation.

Cleveland had been keeping its unemployed from starvation by make-shift methods for the last two months. The city had used funds from several municipal departments, and laid off the street cleaning force for a week to provide money for relief.

How To Win Votes

A section of the chart prepared by Visual Education Press, in collaboration with Labor's Non-Partisan League. The chart, together wtih mimeographed lectures, is designed to help labor unions learn all the tricks of campaigning in this year's important voting contests.

Coffee Firms Renew CIO Pacts

San Francisco, Calif.—Renewal of agreements with seventeen coffee firms, including an additional gain for the union of two weeks' paid vacation, not in the previous contracts, is announced by the International Longshoremen and Warehousemen, CIO.

Three of the last companies to sign did so after a threat of a strike to be called on twenty-four hours' notice.

SWOC Bests Fake Union In Illinois

Chicago Heights, Ill. — More than 400 production and maintenance workers of the Brog-Warner Corp. employed at its Calumet Steel Division, Chicago Hts., will be represented by the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, Lodge 1027.

The labor board certified the Lodge following a secret election won by the CIO union over the Chicago Heights Steel Workers Protective Ass'n, independent union.

22,000 Negro Workers in UAW Says Martin

NEW YORK.—Out of some 32,000 Negro workers in the automobile industry, 22,000 belong to the United Automobile Workers, CIO, more than belong to any other union, Homer Martin, UAW president, says in the June issue of Technical America, official organ of the Federation of Architects, Engineers and Technicians.

NLRB Orders Poll at 8 Carbon Black Plants

WASHINGTON. — The United Carbon Company, one of the two leading carbon black producers of the country, has been ordered by the labor board to cease discouraging membership in the Oil Workers International Union at its eight factories near Borger, Texas, and to reinstate two discharged union workers with back pay.

The board also directed that an election be held to determine the union representative desired by the workers. The company interfered with a consent election held Sept. 14, 1937, the board reported, and therefore another should be held in the near future, at which the workers should be assured of a free choice.

About 80 per cent. of the world supply of carbon black, used in making tires, radios, phonograph records, telephones, printers ink, rubber goods of all kinds and in highway construction, is manufactured in Texas.

The company has its headquarters in Charleston, W. Va.

Workers To Vote On TWOC

GREENSBORO, N. C. — The Proximity Print Works has been ordered by the labor board to stop its anti-union activities against the Textile Workers' Organizing Committee, CIO, and to post notices of compliance in its plant.

An election was also ordered to be held within 20 days, at which employes will vote for or against representation by the TWOC.

NLRB OK's Charges Of Shoe Union

BOSTON, Mass. — Complaints filed against a number of Lewiston-Auburn, Maine shoe companies by the United Shoe Workers, CIO union, were upheld in the findings of the labor board's trial examiner made public recently.

In his report to the board's Washington headquarters, Henry W. Schmidt reported that eight shoe firms had refused to bargain in good faith with the USW and had discriminated against union members, and recommended that they be ordered to cease their unfair labor practices.

IWA CHARGES UPHELD

GRAY'S FLAT, Calif.—Charges filed by a local of the International Woodworkers of America, CIO, against the Meadow Valley Lumber Company were upheld by the labor board in a decision ordering the firm to break up its company union and to cease interfering with activities of the Lumber and Sawmill Workers' Local Union 53.

'Patriotism' Argument Fails; Electric Boat Must Obey Wagner Act

NEW LONDON, Conn. — Attempts of the Electric Boat Company, submarine manufacturer of Groton, Conn., to hide its anti-union activities behind an American flag were crushed flat by a labor board order upholding charges of unfair labor practices filed by the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers, CIO.

The Board ordered the company to re-hire some 125 workers who took part in a one-day sitdown strike, February 23, 1937, following the discharge of a steamfitter, Frank Sherman, for union activity, and to abolish the company union.

The company claimed that the strikers had "endangered the national defense."

IUMSW Local Six filed charges after the breakdown of negotiations with the company last fall convinced union officials of the "futility of any further attempts to bring about an amicable settlement of the dispute."

During these early conferences with the union, company officials flatly refused to withdraw recognition of the company union and insisted that it also be a party to any agreement made wtih Local Six, and have a part in all dealings with the Labor Board.

In ordering reinstatement of the discharged union workers, the Board ordered the company "to dismiss, if necessary, all employes hired since the beginning of the strike."

The company union, known as the Employes Association, was found by the board to have been modeled on the employes' representation plan in effect at the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, Quincy, Mass.

The union started organizing Elbo in July, 1934, meeting with opposition from the first, but gradually increasing strength in spite of it. In January, 1937, the shipbuilding local made its first approaches to the management for recognition.

Dance Against Taxes

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. — A series of "poll tax balls" will be held throughout Tennessee under the sponsorship of CIO and AFL unions to raise funds for attacking the present tax system.

Plans for the dancing parties were worked out at a Labor's Political Conference in Nashville. The confab, attended by delegates from 87 unions, mapped out a progressive platform based on needs of liberal and labor groups.

LNPL Arranges For Lecture Series

WASHINGTON. — "Visual education" charts, designed to illustrate speeches, have been prepared for Labor's Non-Partisan League organizers faced with the need of conducting labor campaigns in the coming elections.

The chart is the first in a series on the elections, an dit presents the subject matter with pictures, maps, diagrams and graphic statistics. It is accompanied by a seven-page mimeographed lecture, requiring 20 minutes for delivery.

Entiled "How to Conduct a Local Political Campaign," the chart and the lecture may be purchased from Visual Education Press, 840 Broadway, New York, for $1.

TO NEGOTIATE

Oklahoma City, Okla.—With 70 per cent. of the employes of the Black, Sivals, & Bryson Co. organized into an SWOC lodge, collective bargaining discussions with the company are expected to get under way soon.

$100,000 a Year Rail Heads Favor Wage Cuts For Their Employes!

HARRISBURG, Pa. — Citizens of Pennsylvania caught a glimpse of the reasoning which lies behind economic royalists' desire for wage cuts.

Answering a charge by Governor Earle of Pennsylvania that the proposed 15 per cent. pay slash would be "fraught with the greatest economic and social danger," three railroad prexies rushed into the fight.

President M. W. Clement of the Pennsylvania, whose salary was jumped from $60,000 to $100,000 last year, answered that the "economic consequences to the people of this Commonwealth will be more serious" if present wages are maintained than if the cut is made.

President Daniel Willard of the Baltimore and Ohio, who once said he would steal before he would starve, argued that wage-cutting would "tend to stabilize employment and to lessen the effect of the depression."

A prediction that the cut would make it possible for the Lackawanna to hire 2500 men was made by President J. M. Davis.

"If these statements are fair samples of the common economic sense of railroad executives, it's no wonder the roads are in a jam," commented one observer here.

CIO Won 1,825 Strikes In 1937

WASHINGTON. — CIO unions participated in 1,825 strikes during 1937, and won an overwhelming majority of them, figures released by the United States Department of Labor reveal.

While AFL unions participated in a larger number of labor disputes, the workers involved in the CIO strikes were twice as great in number, the department found.

Other statistics found by the Labor Department:

1. Fifty-eight per cent. of the strikes involved union organization, and 81.8% of the strikes were considered union victories.

2. Wages and hours were the major issue in almost 30% of the strikes, and 84.8% resulted in definite union gains.

Less than 3% of the strikes were jurisdictional battles between rival unions, it was found.

Decisions Soon On Wage Bill, Relief Program

Washington — With adjournment of Congress expected this week, labor forces throughout the country kept close watch on Capitol Hill lest its "must" legislation program be side-tracked by House and Senate reactionaries.

Indications pointed to passage of the wage-hour bill, the relief bill and the Walsh-Healey bill, thereby providing organized labor with its greatest legislative victories in several years.

The wage-hour bill, in the compromise form worked out by the joint Senate-House committee, would provide for minimum wages in interstate industry of 25c an hour the first year and 30c an hour the second year. After that time the rate would be set by boards, representing business, labor and the public, which will be established for each major industry.

Eventually 40c

The boards would be obliged to lift wages to the point where, at the end of seven years, they would be 40c an hour, except in those cases where it could be proven that such payments would cause unemployment.

This last feature was inserted to appease southern members of Congress.

Under the compromise fomula, the bill would be enforced by a chief administrator appointed by the president, confirmed by the senate and under the Department of Labor. The administrator would select members of the wage-setting boards for each idnustry.

Approve Amendments

The CIO Unemployment Committee, meanwhile, expressed its wholehearted approval of three amendments to the relief bill, designed to increase its flexibility and efficiency. The Senate, in acting upon the bill, removed the notorious Woodrum amendment, which had forced even monthly amounts, regardless of the needs of the moment.

A $2,225,000 cut in the appropriation for the U. S. Housing Authority brought protests from the CIO's Housing Committee.

The slash in USHA funds will seriously cripple the administration of the slum clearance program, the committee pointed out, declaring that "in view of the increased program which is contemplated and the pressing need for construction under present circumstances of depression and unemployment, the reduction can well be disastrous."

Foiled

Mayor L. D. Schroy of Akron, Ohio, found himself on the spot when the United Rubber Workers, CIO, charged him with trying "to break the back of the union," during the recent strike. The URW is now negotiating with Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co.

Nevada CIO To Have Council

ELY, Nevada. — A state convention to establish a permanent Nevada Industrial Union Council will start here June 19, with delegates from all CIO unions throughout the state present at the meeting.

E. M. Royle, secretary of District 2 of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, is expected to open the convention.

Goodyear In Parley With URW

AKRON, Ohio.—Union committeemen of the Goodyear Local, United Rubber Workers, are negotiating with the management of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company to draw up a policy to be followed in cases of vacancies and transfers which will be in conformity with seniority rights.

Following a four-day strike caused by failure of the company to settle grievances, the workers voted to return to work on the basis of a report of the negotiating committee that Goodyear had pledged to review "all specific cases brought to its attention in which its action since January 1, 1938, may have differed from the finally adopted policy respecting vacancies and transfers."

Tories Try To Knife Healey Bill

Washington — Reactionaries mobilized this week to demand that the Senate reconsider its action in adopting the amendment to the Walsh-Healey Bill, which would require government contractors to obey the National Labor Relations Act on penalty of becoming ineligible to bid on future government contracts.

The bill, which has the support of both the CIO and AFL, has been described by CIO Chairman John L. Lewis as vital to the enforcement of collective bargaining rights throughout industry.

Labor and progessive forces are organizing to demand that the Senate stand by its unanimous action in adopting the amendment on the consent calendar.

In the House, the amendment is now awaiting action by the rules committee.

The campaign of the reactionaries against this amendment, which is designed to secure proper endorcement of the labor relations act, is being countered by labor demands on Senators, Congressmen and Chairman O'Connor of the House Rules Committee, so that the bill may be finally enacted at this session of Congress.

Oil Union Notes Gains During Past Year

HOUSTON, Tex. — Reports of progress and growth in every section of the country were brought by the 300 delegates to the annual convention of the Oil Workers International Union, whose sessions were held here this week.

Despite the recession, which has seriously affected the oil industry, the union was able to add thousands of new members, and to solidify its position in centers where it had already been established, delegates revealed.

Fremming

Harvey Fremming, president of the Oil Workers International Union, which is holding its annual convention this week in Houston, Tex.

In a keynote speech which predicted further gains in the next 12 months, Pres. Harvey Fremming roused the convention to a high pitch of enthusiasm and determination.

A telegram of greetings from Pres. Roosevelt brought cheers and a rising demonstration which lasted several minutes. Other high Federal government officials and state governors also sent wires to the meeting.

Governor Speaks

Evidence of the respect which the union has gained during the last year came in a speech of welcome by Gov. Allred of Texas. The governor's address, during which he said the union had made "an enviable reputation" in Texas, was in sharp contrast to his hostile attitude when the union's plans for a major organizational drive were announced early last year.

The Oil Workers Intl. Union, the governor added, is a welcome addition to the industrial forces of the state.

Allred publicly greeted Adolph Germer, Michigan CIO director and a long-time member of the union, and Pres. Fremming, describing him as "an outstanding citizen" with whom he was proud to be associated in a common cause.

Edwin S. Smith, a member of the Nat'l. Labor Relaions Board, discussed the board's work, pointing out that 14 favorable supreme court decisions have helped to bring about an increasing degree om employer compliance with the Wagner Act.

Brophy Gives Address

John Brophy, CIO director, discussed the work of the industrial union group since its formation 2½ years ago.

"It's just as well that there is a CIO for the people of this nation," Brophy declared. "CIO contracts have lifted a burden of social misery greater than any other agency has ever lifed.

"CIO contracts have meant more food for children and better housing and better clothing—additions to all the elementary needs that men and their families have. They have meant more freedom, more time for cultural activity, a sense of liberty in hundreds of cities and communities in this country that never knew such a feeling before."

CIO Charters Three Fishermen's Union

WASHINGTON. — Provisional charters for three groups of the United Fishermen's Union of the Pacific, representing 5000 members, have just been issued at CIO National Headquarters, pending an international charter covering the whole fishing industry to be issued at a later date.

The headquarters of the United Fishermen's Union at Seattle, Wash., has been granted one of the charters, the other two covering the California district of the UFUP with offices in San Pedro, Calif., and the Puget Sound district, located in Seattle.

Favored CIO Affiliation

The United Fishermen's Union of the Pacific, formerly comprising three separate component unions of the Federated Fishermen's Council, not long ago concluded a referendum on the question of affiliation with the CIO.

Results disclosed that the California district voted five to one, and the Puget Sound district, four to one, in favoring of joining the CIO.

The California district of the UFUP, formerly known as the Deep Sea and Purse-Seine Fishermen's Union of California, was chartered by the International Seamen's Union, AFL, in 1936. The charter was revoked in March, 1937, however, because of the union's pro-CIO feeling.

The Pudget Sound district, formerly comprising the Herring Fishermen's Union of the Pacific and the Salmon Purse-Seiners Union of the Pacific, still have ISU charters so far unrevoked, but have not paid dues to the AFL union for many months.

The three groups in the California and Puget Sound districts, made up the Federated Fisher-

NLRB Wins New Bout With Little Steel

CHICAGO.—Petition of the Inland Steel Company for review of a labor board order to the company to sign contracts with the Steel Workers Organizing Committee was dismissed by the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals.

The order, issued April 5, was withdrawn by the board May 12, following the filing by company attorneys of charges that the hearing on which the order was based was illegal. The company in its latest petition, asked that the board be prevented from withdrawing its order.

The court upheld the board's position that the order could be withdrawn since no written transcript of the record had been filed.

Heywood Broun

The AFL In Jersey

The leaders of the American Federation of Labor should be embarrassed by the official action of some of their unions in Jersey City.

Indeed, I think that William Green owes it to American labor in general to disavow the alliance which Mayor Hague has been able to achieve with certain trade unionists in his kingdom. By lending support to the boss, these men betray the whole conception of organization by workers.

It is not a question upon which labor can divide by any logic whatsoever. Mayor Hague owes his power to the support which he gets from men who believe in sweatshop hours and sweatshop wages.

The so-called red menace may deceive some of Hague's followers, but he himself is quite aware of the real nature of the game which he is playing. And Jersey leaders of the Chamber of Commerce have made common cause with him.

The very men who get together at banquets to weep into their demi-tasses about their love for the Constitution are upholding Hague's hands in his effort to stifle the drive for industrial unionism, even though he has to tear the bill of rights into tatters in order to do so.

Men and women in all crafts should voice their indignation against so-called labor leaders who enter into unholy alliances with corrupt politicians and greedy employers. Labor is fighting to preserve and extend its gains. It cannot tolerate in its camp any who are ready to stab their own fellows in the back.

Workers Rap Cops' Brutality

DETROIT.—A demonstration of several thousand workers last week convinced the Detroit City Council that it may have been hasty in refusing to hear protests on the brutality of the city's police department.

Reversing its decision to shut its official ears, the council heard union spokesmen denounce Police Commissioner Pickert as an "active ally of the management" of the American Brass Co. during the strike of a local of the Intl. Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers.

Police were accused of starting the May 26 riot in which 60 strikers, police, scabs and spectators were injured.

The Walsh-Healey Bill

The principle that the government of the United States should not lend aid and comfort to violators of the laws enacted by Congress, is embodied in the amendment to the Walsh-Healey bill which was adopted unanimously by the Senate on the consent calendar but which at the time of writing is subjected to a move to reconsider.

This amendment provides that concerns which contract for government work shall be ineligible to bid on future government contracts if they violate the National Labor Relations Act.

It is designed simply to remove the glaring inconsistency which exists when the people's will as expressed through Congress is thwarted by the payment of government money to concerns which refuse to abide by the law.

Yet it took an intensive campaign by the Committee for Industrial Organization and its affiliated unions to secure the enactment by the Senate of this simple measure of justice and consistency; and now it is threatened by reactionary attack.

Moneyed interests which stand to profit from law violations and which are anxious to sabotage the National Labor Relations Act have organized every form of pressure to defeat the amendment to the Walsh-Healey bill. Labor and all progressives must answer this attack by mobilizing their demand for enactment of the amendment at this session of Congress.

In the House, the measure is awaiting a rule from the Rules Committee. Write to your Congressman at once, and to Chairman O'Connor of the House Rules Committee, urging immediate action on this legislation which is so essential to a proper enforcement of the National Labor Relations Act; and let your Senator know your opposition to any reversal of the action already taken by the Senate.

Heil Hague!

The demonstrations recently organized by Mayor Hague of Jersey City to back up his denials of the constitutional rights of free speech and free assemblage, are hailed with delight by German Nazis and Italian Fascists.

They are modeled almost exactly after the demonstrations which the European dictators are fond of staging.

The technic of suppressing labor organization and democratic rights is the same in Jersey City as in Germany and Italy.

First a mythical "red scare" is created by an entirely unscrupulous campaign of lies. Labor organizers, liberals and all defenders of democracy are labeled "Communists" and the cry is raised that dictatorship is necessary to prevent a "Communist invasion."

Under cover of this "red scare," labor unionists are manhandled, arrested and driven out of town. Union meetings and the distribution of union literature are forbidden, and other democratic rights are ruthlessly suppressed.

Then, in order to give the impression that these suppressions of democracy have popular approval, demonstrations are organized, at which all the police and political powers and emloyer pressure are used to compel attendance. A big show is staged which attracts many curiosity-seekers, and the whole farce is advertised as a demonstration that the free citizens of Jersey City love to have their liberties trampled on by their petty Hitler.

It is to the eternal shame of certain AFL leaders that they have not only made no protest against Hague's suppression of the right to organize, but have actively supported his Fascist demonstrations.

Such traitors to the labor cause should look abroad for a lesson as to what is apt to happen to their kind. Both Mussolini and Hitler utilized the services of labor traitors until the work of crushing the unions was completed. Then they cast them aside with contempt, giving them just as short shrift as they gave to other labor leaders.

Whatever Hague may think, however, the American people are not yet ready to sacrifice their democratic rights for the sake of Fascist circuses and demonstrations. They still have the right to vote, and Hague might take a glance at the recent defeat of Governor Martin in Oregon, if he wants to know what is liable to happen in a democracy to a petty dictator who specializes in trampling on labor's rights.

Who, Me?

Looking Ahead

Blackleg And Blackshirt Models

THE British trades dispute act of 1927, now being discussed in some quarters as a model for American labor legislation, is known in England as the "Blacklegs' Charter." Blackleg is English slang for "scab."

This act was inflicted on British labor by a conservative government in retaliation for the general strike of 1926. It restricts the right to strike and picket, denies to government employes the right of affiliation with the general trade union movement, and limits the use of union funds for labor's political purposes.

The sponsors of this repressive legislation would have preferred to go further in the direction of Fascist suppression of labor. Only the strength of the British labor movement stopped this and prevented too serious damage resulting from the act.

Many of the more repressive features, in fact, have never been applied, chiefly because there have been few large-scale strikes in recent years.

The motives of the American labor's enemies who refer to this act with a view to amending the Wagner labor relations act, are similar to those of its British sponsors. What they would really like is outright blackshirt legislation to crush the unions, but they regard the "Blacklegs' Charter" as at least a step in that direction.

Stalking the Wagner Act

When Chairman John L. Lewis of CIO received intimations that the proposed study of British labor laws might be used as a basis for modification of the Wagner act, he immediately wrote Secretary of Labor Perkins:

"The CIO cannot sanction such an enterprise, nor permit its representative to serve on such a commission. It will oppose amendment or modification of the Wagner act."

Actually there is no real basis for comparison between the Wagner act and the British trades disputes act. The American act was passed to achieve purposes which had already been largely achieved in England.

Recognition of the right to organize and bargain collectively had long been taken for ranted in England at the time when nearly every American labor dispute still raged around the refusal of employers to accord union recognition.

The purpose of the Wagner act was simply to establish the democratic right of American workers to organize in unions of their choice, without coercion or intimidation by their employers; and to insure that the union representation thus chosen be recognized for collective bargaining.

Any amendment or modification of the Wagner act would therefore involve restriction of a right which has long been established in England and other democratic countries.

Deliberate Confusion

The old advocates of the open-shop "American Plan" have now become advocates of a "British Plan," it seems.

But what they are really trying to do is to create confusion by directing attention to the most repressive British act, while ignoring the main body of established British labor practices.

Leo Huberman, in a recent article in The Nation on British labor laws, points out that collective bargaining rights as established by the Wagner act have long been accepted without question in England, and that advocates of union incorporation and compulsory arbitration will find no precedents there.

As a result of the general acceptance of collective bargaining, British employers do not hire detective agencies to spy upon their workers, nor do they practice the anti-labor violence which makes such horrors as the Memorial Day massacre possible in America.

American labor faces very different conditions from those on the other side of the Atlantic. The legislation it seeks and supports must be designed to meet these conditions.

It is certainly not going to be a party to any plan to use one piece of repressive legislation directed against the long-established and recognized British labor movement, as a cover to attack American legislation granting a very minimum of democratic rights to workers who have long been denied them.

FAECT Hails Link To CIO

New York. — Celebrating the first anniversary of its affiliation with the CIO, the Federation of Architects, Engineers and Technicians pointed to "many important gains" resulting from its ties with the labor movement.

"In the past," declares an editorial in Techinical America the FAECT monthly journal, "we had the very difficult, if not impossible taks, of trying to secure a general improvement in the economic conditions of technical employes by legillation or through a general educational campaign.

"Since the affiliation to the CIO, a marked change has taken place.

"It is an undisputed fact now that the FAECT is able to bargain collectively and in a most effective manner for engineers, draftsmen, chemists and technicians.

"The FAECT during the past year has secured contracts granting recognition, establishing collective bargaining machinery, besides greatly improved salaries and working conditions. . . . .

"Collective bargaining has come to stay; it is the only hope for the technical employe. Events of the short year of CIO affiliation prove that this can only be consummated through the FAECT."

Jersey Labor Kills Anti-Union Bill

TRENTON, N. J. — Reactionary New Jersey employers and their legislative stooges took a set-back this week when the Foran bill, designed to cripple labor's right to strike, was defeated in the State Assembly.

The bill, which would have set a penalty of fifteen years in prison for taking part in sit-down or stay-in strikes, and requiring unions to register, was fought by CIO, Non-Partisan League, and AFL affiliates throughout the state, although at first endorsed by AFL state officials.

A. J. Isserman, counsel for 50 CIO and AFL unions in New Jersey, described the registration feature of the bill as a potential blacklist.

"To require a wholesale registration by labor, is to provide a blacklist which employers could use to injure unions," he stated.

Contray to Wagner Act

Discussing the anti-strike angles of the defeated bill, Isserman denounced it as contrary to the principles laid down by the National Labor Relations Act.

"A strike would have to be authorized under this bill not by a majority of those voting, but by a majority of the whole number of a unit in a plant," he declared. "The present National Labor Relations Board rules of a majority of those voting would not apply in the case of a strike vote."

In Trouble

Mayor Daniel (No. 1707) Shields of Johnstown, Pa., hailed as a model of civic virtue by Little Steel last summer when he fought the CIO steel union, now faces court charges of bribery, extortion and malleasance in office. He is accused of having taken a $36,449.50 bribe from Bethlehem Steel.

Now Ryan's On Spot In South

NEW ORLEANS. — Joe Ryan, ship owner stooge and enemy of the longeshore workers, is being forced to look at the handwriting on the wall on the Gulf coast, as the National Labor Relations Board prepares for a hearing preliminary to a collective bargaining agency election in this port.

Sentiment on the river front is overwhelmingly for the CIO, according to the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Organizing Committee of New Orleans.

Desperate Efforts

Realizing this, the AFL is making New Orleans a spearhead in its attack on the CIO. Fifty-seven ILA "organizers" who are in reality muscle men for Ryan have been put on the payroll and it is announced 100 more will be sent in.

At a recent meeting Colonel John P. Frey, AFL headquarters master-mind, told employers they were to blame for the CIO since they refused to sign closed shop contracts with the AFL.

The Ryan machine has also set up an "Emergency Policy Committee" whose sole function is to yank charters from progressive ILA locals on the Gulf. Widespread revolt is brewing, especially in the west Gulf, as a result.

CIO Wins Easy Victory In Chi

Chicago — Workers at the Roberts & Oakes Co., pork processing plant, voted 254 to 61 in favor of the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee as their union at a Labor Board election. The consent poll was held upon agreement of the union and the company.

There are about 325 workers employed in the plant. The PWOC was the only union claiming to represent the employes, and was unopposed at the election.

CIO Unions Urged To Aid ACA Drive On Western Union

WASHINGTON—All affiliates of the CIO were called upon this week to lend aid in organizing the exploited workers of the Western Union Co.

Pointing out that the "current campaign to organize the employes of Western Union is of extreme importance to the entire labor movement," John Brophy, CIO director, asked that all possible assistance be lent the American Communications Association, CIO, by existing unions.

"The nature of the communications industry, with small offices scattered at almost every point in the U. S. makes it imperative that the message of the ACA be conveyed to telegraph workers through the machinery of the CIO and its affiliated unions," Brophy said.

The Association of Western Union Employes, a company union facing National Labor Relations Board trials in New York this month, provides the company with direct contact with its workers, Brophy explained.

"In order to successfully bring the message of genuine trade unionism to these workers, we must match the coverage of the company union," he continued.

CIO unions were asked to give the names of Western Union employs in their community to ACA, so that they may receive CIO literature, communicate with ACA, 10 Bridge street, New York City, for application blanks, pamphlets, etc.; insure the distribution of this material in each locality.

CIO Unemployment Group OK's Relief Bill Amendments

'Flexibility' Seen As Need

Washington. — Expressing its "wholehearted approval" of three amendments to the relief and recovery program made in the U. S. Senate, the CIO standing Committee on Unemployment this week wrote to Chairman Alva B. Adams of the senate appropriations committee, to Chairman Edward T. Taylor of the house appropriations committee, and to the members of the joint conference committee, urging their retention.

The CIO Committee on Unemployment is one of four standing committees elected at the CIO conference in April. The others have to do with housing, social security and legislation.

The Committee on Unemployment is headed by James B. Carey, president of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, CIO, and its members are: John Brophy, director of the CIO; Harry Bridges, president, Intl. Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union; Joseph Curran, president, Natl. Maritime Union; Richard Fankensteen, asst. president, United Automobile Workers; Clinton Golden, regional director, SWOC; and Ralph Hetzel, Unemployment director, CIO.

Indicates Approval

The letter follows in full:

"The standing Committee on Unemployment of the Committee for Industrial Organization wishes to express its wholehearted approval of certain amendments which were made by the Senate to the Work Relief and Public Works Appropriation Act of 1938.

"It is the conviction of this Committee representing the CIO that it is of great importance that these amendments be retained within the bill.

"We would like to urge, therefore, that Amendment 2, increasing the appropriation to the Works Progress Administration by $175,000,000 be retained. Also, that Amendment 12, providing that $125,000,00 be available from WPA funds for providing relief to needy persons be kept in the bill. Section 2 of Title 1 as amended is a most important addition to the bill and we feel that it also should be retained.

Would Raise Low Pay

"Further, it is essential to retain the amendment of section 9, providing that minimum rates of pay which may be established by any labor standards acts should be operative on WPA projects, and that the minimum monthly compensation for persons on projects should be $40.

"The provision for an additional appropriation to WPA for making funds available to relief and for eliminating the so-called Woodrum Amendment, will give the funds under the bill a flexibility that it absolutely essential to provide the necessary jobs during the coming months. There is danger of a catastrophic emergency arising in relief and in work relief this summer unless such flexibility is provided.

No Sign of Let-Up

"There are no signs at the present time that there will be any considerable decrease in unemployment during the summer months. That will make it necessary for provision of at least 3½ million jobs on WPA immediately.

"The amendments with regard to the establishment of minimum wages on the projects would correct a sore spot in the administration of the WPA. There would be wiped out the payment of wages as low as $19 a month. Certainly no defense can be made for the failure to include this amendment.

"In the name of humanity and the public welfare we urge that these Senate amendments be retained in the bill."

Capital Close-Ups

By Martin Strong

Whether the federal government shall continue to subsidize violators of its own laws by giving them highly profitable contracts will be decided here within the next week.

Does this sound gaga? Does it sound like a columnist's nightmare?

Well, a lot of columnists for much more imposing journals than this have plenty of nightmares these days— so many that calling a working newspaper man a columnist in Washington right now is almost fightin' words. Nevertheless, that first paragraph is nothing but raw red truth.

Whether the subsidizing of law violators like Ford, Republic and Inland Steel, Remington-Rand and the like depends on th fate in the House of Representatives of the Walsh-Healey bill, which amends the law obtained by the same men two years ago.

Plugs Up Loopholes

That law was planned to prevent the same subsidizing that the new bill is aimed at. But manufacturers willing to hire thugs, spies and even the police to defeat the simplest efforts of their employes to obtain decent wages and working conditions can take evasion of a federal law in their stride without even thinking about it.

So Senator Walsh and Representative Healey of Massachusetts are now trying to plug up the loopholes and extend the law's scope. The most important section of their new bill provides that persistent violators of the National Labor Relations act shall be refused government contracts for three years after they are listed as being such violators.

The bill is so plainly sound and simple that it went through the Senate last week with only five minutes' debate. But the House is a different matter.

Those boys are supposed to be "close to the people" because they have to be reelected every two years. But on the all-potent Rules Committee are a group of Congressmen who may be "close" to somebody but certainly not to the rank and file.

And this same Rules Committee which tried unsuccessfully to strangle the wages and hours bill now has the Walsh-Healey proposal in the same anaconda grip, and with much the same southern crowd ready to do the squeezing.

Same Old Slogans

When it come to the wages and hours bill, these defenders of "rugged individualism," or what have you, leaped agilely to "constitutional objections," "sectional prejudice" and similar monkey perches from which to attack that proposal. Not one of these piddling objections can be made against the Walsh-Healey bill, but you can trust such eminent statesmen as "Goober" Cox of Georgia to think up some new ones.

Maybe it's "Communism" for the Government to want to stop dropping cash in law violators' laps. The eminent Cox could think up that one easily, for he already has announced with great violence that for the Government to build houses is "Communism of the rankest order."

And incidentally, although the Labor, Treasury and Interior Departments indorsed the new Walsh-Healey bill unreservedly, some of them even urging that it be made stronger, the Department of War thought it would just be a nuisance to have to obey such elementary principles of fair dealing.

Government refusal to deal with sweatshoppers, child labor employers, chiselers, thug employers and law violators in general is probably a very nice idea, War Secretary Woodring wrote the Senate Labor Committee. The only trouble, he said, was that this might delay the Department's orders for materials a bit, probably would require a trifle more "paper work" by hard-working Army officers sitting at Washington desks from 9 to 4.30, and certainly would make the munitions and supplies for war cost a little more than usual.

Tory War Department

If this sounds shocking to men who have fought and bled fort heir country, it may be well for them to know that it is not surprising to anybody who observes the Capital scene. If there is a reactionary position to take on any legislation affecting labor and the general welfare, you can pretty confidently bet that the War and Navy Departments will take it.

The surprising thing is that the Navy Department hasn't been heard from on the Walsh-Healey bill. Here it is all set to spend a billion or more on new warships, armor plate, guns and the like, and with Tom Girdler and his ilk naturally watering at the mouth for a fat chunk of the business. It is just a natural that the Navy would say: "Give the business to Girdler!"

Maybe it will yet, for it opposed inclusion in the new warship building measure of even the 40-hour week limitation on suppliers of materials for the new battle fleet.

Mooney Hopes For Freedom In Fall

SAN QUENTIN, Calif.—"Deeply disappointed" by the fact that the U. S. Supreme Court postponed until its autumn session consideration of his case, Tom Mooney looked forward to freedom after his case is studied by the justices.

"It means they are going to read the whole transcript and give final decision during the next session," he said. "Meanwhile, I am hoping for the election of a Democratic governor, in which I event I feel I shall be freed by pardon."

CIO Goes To 'Town Meeting'

11,000 San Franciscans Hear Debate Between Employers And Union Leaders

San Francisco — Something new in union-employer relations took place here last week, as the CIO and the employers' Committee of 43 joined to hold a "town meeting" at city auditorium and amicably discuss the many labor problems which have beset this city.

A crowd of 11,000 filled the hall, while the speeches were broadcast over three local radio stations and a State-wide network.

The unions were represented by Harry Bridges, president of the Intl. Longshoremen and Warehousemen's Union, and CIO west Coast regional director, and by Louis Goldblatt, northern California CIO regional director.

Speaking for the Committee of 43 were W. P. Fuller, Jr., chairman of a paint company, and Roger Lapham, executive of the American Hawaiian Steamship Co.

The meeting was orderly and well conducted, but the spirit of the listeners was shown in the standing ovation given Bridges when he took the platform. A wild roar of applause and cheers shook the auditorium, and it was with difficulty that the crowd was quieted so that the proceedings could be broadcast on the radio.

A few hours before the meeting, the San Francisco News published a special edition devoted entirely to the event, and 25,000 copies were quickly snapped up.

Following speeches by representatives of labor and employers, there came a lively round of cross examination among the speakers.

Question Farm Alliance

These question periods found Bridges and Goldblatt probing the relationship between the employers' group and the Associated Farmers, which has hinted it will refuse to ship produce to any firm signing a CIO union shop contract.

Considerable attention was devoted to the working of the Wagner Act, to the union shop, and in particular to the jurisdictional strike. San Francisco has been many walkouts of this type during the campaign of AFL leaders to stop CIO organization drives.

Lapham, of the employers' group called such strikes "useless, senseless and should be condemned."

"We will join the CIO in condemning any strike of a jurisdictional nature," he said.

Can Boss Attend

Bridges was asked if labor would allow an employer to appear before the union membership if a proposal for ending a strike was turned down by leaders or a strike called by them.

Bridges thought most of the unions would agree to such a proposal, but added, "You'll probably find the membership a lot tougher to deal with than the officals."

Debate became warmer when a CIO leader asked if the waterfront employers would sign a contract with the ILWU for the 4000 longshoremen in the port.

There has been considerable bargaining on this problem complicated by the fact that AFL longshoremen's organization still has a contract, though lacking any appreciable number of members.

Attacks Minority Rule

Bridges stated the CIO side of the case. Ten men hold the ILA contract, he asserted, and the employers recognize them as the legal "owners" of the pact. Yet,, he pointed out, the employers must deal with the 4000 ILWU members, and "we are carrying out the terms of the contract.

"We are here in the interests of industrial peace, and those 10 men are on the waterfront to stir up trouble.

"When the owners asked us to arbitrate the question of whether 4000 men or 10 men own the contract, we said, 'Nuts!'"

Lapham closed the discussion be praising the idea of the Town Meeting, and admitted, "I'm not as belligerent as I was four years ago."

Bridges concluded his remarks with the words, "When I stated that we want peace, I stated exactly what I meant. But we also want work."

'The CIO Wants Peace'

(In a "Town Meeting" which attracted considerable attention throughout the nation, San Francisco employers and CIO leaders got together to discuss their mutual grievances. In stating the position of the CIO unions, Harry Bridges, west coast director of the CIO, brought up points which will be of interest to union members everywhere.

(The CIO NEWS herewith presents some of the more important parts of Bridge's speech.)

You have come here tonight at the invitation of the Committee for Industrial Organization, to participate in a town meeting. The subject is important to every one of us. Employers call it "labor trouble." We call it employer trouble. It is the subject of wages, hours, and working conditions.

On Monday, May 9, the Committee of 43 — composed of our city's wealthiest and most influential employers — presented a report on "The state of the city." It was more than a report. It was ominous and challenging. It was a call to action.

What kind of action was not specified, but heavy emphasis was laid on purported losses to our community through labor troubles, A great deal of the responsibility for so-called poor business conditioins was also laid at labor's door.

Labor cannot accept these orphans of the storm that Big Business has deposited on our doorstep. And I think we can demonstrate tonight that Big Business itself brought these nightmares to our community.

Tonight has been set and this meeting arranged in order that labor, before the people of San Francisco, may reply to the Committee of 43's report and forward its own proposals. The CIO subscribes wholeheartedly to this method of facing community problems. We agree that labor relations should be brought to the public — placed in full view—and discussed with the people who, after all, are directly concerned. We believe in the town meeting. In fact, today, this form of democracy is more than a principle — it is an urgent necessity. . . . .

Why Unions?

The Committee of 43 declares: "Labor is entitled to fair wages, reasonable hours and proper working conditions." This is also the position of labor. Certainly labor is entitled to these things. But it has never got them. Otherwise there would be no labor disputes and labor unions would never have been organized.

If this stated principle of higher wages, shorter hours and better working conditions heralds a new employer policy, we welcome it and await demonstration.

Public interest has become a byword in labor relations. We take this to mean that the welfare of the majority stands above the interests of any minority. This raises the question — who is the public?

No Minority

Quoting the Committee of 43's own figures, out of San Francisco's total population of 750,000, more than 100,000 are union men and women. We find over half the total population of this city composed of union men and women and their families.

This union section of our city must be fed, clothed, housed and cared for by our stores, hotels, our apartments house owners and professional people. The welfare of the trade unionists thus becomes a determining factor in the prosperity and well-being of San Francisco.

When we observe the desperate poverty of communities where organized labor has been unable to get a foothold — the Southern States, and our own California agricultural fields, for example — we can understand just how important the trade unions are to their members and to the community.

The welfare of this community extends beyond the limits of San Francisco; it extends to nearby agricultural communities and to the agricultural workers, whose wages are a miserable pittance of twenty to thirty cents an hour — and mighty few hours at that.

Yet we find an employers' organization, the Associated Farmers, closely interlocked with the same interests represented by the Committee of 43, organized and actively engaged in a program to further reduce even these miserable wages. How can we reconcile the employers' position in this instance with their publicly stated position that the workers are entitled to fair wages, reasonable hours and proper working conditions? . . . . .

We have, in effect, a threat of a boycott by those employers who at the same time demand that we renounce union boycotts against unfair employers. We submit, therefore, for your approval, our suggestion that this community constitute itself a collective public agency, instead of an employer body sitting in judgment on themselves, to prevent this problem becoming acute.

Labor's Principles

Further suggestions from us in consideration of the public interest are predicated on a set of principles that we thereby advance:

(1) The right of workers to organize into unions of their own choosing without intimidation or coercion from employers or any of their agencies.

(2) Recognition of unions and principle of union shop. If any dispute arises as to whether or not a union represents the workers, it can be submitted to the National Labor Relations Board, for adjustment through democratic elections.

(3) Complete cessation of the use of labor spies, illegal contracts and other agencies to undermine and destroy labor unions.

(4) Collective bargaining by direct negotiations between representatives of the unions and employers, with the right to strike and picket as a last resort.

(5) Industry-wide contracts with strike observance by employers and labor with the understanding that no clause shall be so interpreted as to mean that labor must act as strike-breakers.

(6) Settlement of all jurisdictional disputes by the United States NLRB, and or democratic elections of the workers involved.

Needless to say, an observance of these principles would in itself eliminate most of the so-called "labor trouble" of past years. But if these principles are NOT observed, we do not know of any plan, method or agency that would not become embroiled in endless difficulties.

Unions Aid Stability

As for the depression itself, I don't think any other community in America has so far weathered it as well as our city. And labor takes a large share of the credit for this stability. We kept wages and buying power up at times when it was sagging to deplorable lows in other places.

In Los Angeles, which up to now has been known as an open-shop, non-union town, the people referred to relief as their major industry.

The Union Shop

Now to open up this closed shop question — wide open. Closed shop is strictly an employers' term, used to bolster their campaign for the open shop. The closed shop on the one hand is described by the employer as the complete domination of business by labor. The alternative offered by employers is the open shop, which simly means a return to the days before unions existed.

The truth is very different from the employer definition. Labor's term is the union shop, or preferential hiring, and it is on this basis we deal with the subject. The union shop as advocated by labor requires the employer to include in union contracts provisions which labor regards as necessary to prevent discrimination, abuse or intimidation.

Respect Contracts

We are definitely committed as a national policy to the strict observance of contracts requires good faith and a fair attitude by both sides. . . . .

But union labor will never feel bound to fell the trees, saw the timber, haul the lumber and hammer the nails in building a scaffold on which to hang itself. Labor will not contract for that job.

The aim of industrial unionism is industry-wide contracts, cutting down jurisdictional disputes and eliminating the necessity of a dozen differena contracts where one will suffice. One industrial contract reduces the possibilities of violation by exactly the number of contracts eliminated.

The Public's Support

Possibily the one answer to the smoothing of all the difficulties is a controlling force exerted by the public. But it must be controlled by the public and in the interests of the public — an enlightened public, at that — and of necessity must not supercede direct negotiations between union and employer.

Discussion and education must continue, and we subscribe to the methods used tonight. It may be well to start tomorrow with open minds and sincere intentions, and at a similar meeting in the near future to again come before you and report progress made.

Public interest can thus be met and served and community welfare safeguarded. Labor wants peace. It wants peace founded upon an honest recognition of labor's rights. The past has shown that when the public has been informed of the facts it has never faltered in its support of labor. We are confident of that support in the future.

As Debate Waxed Hot

To 11,000 spectators who filled San Francisco's Auditorium, leaders of the city's CIO and business discussed their respective slants on the labor situation. Harry Schmidt, president of an Intl. Longshoremen and Warehousemen's Union local, speaks into the mike, while Harry Bridges, West Coast CIO director, and W. P. Fuller, representing the employers' committee of 43, await their turn.

"$4 Play" In New Scrapbook

New York. — A labor play produced on a four-dollar budget is included in the fifth "Scrapbook" issued recently by the Affiliated Schools for Workers, under the title of New Activities for Workers' Groups.

The play, modeled after the Living Newspaper of the Federal Theater, was written and produced at the Bryn Mawr Summer School for Women Workers In Industry at last summer's session.

New Techniques Shown

New techniques worked out for the use of workers' groups at the Southern Summer School for Workers in North Carolina, are also contained in the scrapbook, as well as reports on various labor conferences.

The purpose of the scrapbook series "is to present material of a practical nature to meet the need of those directly concerned with a program of workers' education."

Copies may be obtained from the Affiliated Schools, 302 East 35th Street, New York City, 25 cents each.

Pennsylvania CIO Warns Candidates Of Labor Demands

Harrisburg, Pa. — The Pennsylvania Industrial Union Council, CIO, through its executive council, last week served notice on the political leaders of the Commonwealth that the more than 500,000 citizens who voted for Tom Kennedy in the primaries will not be mobilized on behalf of any candidate in the fall election until CIO leaders have obtained complete assurances on future policies from the present political leaders in the State.

The CIO State Council, consisting of eleven members representing major industrial interests in the Commonwealth, announced that it will immediately initiate a series of conferences with candidates for major political offices and will present a series of demands and proposals to these leaders on behalf of the organized workers of the State.

Seek Many Reforms

It is understood that the State Council will include in it demand not only commitments as to future legislation but will also seek several immediate administrative reforms in various agencies of the state government.

John Phillips, president of the state council, indicated that not only must all represals against Kennedy supporters cease but that amends must be made for the many attacks on the liberal trade unionists of the State that have taken place since the primaries.

It is also understood that CIO leaders will insist before any recommendations for future political actions are taken that many important reforms in the conduct of the State agencies must be instituted at once.

SWOC Lodge Issues Strike Threat

Oakland, Calif. — Refusal of the Boyle Manufacturing Company to grant the demands of Local 1798, Steel Workers Organizing Committee, now negotiating for a renewal of a contract with the company, was met by a strike threat.

The union is asking for wage rates ranging from 75 cents to $1.25 an hour, and two weeks' vacation. The old contract provided for 62½ cents to $1 an hour and one week's vacation.

RENEW CONTRACT

St. Louis — The Century Electric Co. has renewed its contract with the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, CIO. The new pact maintains existing wage rates and improves the seniority system.

Mary Heaton Vorse's New Book Catches Drama Of Unions' Rise To Power

By C. W. FOWLER

"The employers felt safe enough that snowy morning in February, 1936, when a picket line first appeared before the huge Goodyear plant at Akron, Ohio. The rubber workers' union, which had mushroomed to 50,000 under the NRA, had dwindled to only a few hundred. Their company union, the Goodyear Industrial Assembly, was one of the best in the country. Officials felt strong and secure enough for a campaign of 'rawhiding' that brought the speed-up to a new high—after which the piece rates were cut. Now Goodyear was resuming the eight-hour shift, with resulting lay-offs."

They Felt Safe

This is how Mary Heaton Vorse, veteran writer on labor in America begin her new book on the CIO—"Labor's New Millions."

In clear and vigorous language Mrs. Vorse describes the appearance and growth of the CIO, that began that cold February in Akron the process of making employers feel less safe and employes more—by giving them decent living and working conditions and a measure of economic security unknown before.

It was the CIO, as Mrs. Vorse clearly explains, that made reality of the workers' dreams. The thing was done that the labor captains in the higher craft circles of the AFL thought was impossible, because they wanted it to be impossible. For the first time, workers in a score of basic mass production industries were organized.

New Methods

This required new methods. Beginning with her first chapter, Mrs. Vorse describes the new policies and the new techniques put forward by the CIO and responsible for its success.

For the first time in a big strike, the rubber workers in Akron used radio, to give strike news and orders, and to direct strategy. The 11-mile picket line was maintained by thousands of workers, day and night, in zero weather. Masses of men were deployed around the plant with almost military skill. Finally, in the negotiations ending the strike, the power of the CIO was shown in its ability to line 1,000,000 organized workers behind the just demands of the 12,000 Akron strikers.

The victory at Akron was the beginning. In succeeding chapters Mrs. Vorse tells the story of CIO success in steel, autos, textiles, glass, aluminum, marine, agriculture and cannery, office and professional, government, white collar—the score or more fields that the CIO has undertaken to organize, and where it has brought real gains to the workers.

A Many-Sided Story

Mrs. Vorse's book deals with other aspects of the new labor movement as well as with the story of the CIO. A chapter on "The Cost of the Open Shop" draws a startling picture of the social costs of anti-unionism. Vigilantism, back-to-work movements, employer violence against workers, are analyzed in other chapters—each time proving again the logic and simplicity of the workers' desires.

A final section of the book, "What Labor Wants," uses a quotation of John L. Lewis that sums up the workers' hopes and plans: "This movement will go on until the social order is reconstructed on a basis that will be fair, decent and honest. It will go on until the guarantees of the Declaration of Independence and of the Constitution are enjoyed by all the people, and not by a privileged few."

Mrs. Vorse's book is an important contribution to the literature on the new lbaor movement. It is clearly and interestingly written, with a well thought out method of presenting a many-sided story to the reader.

LABOR and the LAW

By LEE PRESSMAN
CIO General Counsel

JUSTICE BLACK AND THE PUBLIC INTEREST

Despite the slanders of his enemies, Justice Hugo Black of the Supreme Court, in the first year of his service on the bench, has brought to the deliberations of that august body the remarkable qualities of common sense and simple language.

A few instances will illustrate his way of deciding cases.

In his dissenting opinions when he cannot agree with the majority of the court, Justice Black has shown that he is sticking to a simple policy of protecting the public interest in every case without regard to the maze of legalisms and technical doctrines by which the issues have become complicated beyond the understanding of the public.

He has pointed out that the clause of the 14th amendment to the United States Constitution which says "no state shall deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law" was not intended to afford protection to corporations, since a corporation has neither life nor liberty; the only meaning which can be given to the word "person" is that it refers to a human being. Justice Black then shows how the courts have twisted this constitutional provision into a guaranty of protection to vested interests against popular legislation. He urges the court to give up its usurped power.

Justice Black has dissented in patent cases. He tells us how the owner of a patent secures a monopoly over the use of the patented article supposedly for a limited period of years.

But through one technicality or another, the courts have granted to the owners of patents increased control over the use of the article and extensions for indefinite periods, with the result that a few concerns are able to secure a stranglehold over the business in that particular article. This situation is true in the radio and petroleum industries.

Justice Black has dissented against extending the monopoly on patents in these two fields because, he says, "by virtue of these patents a privileged group has been able to wield tremendous influence on the commercial life of the nation."

On Public Utilities

In a decision involving the regulation of public utilities the common sense of Justice Black shines through the murky entanglements of judicial technicalities. It is by now notorious that the courts have dragged decisions by the state commissions fixing rates through years and years of law suits at the expense of the taxpayers.

One case, begun in 1931, came before the supreme court again this year on the question of the valuation of the utilities' property, and once again the supreme court sent the case back to the commission for further study.

Justice Black dissented, pointing out that the utilities company had bought this property in 1881 for $500,000; that for a period of more than 40 years the average annual profits were nearly $200,000; that the percentage of profit on the common stock of the company for a five-year period had averaged over 70% to 95%.

In the light of these facts, Justice Black says, a valuation of $20,000,000 which the state commission was willing to offer the utility, was extremely reasonable. He urges the court to stop juggling metaphysical formulae and technicalities and permit the state commission to work out its regulation of public utilities with dispatch and common sense.

Justice Black was the only judge who dissented from the recent opinions of the supreme court which have created a maze of technicalities as to the procedure which administrative bodies such as the National Labor Relations Board must follow.

In the year that Justice Black has been on the bench he has shown a common sense and simplicity that has confounded his enemies and justified the faith of his friends.

Wounded War Vet Chides Jersey City Gold Star Mothers For Pro-Hagueism

By EARL B. DOUGLAS

I address this in particular to those Gold Star Mothers of Jersey City, N. J., who recently paraded in support of Mayor Frank Hague's refusal to permit Representatives O'Connell of Montana, and Bernard of Minnesota to speak in their city in the interests of organized labor, free speech, and free assemblage.

I introduce myself to you, Gold Star Mothers everywhere. I am nearer to you in your loss than anyone else, except other men like me. For the sun nearly went out for me, too. I am a severely wounded man, and for a long while was not expected to live. I have an honorable discharge, several decorations and citations, and since discharge have had some compensation for my battlefield injuries.

I had no mother, never knew one. For I was left an orphan when an infant, had the shelter of two poor farms and two orphans' asylums, and at the age of 14 began to make my own way—a worker! While still a boy I knew what it was to be hungry and cold because I had neither food nor shelter.

I belong, and have for a little over a year now, to the American Newspaper Guild (CIO.) I am commander of a chapter of the Military Order of Purple Heart, membership in which is restricted to those with wounds or gas injuries due to combat.

Like those men of Washington's, for whom he designed the medal of which I am proudest, the Purple Heart Medal, I believe in actual democracy—free speech, a free press, free expression in all its forms.

So strongly do I believe in free speech, free press, free expression in all its forms, that I want those who differ with my opinions to have their say too. In fact, I insist on it. I am willing to fight again, if need be, for the right of my opponents to air their views. I ask you Gold Star Mothers of Jersey City in particular, and Gold Star Mothers everywhere in general, does Mayor Frank Hague permit free speech in his city? If he does not, why are Gold Star Mothers of that city supporting him in his tyrannical suppression of free speech, free expression?

Do not you Gold Star Mothers of Jersey City know that in supporting Mayor Hague's ban on "outside labor organizers" and speakers and lecturers, you are doing the very thing which no doubt would make your fallen sons ashamed of you? I do not like to ask the question, but it must be asked.

Do you not know that if you stand behind this censorship of Hague's it is equivalent to barring all books, periodicals, papers, speakers, lectures, all means of information and culture, from Jersey City except those written or otherwise produced in your city?

Mayor Hague infers by his words that he is not opposed to native Jersey Cityans organizing labor there. The whole country now knows that he is opposed to even that. Actually, what Mayor Hague wants is a nonunion town.

Why do you Gold Star Mothers permit this man Hague to drag the red rag of communism in front of your noses to distract your attention from his own purpose—that of keeping labor in subjection to himself and his earnest supporters, the employers, whose Americanism, as exhibited in Mayor Hague, would be beneath your sons' contempt.

These are not Americans nor patriots nor men.

They are despicable two-for-a-nickel tyrants who wave the flag to cover up their tyrannical wishes. These are the kind of men Dr. Johnson had in mind when he said, "Patriotism is the last refuge of a scoundrel."

Steel Firm Gets NLRB Complaint

Chicago. — The Natl. Labor Relations Board has issued a complaint against the Walworth Co. of New York, charging unfair labor practices at the company's Kewanee, Ill., plant.

The complaint follows charges brought by the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, CIO, that the company had sponsored a fake union and discharged 36 CIO members because of their union activity.

Princeton, N. J. — Albert Einstein, world-famous physicist exiled from his native Germany by Nazi barbarians, has joined Labor's Non-Partisan League in New Jersey.

Previously Einstein joined the Princeton local of the American Federation of Teachers.

NLRB Testimony Used In Harlan Trial

Jury Gets Evidence Of Anti-Labor Spy System's Activity

LONDON, Ky. — Quoting from the transcript of a National Labor Relations Board hearing held in Harlan county months ago, government prosecutors read into the court record an admission of the establishment of an espionage system aimed at discovering membership of Harlan miners in the United Mine Workers, CIO.

The issue involved, no less than the evidence itself, was of far-reaching importance. In winning the court's approval of the use the labor board proceedings as evidence, the government gained a pointe which may be the difference between victory and defeat in its efforts to convict 19 coal corporations and 44 individuals of criminal opposition to the Wagner Act.

Young Lawyer Responsible

After a weekend spent in wading through law books, Walter Gallagher, 27-year-old member of the Department of Justice's legal staff, found sufficient precedent to convince Judge H. C. Ford that the NLRB testimony was admissible evidence.

Had the defendants in the present trial sought immunity when they appeared before the labor board, the ruling might have been different, the judge declared.

Details of the formation of the espionage system had been given the labor board by Ben Unthank, a deputy sheriff who is now one of the defendants in the case. At that time he had told of knowing his operatives by number, rather than by name, and had explained their methods of spying on workers homes and meetings.

More details of the espionage scheme were brought to the jury's attention when some of the spy victims took the witness stand.

Car Bombed

Lewis Arnett of Jellico, Tenn., a miner for 27 years before he became a UMW organizer, described several encounters with the mine operators' agents, and told how tear gas had been fired into his room and his car damaged by bombs.

From one after another of the government witnesses, the jury heard new episodes in the tale of terror which highlighted Harlan mine owners' labor relations policies.

Ted Clark, UMW organizer, told of being met with a barrage of bullets from deputy sheriffs as his car neared Harlan last year. Tom Ferguson, another organizer, needed hospital attention after the encounter.

Charles R. Martin, a coal miner described the workings of the blacklist through which the operators sought to starve union men out of the county. Martin said he was fired when a "friend" let the mine superintendent know of this union affiliation. After that, his attempts to find work were futile.

Lloyd Clouse, another UMW representative, was murdered in cold blood in April 1937 by deputy sheriffs, his brother testified. They had been in a saloon at Harlan, he said, and upon leaving were followed by four deputies. One ordered them to stop, and then started to shoot.

Clouse was dead, a bullet in his brain.

SWOC To Run Camp In July

Pittsburgh—Steel union members in the northeastern region have been offered an opportunity to enjoy a cheap summer vacation, and, at the same time, hear some of the outstanding speakers of the nation.

The opportunity came in the form of an SWOC "training camp" which will be open two weeks in July. The camp was formerly occupied by the CCC and is now under the supervision of the WPA. Located in the mountains of Somerset County, Pennsylvania, the camp is fully equipped with sleeping and eating barracks, swimming pool, tennis courts and ball fields.

Prominent Speakers

For $5, officers, grievance committeemen and active members may spend a week at the camp, and hear such speakers as Philip Murray, SWOC chairman, various CIO officials and representatives of the National Labor Relations Board.

TWOC Lauds Lifting of Handbill Ban

SHELTON, Conn. — The Textile Workers' Organizing Committee, CIO, this week congratulated City Attorney John B. Dillon for ruling unconstitutional a city ordinance prohibiting distribution of handbills.

"Your action," the TWOC declared, "is a most liberal step forward, and for the present takes the city of Shelton out of that class of municipalities which are regarded as being dominated by big business."

Workers, Farmers Hit By Bread Profiteers, AAA Hints

Washington. — The spread between the retail price of bread and the wholesale cost of its ingredients is greater than at any time since 1921, D. E. Montgomery, Consumers' Counsel of the AAA, revealed this week.

Since April, 1937, the cost of ingredients has risen two-thirds of a cent, while the retail price has risen an average of one-third of a cent, Montgomery said.

"Changes in labor costs and in taxes during recent months do not appear to explain the need for the increase in the margin of white bread," he said.

Pointing out that for 10 months the average price of white bread has remained steady, the Consumers' Counsel charged that "in a period of restricted employment and earning power, stabilized bread prices undoubtedly work real hardship upon city and farm families.

"To farmers who grow wheat used in commercial bread flour, the high margins now in effect work adversely in two directions: "They receive a much-reduced price for their wheat, and still pay a top price for bread."

Otis Steel Signs SWOC Pact

Cleveland — The Otis Steel Company has signed an agreement with the Steel Workers Organizing Committee covering the company's 5,500 employes here.

The contract supplements and oral understanding which prevailed in the Otis plants last year, through which grievance committees of the five SWOC lodges were recognized by the company.

Packinghouse Men Advance Towards National Contract

Sioux City, Ia. — Another step forward in the determined march of the Packinhouse Workers Organizing Committee toward the goal of a national agreement covering all Armour & Company plants has just been achieved.

The CIO packing house local at Armour's Sioux City unit was certified recently by the Labor Board as the sole collective bargaining agent for nearly 600 production workers paid on an hourly basis, thus advancing in another plant, the struggle f the PWOC to win bette working conditions for all Armour workers.

Compared Union Cards

The Board's action was based on a comparison of union application cards with the pay roll which disclosed that a large majority of the workers eligible for membership desired to be represented by the CIO union.

At a conference held in Chicago this spring and attended by delegates from Armour plants in a number of cities throughout the country, including Forth Worth, Chicago, Omaha, Birmingham, Kansas City, Sioux City South St. Paul, Milwaukee, New York and Indianapolis, plans were drawn up for a drive to win a national agreement for all Armour production workers.

A Labor Board election among the 5500 workers employed at the Chicago Armour plant is expected to take place in the near future, following the decision of the Board's trial examiner on charges filed against the company by the PWOC.

California Court Convicts Riot Victims!

NEVADA CITY, Cal. — Five CIO metal miners, victims of vigilante strike-breaking raids last January, may have a chance in jail to ponder the ways of California justice.

The quintet, all members of the Intl. Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, were found guilty on a charge of "rioting."

Along with other members of their union, they had been conducting a peaceful strike at the Murchie gold mine here, until the vigilante gang, aided by the county sheriff and his deputies, attacked the union headquarters, drove men, women and children from their homes and sought to break the strike.

One miner is still in the hospital.

A governor's inquiry commission justified the strikers' activities and had condemned local law enforcement officers for allowing vigilantes to sweep unmolested through the county.

TWOC Signs Two Pact Renewals

Boston, Mass. — Renewal of contracts with the Roxbury Carpet Company, Saxonville, Mass., and the National Silk Spinning Company, New Bedford, Mass., have been announced by Frank Manning, New England regional director of the Textile Workers Organizing Committee, CIO.

The Roxbury Carpet agreement, covering 500 employes, provides for vacations with pay, seniority rights and states that no changes in wage rates, work loads, or methods of operation are to be made without first consulting the union.

The National Silk contract provides for equal division of work during slack seasons, arbitration of disputes, and seniority rights.

Wage rates prevailing during the past year were maintained in both contracts.

NEW SWOC LODGE

Dallas, Tex. — A new lodge of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, CIO, has been installed in this open-shop city. Organized by workers at the Murray Gin Co., it will soon open negotiations with the management.

Montana Officials Nip Anti-Union Scheme

HELENA, Mont.—The National Organizers' Assurance, whose "main objective" is to oppose all unions, was refused permission to sell its stock in the state of Montana.

In a letter to the New York promoter of the outfit, Atty. Gen. Harrison Freebourn advised that the N. O. A., in its proposed attack on the CIO and the AFL, would be opposing millions of men and women who "constitute the backbone of this nation."

Declaring that such an organization has no place in Montana or any other state, Freebourn wrote:

"As county attorney of Silver Bow County at Butte, during the copper company strike, I have found out that gunmen, mine guards, strike breakers and scab herders are furnished by such as your organization . . ."

Put Away The Pencils, Boys

OFFICE OF THE MAYOR
CITY HALL
JERSEY CITY, N.J.

FRANK HAGUE
MAYOR

May 31, 1938.

My dear Mr. [redacted]

As Mayor of this city, I consider it my imperative duty to call your attention again to the conditions which for the past year have prevailed in this city.

It is my belief that there should be a public demonstration which will make clear the attitude of all of us, convincingly and impressively, against Communistic activities. Accordingly, the evening of next Monday, June 6th, at 8.00 o'clock, p. m., has been set aside

May I ask that your firm bend every effort to prevail upon your employees to march on this occasion, so that we may present a solid front before the people of this country and show that what has taken place in other parts of the country cannot happen here May I also suggest that it would be very fitting and patriotic if you were to offer to supply flags and music for the employees of your industry or business, both men and women, who will take part in this parade. If the number of your employees does not exceed, say 100, I feel it would be a fine thing if you should solicit their attendance by supplying the flags and having them assemble and take part in the parade. Those who, on account of age or other causes, may not be able to march, could stand on the sidelines to encourage and cheer the marchers on.

Sincerely yours,

Frank Hague

Mayor.

Newspapermen covering proceedings at the federal court in Newark, N. J., where the CIO is seeking an injunction against Frank Hague, were advised by the Jersey City dictator to forget about the story. Hague, shown at top, has done some writing himself, however, as the lower photo reveals. It's a photostat of a letter sent to Jersey City employers, suggesting that they "bend every effort" to make sure their workers attend Hague's so-called "Americanism parade, staged last week.

CIO Backing Helped Pay Bill, Relief Program To Pass

WASHINGTON—Labor won a major legislative victory this week.

The wage-hour bill, fought by reactionaries for the last twelve months, and the New Deal's relief program, were passed by Congress in the final days of the session.

By putting a floor under wages and a ceiling on hours, Congress moved to end sweatshop chiseling throughout the Nation. By passing the relief bill, it gave the Federal government ammunition to fight the depression and pave the way for recovery.

Both bills had the strong, and active, support of the CIO and all its affiliated unions. The organized power of the CIO's millions of members was shown as Senators and Congressmen, many of whom had been hostile to the wage-hour bill, voted in its favor.

Workers in every section of the country had made clear their demands that the bill be passed before Congress adjourned.

Labor's Non-Partisan League, by bringing groups of union leaders from important industrial states to Washington for meetings with various Congressional delegations, also helped bring the bill to a successful climax.

As passed by Congress, the wage-hour bill provides for minimum wages of 25c an hour, effective four months after President Roosevelt signs the bill. The second year the minimum wage will be 30c an hour, and after seven years it will have risen to 40c an hour.

Maximum hours start at 44 the first year, 42 the second year and 40 hours thereafter.

The relief bill will permit the inauguration of a spending program of more than two billion dollars. It also provides for government lending to small business, and other features aimed at getting the wheels of industry to once again start moving at a normal rate.

Summary

A summary of the provisions of the wage-hour bill will be found on Page 5 of this week's issue of The CIO News.

ORDERED TO REHIRE FIVE

Los Angeles — The Union Die Casting Company has been ordered by the Labor Board to abolish its company union and offer to reinstate with back pay five workers discharged because of membership in the United Automobile Workers' local 188.

CIO Hails Passage Of Relief Program

Washington. — A statement hailing the passage of the relief and recovery program by Congress as a "real victory for labor" was issued by the Unemployment Committee of the Committee for Industrial Organization, through Ralph Hetzel, Jr., executive secretary of the Unemployment Committee, and Unemployment Director of the CIO.

Hetzel said:

"The passage of the Relief and Recovery Bill is a real victory for labor. The bill will make it possible for the Federal Administration to meet labor's request for 3,500,000 jobs. The first voice heard in support of this program was that of the CIO last February.

"Labor's task now is to see that this money is spent as it should be spent, where the need exists.

"This appropriation does not fill the present need. Today's level of unemployment would justify the provision of at least twice as many jobs for men and women who are unemployed but able and willing to work.

"Provisions of this bill are only a bare minimum, but the passage of the bill is a victory in view of the great pressure by reactionaries to destroy the whole system of WPA work."

Certify MEBA

Los Angeles, Calif.—Based on a comparison of union membership cards with company payrolls, the labor board has certified the Marine Engineers' Beneficial Association, CIO, as the sole bargaining agent for 28 licensed marine engineers employed on seven tankers operated by the Richfield Oil Corp., Los Angeles.

Fight To Strengthen Wagner Act Will Continue, Lewis Declares

By JOHN L. LEWIS
Chairman Committee for Industrial Organization

The amendment to the Walsh-Healey Act was intended to prevent firms that violated the National Labor Relations Act from receiving Government contracts. This bill would have established collective bargaining in this country once and for all. It was defeated when the Rules Committee of the House refused to permit it to go to the floor of the House where it would have been overwhelmingly passed. Its history offers many lessons.

In February of this year a bill was introduced by Senator Wagner containing comprehensive provisions for the enforcement of the Labor Act applying to both Government contracts and Government loans. This original proposal not only forbade violators of the Wagner Act from receiving Government contracts and loans, but also cancelled contracts and loans which had already been secured if they thereafter violated the act.

At the hearings on this original proposal certain objections were made to the bill which threatened its passage. However, a bill had been introduced back in 1937 by Senator Walsh of Massachusetts, amending the Walsh-Healey Act fixing minimum wages and maximum hours on Government contracts. This bill simply provided that persons who violated the Wagner Act would be placed on the list which the Secretary of Labor keeps of those ineligible to bid for Government contracts, because they violate labor standards.

Accepted Compromise

Although this measure accomplished much less than the original proposal introduced by Senator Wagner, the CIO felt that it nevertheless accomplished a great deal, and we immediately threw our full support behind it. There was only a short period left before the adjournment of Congress. Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, members of the CIO legal staff and Labor's Non-Partisan League worked feverishly to overcome the parliamentary technicalities which stood in the way of the passage of this bill.

The bill was passed in the Senate on June 7. It had been reported favorably by the House Judiciary Committee. The committee refused, however, after the Senate action, to accept the Senate bill in place of its own. This would have avoided the necessity of its going to the Rules Committee, and would have insured its passage.

Refused To Act

The Rules Committee on June 14, after having delayed any decision until the closing days of the session, refused to grant the bill a rule, notwithstanding the fact that the bill had been unanimously passed in the Senate, and notwithstanding the fact that everyone conceded that if it were brought to a vote in the House, it would receive an overwhelmingly favorable majority. The Republicans and reactionary Democrats in the Rules Committee of the House, who are completely irresponsible, refused to permit the bill to come to a vote.

This is the same Rules Committee which prevented any action on the Wages and Hours bill. This is the same Rules Committee whose eight reactionary members stood as a barrier between the urgent needs of the people and legislative action, brazenly flaunting their disregard of democratic institutions.

Organized labor has the right to know what the attitude of Congressmen is on this legislation. It is cowardly to hide a Rules Committee which is notoriously friendly to corporations, and unfriendly to labor.

There are two issues arising out of the history of this bill to which organized labor will devote itself. The first is the enactment of legislation which will compel those who get public funds to obey the laws of the land, and thus to establish collective bargaining in this country. The second is to democratize the procedure of the House of Representatives so that it will no longer be possible for a handful of reactionaries to thwart the processes of democratic government.

The entire committee system of Congress requires re-examination, both as to the Rules Committee and as to the committees which report bills for action. The present system which enables a fractional minority to control our national legislature can no longer be tolerated.

Oil Union Head Asks Continued Drive For Power

Houston, Texas—"There has been no time in the experience of this great international of ours that expended organization was more important than at this moment," Harvey C. Fremming, president of the Oil Workers' International Union, CIO, told the 300 delegates assembled here for the ninth annual convention of their union.

Briefly analyzing the present economic crisis, Fremming urged the delegates to increase and strengthen the labor movement as the only possible answer to the mass starvation that confronts 13,000,000 American workers and their families.

Human and Property Rights

"We are assembled here for the purpose of reviewing the past, to plan for the future and to determine whether or not — as we pass through life in an economic sense — human rights shall take precedence over property rights," he declared.

Reviewing the past year of the international union, Fremming told the delegates that great strides had been made toward the goal of unionization for all workers in the petroleum industry, but that much more remained to be done.

"With the aid of the CIO we have progressed this year," he said. "Our future progress is dependent on everyone assembled in this room today. I want to repeat that the goal of our union is to organize and to act for every worker in the petroleum industry in the U. S."

Featured Speakers

John Brophy, CIO director, and Edwin S. Smith, were two featured speakers at the convention. Brophy outlined the program for unity of the CIO, laying special stress on unity through industrial organization. Smith told of the role of the Labor Act and the Board as a bulwark against Fascism in this country through its aid to American workers in their struggle for organization and collective bargaining.

James V. Allred, governor of Texas, also addressed the convention, decrying efforts of enemies of labor and progress to create an artificial split between himself as Governor and the Oil Workers Union.

Officers Re-Elected

President Fremming, Vice-Presidents J. L. Coulter and B. J. Schafer, and Secretary-Treasurer E. C. Conarty were re-elected as officers of the international union.

William Hansford, of Rodeo, Calif., W. A. Urban, of Parco, Wyo., A. Z. Dennis, of Longview, Tex., J. E. Crossland, of Pasadena, Tex., H. Stratton, of Oklahoma, D. R. Stewart, of Hammond, Ind., and John Cordwell, of Chester, Pa., were elected to the executive council.

Resolutions Passed

Resolutions passed by the convention included measures urging CIO-AFL unity, defense of the Labor Act, tightening of contracts, amendment of the Hot Oil Act, support of the workers of Republican Spain, freedom of Tom Mooney and Billings, and denunciation of Mayor Frank "I am the Law" Hague of Jersey City.

Labor Vets' Post Seeks Members

Chicago—The Chicago Union Labor Post of the American Legion is seeking members in that city from the ranks of active trade unionists.

Formed in 1928, the Post has been frequently successful in checking anti-labor activities by other Legion groups. In 1930 the Labor Post succeeded in winning an amendment to the Illinois Legion contitution forbidding Posts to interfere in labor disputes.

Last year the Chicago group took an active stand against the Sheppard-Hill "industrial mobilization" bill, which it criticized as a "dangerous attack on American institutions and ideals" and a failure to regular war profits.

Recently the Post called upon the Legion's National Commander to investigate the part played by the Legion in Mayor Hague's campaign to fight unions in Jersey City.

REINSTATE ACW MAN

Muscatine, Ia. — A dispute between the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, CIO, and the Hawkeye Pearl Button Co. has been settled with the acceptance by the firm of a stipulation drawn up by the labor board providing for the reinstatement of a worker fired for union activity, with back wages amounting to $460. The company also agreed to offer to take back 56 other employes.

U. S. Ready To Rest Case In Harlan Trials

London, Ky. — Interest in the trial of coal operators and sheriffs accused of criminally conspiring against the Wagner Act shifted from the long recital of violence in bloody Harlan County to the more technical problems of interstate commerce.

Of the 19 companies involved in the case, only the Blue Diamond Coal Co. admitted participating in interstate buying and selling operations. The other companies, in an effort to quash the government's case by denying the Federal court's jurisdiction, disclaimed such activity, though their coal was disposed of outside the boundaries of the State.

Refuse To Testify

Some of the defendants refused to testify about their concerns' commercial activities.

Previously the case had slowed down to a walk because of the illness of one of the jurors. After postponing sessions for one day, the judge ordered an alternate juror to duty and excused the sick member of the panel from further work.

The lull followed a new murder in Harlan. Leslie Smithers, a miner employed by the Harlan Central Coal Co., had served as a government witness in the case, testifying against the company, one of the defendants at the trial.

Smithers was killed during a fight near the mine, 80 miles from this courthouse.

"Billygoat" Fee and his younger brother, Clyde, were pailed for the killing.

From Mrs. Mallie Musick, the government's 128 witness, the court heard a tale of another murder.

Wiping her eyes, she told how her youngest son had been killed as he sat in the living room of their home one January night in 1937. The government charges that the shooting was done by deputy sherrifs, gunning for her husband, a man who doubled up or-Mine Workers with preaching in small mountain parishes.

The father had left home for the day, and the rest of the family were seated in the living room of their small home. Two bullets suddenly tore through the door, one of them hitting Bennett Musick and killing him instantly.

Other government witnesses have testified to seeing deputy sherrifs in cars near the Musick home at the time of the shooting.

Directed Harlan Terror

Theodore Middleton, former high sheriff of Harlan County, Kentucky, and Sec. George S. Ward, of the Harlan County Coal Operators' Assn., (right) who are accused of directing a campaign of terrorism against the United Mine Workers, CIO. Both men are defendants in the current federal trial of coal operators and former police officers.

ACA Locals Protest Layoffs

Washington — Western Union and Postal Locals of the American Communications Association introduced resolutions into the Maryland and District of Columbia Industrial Union Council last week opposing the furloughing of employes of both Westen Union and Postal Telegraph in Washington, D. C.

The resolution points out that furlough of these employes will result in speed-up of those remaining workers and be detrimental to the telegraph service rendered the public. It is contended by the ACA that impairment of the telegraph service will result in loss of business and revenue by the telegraph companies which will necessitate further layoffs.

Copies of the resolutions were sent to R. B. White, president, and J. W. Ayers, traffic manager, of Western Union; E. C. Kramer trustee, and T. P. Dowd, superintendent of Postal Telegraph.

Hague Sees Red

Newark, N. J. — All "Communists" should be deported or sent to concentration camps, Mayor Frank Hague testified this week in the Federal Court suit brought by the CIO and the American Civil Liberties Union and aimed at restoring American democracy to Jersey City.

The term "Communist," however, proved to have an elastic definition in the Jersey Fuehrer's mind.

Thus, according to his own testimoney, all officials of the CIO, with the exception of John L. Lewis, are Communists. Also labeled by the mayor were Congressman Bernard, Minnesota Farmer-Laborite; Congressman Jerry O'Connell, Montana Democrat; Morris Ernst, counsel for the American Civil Liberties Union, and numerous others.

Lewis Blasts Rules Committee's Action

Washington.—The Tory-minded House Rules Committee lived up to form again this week, when it refused to give a place on the House calendar to the Walsh-Healey Bill, designed to bar government contractors from violating the Wagner Act.

The committee's action, made without a record vote, drew fire from CIO Chairman John L. Lewis, who had been taking a leading part in seeking Congressional support for the bill.

The bill had been passed by the Senate, but the Rules Committee refused to let members of the House vote on the measure.

Chairman Lewis attacked the Rules Committee as "notoriously friendly to corporations and antagonistic to labor."

"Under Corporate Lash"

The committee several months ago attempted to forestall House action on the wage-hour bill, to bring the measure to the floor.

"There is no question," Lewis continued, "but that the Rules Committee has been acting under the corporate lash this session. We think the action of the Rules Committee not only was cowardly but pusillanimous.

"We think that the Democratic House organization should do something about this condition. We have so told the Speaker and he stated he would give further consideration to the matter."

Right to Know

The CIO leader declared millions of Americans have "the right to know how their paid Representatives vote."

"The Rules Committee constituted itself a super-legislative agency to deny the House a vote on a measure that passed the Senate and stood examination on its merits by the House Judiciary Committee.

"We hold that Congress has the right to vote on that measure. In a short time Congress will adjourn and many of its members will be asking the support of labor in their re-election campaigns. We want to know how good friends they have been. It is a cowardly thing to hide behind the Rules Committee."

The bill, if passed, would have barred anti-union companies, like Republic Steel, Bethlehem Steel, Ford Motors and others, from being granted government contracts while they continued in their refusal to abide by the Natl. Labor Relations Act.

MORE CHISELING

Hartford, Conn., (FP)—Fifteen of the first fifty payrolls audited under the unemployment compensation act by the State Labor Department show that the firms have understated their payrolls on an average of $2500 for tax reports.

Southern Workers Stand Fast By Unions During Crisis

Atlanta, Ga. — Will newly-organized southern labor stick by its unions?

Most emphatically, Yes! is the answer provided by Lucy Randolph Mason, TWOC public relations representative for the south, in a letter widely printed in the newspapers of this area.

"All over the South textile workers are sticking with grim determination in the face of close-downs, part time work and lock-outs.

"Hope has come to them at last —hope in the exercise of their strength through organization. In the midst of the most bitter unemployment the textile industry has known for years, this hope holds workers together and welds them into union solidarity.

Great Unity Seen

"It takes cement as well as bricks to build a house. TWOC supplies the cement out of which Southern workers build their union house."

Recently, Miss Randolph declared, "I was in a meeting of 400 textile workers, gathered to hear the terms of a contract just negotiated for them by their union representatives. They were there to vote acceptance or rejection of the contract and each of its terms.

"The contract was not quite all that they had wished, but it marked the farthest advance they had made in five years of collective bargaining. It was accepted by a unanimous vote and a storm of applause for those who had carried the negotiations to a successful conclusion.

"Great pressure had been exerted upon those people to destroy their union. The mill was nearly closed for months. They had gone destitute and hungry. Suffering among them was acute. But they had held firm and their strength won a union contract.

Beat Citizens' Committee

"Not long before that I was at a meeting of 1000 people in a town where 1400 workers were faced with the ultimatum of the mill management that they come back to work after four months' lockout on the management's terms and without a union—or lose their jobs permanently through the dismantling of the mill and the transfer of its business to other mills in the chain.

"But in the face of the rampant citizens' committee composed of the town's leading men and organized to support the company in defeating the union, those people stuck to their principle—'We go back to work as a union and negotiate with the company, or we do not go back at all."

"Because of their sticking capacity, the management has recognized the union and is now negotiating with its representatives."

Jobless Benefit As Relief Program Gets Congress' OK

Washington—Congress this week approved of a relief appropriation amounting to over $3,750,000,000 to help the government aid distressed workers and farmers and help smash the business depression.

The bill, as it was passed, carries out President Roosevelt's general relief-recovery program. It had the active support of the CIO, which called the program an important step towards providing millions of American unemployed with government jobs.

WPA is provided with more than a billion and a half dollars to finance the new job program. Direct relief funds, however, are limited to $25,000,000.

PWA was granted $96,500,000 in new funds to continue its public works building program, together with the use of a $400,000,000 "revolving fund" accumulated through the sale of municipal bonds..

Funds for Housing

The Farm Security Administration was allotted $275,000,000. The Rural Electrification Administration was given authority to borrow 100 million dollars from the RFC for loans to rural groups for installation of electric power systems.

The U. S. Housing Authority, engaged in financing slum clearance projects, was granted the power to increase its loans by $300,000,000, a request which the CIO had strongly supported. In addition, a move to cripple the USHA's work by slicing its administrative appropriation was thwarted when the full amount was restored in the final drafting of the bill.

The CIO Housing Committee had written a letter to Senate and House leaders sharply criticizing the threatened cut.

A $212,000,000 fund for paying farmers "parity prices" is also included in the bill.

On CIO "Must" List

Adoption of the relief program had ranked high on the CIO's legislative program.

At the meeting of the CIO in Washington in April, passage of a relief bill was strongly urged. In a number of speeches in remonths CIO Chairman John L. Lewis has indicated the need of the relief program to avert economic disaster in the nation.

Analysis

Ralph Hetzel, Jr., CIO Unemployment Director, will write an analysis of the relief bill in next week's issue of The CIO NEWS.

WPA To Distribute Clothes

Washington. — The WPA will buy $10,000,000 worth of men's, women's and children's union-made clothing for distribution to the unemployed, WPA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins announced this week.

The action will practically dispose of the present surplus of clothing goods, and will provide increased employment for 160,000 clothing workers, it was announced.

Hillman's Idea

The plan was first proposed by President Sidney Hillman of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, CIO, who conferred with Hopkins last week about the plan.

Purchases will be made from manufacturers throughout the country at once, and will be distributed through state departments of public welfare. It will be the first purchase of ready-made garments by WPA.

NEW LOCAL

CHARLESTON, W. Va.—A new union has been added to the growing list of CIO local bodies with the chartering of the United Hotel and Bartenders' Local Industrial Union 829.

Predict Wage-Hour Bill Will Curb Sweatshops, Give Aid To Unions

WASHINGTON—The wage-hour bill was in the White House this week awaiting signature by President Roosevelt, while progressive forces throughout the country hailed passage of the measure as a major victory for labor.

By a vote of 290-89, the House of Representatives approved the act. Less than half an hour later the Senate, in a voice vote, took similar action.

Thus wage-hour legislation headed for the Federal statute books, giving evidence of the growing political strength of the CIO, led by Chairman John L. Lewis.

Led Fight

CIO Chairman John L. Lewis, who led the CIO unions in their fight for passage of the wage-hour and relief-recovery bills. Chairman Lewis this week criticized the House Rules Committee for knifing the Walsh-Healey bill.

Together with Labor's Non-Partisan League, the CIO unions had fought every inch of the way to secure passage of the bill aimed at eliminating the sweatshop from the American national scene.

The bill sets a minimum wage rate of 25c an hour for the first year, 30c an hour for the second year, and provides for industry boards to raise the minimum rates until they have reached 40c before seven years have passed.

No wage differentials on a straight geographical basis will be allowed under the terms of the bill, though the boards which will be formed to set wages for industry in two years, will be asked to consider economic and other factors in establishing the rate.

Hours are set a maximum of 44 a week for the first year, 42 a week for the second year and 40 thereafter. Exceptions, in cases where collective bargaining agreements with bona fide unions now call for a larger number of hours, are provided for in the bill.

Enforcement of the bill is left in the hands of an administrator to be appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate. Penalties for violating the law are set at a maximum of $10,000 for the first violation, and for sentences of up to six months for second time violators.

Double Indemnity

Workers cheated out of their minimum wages may sue their employers, and if upheld, will receive twice the amount of wages involved, while the employer will be forced to pay legal fees and court costs for the worker.

An important section in the new act forbids the sale or shipment for sale across State boundaries of goods on which "oppressive child labor" has been employed. Leaders in the move to bar child labor lauded the ban as a step forward, though pointing out that it would affect only a relatively small portion of the child workers in the country.

Hillman Sees Benefits

Sidney Hillman, CIO vice-chairman was another who predicted that workers would benefit greatly by its passage. Hillman, as chairman of the Textile Workers Organizing Committee and president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, has been particularly interested in the legislation.

Chiseling employers in the clothing and textile industries have frequently brought wages down to a point far below the starvation level, and at the same time have endangered the unions' wage scales.

"Labor welcomes the passage of the wage-hour bill," Hillman stated.

"The bill is a sincere effort to raise the standard of living of underpaid and overworked labor and to remove the blot of child labor from American industrial life.

"It is a modest beginning to improve the purchasing power of the American worker, and thereby to strengthen and improve the markets for the products of the American factory and the American farm.

"Now that the bill is passed, I venture that industry will co-operate with labor to give it a fair start and a fair trial."

The TWOC, Hillman was quoted as saying, will establish a Washington office manned with economists, research men and lawyers to help workers gain maximum benefits under the new law.

WORKERS FAVOR TWOC

Rock Hill, N. C.—Workers of the Cutter Manufacturing Company voted 187 to 35 in favor of the Textile Workers Organizing Committee, at a labor board consent election.

Newspaper Guild Membership Up By 51 Per Cent

TORONTO — The American Newspaper Guild has been able not only to maintain wage standards but to advance them during the past year, despite the depression, President Heywood Broun told the 180 delegates attending the CIO union's fifth annual convention.

"But for the Guild," he said, "there would have been widespread wage reductions."

The Guild has also made outstanding organizational progress during the year, convention reports showed. Membership has increased by 51 per cent. since 1937, from 11,112 to 16,797 at the present time.

Commercial Employes in Union

At its last convention the Guild decided, in line with industrial union principles, to expand its activities to organize business office as well as editorial employes. It now reports 3,292 members from commercial departments in 38 locals, including virtually all of the big city Guilds.

The early opposition of the publishers to signing contracts with the Guild has been overcome to the extent that the Guild now has 77 signed agreements. Forty new contracts have been won since the last convention.

SWOC WINS 8-Month Fight

Pittsburgh—The Steel Workers' Organizing Committee's eight-month strike against the Penn Iron & Steel Co. came to a victorious climax this week, when the management signed a contract recognizing the SWOC as sole bargaining agency.

The agreement sets up the 40-hour week and $5-a-day pay rate. The company also agreed to charge only half of the rent it had been charging for its company houses for the entire period of the strike.

The Press and Labor

The American Newspaper Guild in its fifth annual convention, held in Toronto, took up the question of its responsibility toward the labor press and specifically toward The CIO News.

This raised a lively discussion. There was no opposition to the general statement of solidarity between reporters of the Guild and the labor press. But the resolution which was presented stated that "most" of the newspapers of the United States and Canada failed to give fair reports on trade union activity.

Some Guild delegates felt that we were sticking our necks out too far. The suggestion was made (and the chairman of the convention admits that he went along for a time with the recommendation) that the adjective should be "some" instead of "most." A third proposition tried to split the bracket and use the phrase, "much of the American press."

And so there was a controversy on the shadings of "most," "much," and "some." When it came down to a final vote "most" won the day. Indeed for a time it seemed as if "all" might be selected.

Although there were incidental humorous implications in this adjectival debate it was serious fundamentally. The men and women who work for newspapers give it as their sincere opinion that the press of America in its news columns is definitely biased and slanted against labor news.

This was the judgment of working newspaper men and women. We ought to know. We do know. The answer must come in a consolidated effort to foster and develop the labor press of the United States and Canada.

How Tories Fought Bill

Washington—Indication of the bitter fight waged by southern industrialists upon the wage-hour bill was seen here in a communication sent out by the "Southern Pine Industry Committee" to "all interested in the wage-hour bill."

The letter called upon business men to start a telegram campaign calling upon their senators to vote against the bill.

"Contact personally and discuss with the editors of your papers the effect of this bill, in order that they may discuss its implications," the letter advised members of the industry.

Attached to the letter was a copy of a column written by Walter Lippman, in which the darling of the Tory New York Herald-Tribune attacked the wage-hour bill as a "sectional" measure and called upon Congress to let the South muddle through by itself.

Food For Political Thought

The session of Congress just adjourned provides plenty of food for thought in the coming months before the next elections. It showed:

(1) That labor's political power can get results.

The wage-hour bill was snatched from the grave which the House Rules Committee had dug for it, when the CIO and Labor's Non-Partisan League demonstrated to Congress labor's insistent demand for it.

(2) That AFL leaders are liable to sabotage labor's program unless forced into line by their rank and file.

AFL leaders knifed wage-hour legislation in the 1937 session but dropped their opposition this year after the CIO campaign had turned the heat on them.

The Wagner bill to enforce the labor relations act on government contracts was killed by AFL leaders' opposition. When labor indignation mounted at their attitude, they did not oppose the Walsh-Healey amendment to achieve a similar result, but failed to give it active support.

(3) That democratic government can be thwarted by the arbitrary powers of the House Rules Committee.

This Tory committee, composed entirely of pre-New Deal Congressmen, was twice used to deny the people's representatives an opportunity to vote on progressive legislation.

The rules committee refused to allow a vote on the wage-hour bill, until it was forced out of their hands by a petition signed by two-thirds of the House members.

The rules committee also refused to allow a vote on the Walsh-Healey amendment, designed simply to prevent government money being paid to violators of the Labor Act, although the measure had been unanimously passed by the Senate.

* * *

On the basis of such experience with the 1938 Congress, labor and progressive voters will want to know a number of things of the men and women who solicit their votes in the coming elections.

They will want to know how they stand on labor's program for the unemployed, for extending the benefits of social security legislation, and for strengthening and enforcing the right of collective bargaining through the labor relations act.

They will want to know how every candidate for re-election voted on labor measures in the last Congress.

They will also want to know how all candidates stand on rule by rules committee as opposed to democratic procedure.

And finally, labor and progressive voters will not be willing to leave their fate in the hands of alleged friends nor even of old-line AFL leaders, but will organize their voting power through Labor's Non-Partisan League to insure the election of candidates who will fulfill the wishes of the people who elect them.

The American Newspaper Guild

It used to be said that newspapermen were too individualistic ever to organize. But nobody can say that any more.

In the last few years, the American Newspaper Guild has established a strong and permanent labor organization, enjoying contractual relations with the biggest daily newspaper publishers in the country.

The recent convention of the Guild in Toronto reported a 51 per cent increase in membership and 40 new contracts during the year. Despite the depression, it has maintained and advanced wage standards. It has won a 40-hour, five-day week and such benefits as severance pay, which was unheard of before.

Not only has the Guild been successful in raising the economic standards of its members, but it has aligned itself firmly with the progressive labor forces through its affiliation with the CIO.

The Guild has shunned narrow professionalism in favor of genuine labor unionism. In line with industrial union principles it enrolls and serves not only editorial employes but business office, advertising and circulation employes as well.

The Guild has shown its public-spiritedness by the strong stand it has taken for integrity of the press. "A man who poisons news is more dangerous than a man who poisons wells and springs," in the opinion of its president, Heywood Broun.

The American Newspaper Guild has brought great benefits to newspaper men and women. It has become a force for enlightenment and progress in the labor movement. It is also rendering sterling service to the whole cause of democracy by its fight to keep the channels of public information free from pollution.

Labor's New Tools

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

The Knocks That Boost

THE brickbats, curses and insults from the camp of reaction that fly about the head of John L. Lewis and the CIO today are a tribute to the growing political effectiveness of the progressive labor movement.

Reaction has the heeby-jeeby jitters. It sees a red under every bed. It froths at the mouth. It alternates between frantic threats, shivering fits and hysterical cackling.

The closing days of Congress brough some strange exhibitions of this phenomenon on the floor and in the press.

Recent elections have shown the labor vote developing into a new, greater and more independent power. Through the CIO and Labor's Non-Partisan League the wishes of labor voters have been more intelligently and aggressively impressed on the attention of Congress than ever before.

As a result, wage-hour legislation which had been considered dead for the session was revived and enacted. The relief-recovery program was adopted. Legislation to hamstring the maritime unions was doomed by the vigilant activity of the CIO. Attacks on the Labor Relations Act failed. The useful existence of the LaFollette committee was continued.

Success rewarded the legislative activities of the CIO and Labor's Non-Partisan League, in respect to nearly every measure on which they concentrated.

Only the Walsh-Healey amendment to prevent government contracts going to Wagner act violators, failed of enactment. It was passed by the Senate, due to the CIO campaign, and would assuredly have passed the House if the Tory rules committee had not refused to allow a vote on it.

Reaction's relief at this setback to labor took the form of a regular hysteria. Headlines, cartoons and editorials in the anti-CIO press heaped unbounded abuse and ridicule on distortion of the events.

Lewis was pictured as failing in an attempt to "dictate to Congress" because he lobbied (as every labor or business leader does at one time or another) on behalf of legislation desired by the millions of workers he represents.

Why Reaction Is Alarmed

It is all very reminiscent of the storm of abuse and lies which broke over the CIO last year, when CIO's industrial successes brought a bitter counter-attack from Tom Girdler and his gang. The virulence of their press campaign was enhanced by the fact that all through it hundreds of thousands of new members continued to flock into the CIO.

Now the CIO's industrial gains are being matched by a less spectacular but nonetheless solid advance on the political field. And with every sign of CIO's increasing political strength, reaction becomes more and more alarmed.

If the movement were weakening or slipping, its enemies could afford to ignore it. Headlines about Lewis and the CIO would tend to disappear. The movement would recede into the same oblivion that has swallowed so many recent flashes in the political pan.

But the contrary is the case. And one of the best proofs is the flaming hysteria with which reactionary press and politicians clutch at every opportunity to slander Lewis and the CIO.

Building Labor Loyalty

One thing reaction overlooks in its tirades — namely, that the virulence of its hatred for John L. Lewis, as the outstanding leader of a great labor movement, is more than matched by the loyalty which millions of working people feel for a leader who draws such attacks for his efforts on their behalf.

The crime for which reaction attempted to crucify Lewis last year was the organization of millions of previously unorganized workers and the winning for them of higher wages and many other improvements.

The crime for which every petty political and pen prostitute slings mud at him today is the crime of mobilizing labor to win similar legislative gains.

He and his associates fought hard and well—and the fight has just begun, incidentally—for a bill to prevent the government from sabotaging the Wagner act and to establish collective bargaining once and for all.

Every attack on Lewis and the CIO for such activity is the biggest boost they could have in the esteem of millions of thinking working people and other progressives.

CIO Raps Handbill Arrests

WASHINGTON.—Telegrams of protest against the arrest and trial of two officials of the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians, and seven members of the United Federal Workers, both CIO unions, are being sent to the Washington Board of Commissioners by chapters of the FAECT and other unions.

Trial of the nine unionists, arrested June 8 for distributing leaflets outside the Washington Navy Yard, is scheduled for June 16. Two of the defendants are Dunbar Kling and Theodore Vincent, chairman and secretary of the FAECT Washington local.

CIO Fights WPA Wage-Cut Plan

Washington—Wage levels in private industry will be endangered by a proposed WPA limiting WPA costs on white-collar projects to $1,000 a year per person, the CIO warned this week.

White collar and professional groups will be effected by the ruling, if it goes into effect, Ralph Hetzel, CIO unemployment director and chairman o the CIO's standing Committee on Unemployment, declared in a letter sent to WPA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins.

The proposed WPA wage cut, he pointed out, "would be in direct contradiction of the stated policy of the administration to maintain the wage structure."

The letter follows in full:

"The Committee on Unemployment of the CIO meeting in Washington this week, has directed me to convey to you the request that the projected order limiting the man-year cost of WPA projects to $1000 should not be issued.

"The effect of this order will be to lower wage standards in the white collar and professional groups not only in the WPA but in private industry. Such an order would be in direct contraduction of the stated policy of the Administration to maintain the wage structure.

"It would be a direct blow to the accomplishments of the CIO up to this point in maintaining wage levels in the face of tremendous pressure. In addition, such an order would do considerable damage to the professional, arts, and white collar projects and to their great service to the American people.

"Already the effects of such an order have been made apparent by the action taken in New York City in cutting wages.

"We wish to urge upon you the great importance of withholding this order."

CHARGES DISCRIMINATION

72 papers, as well as news and photo services and a radio station. Many of them now include advertising, business and circulation as well as editorial departments.

In addition to these signed contracts, the Guild has bulletin board agreements covering 25 papers.

Severance Pay

Benefits won, besides wage increases, includes the 40-hour, five-day week and severance pay, under which substantial compensation is paid to newspapermen who are laid off.

Secretary Charles P. Howard, Director John Brophy and Publicity Director Len DeCaux addressed the convention on behalf of the CIO.

Howard stressed the efforts of the CIO to maintain unity of the labor movement but said that it would not accept a condition under which the work of industrial organization could not be continued.

Brophy paid his respects to Premier Hepburn of Ontario, who gained international notoriety through his threats and attacks against the CIO, by saying that he had "become indoctrinated by Tory ideas from across the border."

CIO And White-Collar Workers

The CIO director described the remarkable growth of industrial organization and the special interest which the CIO has taken in the unionization of white-collar workers. He pointed to their importance in winning middle class sympathies for the labor movement.

DeCaux conveyed the personal greetings of Chairman John L. Lewis to the convention. He described the growth of The CIO News from a circulation of 10,000 to 150,000, with prospects of an increase to more than half a million in the near future. The contribution which the organized newspapermen can make to building an effective labor press was also stressed by DeCaux.

Endorse The CIO News

The convention unanimously adopted a resolution endorsing The CIO News and calling upon Guild members to co-operate with it and with the labor press generally.

The resolution declared that "the role of The CIO News in publishing news of interest to the labor movement which is distorted or suppressed by most of the daily press, is of vital importance."

Both President Broun and Vice-President Jonathan Eddy praised the leadership of the CIO and emphasized that "unity in the labor movement cannot be achieved at the expense of industrial unionism."

The convention ananimously reaffirmed the Guild's "endorsement of the policies of the CIO for the establishment of trade union unity on the basis of industrial unionism."

The CIO plans for a convention were endorsed as a means of consolidating the strength of the movement.

Pres. Brown and Sec.-Treas. Vic Pasche were re-elected by acclamation. Vice-Pres. Eddy was re-elected in a run-off election, winning 100 votes to 32 for Julius Klyman and 21 for Don Stevens.

LOS ANGELES, Calif. — Sherman H. Dalrymple, president of the United Rubber Workers, is on a trip to the West coast, where he is speaking before a number of locals in northern and southern California. It is his first visit to the West since the birth of the URW in 1935.

Newspaper Guild Boosts The CIO News

Toronto—The CIO News, weekly organ of the Committee for Industrial Organization, was endorsed by the convention of the American Newspaper Guild in the following unanimously adopted resolution:

"Whereas, The CIO News in its brief career has made an outstanding record as a labor paper and has broad possibilities as a central organ of information for our growing international labor movement, and

"Whereas, The CIO News, in order to continue fulfillment of its duties and expressed obligations, must have the help and support of the trained newspapermen of the international labor movement who will send in regular reports on highlights of labor history as it is being made in their area, and

"Whereas, the American Newspaper Guild feels the role of The CIO News in publishing news of interest to the labor movement which is distorted or suppressed by most of the daily press, is of vital importance, therefore be it

"Resolved, that this convention go on record as endorsing and commending the work and program of The CIO News and its services to the labor movement; and be it further

"Resolved, that this convention urge its delegates to return to see that news of labor in their home areas is made available to their home Guilds prepared to The CIO News; and to assist in promoting the circulation of The CIO News either through direct subscription or through special local editions."

Journalism Dean Praises CIO Guild

TORONTO — "The American Newspaper Guild has done more in five years to raise the economic status of newspaper workers than the schools of journalism have done in 25 years," said Dean Kenneth E. Olson of the Medill School of Journalism of Northwestern University, addressing the Guild's convention.

"If we are warranted in demanding of our students a better preparation for newspaper work, it is because the Guild has made possible a reasonable financial return for that investment in education."

Court Upholds Labor Board

San Francisco.—The Federal Circuit Court of Appeals this week upheld the National Labor Relations Board in the Seattle Star case.

The board had ordered the newspaper to reinstate circulation branch managers, members of the American Newspaper Guild, CIO, who had been fired because of pressure by the teamsters' union, AFL.

Wholesale Shoe Union Signs With 33

NEW YORK—After a seven-day strike which closed down the business of eight shoe firms, the United Wholesale Employes won union contrasts covering 33 shoe warehouses, and expects to sign up a dozen more before the end of June.

The pacts set up a $20 weekly minimum wage, a 43-hour week with 40 hours during July and August, security of employment, time and a half overtime and sick and holiday leave with pay.

Summary of Wage-Hour Bill Provisions

Washington—Effective 120 days after President Roosevelt signs the wage-hour bill, minimum wages for industry of 25c an hour will be established.

After a year has passed, the minimum will rise to 30c an hour. After seven years the minimum must be not less than 40c an hour, except in special cases where a lower minimum, not less than 30c an hour, may be permitted.

Hours

The bill provides that no employer may keep an employe at work for more than 44 hours during the first year of the act, no more than 42 hours during the second year, nor more than 40 hours after two years, unless the worker is paid at the rate for time-and-a-half for the overtime work.

However, an employer will not violate the law if his employes work a longer week under a bona-fide collective bargaining agreement providing that no worker shall be employed for more than 1,000 hours in 26 consecutive weeks or 2,000 hours in 52 consecutive weeks.

Longer work weeks will be allowed in certain seasonal industries specified by the Administrator, but in those cases only an aggregate of 12 such weeks in a year will be allowed.

Certain industries — milk and dairy processing, sugar and sugar beet processing, meat packing and the canning of certain perishable or seasonal fruits—are exempted from the terms of the bill regarding the hours of work in a week.

Enforcement

Enforcement of the bill will be vested in the new Wage and Hour Division of the Department of Labor. The chief administrator, who will receive a salary of $10,000 a year, will be appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate, thereby permitting the division to be practically autonomous in the Department.

The Administrator will appoint "industry boards" to determine minimum wage rates for various industries.

These rates, the law says, must be "the highest minimum wage rate (not in excess of 40c an hour) which will not substantially curtail employment . . . and will not give a competitive advantage to any group in the iudustry. . ."

After the Administrator receives the board's reports, he will notify interested parties, and after giving them an opportunity to be heard, shall order the board's suggestion put into effect. If the Administrator is dissatisifed with the report, he may ask the board for a new one.

Appeals

Appeals from the Administrator's decree may be made in the federal circuit court of appeals. To prevent hamstringing of the act in the court, no employer objecting to a wage rate decision may refuse to pay the wages ordered, unless the court so rules. Such a rule may be issued by the court only if sufficient surety is deposited to cover the wages in question.

Wage-Hour Bill At a Glance

WAGES—25c hourly during first year, 30c hourly during second year, 40c after seventh year; chief administrator, on recommendation from industry board, given power to raise wages as high as 40c hourly for specific industries prior to expiration of the seven-year period.

HOURS—Limited to 44 weekly maximum during first year, 42 during second year; 40 weekly thereafter, unless extra time is paid for at 1½ times regular pay.

ADMINISTRATION—By new Wage and Hour Division of the Department of Labor; its Chief Administrator to be appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate.

INDUSTRY COMMITTEES—To be appointed by chief administrator, with representatives of employers, labor and public, for each industry; will recommend minimum wage rate for each industry.

CHILD LABOR—Bars sale or shipments of goods on which "oppressive child labor" has been employed.

ENFORCEMENT—Administrator, through Department of Justice, may seek injunctions forbidding state violations from Federal District Courts; Federal Circuit Court of Appeals given power to review finding of the administrator.

PENALTIES—Double the amount of unpaid wages plus court costs for failure to pay minimum wages. Fine of $10,000 possible for first-time "wilful" violator; maximum six-month term for second time offender.

Child Labor

A far-reaching ban on child labor is also included in the bill. It provides that no producer, manufacturer or dealer may ship or deliver for shipment goods manufactured with any "oppressive child labor." The Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor will make investigations with respect to employment of minors.

Exemptions

Exempted from the provisions of the act are employes administrative, professional, executive or local retail work; employes in a retail establishment the bulk of whose trade is not in interstate commerce; employes in the fishing industry and the packing, marketing and processing of seafood products; farm workers; agricultural cannery workers or workers engaged in making cheese or butter.

Penalties

The law makes it illegal to "offer for transportation, ship, deliver or sell in commerce" any goods during the manufacture of which the law was violated.

Violations of the law may be punished by a maximum fine of $10,000, or on second offense, by imprisonment up to six months.

An employer who violates the wage section of the law is liable to suit by his employes. If found guilty, he must pay double the amount of wages due, plus lawyers' fees and court costs.

CIO Asks Social Security Changes

Special Committee Sees Need For Law Revision, Broader Protection

Washington—In accepting the report of the standing committee on Social Security, CIO Chairman John L. Lewis announced a program for thorough-going revision of the present social security laws.

Chairman Lewis stated that "one of the prime objectives of the CIO and its affiliated unions is the advancement of a comprehensive program of social security for the great masses of American workers."

The report, submitted by Charles P. Howard, chairman, and Joseph Kovner, executive secretary, sets forth a five-point program covering immediate and adequate old age benefits for all workers, financed out of general governmental revenue, rather than by specific taxation upon workers; a fully developed system of child care, youth education and vocational guidance; increased services for aid to needy blind and crippled children; the initiation of a health program calling for State medicine and medical co-operatives; and revamping of the present scheme of unemployment insurance.

The members of the Committee on Social Security are: Charles P. Howard, chairman, Jacob Baker, president of the United Federal Workers, Sherman H. Dalrymple, president of the United Rubber Workers, Harvey C. Fremming, president of the Oil Workers International Union, Paul Fuller, president of the Federation of Flat Glass Workers, Emil Rieve, executive director of the Textile Workers Organizing Committee, and Joseph Kovner, Executive Secretary.

Program Objectives

The report states the following objectives of the program:

"1. A developed system of old age benefits, and the care and education of children, coupled with child labor laws, will withdraw large numbers from the present group of employable persons, leaving an efficient and socially desirable class of workers in ages from 18 to 60, and thus lessen the present burden of unemployment.

"2. A fully expanded program of public assistance to handicapped and disabled persons, with a full health service to all classes of workers will remove one of the greatest economic costs now imposed upon the masses and at the same time insure the physical well being of the nation.

"3. Adequate unemployment insurance coupled with workmen's compensation laws and the introduction of disability compensation will tend to reduce the hazards of unemployment which occur even when industry operates at a normal level."

In furtherance of this program local committees on social security will be established throughout the CIO unions so that an efficient organization will be set up, educating the workers to support this fundamental program, while at the same time seeing to it that they secure the utmost benefits from the present laws.

The Committee plans to send out a monthly bulletin dealing with the social security program and current problems to CIO unions throughout the country.

Zonarich Re-Elected AWA Head

New Kensington.—President N. A. Zonarich and Secretary-Treasurer George E. Hobaugh of the Aluminum Workers of America, CIO were re-elected to office, results of the union's vote reveal.

W. B. Gravatt, president of the New Kensington local, was chosen vice-president.

The CIO NEWS was chosen by the membership as the official union organ.

Named as trustees were William Black, Cincinnati, Ohio; W. J. Ferguson, Fairmont, W. Va., and Fred Wetmore, Alcoa, Tenn., Board members are, John Haser, New Kensington, District, 1; Harry Williams, Detroit, District 2; Victor Solberg, Massena, N. Y., District 3; Leonard Brink, Eau Claire, Wis., District 4; and C. E. Earnhardt, Badin, N. C., District 5.

Shipowners Refuse To Talk

NEW YORK.—Request of the National Maritime Union for the reopening of negotiations on six basic points in the proposed agreement with the major steamship lines was turned down by the American Steamship Owners Association.

The association demanded that the proposed agreement be submitted to a referendum vote before negotiating. The union previously submitted the question of holding a referendum to the membership in the various ports, but it was voted down on the basis that six important provisions were unsatisfactory.

Capital Close-Ups

Tempests in Tory Teapots

Shades of Old Joe Grundy!

When the former president of the Pennsylvania Manufacturers' Association and owner of a big woolen company, who was also for many years the State Republican fat-fryer in chief, sat on the floor of the Senate seeking still more exorbitant tariffs on his own and other Pennsylvania - made products — and getting them — the country still struggled along in a state of measurable calm. Not a yip was heard from the editorial dovecotes of the land.

But when John L. Lewis goes up to Capitol Hill, where he has been many times before, and appeals for at least a Congressional vote on a measure of simple justice to American workers, the editorial flunkies of the nation burst into screams that could be heard in remotest Antarctica.

OK For Bosses

It is okey-dokey for the chief panjandrum of a selfish private monopoly to be a member of the legislative body where he can put over new and bigger gouges on the workers of the country. But when the elected spokesmen of a group of those gouged workers exercises his simple Constitutional rights of petition for the redress of grievances the nation's future trembles in the balance!

Of course there are a lot of bloated magnates in this land who still don't know that slavery has been abolished and that political democracy is supposed to be the prevailing rule. Nevertheless, their screams and wails sound increasingly hollow and one can easily picture them conning the handwriting on the wall.

The measure in question, of course, was the amendment of the Walsh-Healey act which would have ended the pitiful spectacle of the Government spending millions out of one pocket to stop violations of the National Labor Relations Act and then taking ten times as many millions out of the other and giving them to the most brazen of the violators.

The Senate passed it in five minutes, but in the House it was the same old story — strangulation by the reactionary majority of the preterpotent Rules Committee.

But its spirit still lives, its resurrection will come and no one recognizes that fact more uneasily than Chairman John O'Connor. For when the noose had been finally and definitely tightened righteous Jawn came rushing on to the House floor with one of the thinnest exculpatory statements ever put in the Congressional Record.

Inasmuch as the Rules Committee reports out favorably over a third of the bills and resolutions referred to it, said Jawn, while other committees in both Houses report out an average of only 25 per cent. of the measures referred to them, any charge of "smothering" was just so much poohpooh.

The only thing that the Bright Boy from Gotham neglected to mention is that every bill which is referred to the Rules Committee already has been reported out favorably by the committee selected by Congress to study the subject dealth with. And then Jawn has the gall to ask: "Who said smothering?"

Not Too Happy

But the reactionary interests who would like to go back to slavery are not entirely happy. True, they got out of this Congress a backward-looking tax law permitting the owners of closely held corporations to escape their equitable share of income taxes. True, they killed the Walsh-Healey amendments and the provision for a $40-a-month minimum for WPA workers.

Tom Girdler and Henry Ford and Jimmy Rand can continue selling millions worth of their blood-stained steel and cars and typewriters to the Government, raking in the profits from the new billion-dollar WPA and Navy building programs with one hand while they gas and shoot and bludgeon their employes with the other. Yes, and get extra-favorable tax treatment while doing it.

But nevertheless, they and their prettier fellow-brigands are right up against the awful prospect of having to pay their hands as much as $11 a week for 44 hours' work, and the still more horrible future of having to raise this sum and cut those hours in the next four or five years.

Mile-Long Parade Features Kansas City CIO Celebration

Kansas City, Mo.—The CIO showed Kansas City the greatest labor demonstration in the city's history as thousands of union members turned out to celebrate the first anniversary of the Kansas City Industrial Union Council, CIO.

A parade a mile long and speeches by prominent CIO leaders marked the day. The parade was a mass of color, with the unions represented exhibiting colorful banners, flags and floats.

Marching in the parade were members of the four ACWA locals; the Intl. Oil Workers Union; the garment workers, the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, the Textile Workers Organizing Committee, the auto workers, packing house workers, retail clerks and several other CIO affiliates.

Noted Speakers

Speakers included H. E. Carroll, president of the local CIO council; vice-president, R. J. Thomas of the United Automobile Workers; Paul Fuller, president of the Federation of Flat Glass Workers; and Leo Krzycki, general executive board member of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

Fuller pointed out that it took the AFL fifty-six years to enroll 3,500,000 workers, while the CIO's membership has climbed to 4,000,000 in two years.

"America some day is going to recognize the hosts of labor as the greatest force for economic salvation in the country," Fuller predicted.

Thomas reviewed the growth of the United Automobile Workers in the last two years, and warned that before long Henry Ford, last anti-union holdout in the industry, would be bargaining collectively with the CIO.

Kryzcki told Kansas City that it might well be proud of its CIO unions. The community, he said, "owes it to itself to offer congratulations and to feed proud of the fact that in the midst of this city is an aggressive force for betterment, the force organized under the banner of the CIO."

"We have been reading about Kansas City in other respects, and there is every reason to believe that the CIO labor forces will work wonders in expunging and wiping out some of the things that Kansas City could not feel proud of in the past," the ACWA official added.

As Kansas City CIO Celebrated

These scenes show how members of CIO unions in Kansas City turned out to mark the first anniversary of the formation of the city's Industrial Union Council, CIO. A mile-long parade was formed by the marchers. Speakers at the meeting which followed were, (left to right), Pres. Paul Fuller of the Federation of Flat Glass Workers; R. J. Thomas, vice-president of the United Automobile Workers; and Leo Krzycki, general executive board member of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

Woolworth's Labor Policy Not Worth Dime, Union Charges

NEW YORK. — Warehouse workers discharged by the F. W. Woolworth Company for union activity gave much damaging testimony against the five-and-dime concern at the labor board hearings which were concluded recently after being in session two and a half weeks.

The United Wholesale Employes, CIO union affiliated with the United Wholesale and Retail Employes, filed charges against the company last fall after 159 workers were fired. Sixteen violations of the Wagner Labor Act were cited by the union.

Among those who testified for the union were a group of employes who played an important role in the organiation of 400 employes in the Woolworth warehouse located in the Port Authority building. They told of the coercion and intimidation to which they were subjected before their dismissal.

Ohio CIO Bucks Slump

COLUMBIA, Ohio—Despite the industrial depression, which has caused heavy unemployment in Ohio, local CIO unions are forging ahead to new gains, according to George De Nuccie, CIO representative here.

In recent weeks new contracts have been negotiated for the United Shoe Workers at the Brooks Shoe Co., Nelsonville; the Auto Mechanics Union, Athens County; employes of the Austin Powder Co., McArthur; Retail Clerks, Roseville; Retail Clerks, Glouster; and the workers of the Ohlen-Bishop Saw Co., and the Marble Cliff Quarries, both in Columbus.

A drive has been launched to organize packinghouse workers in Columbus and the utility workers at the huge Philco power plant.

ILWU Asks New Probe Of Murder Case

LOS ANGELES, Calif.—To reopen the case of the killing of Norman W. Gregg, union longshoreman who was shot by a police officer a year ago, Local 1-13, International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, has made a formal request for an investigation by the 1938 grand jury.

The union claims to have new evidence.

The 1937 grand jury refused to indict William H. Redding, police officer accused by the union of murdering Gregg.

Judge Bans Mention Of Civil Rights

Strafford, Conn. — (FP) —Any mention of constitutional rights would bring lawyers of the United Automobile Workers, CIO, into contempt of court, Judge Edwin Hall warned here as the union fought a ban on distribution of the UAW paper at the Sikorsky Aircraft plant.

Three members of the Brideport local of the UAW had been arrested when they sought to distribute the papers, Local officers claimed they were interfering with traffic.

LIBERAL AND PROGRESS

Hot Springs, Ark. — Liberal groups joined with labor to protest to local authorities the fact that the state labor laws for women workers are being flouted in laundries here. The Laundry Workers Union 102 charged that they are compelled to work much longer than the nine-hour day, 54-hour week specified by the law.

Medical Institute At Work

A member of the staff of the United Automobile Workers' Medical Research Institute examines a foundry worker for traces of silicosis. The Institute has aided hundreds of workers with industrial diseases.

Medical Institute Aids Auto Union Members

Detroit — The United Automobile Workers' Medical Research Institute has proved a valuable aid to the union during the last 10 months, according to Dr. F. C. Lendrum, institute director, in his report to the UAW executive board.

"The most important function, so far as immediate results to, is the medical compensation service," Dr. Lendrum stated.

"The Institute's doctors provide expert testimony in hearings by the compensation court, of a kind that the member's family doctor is neither qualified nor, in many cases, willing to give. The union, therefore, has the services of highly competent and willing physicians to offset the experts hired by the companies.

"The results, in increased awards and in preventing medical frame-ups, have been amazing."

Another of the institute's "vitally important" functions is its emergency strike medical service both for pickets and others injured by police and company thugs and for those who become ill while on sit-down strikes.

Thwarted Lay-Offs

Last October, the Institute reported, it was able to thwart a plan of several companies to lay off large numbers of men in order to evade Michigan's new compensation act.

The Institute's research staff, it was declared, has been "of use to the union in demanding more adequate legislation, in insisting upon safety and health requirements from managements, and in molding public opinion on those matters."

ANG Wins At Minnesota Radio Station

Washington — Based upon comparison of union membership cards with a list of employes, the Labor Board certified Local 2, American Newspaper Guild, of Minneapolis and St. Paul, as sole union representative for seventeen employes of the Minnesota Broadcasting Corp., at its business office in St. Paul and its station WTCN, Minnepolis.

Local 292, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, AFL, withdrew in favor of the Guild to avoid jurisdictional conflict.

PLAN IWA DRIVE

RAINELLE, W. Va.—Sawmill, timber workers and loggers attended a conference called by John B. Easton, president of the West Virginia Industrial Union Council to discuss plans for an organization drive among woodworkers in Virginia, West Virginia and Kentucky eligible for membership in the International Woodworkers of America, CIO union.

Social Legislation Shows Rise Of People's Power In Political Affairs

By ROBERT DALE

Social legislation written on the law books in the third and closing session of the 75th Congress made history in the progress of the nation's liberal and labor forces through political action.

For the first time since President Roosevelt's re-election in 1936 Congress acted in accordance with the will of the people expressed at the ballot box. Distinct progress was made toward a return to democracy as labor-liberal forces in Congress broke the log-jam against all social laws that had existed in the earlier two sessions.

Where the first regular and the special sessions had spent months in futile wrangling, tied in a knot by diehard filibustering against proposals put forward by the President in accordance with his mandate from the people in 1936, the third session really got down to work.

A major milestone in the nation's social progress came with final approval of the Farm Labor Standards bill which definitely asserted the Federal Government's duty to eliminate substandard living conditions in the United States. The bill as made law was in many respects a more effective measure than the one recommitted by the House in the special session last fall.

Triumph For Labor

Enactment of the wages-hours law was a genuine triumph for labor forces which through the CIO and Labor's Non-Partisan League had consistently campaigned on its behalf. The League and the CIO never wavered throughout the many months of Congressional jockeying on this issue, though at times the fight seemed hopelessly lost.

Congressional history was made in the wage-hour battle when for the first time a bill was petitioned out of the hands of the House Rules Committee twice by a majority of the House membership and passed after being recommitted once. Nothing could better demonstrate the high political standing of labor in the nation than the eventual victory on this bill.

The anti-Democratic House red tape by which eight members, a bare majority of the 14-man House Rules Committee, could block a vote on this bill for many weeks, was clearly exposed and led to widespread demands for revision of the House procedure so that democracy might function. An overwhelming majority of the House showed its resentment of such tactics and its devotion to democracy by signing the petition to take the bill out of the Rules Committee. Its passage was a stinging rebuke to the Rules Committee.

Relief Bill

Another decisive victory for labor-liberal ranks was the approval by Congress of the President's relief and recovery program put foward to halt the deepening misery caused by the business decline. This program corresponded closely to the repeated and farseeing demands of the CIO and Labor's Non-Partisan League for a $3,000,000,000 Federal fund to provide 3,500,000 jobs for one year.

Amendments to the Walsh-Healey act, intended to end government purchases from firms violating the Labor Relations Act, were passed unanimously in the Senate. The House was denied an opportunity to vote on these amendments when the House Rules Committee once again defied democratic procedure by bottling the bill in committee.

Campaign Issue

The brazen refusal to act of the House Rules Committee, part and parcel of its conduct on the wages-hours bill, threw the issue of the House rules definitely into the election campaign. Here the Rules Committee was successful in blocking House action on the Walsh-Healey amendments since there was not time in the closing hours of the session to petition it out by obtaining signatures of a majority of the House as labor had done twice on the wages and hours bill.

Reactionary efforts to impose compulsory arbitration on the maritime unions were also definitely halted by progressive labor resistence. A mild mediation bill was enacted to which labor offered no objection.

Other victories for labor and liberals in the session were the voting of another $60,000 for the LaFollette civil liberties committee so it might continue its exposures of vigilantism in this country; the halting of the drive by anti-union employe's to riddle the Wagner Act by amendments, voting of more funds for the Rural Electrification Administration.

Progress was made also toward Congressional action on a resolution to ask pardon for Tom Mooney by California's governor, establishment of a permanent Federal arts bureau to give work for needy artists and enrich our culture, inquiry into monopolies in the telegraph industry, and in halting the vicious May bill which, under the guise of regulating war profits, would have clamped a dictatorship on labor in event of war.

Growing Liberal Bloc

The liberal bloc in Congress, fighting side by side with Labor's Non-Partisan League, was a powerful influence on behalf of the social legislation recommended by President Roosevelt. This group, led by Maury Maverick, Texas liberal, met weekly and discussed strategy. There were one or two sessions with President Roosevelt.

Leadership of President Roosevelt was reasserted in a decisive manner in the session and combined with labor's political strength and its persistent pressure resulted in the one of the most fruitful Congresses in many a year, despite the do-nothing tactics of the first two terms.

Year-Round Work, Pay Raises In Shoe Pact

NEW YORK — Contracts with three large chain shoe stores won by the United Retail Shoe Employes Union, CIO, guarantee 52 weeks employment a year and provide for pay increases of between 10 and 20 per cent.

The agreements, signed by the Wise Shoe Co., Eddie Friedman Shoe Stores and the Coward Shoe Co., cover 200 employes and set up union shops.

RENEW CIO PACT

NEW YORK—One of the largest manufacturers of magnetos in the country, the Eismann Corp., employing 500 workers, has renewed its contract with the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers. The agreement bars wage cuts, provides for hiring through the union, a 40-hour week, time and a half for overtime, and seniority rights.

News Guild Wins Four Pacts

Hearst, Scripps Papers, United Press Sign Agreements

NEW YORK — A contract with the United Press, major wire news service, this week awaited ratification by members of the American Newspaper Guild, CIO, employed in the agency's bureaus throughout the country.

The agreement, climax of a year's negotiations, will bring the five-day, 40-hour week, to workers in 11 bureaus in key cities where the Guild has ben particularly strong.

Minimum salary schedules, ranging from $35 to $50 a week, are included in the contract.

100% Pay Raises

As a result, Guild leaders said, some UP workers would enjoy pay raises of as much as 100%. Overtime, sick leave, and severance pay, as well as four-week vacations starting next year, are features of the pact.

The Guild's Wire Service Committee, urging ratification of the agreement by the men affected, declared, "We feel that the material gains for UP employes warrants acceptance."

A second contract, negotiated at the same time, covers workers on the Los Angeles City News, a subsidiary of UP.

NEW YORK—William Randolph Hearst's New York Mirror and the Scripps-Howard New York World-Telegram this week signed contracts with the American Newspaper Guild, CIO, granting pay raises for several hundred employes of the two papers.

Close to 400 commercial and editorial workers on the Mirror, a tabloid paper, won substantial wage increases, while 200 of the 550 people employed in the commercial department of the World-Telegram are expected to gain pay raises through the Guild contract.

High Severance Pay

The editorial department of the World-Telegram had previously been covered in a Guild agreement.

Dismissal pay scales ranging to 28 weeks' wages after 12½ years of service and a guarantee against wage cuts for the next year, are contained in both agreements.

The ANG, as a result of the new pacts, now has contractual relations with a majority of New York's important daily newspapers.

Mass Picket Line OK, Says Gotham Judge

NEW YORK. — Limitation by the police of the number of pickets who can walk in the line is illegal, according to the ruling of Magistrate Charles Solomon in a case involving the picketing by the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, CIO, of the S. W. Farber factory, Brooklyn.

"Mass picketing is not of itself unlawful," the magistrate said. "I believe the captain went beyond his powers in limiting the number of pickets. The police have no abstract power to regulate the number of pickets.

"Whether pickets are orderly or disorderly depends on their picket line and not on their numbers."

Police had limited the number of pickets to 32, and arrested 14 on charges of disorderly conduct when they attempted to join a line already containing that number. The cases were dismissed by Magistrate Solomon.

Election-Night Strike Aids Iowa Union

SIOUX CITY, Ia.—An election night strike, which furnished publishers of the Sioux City Tribune with far more excitement than the voting returns, won a contract for members of the American Newspaper Guild.

The work stoppage followed refusal of Eugene Kelly, publisher of the paper, to sign a union agreement which had previously been accepted by negotiators for both sides.

Promptly at eight o'clock, just as polls closed throughout the State, members of the Guild stopped work, folded their arms and sat idle at their typewriters. Members of the circulation staff covering polls in various parts of the city, also joined in with the editorial staff.

No News In "Extra"

The first "election extra" of the Tribune appeared on the street without a word about voting. A telephone operator answered calls with word that the paper had no information on the returns.

Meanwhile members of the Guild on the Sioux City Journal were receiving extra pay for their overtime work, as the result of a pact signed at 5 p. m. on election day.

The Tribune strike ended in an hour and 20 minutes, when Kelly, after backing down from objections to clauses in the contract to which his negotiators had previously agreed, put his name on the contract.

Gain Union Shop

Guild members gained the union shop, wage raises which will be as high as $10 weekly, and a guarantee against layoffs for the next four months.

The Guild started to negotiate with the managements of the Tribune and Journal last March, and authorized a strike last May when the employers stubbornly refused to accept the Guild's proposals.

Labor Poet

Theodore Safine, a member of the National Leather Workers' Association, CIO, is a poet and writer whose work has attracted much favorable attention among literary critics. Mr. Safine has written a novel and songs, in addition to his poetic works. His pen name for writing is "Don Valentine."

Cleveland LNPL To Scan Names

Cleveland—Labor's Non-Partisan League of Cleveland will meet June 25 to select candidates for the August 9 primaries.

Six hundred delegates, representing unions, ward clubs and other affiliated organizations will be present at the meeting, when indorsements of candidacies for governor, senator, five seats in the House of Representatives and many local and state officials will be considered.

Meanwhile, the League is mobilizing a campaign against Martin Davey, strike-breaking governor of the Buckeye State, who is seeking re-election this year. Workers throughout the city are being urged to register in order that their votes may count in the crucial contest for Ohio labor.

CERTIFY RBASS WORKERS

..Washington. — Following an election won by the Waterbury Brass Workers Union 1185 to 623, the Labor Board certified the CIO local as the sole bargaining agency for employes of the American Brass Company, Waterbury, Conn.

Bridges Raps Attempts To Split Pacific Maritime Federation

San Francisco.—Shipowners will be the only ones who will benefit by the attempts of Harry Lundeberg and embittered AFL top officials, to break up the Maritime Federation of the Pacific, Harry Bridges, president of the International Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union, CIO, declared at the fourth MFP annual convention now meeting in San Francisco.

Bridges pointed out that plans of disruptive elements were going awry, as the Federation remained intact with all affiliated unions represented except the Sailors' Union of the Pacific, Lundeberg's organization.

Effect Weakened

The CIO West Coast leader charged that plans to have a group of affiliated unions withdraw their delegates during the convention were plotted before the convention started. The dramatic effect of the delegates' withdrawal was considerably weakened by the fact that only eight out of nearly a hundred delegates walked out.

Three of them were from the Sailors' Union, three from the Master, Mates & Pilots, and two from the Marine Firemen, Oilers, Watertenders and Wipers. Two of the five MMP delegates, including J. Kucin, secretary of the Maritime Federation, refused to withdraw, saying that they had no authority to do so.

Two of the five delegates of the Marine Firemen also remained—James Engstrom, who is president of the MFP and Walter Satck, San Francisco delegate.

Tacoma Local Refused Seat

Immediate cause of the withdrawal was the decision of the convention, passed by a vote of 66 to 17, refusing to seat delegates from the Tacoma local of the International Longshoremen's Association, AFL. The action was based on the majority report of the credentials commitee, recommending that the Tacoma delegates be unseated as the local lacked the coastwise affiliation required for membership in the Federation.

At the time the West Coast Longshoremen voted overwhelmingly to affiliate with the CIO, the Tacoma local refused to accept the decision, and voted to remain with the AFL.

No Coastwise Affiliation

The MFP convention issued a statement after the eight delegates withdrew, however, explaining that the decision to unseat the Tacoma delegation was based not on the AFL-CIO controversy, but entirely on the fact that the local did not have the required coastwise affiliation.

Bridges, speaking at a mass meeting of later, offered to submit the unseating of the Tacoma delegates, to a referendum. He said the local represented less than 2 per cent. of the more than 13,000 West Coast longshoremen.

Ohio CIO Book Has Punch

Columbus, Ohio—Something new in convention proceedings has come out of the recent convention of the Ohio CIO Industrial Union Council, held in this city late last February.

Usually convention proceedings are pretty stodgy-looking affairs, as far as typography and make-up are concerned. This one is anything but stodgy, with attractive, modern type, an interesting cover, and up-to-date design throughout.

A Streamlined Volume

The cover is a phot-montage of persons and events at the convention. Type is large, and arranged in two columns, with large type main heads and plenty of sub-heads to break it up.

Altogether, it is an excellent example of how good typography and lay-out can make a convention proceedings volume look interesting. The book was designed throughout by Ted F. Siley, secretary-treasurer of the Council, who is a printer by trade.

TWOC Asks Probe In South

Charlotte, N. C.—An appeal to the Senate Civil Liberties Committee to investigate the unlawful tactics used by the Highland Park Mill No. 3, has been made by the Textile Workers Organizing Committee in North Carolina.

The mill workers went on strike several weeks ago to resist a wage cut and stretchout. Union officials declare the strike is 80 per cent. effective, in spite of attempts of deputy sheriffs to bring strikebreakers into the plant. Picketing at the plant has been continuous and without disorder.

LOS ANGELES, Calif.—Draft of a wage-hour contract to be submitted to officials of the local plant of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company has been approved by members of Local 131, United Rubber Workers, CIO.

Clevelanders Line Up For Surplus Food

Some of the thousands of Cleveland jobless who lined up in the rain last week at relief stations throughout the city to receive handouts from the Federal Surplus Commodities Corp. The government rushed food into the city to avert st arvation while the Ohio legislature delayed action.

Furniture Union Wins Two Strikes

Boston—Strikes called by the United Furniture Workers, CIO, at the Empire Furniture Company, and the National Casket Company, have both ended with a victory for the UFW Local 136B.

An immediate wage increase, with further raises in September, and a closed shop, were won by the empire settlement.

The National Casket Company, agreed to take back the men without discrimination and to open negotiations for a new agreement with the union.

NLRB CERTIFIES ILWU ON PACIFIC

SDE Signs Two Pacts For Auto Engineers

DETROIT. — Union contracts signed with two large engineering tool and die jobbing firms by the Society of Designing Engineers, is an important advance in the CIO union's drive to organize auto engineers, leaders of the organization declared.

The SDE is affiliated to the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians, a CIO national union.

The agreements, concluded with the Paramount Engineering Company and the Mechanical Engineering Service Company, provide for maintaining the present pay rates ranging from $1.40 to $1.50 an hour for tool and die designers.

Aid From UAW

In announcing the contracts, Walter E. Johnson, special CIO representative for the SDE said: "We have been most successful in our first move to unionize the auto engineering field. A number of the most important job engineering firms doing the tool and die design for the big auto manufacturers have signed with the Society of Designing Engineers.

"Our contracts call for sole collective bargaining rights, preferential hiring, time and one-half for overtime, double time for Sundays and legal holidays and a guarantee of no wage cuts."

Johnson called attention to the excellent support being given the designing engineers by locals of the United Automobile Workers.

It's A New Day In Harlan

The scene: Harlan County, Ky. The meeting: a rally by members of the United Mine Workers, CIO. Though the meeting itself was called off to spare the government embarrassment in the trial of coal operators at nearby London, Ky., UMW members paraded to celebrate a federal court decision upholding the labor board's order that the Clover Fork Co. pay $00,000 in back wages to workers fired for union activity. (See Story Page Eight.)

CIO Union To Bargain For 12,000 Shore Men

Washington — Nearly 13,000 longshoremen and allied workers in 31 Pacific ports will be represented by District 1, International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union as their sole bargaining agent in all future negotiations with west coast waterfront employers' associations.

The CIO union was certified by the Labor Board in one of its most outstanding decisions, the first to establish a major geographical bargaining unit in the marine industry.

The certification was a crushing defeat for the AFL group, the International Longshoremen's Association, which had protested the Board's jurisdiction on the basis of an agreement between the ILA and waterfront employers made before the West Coast longsoremen seceded from the AFL and joined the CIO in the name of the ILA.

Both the AFL and the employers protested at the hearings that the bargaining unit should cover only the employes of one employer at a particular port. The argument was ruled out.

Majority Favored CIO

The Board found that out of 12,860 workers in the appropriate union, 9,557 had signed cards designating the CIO union as their chosen representative.

In deciding upon what constituted the appropriate bargaining unit, the Board ruled that it should cover "the workers who do the longshore work in the Pacific coast port of the United States for the companies which are members of the Waterfront Employers of Seattle, Waterfront Employers of Portland, Waterfront Employers Association of San Francisco, Waterfront Employers Association of Southern California, and Shipowners Association of the Pacific coast . . ."

The Pacific coast district of the ILA, in a referendum which began June 14, 1937, voted 11,771 to 3,625 in favor of seceding from the AFL and affiliating with the CIO.

League Meets In California

San Francisco (FP)—Encouraged by affiliation of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific, Labor's Non-Partisan League opened a two-day state convention in San Francisco with 500 delegates present.

They represented CIO, AFL and independent unions, the railway brotherhoods, the Workers Alliance and the National Negro Congress.

E. L. Oliver, executive vice-president of the National League, was the main speaker at the convention.

The opening session was addressed by President George Wilson of the San Francisco Industrial Union Council, CIO, and by Pres. Jack Shelley of the city's AFL Labor Council. Harry Bridges, west coast CIO regional director, urged unity in labor's political action.

UAW Signs Aircraft Pact For 400

Detroit — Signing of the first preferential shop contract in the aircraft industry was announced by Homer Martin, United Automobile Workers president. The contract was signed with the Brewster Aeronautical Corporation of Long Island, N. Y.

The contract covers close to 400 workers, and includes improvements and in wages and working conditions in addition to the union shop. Local 365 of the United Aircraft Workers, affiliated to the UAWA, signed for the employes.

President Martin described the contract as a step toward the UAW goal of organizing the nation's 30,000 aircraft workers.

CERTIFY UNION

Washington — The Inland Boatman's Union, Local 2, has been certified by the Labor Board as the sole bargaining agent for unlicensed personnel employed on the coal and oil barges of James McWilliams Blue Line, Inc., New York City.

UERMW Gets 55 Pacts, Stems Pay-Cut Drive

New York — Fifty-five contracts covering at least 25,000 workers, were signed by the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, CIO union, during the last three months, it was announced here.

The agreements, won by the UERMW in the midst of a concerted drive by employers to reduce wages, prevented firms from putting through a threatened pay cut of 15 per cent. or more in every case, and saved members $5,000,000 in annual wages, the union estimates.

Ten of the 55 contracts were new ones, the other 45 renewals. During the same period the union was involved in labor disputes affecting about 890 workers on strike, and 12,600 locked out to force through wage slashes.

13,600 Locked Out

Four new locals were chartered, 2,457 new members enrolled and 10 out of 11 Labor Board elections and certifications were won in the past three months, the union reports.

At the present time, some 13,600 employes of the Philco and the Maytag electric washing machine companies are still locked out. The firms are seeking to cut wages and break the local unions involved.

ACA Head Unopposed In Voting

New York. — Pres. Mervyn Rathborne of the American Communications Assn. will run unopposed for re-election, it was announced by the union following the close of the union's one-month nominating period.

There will be no contests in the election of vice-presidents of the broadcast, marine and point-to-point cable divisions, with two men running in each case for the two offices.

In the telegraph division, where the vice-president with the largest number of votes becomes the ACA's executive vice-president, Willard Bliss, Joseph Kehoe, Edward Plitt, Joseph Selly and Douglas Ward are in the field.

Election voting will start July 1.

In the last year the ACA has gained contracts with Postal Telegraph and Cable Corp., Globe Wireless Co, RCA Communications, French Cables and Telegraph Co. and numerous broadcasting stations and shipping companies throughout the country.

A contract wit hthe Mckay Cable Corp. is now before the membership for ratification, while the labor board is hearing complaints against Western Union in New York City.

Await NLRB Hearing Results

Boston.—Workers of the Fore River and East Boston plants of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corp., are awaiting results of the hearings held on charges filed by the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers, CIO.

Union officials say that after dragging the hearings out for more than two and a half months, Bethlehem attorneys finally decided to rest their case.

There are 6,000 pages of testimony and 400 exhibits to be studied before the trial examiner hands down his intermediate report.

LaFollette Committee o Resume Little Steel Probe

WASHINGTON. — New inquiries into the vigilante activities of Little Steel companies during the 1937 strike will be commenced before long by the LaFollette committee investigating violations of civil liberties.

The committee recently received $60,000 from the Senate to continue its investigations, but was instructed to wind up its work by next January 5. As a result, it is expected that hearings will last through a considerable portion of the summer.

Activities of Tom Girdler's Republic Steel and Youngstown Sheet and Tube will come under the committee's spotlight. The committee investigated Bethlehem Steel's anti-union actions some months ago.

10,000 Cases Settled by NLRB

Board Helps Gain Industrial Peace Despite Employers' Attacks, Says E. S. Smith

Boston.—More than 10,000 cases involving more than 2,000,000 workers have been settled by the National Labor Relations Board since its first decision in October, 1935, Edwin S. Smith, board member, told an audience of Harvard students and alumni at Soldiers Field, Boston, last week.

This has been accomplished in spite of heavy and prolonged attacks on the Board and the labor act from anti-labor employers, corporation lawyers and big business newspapers, Smith declared.

"From the time the act was passed in 1935, storm signals were run up and the board has been steering a course in the midst of heavy winds of criticism ever since," he said.

Gales From the Liberty League

"The first gale was furnished by Liberty League lawyers, who in their famous 127 page brief demonstrated to their own satisfaction and to employers generally that the act was unconstitutional.

"Newspaper criticism against the board and the act has been almost a daily fare for the three years of our activity. Such criticism has been amply supplemented by the anti-Wagner Act literature put out by employers' associations," he added.

Anti-union bosses pinned their hopes on the Liberty League report and similar assurances that the act would be killed in the first Supreme Court test, but the court let them down cruelly right from the beginning, Smith pointed out.

Batting 1000 in Court

"During the past 15 months the Supreme Court has made decisions favorable to the Board's position in 16 cases and has reversed our position in none," he said.

This had the result of making more and more employers realize that Board decisions must be obeyed, Smith declared, particularly in reinstatement orders involving back pay, where anti-union employer can lose large sums through obstinacy in believing the act was not intended to include them as well as others.

In the 10,000 cases handled by the board, it has settled over 1,100 strikes involving nearly 200,000 workers, has prevented 500 threatened strikes involving 150,000 workers, and has reinstated 200,000 workers illegally fired during strikes or lockouts and 10,000 fired for union activity.

Elections Held

More than 1200 elections for collective bargaining representation have been held under board supervision, Smith said, in which close to 450,000 workers have shown their union preference by secret ballot. Here again a large number of strikes have been prevented, he pointed out, since many strikers are caused by employers' refusal to recognize the union as spokesman for their workers.

In this connection Smith pointed out that eight per cent of British strikes are caused by refusal to recognize the union, while 27% of American strikes come from the same cause. This situation, he said, was one of the basic reasons for the existence of the act, which requires the employer by law to bargain collectively in good faith.

A Fight For Democracy

The fight for the right to organize and improve living and working conditions is a fight for democracy, Smith declared, pointing out that many die-hard bosses have brought about near-fascist conditions in their ruthless struggle against unions.

"A shocking and completely factual picture could be given of lawless and ruthless tactics used by American employers to thwart the growth of unions in their business," he said, citing the reports of the LaFollette Civil Liberties Committee and scores of printed records of Board decisions as evidence.

Smith pointed also to the activities of anti-union bosses in whipping up vigilante spirit against unions, in back-to-work movements, citizens committees and the like. He told his hearers that such employers trying to hide behind a cloak of "Americanism" were themselves the would-be destroyers of American rights and traditions.

Concluding his speech with a recital of the experience of the steel industry, most of which has recognized collective bargaining, Smith said:

"One might even dare to predict that in course of time, as a result of employers living harmoniously with labor organizations, even the much berated National Labor Relations might achieve a certain respectability among those now look on it with such unfeigned distaste."

CIO, AFL on Picket Line

When the A. & P. opened a self-service link in its chain of New York stores, members of the CIO and AFL unions joined a picket line to protest loss of jobs. The chain store outfit, by opening scores of the self-service stores, has thrown hundreds of retail workers out of jobs. Unions represented on the picket line are the United Retail & Wholesale Employes, CIO, and the Amalgamated Meat Cutters, AFL.

League Knocks State's Use Of Unfair Goods

Henrietta, Okla.—Labor's Non-Partisan League in Okmulgee County, Okla., has gone on record condemning the use of products made by unfair companies, in a message sent to Governor Marland of Oklahoma, to the State Highway Commissioners, and to W. S. Keys, candidate in the coming primary race for nomination to the governorship.

The letter sent out by the local League points out that the state is using Conoco and Magnolia oil, both on the Oil Workers International Union unfair list, and Ford cars, on the Auto Workers list, as well as steel products and clothing made by anti-labor firms.

Collier Strikers Win Poll

New York. — The United Carders and Bill Posters Union, CIO, this week won a state labor relations board election by an overwhelming majority as the union's strike on the IRT subway system moved into its seventh week.

The strikers cast 122 votes for the CIO, with only eight ballots being marked for an AFL union.

Charges War On Union

The Barron Collier Advertising Agency, which employs the men to place the advertising cards in the subway cars, has been seeking to destroy the union by intimidation and false charges, local officials charge. Every charge made by the company has proven to be just another of the company's strikebreaking efforts, the union maintains.

The strike started when the union asked the agency to negotiate a contract. With the help of the Transport Workers Union, CIO, the advertising cards have not been appearing on the cars.

The union asks that CIO unions aid their fight with financial donations, which should be sent to the United Carders and Bill Posters LIU 811, 2936 41st Ave., Long Island City, New York.

Maritime Federation Of Pacific Unifies To Preserve Gains

San Francisco—Unity in all negotiations with employers to be achieved through a joint committee of all coastwise unions was voted unanimously at the fourth annual convention of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific.

Other important action taken as the sessions drew to a close, was the passing of a resolution to join Labor's Non-Partisan League and to co-operate in its political activity.

The contract unity resolution put the MFP on record in favor of "a common program to determinedly resist any and all attempts to reduce wages, lengthen hours, destroy union hiring halls, or undermine present working conditions, integrity and jurisdiction, of any component union in the maritime industry."

Will Work Together

The joint negotiating committee which the convention voted to set up is to be composed of delegates elected by each component coastwise organization, and is to meet "jointly under the auspices of the Federation for consultation, mutual aid and safety in determining policy."

This committee is to give all notifications to employers regarding the opening, amending or renewing of agreements, and is to countersign all coastwise agreements entered into by a component coastwise organization affiliated with the Federation.

The resolution, introduced by the Marine Cooks and Stewards delegation, changes the former method of negotiating agreements as individual unions.

SUP Withdraws

Earlier in the convention, the Sailors Union of the Pacific and parts of two other union delegations withdrew. The SUP, headed by Harry Lundeberg, bitter enemy of the CIO, announced later that the sailors had voted 2087 to 918 to return to the AFL, which it seceded from in 1935.

The Marine Firemen, Oilers, Watertenders and Wipers, some of whose delegates withdrew at the start of the convention, later sent other delegates to replace them.

Mervyn Rathborne, president of the American Communications Association, CIO, in a speech delivered at the convention, warned the delegates against the Maritime Commission, which he called a "strike-breaking, union smashing set-up." He also denounced the fink hiring halls established by the Commission.

Jackson Reaffirms Support For Lamb

WASHINGTON. — U. S. Solicitor - General Robert H. Jackson this week defended his membership on a committee to fight the proposed disbarment of Edward Lamb, Toledo CIO attorney.

Jackson, in a letter made public by the National Lawyers Guild, made it clear that he was speaking not as a government official but as an individual member of the bar.

In a letter to William D. Daley of Cleveland, who had protested his interest in the case, Jackson declared that he would defend the right of any attorney to represent labor before the courts.

Too Harsh Punishment

The disbarment proceedings against Lamb arose out of remarks attributed to him in a Portsmouth, Ohio, case last year when he was representing a striking local of the United Shoe Workers of America.

Jackson emphasized that any improper remarks from Lamb could have been penalized by a contempt of court charge and the payment of a small fine. This is the common practise, he said, and many nationally prominent lawyers have been so rebuked by judges.

"I know of no adequate explanation of this fierce and vindictive proposal except that Lamb is a labor lawyer," Jackson declared.

"We can have no worthy judicial system unless we protect the right of advocates to champion the cause of any person who becomes involved in the machinery of the law.

Labor Needs Help

"I know of no group today that needs competent lawyers to defend it in the courts more than labor. May I remind you that of 11 labor relations board cases on which the supreme court has passed, seven of them — more than two-thirds of them — the supreme court held to have been unlawfully and improperly decided against the labor by the lower court judges.

"The burden of a labor lawyer in our courts is not easy.

"My position on the committee is that I shall defend the right of any member of our profession to appear habitually, if he desires, in labor causes, and the right of a man at the bar to become a "labor lawyer" as well as to be a 'corporation lawyer.' "

Dyers Win Pay Lifts For 2200

New York—Wage increases and other important gains were won for 2200 fur workers in New York City and Pennsylvania by a new contract concluded between Local 80, Rabbit Dyer's Union and the Rabbit Dyers' Institute. The local is affiliated with the International Fur Workers Union, CIO.

The new three-year agreement, replacing one which expired June 1, provides for a 10 per cent. increase for all workers during the first two years of the contract, with an additional 5 per cent. increase during the third year.

Must Use Label

All skins must have the union label, and no employer is permitted to have dye skins dressed in non-union shops. Working and sanitary conditions are to be improved under the terms of the contract.

Some 400 fur dyers in Pennsylvania are covered by the agreement which calls for automatic adjustment to the New York wage level.

The pact will be submitted to the membership for ratification.

NMU Calls Parley Of Marine Unions To Avert Lockout

New York—The National Maritime Union, CIO, this week issued a call for a nation-wide conference on marine and harbor unions in July to prepare for concerted defensive action against an anticipated shipowner lockout on September 30.

In a letter to eight maritime unions on both coasts, the district committee recommended Chicago as the place for the conference and sugested July 25 as the date. The letter was signed by Joseph Curran, NMU general organizer.

The call was decided upon, according to Curran's letter, because "there is every indication that the shipowners have been and are planning to lockout, or attempt to stampede the maritime unions into a strike in September with the hope of finding the unions unprepared and demoralizing them."

See Need For Unity

The letter cited as evidence various attempts to split the NMU and some of the west coast unions.

"We believe," it continued, "that it is time for the maritime unions to concentrate their attention on the national issue—a united front of all marine unions against the shipowners who are attempting to destroy the unions. This issue supercedes any other which we feel at present to be important."

The letter was sent to the Sailors Union of the Pacific; Marine Firemen, Oilers, Watertenders and Wipers; Cooks and Stewards Union of the Pacific; Cooks and Stewards Union of the Pacific; Inland Boatmen's Union; Intl. Longshoremen and Warehousemen's Union; American Communications Assn., Marine Engineers Beneficial Assn. and the Masters, Mates and Pilots.

MUST REINSTATE 175

Washington — Smith Wood Products, Inc., of Kansas City, Mo., has been ordered by the Labor Board to offer to reinstate 175 workers discharged from its Coquille, Oregon, plant following a shift from the AFL International Woodworkers of America, CIO.

Minnesota Nominates Liberals

Minneapolis —Progressives triumphed in Minnesota's hard fought primaries here as Gov. Elmer Benson won re-nomination on the Farmer-Labor party ticket by a margin of well over 12,000 votes.

John T. Bernard, Paul Kvale, Henry Teigan, Dewey Johnson and R. T. Buckley, who comprise the Farmer-Labor party's Congressional bloc, were all renominated.

Tory Plot Failed

Benson's plurality of 12,000 in the 400,000 votes cast did not reflect his great popularity with the workers and the farmers of the state. Farmer-Labor officials charged that the Republican and Democratic bosses had ordered their workers to vote in the F-L primary for Hjalmar Peterson, Benson's opponent, in the hope of eliminating Benson from the state house scene.

"Liberals can indeed take heart from the results of this contest," Benson declared. "It shows very clearly that those who believe in liberal government constitute the great majority of our citizens. With the issue between liberalism and reaction we can enter confidently into the final election contest."

U. S. Studies Industries For Wage Act; Hillman Raps Sloan Statement

Washington. — Department of Labor economists this week began a study of certain industries to pave the way for application of the wage-hour bill.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics and other divisions in the department will conduct the surveys, one of the aims of which will be to determine what constitutes a "seasonal" industry. This problem will be one of the most complex with which the administrator of the act will be faced.

President Roosevelt has not yet indicated who will be placed in charge of the new Wages and Hours Division in the Labor Department. Several names have been mentioned, but there is no evidence to support the fact that any one of these has an inside track to the job.

Congress included a $400,000 appropriation for the new division in a deficiency appropriation bill passed during the closing minutes of the session. Labor Department officials had asked for a half-million dollars, but their request was reduced 20 per cent. by the Congressional committees.

Passage of the bill, meanwhile, brought forth statements from unions throughout the country hailing the labor victory, which was brought about largely through the untiring efforts of the CIO and Labor's Non-Partisan League.

Hillman Welcomes Law

In New York, President Sidney Hillman of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, CIO, welcomed the new law as a "pioneering venture" and took sharp issue with Alfred P. Sloan, chairman of the board of General Motors, who had assailed the measure in a letter to stockholders of the corporation.

Hillman declared:

"Labor welcomes the passage of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938. The Act is a pioneering venture in the field of Federal legislation, and speaking on behalf of labor, we are willing to take a modest and cautious approach to the solution of this fundamental problem. Now that the Act is passed, I venture to hope that industry will cooperate with labor to give it a fair start and a fair trial.

"It is unfortunate that Mr. Alfred P. Sloan, chairman of the Board of General Motors, should have attacked the Act before the conference report was scarcely dry. It is not an action that the American people have a right to expect from a person in his position, possessiing such a wide power over other peoples' lives and property.

"Mr. Sloan has not been able to regularize employment in his great motor works. He has felt obliged to husband the huge surplus and undistributed reserves of his company, and to shift his workers over to the Government relief rolls. Those in private industry who have been unable to provide regularity of employment for the workers should be slow to criticize those who are trying to carry on where they have failed.

"Mr. Sloan is not an oconomist, yet Mr. Sloan uses the front of General Motors to mail with the stockholders' dividend check a lecture on the economics of wage and hour legislation. Mr. Sloan predicts that this legislation will bring economic disaster to the country because of the increased compensation it requires to be paid to the workers.

Confession By Tories

"Mr. Sloan's contention only boldly claims that America, with all its material resources and man power, is not able to produce enough to pay our lowest paid workers, the only workers who are really affected by the legislation, 25c an hour, or $11 a week for the 44-hour week, or $572 a year, if the worker is lucky enough to find full employment every week in the year.

"The second year the worker may get as high as $12.60 a week for a 42-hour week, of $655 for full employment during the year, and if an industry committee, drawn principally from the industry itself so decides, the worker may get as high as 40c an hour or $16 per week for a 40-hour week, or $832 for full employment during the year. The maximum any worker will get by reason of this legislation is much less than the Brookings Institution has found necessary to keep a family in health and decency.

"Mr. Sloan is not seriously discussing economics in his letter to his stockholders. He is playing politics with human misery and his country's welfare.

"A fair administration of this legislation should go far to reverse the present deflationary tendency in American industry, to create increased opportunities for employment and to bring about substantial improvement in purchasing power."

Re-Nominated

Gov. Elmer Benson, Minnesota Farmer-Laborite, who was renominated by his party for another term. Benson, an outstanding friend of labor, was recently lauded by the convention of the American Newspaper Guild, CIO, for his part in aiding Duluth strikers win their walkout.

Pritchett Back In Canada

Seattle, Wash. — Harold Pritchett, president of the International Woodworkers of America needs wings to help him keep up with the regulations of immigration authorities.

His temporary permit to remain in the United States again expiring, he was forced to grab a plane for Vancouver, B. C., June 14, as he has done on other similar occasions, and once more ask permission to return to Seattle.

Shorter Hours Needed, A. D. Lewis Tells ILO Confab At Geneva

Geneva, Switzerland.—A "drastic reduction" in the work week as a means of bringing about lasting recovery was proposed to the International Labor Conference here by A. D. Lewis, brother of CIO Chairman John L. Lewis, who is one of the American delegates to the meeting.

Lewis declared that technological improvements had thrown millions of workers out of their jobs and left them in a position where they were unable to enjoy the benefits of the machine age.

"Visit our mining towns or our industrial cities and you will see millions of underfed and ill-clad children," he said.

"You will see large families crowded into quarters that, as often as not, are unfit for human habitation. You will see poverty and squalor.

The NRA, with its reduced number of working hours, helped bring the United States out of the last depression, but the Supreme Court, by invalidating the legislation, helped check the recovery tide, Lewis asserted.

Lewis First Purchaser OF New CIO Emblem

Washington — The first CIO dress button was bought this week by Chairman John L. Lewis, who expressed the belief that the new emblem would be extremely popular with members of CIO unions.

Made of gold, with the letters "CIO" on a blue background, the emblem can be secured either on a coat lapel button or on a lady's dress pin.

CIO members who wish to buy the dress button, which sells for 25c apiece, should communicate with the Comptroller, Committee for Industrial Organization, 1106 Connecticut Ave., Washington, D. C. Money or money orders should be enclosed with the orders.

Reductions in the price will be made on bulk orders.

Heywood Broun

English Labor Law

There could be no great objection to the plan of sending an official commission to England to study the British Trade Union Act if it were not for the circumstance that this particular measure has been so gravely distorted by the American press.

To be sure, if the commission is to bring back the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, their findings might serve to clarify discussion. Unfortunately the legislation under which our British brothers function has become a kind of symbol which is used as a club by reactionary publishers and other employers over here. On many occasions they have professed their love for British labor merely as a prelude to fighting the rights of American labor.

Close students of the subject report that most of the generalizations in regard to the Trade Union Act abroad are not accurate by half. And if they were it does not follow that we should ape them here in America.

Several English authorities on British labor have expressed envy of the successes and the philosophy of the CIO.

If Mr. Roosevelt wants to put the experiment upon a truly scientific basis he will name no American commission to go abroad without reaching an agreement that the British are to send one here. As in the case of professors we might have exchange commissions. Then a joint report could be issued out of which the best in both lands could be gleaned.

We have something to learn from experiences across the water but we also have much to teach.

Labor Fights For The Public

Labor's enemies claim that the CIO in its determined stand against wage reductions represents a narrow group or class interest.

The CIO asserts that in serving as a bulwark against wage cutting it is not only protecting the interests of millions of workers but is also making a great contribution to the welfare of the whole country.

A recent survey of public opinion by Fortune magazine, which caters to businessmen and well-to-do readers and cannot be charged with labor sympathies, supports the union viewpoint.

Its findings indicate that the majority of people in all walks of life recognize that wage-cutting is not a step in the direction of general recovery.

The question asked was: "Would it improve the general situation if labor accepted a wage cut?"

To this question, 63.4 per cent. of the people polled answered No, and only 12.6 per cent. answered Yes. The rest qualified their replies or said they did not know.

A breakdown of the replies shows that factory workers and the poor gave the biggest majority of Noes. But it also shows that even executives and the "prosperous" voted by two to one that wage cuts would not improve the general situation.

Such polls as this help to prove that there is no such alignment as labor versus the public, when labor fights to maintain and increase the purchasing power of the workers.

On the contrary, the alignment is labor and the public interest on the one side, combatting the selfish minority interest of wage-cutting exploiters on the other.

Unions Demand End Months'-Old Relief Crisis In Cleveland

Cleveland.—Speaking in behalf of 75,000 hungry relief clients, members of CIO unions and the Workers Alliance jammed Cleveland's city hall this week and demanded an end to the relief stoppage which has been in progress since April 15.

The demonstrators, 1000 in number, demanded that the City Council release $450,000 from a city sinking fund in anticipation of finances already voted by the state legislature.

"Misery has become unbearable; stop-gap ordinances won't help any longer. The people need food, clothing and shelter," declared E. C. Greenfield, Workers Alliance representative.

Social service workers, members of the State, County and Municipal Workers, CIO, who have not been paid for a month, were forced to make their rounds of calls and tell members of unemployed families thta they could do nothing more for them.

Serious effects on the community's health were seen as one result of the starvation diet upon which a large proportion of the city's workers has been existing.

The director of the Child Health Association declared, "It is a slow process, but what we are seeing is a gradual breakdown in child health comparable to Europe in the World War. Even in babies . . . we are beginning to see the reappearance of rickets and some scurvy."

The Wrench In The Machinery

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

A Curb Upon Democracy

THE outrageous behavior of the House rules committee in the last Congress has this much merit — that it finally attracted general attention to one of the most effective means whereby a reactionary minority can thwart the will of a democratic majority.

The wealthy and conservative classes in America have yielded only gradually and reluctantly to demands for democratic government. At every stage in our political history, they have been concerned with establishing checks and safeguards against the great masses of the common people having their way too readily.

The committee system, as traditionally operated in Congress is one of such carefully-devised checks on the free-play of democracy.

An examination of the membership of the committees which have virtual life-and-death power over all proposed legislation, shows that they are stacked against new-comers.

The New Deal turnover has brought new Congressmen to about two-thirds of the seats in the House in the last three terms. Yet these new-comers, who most accurately reflect the prevailing wishes of the electorate, have little committee representation.

Nearly all the more important committee asisgnments go to senior Congressmen who were first elected before such a thing as a New Deal was ever heard of.

This is particularly true of the most powerful committees. The rules committee and the ways and means committee have not a single member on them in his first or second term. They are wholly and strictly of pre-New Deal vintage.

Through this system the great majority of Congressmen, who won their seats in the last three elections on issues which are closest to the voters' hearts at the present time, are denied proportionate representation in determining just what legislation Congress as a whole may vote upon.

How the conservative and pre-New Deal minority who control most of the committees can use their power to defeat progressive legislation, was most glaringly shown in the last Congress.

The rules committee refused to allow the House to vote on wage-hour legislation desired by the overwhelming majority of Congressmen, and the bill had to be forced out of their hands by a petition signed by two-thirds of the members of the House.

The next crime against democracy perpetrated by the rules committee was its refusal to allow Congress to vote on the Walsh-Healey amendment at a time when it was too late for the majority to win its way by the cumbersome petition method.

* * *

Committee chairmanships are the most strategic positions in Congress. Yet nearly all of the House committees, and all of the more important ones, have chairmen who were first elected long, long before the last depression and the New Deal.

The only committee with a first-term chairman is the committee on memorials!

* * *

The recent Minnesota primaries are an interesting example of the realignment which is taking place — with increasing sharpness of division — between the progressive and conservative forces.

Old party lines were almost forgotten when the Republican and Democratic primaries were virtually deserted by the rush of conservatives from all camps into the Farmer-Labor primaries, in a vain effort to defeat the progressive and pro-labor governor, Elmer Benson.

One lesson from this for labor and progressive voters is that the primaries are becoming fully as important a battleground as the final elections.

Another lesson is that unity of all progressive forces is essential to defeat the increasingly united front of reaction.

SCMWA Signs With Reading

Harrisburg, Pa.—David Kanes, regional representative of the State, County & Municipal Workers, CIO, in Pennsylvania, is leaving for Reading where a contract between the SCMWA and the city of Readin will be signed.

The Reading City employees are organized in Local 61 of the SCMWA.

The contract will affect over 300 city employe and calls for a minimum pay of 57 cents an hour, and a 40-hour maximum week. Under the contract, city employees must pay their dues employes must pay their dues day of each month.

Kanes stated: "Mayor Stump and the Reading City Administration are to be congratulated upon their eminently fair labor attitude as evidenced by their willingness to sign an agreement with our union."

Urge Councils Form Social Security Groups

Washington—The formation of committees on social security in CIO Industrial Union Councils is proceeding rapidly, according to Joseph Kovner, executive secretary of the CIO national Committee on Social Security.

Councils that have not already formed committees are urged to do so as soon as possible and to advise CIO headquarters accordingly.

The report and the first bulletin of the national committee, as approved by Chairman John L. Lewis, have gone out to all affiliated unions. A second bulletin will be ready soon, outlining important problems in social security and giving suggestions to unions for the benefit of their members.

The New Relief and Recovery Bill

Labor May Take Credit For Its Passage; Will Provide 3,000,000 Jobs

By RALPH HETZEL, JR.
Secretary, CIO Unemployment Committee

In the face of the greatest pressure from reactionaries in the Congress and private interests opposed to work relief, the President's Relief and Recovery program was enacted into law last week. Labor may take much of the credit for passage of these new WPA, PWA and Housing appropriations.

The appropriation of $1,425,000,000 for WPA covers the eight months from July 1, 1938, to February 28, 1939.

If it should be used in the total period of eight months the appropriation would provide only an average of approximately 2,800,000 jobs. If it is spent in seven months, as is permitted under the relaxed Woodrum amendment if the President should declare an emergency, it would provide an average of slightly more than 3,100,000 jobs.

Present indications are that the WPA will attempt to provide within the next month about 3 million jobs, an increase of approximately 250,000 over the present quota.

The number of jobs provided by WPA will depend in a great measure upon the force with which labor brings to the attention of the WPA the need in each locality. If the pressure is strong enough the WPA will spend the money the way it ought to be spent—as rapidly as possible. If necessary, the President can at any time call a special session of Congress to appropriate more funds.

$25,000,000 of the WPA appropriation may be spent for direct relief. If, therefore, a crisis develops in any locality where relief machinery has broken down, demands can be made for the Federal government to provide necessary funds. Every attempt, however, should be made to get local relief authorities to provide adequate funds before appeals are made to the Federal government.

The CIO has continually advocated work relief rather than direct relief and will oppose any attempt to break down the work relief principle.

Rates of Pay

Prevailing hourly rates of wages must be paid on work projects, as was provided also in last year's appropriation act.

This means that the hourly rate must not be less on WPA than it is for similar work in the locality of the project. The monthly rate of pay, however, is the so-called "security wage" which is supposed to be based on a cost of living scale. The latter does not have any relation to the hourly rate.

Indications are at present time that it may be possible to revise this "security wage" scale upward, especially in the lowest brackets in the southern areas where monthly rates run as low as $19 and $21.

The prevailing hourly rates of pay are determined by the WPA State administrators. It is up to the unions to see that these rates are not below the union rates.

Monthly Pay Rates

The monthly rates of pay are determined by the national WPA office and depend upon the classification given to each locality. The average of monthly WPA wages throughout the country is approximately $55.

The law provides that the hourly rates on WPA shall not be less than those set under the new Wages and Hours Act. This means that for the next year no rates shall be less than 25 cents an hour. This will raise the level in a good many of the southern areas where rates have been as low as 15 cents an hour.

Projects

The WPA is continuing the requirement that most projects must be sponsored by State or local governments which have to work out the details of the projects and provide an average of 20 per cent. of the cost. The Federal government pays for labor and administrative costs. The 20 per cent. is assumed to cover the cost of materials and supplies. However, at least $25,000,000 of the WPA appropriation may be used in emergency for "non-labor" costs on the projects.

Therefore, in emergencies, where the local government cannot pay it's share, it will be possible to get the Federal government to pay non-labor costs as well.

One of the specific types of projects for which WPA money may be spent is in "aiding self-help and cooperative associations for the benefit of needy persons." This is very important.

It makes it possible for the WPA to help unions set up cooperative units to produce goods for sale to local relief agencies and for distribution among the needy. This provision has great possibilities and its successful operation will depend upon how effective the CIO unions make use of it.

Other Projects

Other projects which are mentioned specifically in the Act are: highways, roads, and streets; public buildings; parks and other recreational facilities, including buildings thereon; public utilities; electric transmission and distribution lines or systems to serve persons in rural areas, including projects sponsored by and for the benefit of nonprofit and cooperative associations; sewer systems, water supply and purification systems; airports and other transportation facilities; flood control; drainage; irrigation; conservation; eradication of insect pests; miscellaneous construction projects; educational, professional, clerical, cultural, recreational, production, service, including training for domestic service, and miscellaneous nonconstruction projects.

Eligibility

The general provision is that persons "in actual need" shall be eligible for WPA jobs even if they are not on relief rolls.

Any person who is dropped from WPA to take private employment is immediately eligible when the private employment terminates to be put back on his previous employment status at the WPA "if he is still in need and if he has lost the private employment through no fault of his own."

Veterans of the World War, the Spanish American War, and other American wars are to be given first preference on projects. The next preference is given to American citizens.

Following these are aliens whose Declaration of Intention to become American citizens was filed prior to the date of the President's approval of the law, June 21st, and which Declaration has not expired.

Workers on WPA are expected to accept bona fide offers of private employment. However, such employment must be under reasonable working conditions and pay as much or more per pay period as the worker would receive or can receive on WPA. The pay period usually means a month.

Unionism

The right of WPA workers to maintain union activity is very definitely affirmed in the law.

It says that "any person . . . who knowingly, by means of any fraud, force, threat, intimidation, or boycott, or discrimination on account of race, religion, political affiliation, or membership in a labor organization, deprives any person of any of the benefits to which he may be entitled under any such (WPA) appropriation, or attempts so to do, or assists in so doing, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and fined not more than $2,000 or imprisoned not more than one year, or both."

This provision is designed to protect workers fully in their right to join a labor organization. Unions can be on the alert to protect this right.

PWA

Provision is made for the appropriation of nearly a billion dollars for PWA projects.

These projects are generally given out to private contractors and the usual procedure of hiring labor for a private building job is followed. Projects amounting to at least three hundred million dollars are expected to be under way in 60 days.

It is doubtful that PWA could provide at its peak more than 300,000 jobs on the site of the projects. A careful study, however, indicates that the PWA projects will provide considerable work in industries supplying building materials.

New Housing Provisions

A significant accomplishment in connection with the Relief and Recovery Bill was the inclusion of amendments to the United States Housing Act which will enable the Authority to enlarge its program from $500,000,000 to $800,000,000 of total construction and to do this amount of work in a shorter interval of time.

The Authority was given greater power to grant increased subsidies, which will be necessary in connection with this expanded program.

During the session a dangerous attack was made on the whole housing program by the effort of reactionary interests to restrict the Authority's financial authorizations for administrative purposes to $2,225,000 instead of $4,500,000 originally authorized by the Bureau of the Budget.

While it proved impossible to get the full amount restored to the Authority, the final authorization was $3,500,000 and this will enable the Authority to operate effectively until the next session of Congress.

The CIO and affiliated organizations can claim the major share of the credit for getting these amendments and protecting the funds of the Housing Authority.

Relief Bill At A Glance

WPA. $1,425,000,000 was appropriated for WPA for 8 months from July 1, 1938 to February 28, 1939, allowing the President to spend it in 7 months if an emergency occurs. This fund can be made to supply between three million and three and a quarter million jobs.

RELIEF. $25,000,000 of the WPA appropriation may be spent for direct relief to ease emergencies where State and local appropriations for relief have been exhausted or the machinery has broken down.

RATES OF PAY. Hourly rates of pay on WPA shall not be less than the prevailing rates for work of a similar nature in each locality, and the minimum must not be less than the rates provided by the Wages and Hours Act.

ELIGIBILITY. Applicants need not be on relief rolls in order to be eligible for WPA jobs. No worker need take a job in private industry which pays him less per pay period than his WPA job. No alien can receive a job on WPA unless he has made a Declaration of Intention to become a citizen and it is still valid and has not expired at the time of the passage of this bill.

UNIONISM. The law forbids any person to discriminate against WPA workers on the grounds of religion, political affiliation, or membership in a labor organization.
